As he was going around the premises, he came to a stile. Mr. Moody said, "Sit down there a minute, Farwell, I want to tell you a few things about the work here." Farwell sat down on the stile; and just behind him, in a vacant lot, was a prize goat. Mr. Moody kept Mr. Farwell's attention, telling him of the plans he had. The goat saw Mr. Farwell sitting there and received it as an invitation; and without his knowledge, ran and butted him squarely, so that Mr. Farwell went head over heels. Moody was convulsed with laughter. He was so hilarious over it, that he could scarcely say anything. This I learned through Mr. Thane, who told me that a little later he went up to Northfield, and Mr. Moody took him around the same way, and said:

"Thane, sit down there, I want to tell you something."

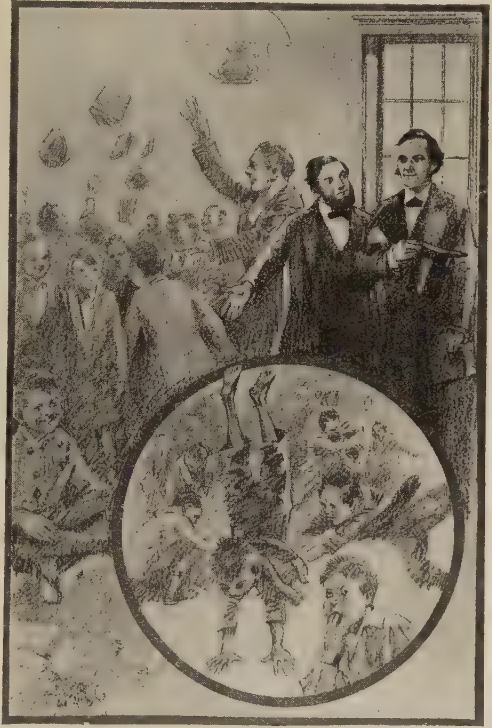
"O no, I don't think I care to," Mr. Thane said.

Mr. Moody said, "Did Farwell tell you about it?" And then he burst into laughter again. Mr. Thane said it was the most comical thing he ever witnessed.

Church Bazaars and Dedications

We had a bazaar after the church was completed. The members of the Sunday-school and the church just begged Mr. Moody to let them have a bazaar. While he was not entirely in sympathy with the plan, he gave his consent, and a splendid bazaar was gotten up; but, as in many churches, it created ill-feeling and jealousy among the members. When it was over, Mr. Moody said never again would he permit a bazaar or an entertainment of that kind held in the church he had anything to do with. He said the way to raise money to pay off church debts was to give it personally and prayerfully, and not have the women work themselves to death and become dissatisfied with one another.

When the Moody church was finished, it was announced that on a certain night it would be dedicated. The place was crowded, both aisles and steps. After the opening devotional exercises, Mr. Moody came to the front of the platform, and in his characteristic way, said, "Folks, you have come here tonight to see this church dedicated. Now, nearly five thousand dollars are needed to pay off the building debt. I just want to tell you that if you expect to see this church dedicated tonight, you will be disappointed unless this amount is paid up. Now, if you want to see this church dedicated, go down into your pockets and furnish this money that is needed. I want you to go about it prayerfully, and I am going to send the ushers down so that every man and woman and child may have an opportunity to help in this work. If we don't raise the money, the church will not be dedicated tonight, because I don't believe in dedicating to the Lord something that don't belong to you."



Mr. Moody Nominated John V. Farwell for Superintendent of the Sunday-school and He Was Unanimously Elected

The ushers went all through the audience and took up the offering, and when it was counted there was more than enough to pay off the indebtedness, and when Moody announced that they would go ahead with the dedication, everybody was happy.

Another Kind of Dedication

Mr. Moody was going down Kinzie Street one day, and he saw a banner over an empty store, which said, "Grand Opening, Saturday Night." He went in where the carpenters were at work making alterations and asked the man in charge if he was the proprietor, also if there was to be a grand opening.

"Yes," he said.

"I'll be glad to come," Mr. Moody said, "if I may."

"Why, yes, glad to have you," the man said.

"Can I bring a friend with me?" Mr. Moody then asked. Of course the proprietor said, "Why, surely you can."

Saturday night Mr. Moody went there, and the place was crowded. The saloonkeeper was back of the bar, and Mr. Moody walked up to him and said,

"Good evening, you see I'm here."

"Yes, where is your friend you said you would bring?"

"I've got him right here," and he pulled out his Bible.

The man said, "We don't want anything of that kind around here."

Mr. Moody said, "I would just like to say a word or two to the men."

"Well, we can't have anything of that kind here. It's impossible. We have opened up a saloon and it's going to be a respectable place, and I want you to remember that. We don't care to hear you."

"Just give me a minute's time," and Mr. Moody started in to tell them about Jesus Christ, and one by one the men left the place, until the only man in the place was the saloonkeeper.

The man said, "You have broken up my business. What right have you to come into this place and do such a thing as this?"

Mr. Moody said, "I came here for your best interests. Do you love Christ?"

The man said, "I don't know anything about Him."

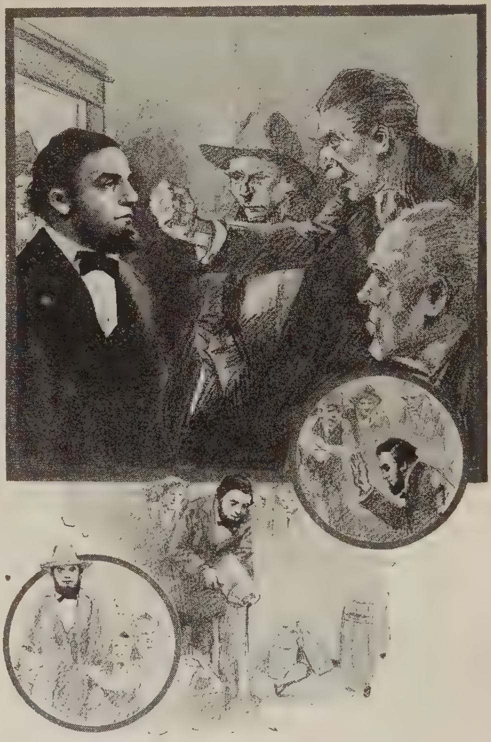
Then Mr. Moody began to talk with him, and the man relented, and said:

"Look at me. I've got consumption and I haven't got much time to live, and I can't work at heavy work. I had a little money and was starting this business, and how else can I get along? I don't know where to go nor what to do."

Mr. Moody said, "If you will close up your place, I'll find you a position so you will not have hard work, but it'll be the kind you can do."

And the man said, "If you promise me faithfully that you will find me a place, I'll give it up. I don't like the business, but I didn't know what to do to make a living."

Mr. Moody said, "I'll promise you I'll do this."



Mr. Moody Breaks Up "Grand Opening"

So the man turned out the lights, closed the saloon, and the next morning Mr. Moody found him a place.

The man had tuberculosis and was very weak at the time, and grew worse. After a time he had to give up the place Mr. Moody secured for him, and was confined to his bed, and kept steadily growing worse, but he accepted Christ before Mr. Moody got through with him. Before he died, he thanked God, and Mr. Moody also, that he had found Jesus Christ.

I can never forget Moody's sermon on the Prodigal Son, how he pictured the boy coming up the road. "Long before the father could tell him by his face, he knew by his very gait that he was his long lost son." Wasn't that a fine, homely and sensible thought?

OPIUM AGAIN CURSES CHINA

It is disheartening to learn that the opium curse, which it was hoped had at last been lifted from China, is settling down upon her again, though now from another quarter. The devastating traffic which Britain forced on China to profit her Indian merchants, and which was stopped with infinite difficulty, has now been resumed by Japan for her own enrichment. It is reported that through the ports of Manchuria and Shantung which Japan controls, and from Formosa, she is introducing, largely through her own postoffice, which has branches in all leading cities, tons upon tons annually of opium and morphine. These are passed as military stores, which are not subject to inspection. The manufacture of morphine goes busily on in Japan and Formosa, and opium is being cultivated on a large scale in Korea. Japanese drug stores and medicine peddlers all over China do the retail work. Champions of the former crusade against the iniquitous business are girding themselves to attack its new manifestations. With the preoccupation of Western nations in the war's affairs, it is hard to get the attention and to stir the protest of the civilized world against this wickedness. Yet it seems incredible that the opium octopus should be allowed once more to fasten its tentacles on poor China.—Missionary Herald.

His Loving Hand

A Testimony to Divine Guidance

By Caroline E. Waite, Binghamton, N. Y.

I

THE subject of the Lord's guidance so frequently causes inquiry from Christians that, in spite of the fact that counsel and testimony are constantly appearing in print, one may venture to add a further word in that direction. The different instances illustrate the various methods by which leading is manifested. May the personal character of the narrative excuse the many personal pronouns.

One afternoon I was calling upon members of my Bible class. All those on a certain street had been visited excepting Mrs. McV—, at number 94. She was a Christian, and hardly seemed to need a visit so much as some others who were not Christians, and therefore I started toward another street. But number 94 drew me. I reasoned against it, but the drawing was too strong, and I went to that house. To my surprise, her husband, whom I had never before seen, was at home, and was just waiting for some one to show him the way to Christ. When, later, I used to see him at the Lord's table, I often thought what it would have meant had I failed to obey the Spirit's guidance in urging me to go that day.

II

Again, there was a tremendous struggle against a great temptation. Though I fought and prayed, there was no victory. One morning I walked the floor for two and a half hours, praying for deliverance. At last, clear and plain, the message came, "Your answer is coming in the eleven o'clock mail." I heard no audible voice, I saw no vision, but in some way which only the Lord understands, those words were made real to my soul.

Without delay I put on my hat and went to the post office, and as I waited for the sorting of the letters, one envelope, orange-red, appeared in my box and only one. I had no doubt that it contained my message, and on opening, it was found to contain the reservation for a room at a conference, for which I had made application so long before that the fact had almost been forgotten. But I now knew that to that conference I must go. I expected that a particular individual would be there through whom my deliverance would come. That person was not there and the deliverance came through another, but the Lord knew how to tell me the thing He wished me to know.

III

My health broke, and I resigned the position I then held in The Moody Bible Institute. In His tenderness, that very week the Lord sent me an invitation to Africa, to work in connection with Dr. Andrew Murray's schools. For a year and a half I was laid aside, but during that time I knew that probably the position in Africa awaited me.

Restored health at last impelled me to begin to think of a position and within two weeks an envelope from the African correspondent was put into my hands. Before opening it I knelt and asked that it might contain my Father's will for me. It repeated the invitation.

Now see how circumstances—not an inward voice this time—guided. I went forward, making tentative plans, but still not wholly decided. I had been asked to accompany a Miss D—, who was returning to Africa in June. There were points not clearly understood which she could make clear. I went into the matron's room of The Moody Bible Institute, and the assistant matron came in (for a moment only), but in that moment I remarked, "I wish I could see Miss D—. Then I should know much better what I ought to do."

That evening, the assistant matron appeared at my door, asking,

"Did I not hear you say that you wished to see a Miss D—? I have just shown a Miss D— to the room over yours."

"Not Miss D— from Africa!"

"Well, I heard her say that she sent Miss Doyle to Africa." It did not take long to mount those stairs and introduce myself to the astonished Miss D—, who had heard nothing about me, or the plans for my going with her.

"Then what sent you to the Bible Institute today, of all days of the year?"

It appeared that there had been an accident which compelled her, unexpectedly, to spend Sunday in Chicago, and she thought it a good opportunity to visit the Institute, where she had never before been, though she had spent over a year in the city previously.

"It is one of the Lord's accidents," I said, earnestly.

She explained the obscure points in the letters I had received, and helped clear the atmosphere in many ways, even to going through my wardrobe and telling me what to take and what not to take.

Note that had not the assistant matron been in that room at the exact moment when I spoke, I should either never have known of Miss D—'s presence there, or, perhaps, have learned of it too late to be of service, for that was Saturday evening and she left the house before breakfast on Monday. Did not He who guides our steps send her there the very moment when I needed her?

After reaching Africa I told one connected with the work that I was so sure that the Lord sent me that should He see fit to lay me flat on my back with illness I could still not doubt.

IV

Years passed, and, invalided home, the committee under which I was working required a doctor's certificate before permitting me to return to my work. At last it was sent. Almost immediately health broke again.

A conflict followed. Was it honest to go forward, leaving them under the impression that health was restored? On the other hand, had the Lord permitted this later break to test faith? The inner voice seemed to say, "Go forward."

At each place where I visited there was a break. A deeply taught Christian, with no personal interest in the matter, was asked to pray and report the result. After some days, she said, "The only word I can get is, 'Go forward.' "

Even in London, I broke again, and I there received a letter, which, had it come before I left America would have seemed sufficient cause to prevent my going forward. After entering my work another break came. Yet, once on the field, the reasons why I was needed there just at that crisis became apparent. I knew I was where He wanted me.

But, after four years, indications showed that my work was done, and one night, on going to bed, I placed my clasped hands behind my head, and saw, as in a photograph, what was to be done. I was to resign, and four lines of action for the good of the school were to be followed by the committee. My resignation was written next morning before going into class. The committee have not yet seen the wisdom of those lines of action, but I know that they were His will as truly as was my own.

Dear child of God, He guides in different ways, but He guides truly the one who yields all to His will.

Missionary Life in East Africa

By George W. Rhoad

A Talk to the Students of The Moody Bible Institute

OF ALL people in the world the hardest to talk to are theological students in Bible institutes and seminaries.

To come from a land where you have been seeing black, and hearing black, and thinking black and talking black, and then find yourself in a company like this, calls for courage. After one has prayed God with earnestness to help him forget English, because it is constantly hampering him as he tries to learn a language

View of Theodora Hospital, Kijabe, British East Africa built up on different principles and ordered in different ways, you can appreciate something of the difficulties he feels when he comes back to a land that was once home.

Lessons from Jericho's Fall

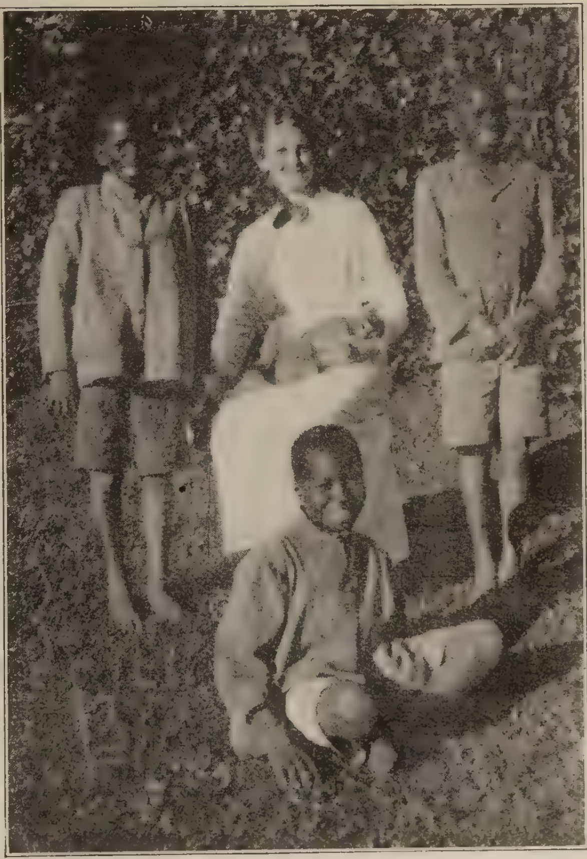
I thought this morning that I would speak of the falling of the walls of Jericho.

From whatever angle you look at Africa it pictures itself somewhat like this walled city that stood there with its mighty bulwarks, around whose strong walls were myriads of able bodied men howling down upon those weak Israelites their derision.

Joshua, mighty man that he was, walked about that city, studying it from every point, studying out the places where he might most effectively have an entrance. And as he went about, there met him One whom we need to meet as we walk about this land of Africa and face it as one of the largest challenges that has come to the Christian church in recent years.

God had displayed His grace and power in marvelous ways when He led the Israelites across the Jordan, but they are now starting out for further conquest; and to whatever plain God has led us, He simply means that from that point He shall lead us on.

I am quite sure that some of you this morning are standing before your Jericho. If my conferences with a dozen and more of the students here these past days has taught me anything it has been this, that God has presented to many of you the marvelous opportunity there is to prove the sufficiency of His grace and the effectiveness of His Word in breaking down the powers of evil that are in the heart of that dark continent and have been withstanding all these years the approaches of the gospel. They are being constantly re-enforced by Mohammedanism and thus presenting an added difficulty. Every year we tarry, every moment we stand in indecision, means that the evangelization of Africa is becoming more and more difficult.



Diamonds in the Making—Miss Bessie Lovell (Center) a Trained Nurse, Sends this Picture From Kijabe, British East Africa

To Livingston's Grave by Auto

God has marvelously opened up that land. You can go to the place where Livingston died, by automobile. You can go into the heart of the dark continent and hardly sense that you are outside the States, and with more comfort than I have traveled through some sections of these States here. There are splendid railways and excellent means of travel. You can come in from the east coast on the Congo Railway, and within forty-eight hours find yourself among people as inky as door knobs. You can take a trip down the Nile and find yourself in just a few hours amongst tribes that have never once had the opportunity to hear of Jesus Christ. Coming in from any side, east, west, north or south, you are confronted with a solid block of heathenism that challenges the devotion of each of you who looks up into the face of God.

I believe the largest call that comes to a student during his study days is the call to a careful survey and study of the field through every opportunity in the library, through the periodicals and through the speakers that come here from all over the world.

Are you a Joshua going about your Jericho this morning? In your going about, have you ever met with a Mighty One, the Captain of the Lord's host? I think of Joshua standing there that morning and looking into the face of that Mighty One who appeared before him, saying, "Who are you for?"

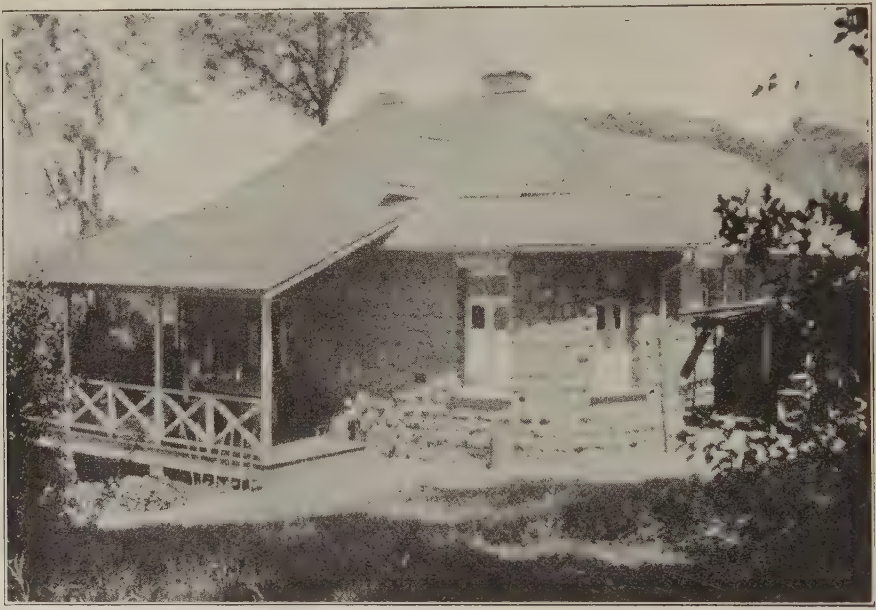
That mighty Captain said, "Well, hold a minute Joshua, it isn't so much who I'm for, but who are you for? As Captain of the Lord's hosts, am I now come."

The measure of a man is not the firmness of his backbone but the yieldingness of it. Joshua falls upon his face and says, "What saith my Lord unto His servant? What saith my Lord unto His bond slave?"

Joshua takes the place that sooner or later all of you must take. And in the face of that great need you must say, "What saith my Lord unto His bond slave?"

Wide Stretches of Opportunity

I had an interesting conversation some hours past with a young man who was convinced that the only need in the world was a little country district somewhere out in the States, a few miles intervening between it and the next preacher's charge. He was sure that was the most needy district,—about five miles square, it did not have a missionary!



Operating Room of Theodora Hospital—Splendid Equipment but at Present Without a Physician—Who Will Go?

I can find you districts in Africa where you can look until your eyes get tired, and where you can walk for days and nights and not get into any other man's parish. Where this man would find one hundred, I can find him one hundred thousand that have never once had an opportunity of hearing about Jesus Christ.

Jericho is before us, and there is that solid block of heathenism confronting us and saying, "What is your attitude toward that Captain of the Lord's hosts? What is your attitude to Him who for you shed His blood? What is your attitude of heart toward Him in the light of that great need?"

Colonel Roosevelt's Good Turn

It has been marvelous how God led to the opening up of that country. When a few years ago Colonel Roosevelt came over there, amongst the many things that he said and did, I think the best was that he communicated with the Belgian government about securing for the Africa Inland Mission, which I represent, permission to enter into the Belgian Congo. Being an interdenominational society they were granted that permission, and the way is open to whatever interdenominational board desires to go there and evangelize a section which has been closed to denominational missions. We are waiting very eagerly to hear of Mr. Hurlburt having stepped over the borders of the Belgian Congo into the French Congo, and then we shall have faced one of the most difficult problems that has ever come before missionaries who would strive to call out of Africa a people for His name.

Getting the Language

I wonder whether you sense what it means to be a witness for God, and to make your gray matter get scrambled, not over theological propositions but such as confront one when you face a people whose language no one knows and who have never had the opportunity to hear anything concerning Jesus?

I am persuaded that as truly as I placed this challenge the last time I was here, seven years ago, and a little black-haired girl accepted it and responded during an interview in the library, so some of you today will accept it. That young woman went with us out to the field, and she was called my second wife! She has survived it, and the natives know better now; but that girl came out with me, studied with me in those early days, when I was privileged to teach her the language, and during the last five years she has sat at my left and my wife at my right and we have been enabled to complete the translation of the whole of the New Testament.

Christ said, "If two of you shall agree as touching anything,"—even the most difficult thing you can find in a heathen language, "it shall be done." There she plowed with me through all those translations, and here is a little Gospel of John that only recently went through the press. The rest is still in manuscript.

Some of you will go out and perhaps under less promising conditions than those with which we met, will have to grapple with some of those seven hundred languages that still need to be reduced to writing.

The Humor of It

I want to bring you a message this morning that may help you to realize something of what it will be. If the Lord could take a little Pennsylvania Dutchman that only had a year at Moody and use him for His glory, surely He can use some of you. We need men of large consecration, prepared by and under the control of God, to grapple with the proposition as we confront it there. This one language of which we have just completed the translation of the New Testament is spoken by perhaps half a million; but I can walk thirty-five to fifty miles through the north and northwest and find a people who do not know it at all.

The devil did a mighty thing when he allured men to Babel, and some of the results of it are in the heart of the dark continent today. When we went in amongst those people no one understood a word. We had to let them follow us about day after day. We were the most interesting things they had ever seen. Were we always like we are now? Was our hair always straight? Were the babies born with those things on? When one of the company took out his false teeth they had fright number one; when another took off his hair, they had fright number two; and when a third took out his glass eye, they said, "These men are not real, they are artificial." We were an interesting bunch to them, you can be assured.

The people often talked to each other, making awful sounds.

Finally after a long time one word stood out of all those awful sounds, and the suggestion came to us that they were asking a question, probably, "What is it?"

We had been unpacking a box, and so we said, "It's a box." Well "It's a box" did not enlighten them any, but we thought that if they could ask a question so could we, and if they could find out the names of things they saw and wanted to know about, so could we; therefore we turned the tables on them.

We were sadly disappointed, however, for we had a good deal of difficulty in getting the accent. You spend much time in trying to get your gestures just right, but when you get out there you will have to go through a good deal of practice to get the correct inflexion.

Finally, when you do get the question the way it should be, and you say it to some native, he will look at you as if to say, "Well, what a fool you are,—not to know what that is."

Blazing the Path

That is the way we get around it word by word, and sentence by sentence, until we have gotten a language marvelous in its exactness. I quit counting when we reached ten thousand words; it must have gone close to fourteen thousand now.

Some of you will not have quite the hard time that we had, for if you will give our preliminary work your attention, you will be able to speak a message of Christ inside of eight months, that will be intelligible to the people.

You will not do what one of the girls did when she preached for the first time. She said if they would only follow God they would live in boats forever! She did not get her vowels quite right. Another talked a little while before we came away, and the native women were boo-hooing, and she said, "Now, don't cry,"—that is, she did not say that, but she meant to say it. What she really did say, was, "Don't spill the gravy."

We did make some ridiculous mistakes, but we discovered a great many things that were useful under God in bringing His message of grace to the people.

What the Wrong Tense Did

They have a great many tenses and you can imagine how surprised we were when the natives would not accept the story of the crucifixion because we were telling them it had happened the day before yesterday. We were unknowingly using that tense, and they said,

"No, He didn't die then."

"Why," I said, "He did die."

"Well, weren't you making bricks the day before yesterday?"

"Yes."

"Well, how do you know He died? You couldn't see Him. You were here."

"Why, He died over in another land"—and I described it.

"How do you know it?"

And then I told them that it happened long before my great-great-great-grandfather lived,—but you know we had been using the wrong tense.

Do you wonder why we do not send reports for the first six months saying how many converts

Where Riots and Suffering Are Commonplace

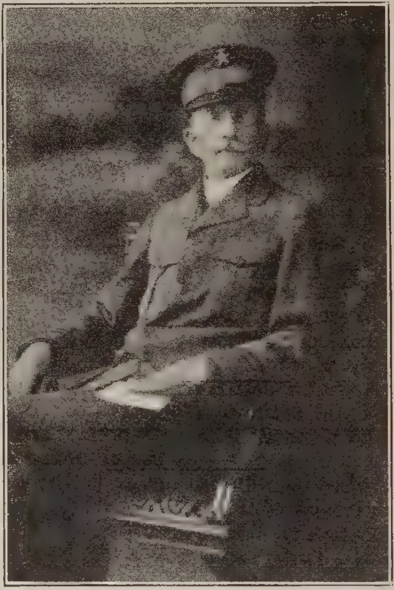
From Professor A. D. F. Hamlin's report on his trip to the Near East, furnished by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, 1 Madison Ave., New York

DESTRUCTION everywhere, wrecks—human and material, squalor, sorrow, suffering,—these are the impressions gathered from an intensive study of conditions in the Near East as observed by Professor A. D. F. Hamlin of Columbia University, during a recent trip through Asia Minor.

Because of his lifelong interest in the Near East, having been born in Turkey, Professor Hamlin was chosen as one of the important committee to visit orphan asylums, refugee shelters, industrial schools, soup kitchens and hospitals and learn of the actual needs and conditions as they are today. In the course of his trip he visited Trebizond, Kerasund, Samsoun on the Sea of Marmora, Gallipoli on the Dardanelles, Constantinople, Smyrna and Brusa in Bithynia.

"I have returned with vivid impressions of the misery, anarchy and terrorism which reign wherever the bloody flag of Turkish misrule floats in insolent defiance of the civilized world," was the opinion he brought back, adding that he had gone out to the Near East with only the kindliest feelings for the Turks as he had found them friendly while living in their country. "But," he continued, "I have come home determined to use my pen and voice to the utmost to urge the utter extinction of their foul and infamously unchristian domination. Ruin, bloodshed, slavery and every form of oppression prevail where they are in power. I can see now how for six hundred years, their presence in Europe and western Asia has been an unmitigated curse, a blot on humanity."

"The American Committee for Relief in the Near East, recently incorporated by Congress as Near East Relief, during the past two years has had forced upon its attention the fact that along the coast of western Asia Minor the thriving Greek populations had been subjected to atrocities surpassed only in extent, not in cruelty, by those visited upon the Armenians." Only recently has it been possible to get direct and reliable information concerning these events through re-established communication.



Prof. A. D. F. Hamlin, A. C. R. N. E.

Having viewed the demolished farms and wasted villages in Belgium, Northern France, Poland and Serbia, he says that from none of these regions is the appeal more compelling than from the Near East, where Turkey added the horrors of massacre and deportation to the sufferings naturally consequent upon participation in the war. The most progressive element of Turkey's population has either been slain or exiled and hundreds of miles of territory laid waste.

Trebizond, a typical Turkish city, (that is, beautifully situated) is dirty, horribly paved and smelly. The only clean portions of the city were the Christian quarters on the higher slopes. Nearly all the windows were either entirely missing or partially smashed, and more than half of the house roofs were untiled.

The American mission house, now serving as the Near East Relief agency, a solid and high-placed stone building, had not a whole window and only half of its tiles on the roof. It was there that the prevalent misery became first apparent. As a guest, he was given the best room which had three huge rectangular openings where windows had been and a door broken in two. The bread in the Trebizond bakeshops looked as if it had been made from straw and grit. It was sold at a high price and was of two qualities—the better bread was that used for distribution in the soup kitchens; "the poor was enough to turn any one's stomach," according to the Professor.

Visiting the refugee shelters, which it was almost impossible to keep clean, despairing poverty was visible everywhere in the starved and exhausted women, old men and children who lay around too weary to move, literally "bags of bones" held together by a little skin.

The night before boarding a Russian steamer bound for Samsoun, it was looted by a band of Turkish and Georgian pirates who had taken passage at Batoum at midnight and at the point of revolvers taken all the money on board ship even making the passengers turn out their pockets. Professor Hamlin left the ship for an hour's leave at Kerasund to deliver some letters and when he returned to the quay, the ship had disappeared with all his baggage and money. Two days later it returned and such was the casual and irresponsible character of the transportation service that the matter was treated as nothing out of the ordinary.

While at Kerasund, Professor Hamlin went through a night of horror, as he describes it. "On the preceding Monday the Turkish police had murdered in cold blood six Greeks whom they had seized at a wedding celebration. All Wednesday night I listened continuously to gun-fire and screams of women. Policemen entered the house where I was staying shortly after midnight, summoning my host to a conference early the next morning. He took the matter very coolly. The gun-fire he assured me was merely a device for terrorizing the Greeks, though he did admit that it might portend the beginning of a new massacre. He added, 'Oh, well, we are accustomed to these little things as we have been having them for the past five years.' "

To this country Near East Relief is giving as far as possible, sympathetic and substantial aid. The future of the country depends on the help coming from America through this source as it is the only organization now at work in this region.

EXEMPLAR WILHELM

"For with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

By Mrs. M. Kathryn Spiers

Oh, would-be master of a slavish world,
Who hast thy nation into slavery hurled,
How dost thou live, and wherefore wert thou born?
The wonder grows with every passing morn!

How are thy children scorned, who scorn were taught,
Thy treasures scattered, that with toil were bought;
How dost thy soil drink up her children's blood—
Ills, long inflicted, whelm them like a flood!

And were thy counselors subservient, blind,
Who thought to teach thee of the human mind?
Were thine eyes holden, that thou couldst not see,
Writ on the sacred page, truth's fixt decree?

Oh, thou most pitiless, by pity shunned;
Thou mendicant upon the common fund
Of tolerance, intol'rant as thou art—
By suff'rance dwelling, far from love apart;

Oh thou, who thought Jehovah's hand to be,
And sought to make all nations bend the knee;
Though sore the cost, from thee the world may learn—
They shall be spurned, who heaven's law do spurn.

What Does Our Pledge Require?

Deuteronomy 13:4; John 14:21-26

Our pledge requires at least four things—deliberation, dependence, determination and devotion.

1. Deliberation: The pledge ought not to be signed hastily. Thought, reflection, and deliberation should precede the signing of this or any pledge. There should be a clear understanding of what the pledge is and of what it is not. It is not a passport to heaven. Signing the pledge does not make one a Christian. It is a form of expression that one is a Christian. It presupposes a personal relation with Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord. Apart from this relationship, the pledge has no value. Indeed, it may work a very great harm, in leading the signer to substitute the signing of the pledge for real saving faith in the Son of God. Let it be clearly understood and forever emphasized, that apart from this saving faith in Christ and this personal relationship with Christ, no society can call itself Christian.

2. Dependence: Our Scripture lesson tells of one who was promised by Christ, and who was sent into the world to be the Comforter, the Teacher, and the Remembrancer of Christians. He is God the Holy Spirit. On Him we must depend. He dwells within us and is sufficient for all exigencies, all emergencies, all experiences. In response to our "trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength" He fills us and anoints us with the Holy Spirit and "the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus" makes us free from "the law of sin and death" (Rom. 8:2).

3. Determination: The pledge requires determination. It should be signed in the spirit of determination to go all the way. Having been "accepted of Him," we are now to show ourselves "approved unto Him" in life and service. Foes are many. We shall need to pray and to read the Bible every day and to attend the place of prayer and Christian fellowship. The spirit that impelled our fighting men to go "over the top" must impel us in our Christian warfare, and this requires determination.

4. Devotion: This involves renewing. The fire dies down; it must be replenished with coal. The human spirit languishes; it must be renewed. Many voices call to us and there is distraction. Many difficulties confront us and there is depression, but the spirit of devotion renewed morning by morning overcomes all these opposing forces, and the earnest Christian enters into the meaning of Romans 8:37—"In all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us."

An interesting discussion may be held on the question, "How has the pledge helped you?"

A Worth-while Life

Psalm 37:18-40

A careful reading of the Bible lesson will reveal the worth-while qualities that make a worth-while life.

In verses 18, 22, 29 and 34 there is the thought of permanency—"Their inheritance shall be forever." No life is worth-while that lacks the element of permanency, the ability to look forward with certainty to the eternal inheritance of the children of God. "He that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth," but he that walketh in the light, the light of God's salvation in Christ, walks with the assurance of permanency. He has eternal life in the Son of God.

In verse 24 there is another truth that makes the life of the godly worth-while. It is that of the divine preservation. "The Lord upholdeth him with his hand." Even though he falters or falls, he shall not be utterly cast down. Faith will reassert itself. Confession will follow, and restoration will result therefrom. It is unspeakably precious and abundantly worth-while to have such a relationship towards God. It is good even to have a friend or relative to uphold one in times of stress and trial, especially if that one be influential and strong. But to have the Lord of heaven and earth to uphold one, this is grace and glory combined. "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

Another truth is seen in verse 25, not only permanency and preservation, but provision is afforded for temporal needs. As a father provides for his children, so the Lord provides for His people. This brings into the daily experience a quiet trust that means both poise and power, which are necessary to the worth-while life.

In verse 37 there is the promise of peace. Peace is assured to him who walks with God, whose aim it is to please God and who in that sense is perfect. Such an one walks in the way of peace and comes in peace to the end of his earthly career. He knows the peace of sins forgiven through the atoning work of Christ. He has the peace of God in his heart, and when the time comes he closes his eyes to the present earthly scenes in the peace of the promised rest made by the God who is faithful.

The closing verse of our psalm gives the promise of additional worth-while things. Divine help, deliverance and salvation are here promised. All of this is "because they trust in him." Herein is the secret of attaining this worth-while life which comprises all of these worth-while qualities. This life is the portion of "those who put their trust in him."

Inasmuch as this is decision day, it is proper to ask a personal question: Have you put your trust in Him? Have you decided on a worth-while life? Christ alone can impart it and maintain it. "I saw around me," said Justin Martyr, "people who believing in Christ, derived from their faith an idea of life that gave them strength to live and strength to die in peace and joy."

What Prayer Will Accomplish

Psalm 34:1-22

Prayer changes things. This is proven both in history and experience. To quote the words of our Scripture lesson—"I sought the Lord and he heard me and delivered me from all my fears. . . . This poor man cried and the Lord heard him and saved him out of all his troubles."

Prayer is greatly needed just now. The present adverse conditions throughout the world, industrial, social, political and religious, can be overcome only by a thoroughgoing and widespread revival brought down from heaven through believing prayer. Apart from this there is no remedy. Christian people who believe this with all their hearts are giving themselves to prayer. The church of God must be revived. Its witness must be restored. This is the present and imperative need, and prayer is the divinely appointed means to attain this end.

No topic could be more opportune than this one for the present hour. Let the leaders of this meeting make careful and prayerful preparation. If possible, get a copy of the Christian Herald for December 27, 1919, and read on page 1354 "The Spiritual Awakenings of the Past and the Lessons They Teach." You will find this full of facts bearing on the topic. Then write to the Silver Publishing Company, Dept. H, Pittsburgh, Pa., for as many copies as you can use, of a little book on prayer written by J. H. McConkey. These will be sent to you free of charge. Give them to the members of your society one week before this topic is presented. Here is an opportunity for you to make a real contribution to the prayer life of your church and the society, and thus promote the spiritual revival that must come to the church of Christ if the witness of the church is to be recovered or retained.

The words of the late Andrew Murray are pertinent and powerful at this point: "The honor to which God calls us as intercessors is simply inconceivable. All heaven is waiting for the prayers of His church to bring down the blessings that are stored up there for us, and that God is longing to bestow. * * * * If ministers and Christians could but be brought to realize that God has actually made the coming of His Kingdom and the pouring down of blessing, so that there shall not be room to receive it, dependent on our faithfulness in prayer, they surely would begin to feel that prayer is, in very deed, the highest expression of our allegiance to God and the chief power that we can exercise in bringing Christ's salvation to men."

For further Scripture on the matter of prayer see Matthew 7:7-8, Luke 18:1, John 15:7, 1 Timothy 2:1-6, 1 John 3:21-22, and 1 John 5:14-15.

Christian Principles in Industry

Micah 6:8; Matthew 7:12

The National Industrial Conference called by President Wilson to "discuss fundamental means of bettering the whole relationship of capital and labor and putting the whole question of labor upon another footing" came to an untimely end. In summing up the work of the conference the reporter for the Christian Herald said: "The break came only after several days of tension during which nothing but the feverish efforts of the group of delegates representing the public, held the body together." In other words the conference was held together for a few days, not by any inherent power of unity but only by a force applied from without. Ultimately that power failed and the break came. So will it ever be. No external power will suffice. A ship cannot cross the ocean when the winds are contrary without power from within. No man can overcome in the battle of life without heart power, the power of the inner life.

Mr. Warren S. Stone of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers hit the nail on the head in his address on "The Application of Christian Principles to Industry" delivered at the International Y. M. C. A. Convention recently held in Detroit. Among other things Mr. Stone said: "We are not going to settle these problems until we get the spirit of Christ in both laborer and capitalist." O for preachers who would preach this! O for people in the pew who would practice it! O for editors and educators and orators and publishers everywhere, who, with the fire of conviction which cannot be quenched, would burn this into the public conscience and heart until it was really believed! Then and then only will a better day come. Industry cannot be revolutionized, great as the need is, by simply shifting control or power from one selfish class to another, but only by conversion and transformation of human hearts.

Christian principles will not be adopted by those who are not Christian. It is the Spirit of Christ in men which leads them to adopt the principles which Christ taught to men.

Our Scripture lesson is in harmony with this.

The requirements of the Lord as seen in Micah 6:8 can be, and are, wrought out in those in whom the Spirit of Christ dwells, but in none other, for none other will do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with God. So is it with the other Scripture. The law and prophets are summed up in the word "love." (See Romans 13:10.) Love is the natural and inevitable result of the Spirit of Christ in human hearts.

February 29

The Result of Our Words and Deeds

Galatians 6:7-10

First of all, let there be full persuasion that words and deeds produce results, results on others and in ourselves. Like a gun that shoots and recoils, words and deeds produce effects, both on others and ourselves. This is as inevitable as the principle in our Scripture lesson "that whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." If he sows good words and works, he will most surely reap a harvest of goodness for himself in addition to the enriching of other lives.

This truth must possess as a settled conviction. Then the exhortation of verse 9 will not fail in its appeal—"Let us not be weary in well doing." How easy it is to become weary, to cool off, to let up, to decrease our gifts to evangelism and missions, to fail in prayer, to give way to discouragement and depression, to become occupied with many things and to lose sight of the one thing needful. "Let us not be weary in well doing," in speaking a word of kindness and cheer, in doing the work committed to our hands. He has said, "In due season we shall reap if we faint not." This is enough —toil on. Keep alert to the opportunities of doing good to all, especially to fellow Christians, "them that are of the household of faith." Beware of neglect, especially the neglect of so-called little ministries.

"The simplest flowers with honied sweets are stored,
The smallest thing may happiness afford;
A kindly word may give a mind repose,
Which, harshly spoken, might have led to blows;
Naught is so small but it may good contain,
Afford us pleasure or award us pain."

Scripture abounds with words of warning and counsel concerning our words and works. (See Matthew 12:37, James 3:5-13, Psalm 141:3, and Titus 3:8.)

Some one in the meeting may ask, "How can this life be maintained?" The answer is found in Proverbs 4:23, "Keep thy heart with all diligence for out of it are the issues of life." Here we strike the solid ground. It is a matter of heart life, for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh, and also actions proceed. The heart purified by faith and indwelt by the Holy Spirit is essential to a life of good words and deeds.

we have had in that time? How can people get converted when you tell them such stuff,—when you tell them that Jesus has forgotten them? You need to pray for the man that is out in a land where he is in such a predicament as that. God in His grace helped us.

Faithful to the Word

I believe there is before us in Africa the largest opportunity now to prove the sufficiency of the grace of God in us, in our thrusting forth, and I am trusting that some of you, through that same grace and mighty working, will some day find yourselves there.

But now that we have this Word in written form, we must teach it, we must help them to a more perfect understanding of it. I was speaking one day about hell, concerning its awfulness and the literalness of its fire; and after I had gotten back to the house one of the boys came to me, and said:

"You mustn't tell them that hell is hot. They like it hot. You mustn't tell them there is fire in hell. They want fire. You must tell them it is cold in hell and that they can run as far and as fast as they like,—as far as their legs can carry them and never even find as much as a stick which might be used to make a fire with."

He needed to be shown the Word of God more perfectly and to learn that it was not to scare people into heaven that we taught them about hell, and that God did not make it simply because people preferred it cold.

Health and Convenience

But now about those seven hundred other tribes. How about your personal relationship to them,—to respond to their need?

The call comes home to you that are here today. You cannot put it over to those yonder, because the recruits must come from America for the next decade, must come from our Bible institutes and training schools. We need in British East Africa, under the Africa Inland Mission, men who can stand by the Word of God, men who are looking forward to His glad appearing, for only that can bring a sufficient impetus for a service that is so overwhelming.

O, friends, there it is, your challenge—your Jericho. What is your attitude of heart in the face of that great mass of heathenism, seven hundred tribes that do not know of Jesus yet? Can you say, as you look in the face of Him, into the face of the Captain of the Lord's hosts, "What saith my Lord unto his servant?" Will you sense the awfulness of your personal responsibility to Him whom you call Lord, Lord, and yet refrain from following? Will you take off your shoes from off your feet and follow Him? If you do, Jericho will, by divine power, tumble down; and you will be entering in upon the most marvelous inheritance that even God could give.

Come over to Africa and help us.

Exposition of the International Lessons

By P. B. Fitzwater

February 8
Peter at Lydda and Joppa
Acts 9:32-43

Golden Text:—"The prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up."—James 5:15.

In order to grasp the significance of this lesson we should recall the condition which prevailed in the church as suggested in verse 31. Three characteristics are outstanding:

1. Freedom from Persecution. Saul, the ringleader of the persecuting forces, had just recently been converted, thereby disorganizing their forces, causing the church to enjoy a breathing spell. This period of rest was not used to grow lazy, indifferent, worldly, and forgetful of God, but for growth in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ.

2. Spiritual Growth and Development. Most blessed will be the results following the times of outward peace if the members of the church will but spend time in building it up. The real meaning of the word "edified" is "builded up." This does not mean merely that the members were being instructed and comforted, but that strenuous efforts on the part of the individual members, as well as the body as a whole, were being made for the advancement of the divine life. The word "edify" contains the metaphor of some grand building or structure. As suggested by another, this metaphor involves (1) A foundation. This is Jesus Christ—no other dare be laid (1 Cor. 3:12-16). To attempt to erect a building on any other foundation is most perilous. (2) Continuous progress. This means that a Christian's activities are purposeful, and that the work he undertakes moves forward with the proper progress. (3) Persistent effort. This means that the present day's work begins the foundation upon which tomorrow's work must be built. Thus, day by day, his life is being raised higher and higher, as each separate round of material is being laid by strenuous efforts. (4) Completion. Finally the work is done, the building is completed, the top stone is brought forth and placed.

3. Outward Growth. Building up within the church causes the whole work to be admired and respected by those without, inducing them to come and identify themselves with it. The reason there is so little growth from without is due to the failure to build up within the church. There can be no forward movement without unless there be a corresponding movement within.

Our lesson today is the record of two stupendous miracles. They were the greatest signs wrought since the day of Christ. The dreadful malady of palsy is vanquished, and a corpse is retenanted by the departed soul. The occurrence here of this miracle is in keeping with the movements of the church at this time. The Lord had promised these signs as they went forth with the gospel message. They were given as encouragements to the disciples, to convince them that the gospel did not lose any of its power by being spread, but rather its power increased. This deepened the faith of the disciples, and became a witness to those outside. As the church goes everywhere preaching the Word there will be a corresponding manifestation of power. The Lord always magnifies His name and grace.

I. The Healing of Aeneas (vv. 32-35).

This man's needy condition appealed to Peter, just as men today should appeal to us in their semi-dead state. Like his Master, Peter could not refuse the needed help. In this he does not direct attention to himself, but confidently appeals to the power in the name of Christ, "Jesus Christ healeth thee." The man who had kept his bed for eight long years immediately arose and made his bed. When the Lord heals it is done instantly. Peter wisely kept this miracle from being the end by making it the means to the end. That end was the preaching of the gospel. This brought most gratifying results, for "all that dwell at Lydda and Sharon saw him and turned to the Lord."

II. The Raising of Dorcas (vv. 36-43).

This woman was full of good works and alms deeds which she did, not what she talked of doing. She was a practical Christian woman. She was not of that kind that puts on kid gloves and carries flowers, but the kind that gets down to the practical way of showing her love by doing deeds of helpfulness. Her death was a real loss, as was evidenced by the mourning of those who had been helped. If all professing Christian women would use their needles as Dorcas did there would be much less of that profitless fancy work, which is not merely a waste of time and energy, but harmful in causing the loss of eyesight. When this good woman fell sick and died the disciples sent for Peter. This shows their growth in faith in the divine power. Peter again imitated the example of Jesus in putting them all forth. At his command her soul came back to live in her body. This again caused them to believe on the Lord.

Peter and Cornelius

Golden Text:—"The same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him."—Romans 10:12.

The missionary program of the church having broadened to include the Samaritans, we see in this lesson still widening and embracing the Gentiles. Intense hatred still lingered in the hearts of the Jews for the Gentiles. Before the gospel could be borne to the "uttermost parts" this barrier must be removed. This could best be done by the high-class Gentile, Cornelius, taking the initiative. Through the conversion of Cornelius the "middle wall of partition" was broken down (Eph. 2:4).

I. Cornelius (vv. 1, 2).

1. His Official Position (v. 1). He was a Roman officer over a company of one hundred soldiers, perhaps of about the same rank as a captain in the American army.

2. His Character (v. 2). (1) A devout, pious man. His heart was filled with godly fear. (2) He was a praying man; he observed the Jewish hour of prayer. A man even in his country's service may be a God-fearing and a praying man. (3) He was charitable; he gave much alms. Doubtless the Jews had been recipients of his generosity, showing his kindly attitude toward them. (4) He was respected by his family. It is the finest compliment that can be paid to a man to have the respect of his family.

The Lord chose Cornelius for the transition of the gospel to the Gentiles because of his character and position. No Jew could find any fault with him. Only such a man could fill the bill. He was a good man, but not a saved man.

II. The Supernatural Preparation for the Transition of the Gospel to the Gentiles (vv. 3-33).

This was of divine arrangement. No barrier is too great to prevent the coming together of the persons whom the Lord desires to meet. What the Lord plans, He sees to have accomplished. Nothing can fail of His good purpose. In order to bring about this

1. Two Visions were Given. (1) The vision of Cornelius (vv. 3-8). While engaged in prayer an angel of God announced that his prayer and alms had come before God as a memorial, and instructed him to send to Joppa for Peter, who would tell him what to do. The angel told him that Peter lodged with Simon a tanner, to show Cornelius that Peter was not the strictest Jew. The calling of a tanner was regarded as unclean by the strict Jews, and the tanners were commanded to dwell apart. A tanner's yard must be at least fifty cubits from any town. "If a tanner married without mentioning his trade, his wife was permitted to get a divorce." Cornelius sent at once for Peter. He had the good sense to attend at once to what the Lord bade him. He was living up to the best light he had, so he got more. The way to get more light is to live up to what one has.

(2) The Vision of Peter (vv. 9-16). This took place while Peter was praying (v. 9). If one would receive visions from God, let him pray to God; for the heavens are open to those who pray. It was while he was waiting for dinner that he was engaged in prayer. For one time, at least, it was a good thing for dinner to be late. He saw a certain vessel containing clean and unclean animals let down from heaven, and heard the command, "Rise, Peter; kill, and eat." Peter protested that he had never eaten any unclean thing. God replied, "What God hath cleansed, call not thou common." This vessel let down from heaven and taken back indicated that both Jew and Gentile were accepted on high.

2. Messengers from Cornelius (vv. 17-22). Peter was greatly perplexed over what he had seen, but not for long; for messengers from Cornelius made inquiry at the gate for him. The Spirit informed Peter of the matter and bade him go, nothing doubting. Thus we see that both had been prepared for each other by God. Those whom God would have come together shall find each other by His direction. The messengers pressed their claim on the ground of the good reputation of Cornelius and God's appearance unto him.

3. The Meeting of Cornelius and Peter (vv. 23-33). (1) Peter took six witnesses along (v. 23). He had the good judgment to know that on a matter of so great importance he must have witnesses. This was proved at the Jerusalem council in the consideration of the question of the reception of the Gentiles into the church (11:1-18). (2) Cornelius waiting for Peter (v. 24). He called together his kinsmen and near friends. The natural thing to do when a messenger from God is come is to invite our kinsmen and friends to meet him. (3) Cornelius about to worship Peter (vv. 25, 26). Peter repudiated this act and protested that he was but a man alongside with Cornelius. The true man of God not only dislikes, but refuses to be worshiped. (4) The reciprocal explanation (vv. 27-33). Peter explained to him how God had taken from him his Jewish prejudice and asked that Cornelius state the purpose of his having sent for him. Cornelius explained how God had appeared unto him and instructed him to send for Peter. He commended Peter for having come and assured him that they were in readiness to hear the message from God.

III. Peter's Sermon (vv. 34-43).

1. The Introduction (vv. 34, 35). He showed that God is no respecter of persons, but that in every nation those who fear God and work righteousness are accepted of Him. This does not mean that Cornelius was already in a state of grace, therefore saved; but that he was now eligible to hear the gospel and accept its terms of salvation. This could not have been misunderstood by Cornelius, for the angel had said to him that Simon would tell him words whereby he could be saved (11:14). Peter is dealing with the case before him in laying down the principle that "Whosoever believeth in him shall have remission of sins." On this principle the vilest Gentiles were received (1 Cor. 1:26-29; 6:10, 11).

2. The Discourse (vv. 36-43). In the discourse he touches briefly upon the mission of Jesus, showing that by means of His baptism and anointing with the Holy Spirit He was qualified for His work as Mediator. He then exhibited the work of Christ (1) in His life (vv. 36-39). It was one of beneficence—went about doing good, even casting out demons as a proof that God was with Him (v. 38). (2) In His death (v. 39). The just suffered for the unjust that He might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh (1 Peter 3:18). (3) In His resurrection (vv. 40, 41). God raised Him up the third day, showing openly that Christ was His Son (Rom. 1:4), and that His sacrificial work was satisfactory (Rom. 4:25). He is to judge the quick (living) and the dead, and to give remission of sins to whomsoever believeth in Him. In this discourse is set forth (a) the basis of salvation—the crucifixion of Christ, (b) the scope of salvation—whosoever believeth in Him (c,) the method of appropriating salvation—believing on Him.

IV. The Holy Spirit Poured Out (vv. 44-48).

This was a new Pentecost. As the gospel was entering upon its widest embrace the Spirit came in new power.

Peter's preaching to Cornelius exhibits an ideal gospel service:

1. The Preacher Sent by God (vv. 28, 29).
2. The People Placed in a Right Frame of Mind (v. 33). (1) Before God. (2) To hear God's message.
3. The Proper Message (v. 35). (1) What God had commanded. (2) All that God commanded though (a) it might not be pleasant, (b) might be against their prejudices, (c) might be against their secular interests.

Peter Delivered from Prison
Acts 12: 1-19

Golden Text:—"The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them."—Psalm 34:7.

The church had met and overcome some severe difficulties. She first had to face religious persecutions at the hands of the Jews. Then came internal troubles as to the support of certain widows. Again, the separating wall to Pharisaic legalism was broken down in the admission of the Gentiles into the church, but finally she had to meet the naked sword of the civil authority as it was unsheathed against her. Through all she is more than conqueror. The Lord's work must go on regardless of what men say or do. Man may propose, but God disposes.

I. Peter's Imprisonment (vv. 1-4).

1. By whom (v. 1)? Herod, the grandson of the wicked Herod who slew the innocent children at Bethlehem. His half-sister Herodias, secured the death of John the Baptist. The church could not expect much from such a king.

2. The Reason (v. 3). It was to gain the favor of the Jews. Herod was not a Jew, but an Edomite, therefore knew that his success was dependent upon his having the good will of the Jews. He acted not from principle, but from policy. He did not particularly hate the church, but loved popularity. Those who are controlled by the pride of life shall perish (1 John 2:16, 17). Herod, for the sake of popularity, manifested a deep sympathy for degenerate Judaism. It was the sympathy of the politician. Since the church had developed so as to be a successful rival of Judaism—indeed was already displacing it—he saw an opportunity to curry favor with the Jews by putting his hands forth against it.

3. The Method (v. 4). He was arrested, put into prison, and guarded by four quaternions of soldiers. A quaternion is a guard of four soldiers. Four quaternions meant that a special group was on duty each watch of the night. It was the custom for two soldiers to be in the prison one on each side of the prisoner, bound to his arms with chains (v. 6). The third one to watch outside the door and the fourth to be near the outside gate. Humanly speaking it was impossible to escape. They had doubtless heard of Peter's escaping from jail before, so they thought they would take no risks this time. However, they made one fatal mistake; they left out God.

II. The Church of God in Prayer (v. 5).

The church was in a crisis; her situation was most grave. James, one of the pillars of the church was dead, and Peter the most prominent of all was in prison. In this desperate strait they did the wise thing, they betook themselves to prayer. The very helplessness of the church was its strength, for it was thrown back upon the Lord. Theirs was a noteworthy prayer:

1. It Was unto God, not unto Men or to be Heard of Men. This is a very common fault today. All true prayer is unto God.

2. It Was United Prayer. It was made by the church. There is peculiar power in the united prayer of God's people. Marvelous things can be expected when the church unitedly calls upon God.

3. It Was an Intensely Earnest Prayer. It was more than unceasing prayer; it was the yearning desire of the soul as it stretched itself out toward God.

4. It Was Definite Prayer. They specifically offered prayer to God for Peter. Their prayer was concentrated, definite and specific.

Most all our prayers are scattered too much. The great cause for the weakness of the church is her lack of praying. God does answer prayer.

III. Peter Delivered by an Angel (vv. 6-11)

This occurred the night before Herod's plan to make a public display of him.

1. Peter Sleeping (v. 6). This shows that he was not greatly disturbed over the matter. The Lord keeps in perfect peace those whose minds are stayed on Him (Isa. 26:3). Again, "He giveth his beloved sleep" (Ps. 127:2).

2. Peter Leaving the Prison (vv. 7-10). The heavenly light shone in the prison. The angel smote Peter on the side, the chains fell off, Peter put on his clothes, and passed by one guard after another through the iron gate out into the city. The whole transaction was orderly and leisurely, showing that God is not in a hurry. The same was true when Christ arose from the dead.

3. The Effect upon Peter (v. 11). Although the matter was so wonderful to Peter, even outside his consciousness, when he came to himself he was assured beyond the peradventure of a doubt that God had miraculously delivered him from Herod's wicked hands.

IV. Unconscious Unbelief (vv. 12-19).

1. The Behavior of Peter and the Church (vv. 12-17). Peter went to the house of Mary and knocked. The knock was answered by Rhoda who was so overjoyed on hearing Peter's voice that she forgot to open the gate and ran in and told them that Peter was at the gate. The disciples were not prepared for such good news and even accused her of madness. She, undaunted, insisted. They offered as an explanation that perhaps it might be Peter's guardian angel in his likeness. They got more than they expected. Results should be expected from our prayers. Peter rehearsed unto them the Lord's dealing with him and instructed them to make these things known unto James and the brethren.

2. The Behavior of the Soldiers (vv. 18, 19). There was great agitation among them as to what had become of Peter. This was a serious matter since they were responsible for him. Not being able to account for Peter's escape Herod commanded that they be put to death. After this Herod went down to Cesarea where he was adored as a God. Because he arrogated this honor to himself the Lord smote him. Herod died, but the Word of the Lord grew and multiplied.

1 Peter 2:1-5, 11-25

Golden Text:—"He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked."—1 John 2:6.

In order to get an intelligent grasp of today's lesson one must get a view of the entire epistle as to its purpose and method. The purpose was to establish all who were passing through suffering and testing. (See 1:7; 3:14; 4:12, 5:10-12). In connection with Peter's denial Christ uttered most significant and solemn words, "When once thou hast turned again, establish thy brethren" (Luke 22:32, R. V.), which were being fulfilled in the writing of his epistles. In chapter 5:12 he indicates his method of accomplishing this commission, namely, "exhorting" and "testifying." Exhorting means calling apart or aside; testifying means witnessing. In establishing his brethren his method was to call them aside and witness to them of Christ. He gave a strong, earnest, personal testimony, showing them that he could back up all he said with a personal knowledge of Christ. All the practical duties enjoined are to be viewed in the light of the unmerited redemption which is in Jesus Christ.

I. Christian Growth (vv. 1-5).

The Christian obtains his life through the new birth, and the agent of its accomplishment is the Word of God (1:23). The same vitalizing and energizing power which makes the believer a child of God is essential to growth and development. In order to have spiritual growth there must be both renunciation and appropriation.

1. Renunciation (v. 1). Certain things injurious to spiritual life must be put away; (1) malice—all wickedness, that is, the very ill-will which desires to do injury to others without cause; (2) guile—deceit of all kinds; (3) hypocrisies—feigning to be what one is not; (4) envies—hatred of others because they possess excellencies which we do not; (5) evil speaking—all kind of slanderous speaking against others.

These are the foul thorns and weeds which prevent Christian growth. If one be a Christian he will renounce them, for they belong to the old nature.

2. Appropriation (vv. 2, 3). (1) Spiritual food must be taken (v. 2). There must be a yearning desire for it. The principle of the new life was conveyed through the Word (1:23), and the Word is the means by which that life is to be strengthened and developed. As the child must have food adapted to its need, so the Christian must feed upon the Word of God. Just as a new born babe loves milk, so men who are born again love the Bible. Absence of longing for God's Word is a proof that life is lacking. Piety is impossible without a study of God's Word. (2) Spiritual food must be assimilated (v. 3). After food is taken it must be assimilated. So the Word of God must be received and assimilated by meditation. The reason why there is a lack of growth on the part of so many professing Christians is that they neglect meditation upon the Word of God.

3. The Grand Objective (vv. 4, 5). It is coming to Christ—to grow up and become a part of the glorious church, the spiritual house, which is designed to show forth the glory of God. This beckons the believer on to higher and better things. No higher motive can actuate any one than to make manifest the glory of God. This spiritual house has the living Christ as its chief cornerstone and the head. Because of their relation to Him the believers are living stones, deriving their preciousness from Him. The world saw no beauty or comeliness in Christ, but God esteemed Him precious and esteems us to be precious because of our vital union with Him.

II. Seemly Behavior of Christians (vv. 11-25).

The behavior enjoined is in the light of certain relations:

1. As Pilgrims and Sojourners (vv. 11, 12). Christians are merely sojourners on the earth; they have not here their permanent home, but are journeying through it on their way to the eternal home in the heavens. Our heavenly citizenship (Phil. 3:20) should constrain us to the maintenance of conduct consistent with our high calling. (1) Abstain from fleshly lusts (v. 11). The term "lusts" includes the entire army of unclean forces springing from our carnal natures; they are enumerated in Galatians 5:19-21. These war against the soul. The Christian should not be under the sway of carnal passion; neither should the jealous eye, envy, avarice, and selfish ambition be given place. (2) Behavior honest before the heathen (v. 12). Christians should so live that it will be impossible for the world to speak against them as evil doers, but rather that the world through them should be constrained to glorify God by their good works. "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 5:16).

2. As Citizens (vv. 13-17). While the Christian's true citizenship is in heaven, he has a responsibility as a citizen on the earth. During his earthly sojourn he should be in submission to properly constituted authority. A Christian man recognizes the necessity of social order, and will not only graciously submit to the authority of rulers regardless of the form of government, but will faithfully perform his obligations as a citizen. This he will not do through cringing fear, but as the Lord's free man for the Lord's sake. By this free submission as a servant of God he puts to silence the ignorance of foolish men (vv. 15, 16). (1) Honor all men (v. 17). He will see in every man the image of God and therefore give honor to him. This applies to all relations wherein we touch human life. A Christian will attend to the proprieties of life among all classes and in all relations. (2) Love the brotherhood (v. 17). The Christian has a peculiar love for those who are of the same household. (3) Fear God (v. 17). (4) Honor the king (v. 17). This has peculiar significance, for in all probability the wicked Nero was the king then reigning.

3. As Servants (vv. 18-25). While doubtless slaves are meant here, the principle applies to all who have relation to employers. The Christian will be in subjection to his master. He will not only do this when his employer is gentle and reasonable, but even when it means wrongful suffering. It means not only submission, but loyalty. It is the duty of a Christian to consider and further the interests of his employee. Many times to do so means hardship and suffering. The grand example of suffering wrongfully is Jesus Christ. While His suffering is an example to us, it was much more, because He suffered in order to break forever the power of sin so as to do away forever with oppression.

1 John 4:7-21

Golden Text:—"Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another."—1 John 4:11.

I. The Origin of Love (vv. 7, 8).

Love is of God, for God is love. God not merely loves, but He is the fountain head of all love. Love of country, love of humanity, filial and parental love, every particle of love everywhere has been derived from God; His love is infinite, eternal and unchangeable. Since love is of God, every one who loves is born of God and knoweth God. The Christian, by his life of love, interprets God to the world. It is not enough that the world should be told that God is good and kind, it should see His nature expressed in the life and love of the disciple. The Christian's life is the world's Bible. Where love is wanting, knowledge of God is wanting. The grand incentive to love is that God is love.

II. God's Manifestation of Love (vv. 9, 10).

God's method of making known His love is through the incarnation—the sending of His only begotten Son into the world to be the propitiation for our sins (John 3:16). The coming of Jesus Christ into the world and His taking on human nature makes possible life for those who receive Him. If we would know God's love, let us look at Jesus Christ. Those who gaze upon Him in reverent contemplation cannot doubt God's love.

III. The Supreme Motive of Love (v. 11).

God's love is the grand incentive prompting His children to love. Since the Father loved, His children should show their resemblance to Him. In the proportion that we apprehend God's love, in that measure we will love His children. The test is absolute and final.

IV. Love the Proof that God Dwells with Us (vv. 12-16).

1. No Man Has Seen God at any Time (v. 12), but there is abundant proof of His being. The one unmistakable proof of His being is love in the heart of man. Love is not native to the human heart, for it is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked (Jer. 17:9). Out of the heart proceeds murder (Matt. 15:19). Love in the heart is proof that God dwells within.

2. Love Proves that God's Spirit is within Us (vv. 13-16). The fruit of the Spirit is love (Gal. 5:22). God's Spirit dwells within His children. The indwelling Spirit shows us Christ and makes us believe in Him as God's Son, the Saviour of the world. Those in whom God dwells will always make this confession. Those who deny the deity of Christ have no fellowship with God, and those who have fellowship with God will confess Christ as His divine Son.

V. Love's Relation to the Judgment (vv. 17, 18).

It casts out fear. A judgment day is coming, for God hath appointed a day in which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom He hath ordained (Acts 17:31). It will be a terrible thing for those unprepared to meet God at that time, but for those who are indwelt by the living God there will be a joyful meeting. He that dwelleth in God and God in him will realize the perfection of love in boldness in the day of judgment, because as He is so are we in this world (vv. 16, 17). The way to get rid of the fear of meeting God in the judgment is to be living with God now. Love is the proof that God indwells.

VI. God's Love the Ground of all Love (v. 19).

The reason we love is that our lives have come into touch with the great fountain head of love. The incoming of God's being and nature becomes the animating and controlling principle of our lives. The one in whom love is not the master principle does not know God.

VII. The Child of God Possesses Dual Love (v. 20).

The proof that one loves the unseen God is that he loves the person who bears the likeness and image of God, and has become a member of the same family through the redemption in Christ Jesus. Love to God and man is united in the one breast of the Christian; it is inseparable. The one who hates his brother while pretending to love God is a liar.

VIII. The Solemn Command from God (v. 21).

God commands that those who love Him should love their brethren. May we heed it! Obedience to this command will eliminate all war and contentions.

Sunday-school News, Methods, Appliances and Questions

By Hugh Cork

APPLES OF GOLD FOR 1920

Some years ago when the writer was general secretary of the Pennsylvania Sunday-school Association, the Hon. John Wanamaker, then its president, sent out the following New Year's greeting, which is a timely message for Sunday-school workers in 1920.

"In the goodness of God we are beginning another year's journey together as fellow workers. I venture to suggest the thought that we might draw closer to each other in Christian fellowship, opening our Bibles every morning at a time most convenient to us, between six and eight o'clock, to get our Father's word for the day.

"The child of God may have much to do but surely may have much to lose if little or no time is given to read what the heavenly Father has to say to him. Who can not afford to bestow a few thoughts upon God and His Word in a day while thousands of thoughts are freely given to anything and everything? 'For as a man thinketh in his heart so is he' (Prov. 23:7).

"How can we displace the useless, ofttimes foolish thoughts with good and high thinking? In no other way so well as by reading the Bible systematically and consecutively, and by prayer and in keeping up the old fashion of the family altar for the sake of the wife, children and home. So shall we be got closer to God and grow in love for His church and its missions at home and abroad. Such growth will make the Happy New Year we are all wishing each other."

A WORTHY EXAMPLE OF FAITHFUL TEACHING

In an old issue of the London Sunday-school Chronicle we find this interesting item concerning the late Queen Victoria:

On one occasion, one of her chaplains, in preaching before her at Windsor, had made the second coming of Christ the subject of his discourse. After the service, the Queen, always a most attentive listener, spoke to him on the topic he had chosen, and said:

"Oh, how I wish the Lord might come during my lifetime."

"Why," asked the preacher, "does your Majesty feel this very earnest desire?"

The Queen replied, with quivering lips, and her whole countenance lighted by deep emotion, "I should so love to lay my crown at His feet."

Here is a typical example of the receptiveness to the deeper truths of those who have been properly trained in childhood. Therefore, "Train up a child in the way he should go."

ONE SOUL'S INFLUENCE

Sunday-school worker, do you realize how it is possible for you to influence innumerable multitudes through that boy or girl in your class? Many years ago Richard Gibbs wrote a tract entitled "A Bruised Reed." A tin pedler gave it to a boy named Richard Baxter, who read it and was brought to Christ. He wrote "A Call to the Unconverted." Among the thousands saved through that book was Philip Doddridge, who wrote, "The Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul." This fell into the hands of William Wilberforce, the great emancipator of the slaves of the British Colonies and led him to Christ. Wilberforce wrote, "A Practical View of Christianity," which fired the heart of Leigh Richmond, who wrote "The Dairyman's Daughter," of which, before 1849, as many as four million copies were circulated, and it has testified for Christ in over fifty different languages. Look at this! Not a missing link in the chain! Richard Gibbs, Richard Baxter, Philip Doddridge, William Wilberforce and Leigh Richmond, plus multitudes unnamed. You? Your pupil? And how many more? It is given to you to say.

WHAT HAVE OUR SUNDAY-SCHOOLS TAUGHT?

A commission appointed by the churches to study the religious condition of the returned soldiers has just made a report which is not very encouraging. It seems that in the front line, especially under shell fire, the sense of God and eternal verities was very real. Officers report that a professed atheist could not be found within twelve miles of the front lines. But since the boys have come back even those who were active in church work before the war are often indifferent and can hardly be persuaded to take their former places in the church.

A deeper study of the religious life of the boys who were professed Christians when they entered the army reveals what probably is the real reason for the present religious indifference. There was scarcely a boy interviewed who before leaving home had been anchored to the fundamentals of the Christian faith. They were members of the church, not because they understood what it was to be a Christian, but because their parents or friends were, and there was a feeling they ought to be. They had little conception of the real meaning of sin, repentance, salvation, regeneration, faith, assurance, prayer, the Holy Spirit, the redemptive work of Jesus, the love of God, etc., therefore, with their house of faith built upon the sand when the winds of temptation blew, and the storms of war beat upon that house, it fell because it had no foundation.

Where lies the blame? Primarily no doubt with the home, but largely too, with the church. These boys almost to a man had been in the Sunday-school for years and the Sunday-school had taken credit for bringing nearly all of them into the church. But evidently what a failure has been made in grounding them in the faith! A little Bible geography and Bible history, a shallow smattering of Christian ethics, an out-of-proportion emphasis on social service and an expressed desire to unite with the church, was all that seemed necessary to bring them into the church. The average Sunday-school teacher seems to have been teaching the road to Jerusalem and forgetting the road to heaven. Can we wonder at the results we find today?

A professor in a Christian college not far from Chicago which draws most of its students from Christian homes, took occasion in Bible examinations to test what these intelligent college students had learned in their Bible study at home and in the Sunday-school. Here are a few of the large number of answers he gives verbatim et literatim:

"For forty days John fasted in the desserts."

"Dives were evil spirits."

"Six of the twelve tribes were Pharasees, Hessites, Middeonites, Israelites, Cananites."

"Talitha Cumi means the crucifixion."

"Cessarea Phillipi was a ruler."

"Siloam was the mother of Zebedee's children."

"Beelzebub was a ruler of the Jews."

"A Republican was a Jew who collected taxes."

"Six of the twelve disciples were Peter, Paul, Simeon, Gideon, John, James."

Sunday-school teachers and officers! What is to be the results of our work for 1920? May not each lesson set forth clearly and forcefully one fundamental truth of the faith in such a way that it will ever be where the Holy Spirit can bring it to the remembrance of the pupil to whom you, with God's help, made it clear? Let us look ahead in the course of lessons for the year and see whether it will not be possible to cover nearly if not quite all that is fundamental, to getting a complete knowledge of all that goes to make up the "fulness of Christ." Then though we go out now with weeping bearing precious seed, we shall come again rejoicing bringing our sheaves with us.

ORIGIN AND INSPIRATION OF HYMNS

Back of every immortal poem and musical composition is a travail of soul, a stirring of emotion, of which the composition is the expression. To know what aroused this feeling is to get hold of the key which unlocks its real meaning and gives its real interpretation.

We sing most of our great church hymns without a knowledge of who wrote them, and why they came to be written. When it was the universal custom to announce the hymn, line by line, the congregation had some chance to get its meaning, but usually now we sing without reading and are carried away with the melody or harmony, or both, and the sentiment the words have expressed has made little or no impression. A jingle of sound may find expression in a whistle or hum, which is akin to ragtime, but no spiritual impression of permanent value has been made.

Take for example, Cowper's greatest hymn.

It means more to us when we know that Cowper was often melancholy, and once when so depressed he decided to kill himself, and selected the spot where he was to do it. The time he selected was a rainy night, so the cab driver he engaged to take him there lost his way and drove back to the place from whence they started. He was given the second directions while the storm raged in Cowper's brain. But again he lost his way and returned to be paid and discharged by the poet, who then went into the house and sat down immediately and wrote,

> "God moves in a mysterious way,
>   His wonders to perform,
> He plants his footsteps in the sea,
>   And rides upon the storm."

Take as a more recent example, Peter Bilhorn's "Sweet peace, the gift of God's love." Seated at the piano one summer evening, in the home of Mr. S. T. Gordon of New York, with a wonderful peace abounding in his heart, the music of this helpful hymn came to him and he made a pencil notation of it on paper with no words but its title. The following winter a call came by telegram from Mr. D. L. Moody to join Major Whittle in evangelistic work in Iowa. They left Chicago together over the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad. When nearing Wheaton, Ill., their train ran into, and killed a lady. When the train men picked up the mangled body of the woman and carried it to a nearby cottage, looking at the pool of blood where she laid, the Major said to Mr. Bilhorn,

"Do you know, Peter, that is all Jesus Christ left on earth? His body rose for our justification, but His blood was left to atone for our sins."

"Yes, Major," Mr. Bilhorn replied, "and that is what gives me such sweet peace." When they entered the train again, pondering this thought over in his mind, as they sped west, the melody of "Sweet Peace" written the summer before came to him, and before he arrived in Keokuk, Ia., where it was first sung, the words were written.

TO THINK ABOUT

"What shall the harvest be?" Why just what we make it. "The fields are white unto harvest," therefore thrust in your sickle and save the grain before it is lost.

The superintendent who boasts that he has not been absent from his school for twenty-five years probably has some teachers who wishes he would break the record.

Why not have two schools instead of one? One where you are, and another of your own denomination in the foreign mission field to which you can send all your surplus picture cards, illustrated papers, toys, dolls, etc.? The World's Sunday-school Association, Metropolitan Tower, New York City, will give you the address of another school if you want it.

What about the World's next Sunday-school Convention at Tokyo, Japan? Are you praying for it? Are you planning for it? We are again to meet the Germans but this time with Bibles rather than bullets. Shall our American delegates be such that, as they mingle with those of other nations, they may stand firm in the faith once delivered to the saints and show such a spirit of loyalty to God and His Word that will make even our former enemies sing joyously, "Blest be the tie that binds"?

"Whatsoever two or three agree to pray for as touching my kingdom it shall be done." If this statement means anything it means that if pastor, superintendent and teacher, agree and work for the conversion of every member of this Sunday-school class this year that result shall be realized. If it is not realized, who is to blame?

The success of your Sunday-school work is not measured by the numbers reached, nor the kind of teachers and workers engaged, nor even the evident interest aroused. And may I say it and not be misunderstood?—by the number brought into the church, but its success is measured only by the changed lives of the pupils—lives which daily grow more like Him, whose they are and whom they serve.

THE STUDENT VOLUNTEERS AT DES MOINES

By Rev. E. J. Pace

An army of more than seven thousand vigorous, healthy, mentally alert, college students took possession of Des Moines, Ia., during the closing hours of 1919, to hold the eighth International Convention of Student Volunteers. According to local papers it was the largest convention ever held in the spacious Coliseum, as it was by far the most largely attended of any convention in the history of the movement. For five strenuous days these students faced the need of a very needy world with tense solemnity; faced also the imperial claims of the Lord Jesus over the whole of life to meet this need.

What Would D. L. Moody Have Thought?

One wonders what thoughts would have filled the mind of D. L. Moody, what emotions would have surged through his soul, could he have been seated on that wide platform, surrounded by hundreds of missionary veterans gathered from every quarter of the globe, and faced that sea of upturned faces! Undoubtedly there would rise before his vision the memory of that conference of students assembled at his call at Mount Hermon in East Northfield, just a third of a century ago, where the Student Volunteer Movement was born. With what pleasure would he have listened to the recital of the splendid achievements God has wrought through the movement during the first full generation of its life and activity; how more than eight thousand students have gone to all the foreign mission fields of the earth; how the released missionary zeal of thousands more, who failed to reach the field, has awakened and crystalized missionary interest in the home churches; how the missionary career has come to be viewed by college students with eminent respect; how through it all countless thousands, yes, millions of lives in lands beyond the seas have been made blessed by the preaching of Christ! And one likes to imagine what Moody would have said from that platform. There would be no befogging of the issues, one can be sure of that. There would be no compromise with those who have forsaken the ancient landmarks of the faith, to propose to the world a bloodless gospel of social reconstruction on lines that ignore the supernatural regeneration of the individual. There would be no soft pedal on the integrity, the entire inspiration, and therefore the sure infallibility of the Word of God. We may be sure Moody's vision of the Lord Jesus, the vision those students caught in '86, would thrill that vast concourse of students, and fire to action as it did of old. When the vision of Moody's God fades, there will die out of the movement every incentive for evangelism, and evangelism has been the soul of the volunteer movement. It was a joy to see emblazoned across the front of the Coliseum in letters four feet high, the old battle cry, "The Evangelization of the World in This Generation," a motto, we are informed, which has been dropped from the movement in England.

"The Gospel Stuff" Survives

It was a foregone conclusion that a battle royal must needs be fought. Proponents of the new theology were present in large numbers, and many more, whose education in hotbeds of German rationalism have afforded no opportunity to discern its insidiousness, were there. We are told also that many a student delegate made no profession of faith in the Lordship of Jesus, and openly scouted His deity. Such being the case, it is not to be wondered at that sentiments hostile to those that have dominated the movement from the beginning should have been heard even from the platform. Perhaps if we knew the pressure that was brought to bear upon the leaders of the convention by men who, to quote the uncouth language of one student, were advised to "cut out that gospel stuff, and give us a program of reconstruction," we might find reason to thank God for the courage of the leaders who kept that watchword floating high. We do thank God for the ringing challenges of Speer, of Eddy, of Zwemer, of Janvier, and of many another missionary veteran. We do thank God for the inspiriting loyalty of those in control of the convention, to the Saviourhood and deity of Jesus Christ, that they were given courage to resist all pressure brought to bear upon them to pass resolutions favoring a league of nations, or any of the modern programs of social reconstruction. The adequacy of Jesus alone for this world's every need stands out as the dominating note of the convention, for which again we thank God.

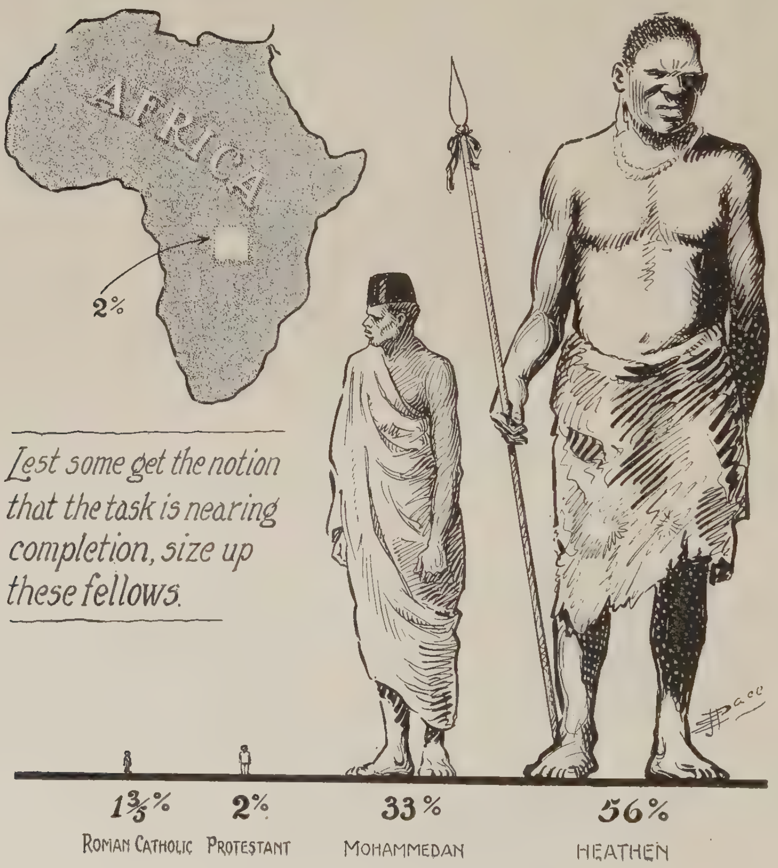
Mention ought to be made of the splendid exhibit of missions under the supervision of Mr. Burton St. John in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A., notes of which filled many a page of the thousands of delegates. Mottoes of the most gripping and compelling kind, challenging the lives of the youth who read them, hung from the walls, while hundreds of electrically illuminated pictures, depicting the scenes of mission lands, added graphic interest to the appeal.

While the convention was not all one could wish it to be, while many a loyal heart was pained by utterances entirely foreign to the New Testament, in the main we feel the convention was blessed of God and will be a blessing to multitudes of eager young people ready to pour out their all upon the altar of service. Christians ought to pray unceasingly to God that the Student Volunteer Movement may be kept true to the vision of Mt. Hermon and '86, and that we in this generation may witness the evangelization of the whole world, a feat clearly within the bounds of attainment. "The gospel must first be published among all nations" (Mark 13:10).

God speed the church upon her supreme task.

"God is testing us continually as to the measure of our faith, love, and devotedness to His Son by the presence of 1,000,000,000 of heathen in the world."

He who is not a missionary Christian, will be a missing Christian when the great day comes for bestowing the rewards of service.—A. J. Gordon.



Lest some get the notion that the task is nearing completion, size up these fellows.

TEN REPRESENTATIVE LEPERS

A Study of Luke 17:11

1. They all had the same disease, Leprosy—sin.
2. They were all in the same place, Afar off—distance.
3. They all cried to the same Person, Jesus—God.
4. They all cried for the same thing, Mercy—helpless.
5. They all got the same prescription, Go—obedience.
6. They all got the same blessing, Cleansing—regeneration.

SALVATION OF THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE

Atonement—Advocacy—Advent

I. PAST (Atonement)—Who delivered us from so great a death (2 Cor. 1:10).
   1. Christ hath appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself (Heb. 9:26).
   2. By one offering He hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified (Heb. 10:14).
   3. Christ died for our sins (1 Cor. 15:3).

II. PRESENT (Advocacy)—And doth deliver (2 Cor. 1:10).
   1. Christ entered into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us (Heb. 9:24).
   2. He is able to save, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for us (1 John 1:7-9; Heb. 7:25, 2:17, 18; 4:14-16; 1 Cor. 1:8).

III. FUTURE (Advent)—He will yet deliver (2 Cor. 1:10).
   1. Unto them that look for Him, shall he (Heb. 9:28) appear the second time, without sin unto salvation (1 Thess. 4:16, 17; 1 Cor. 15:51-53).

THE TRINITY IN REDEMPTION

God's offering to Himself—
1. God hath reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ (2 Cor. 5:18).
2. God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself (2 Cor. 5:19).
3. Christ through the eternal Spirit offered Himself to God (Heb. 9:14).

God all in all—
The Offerer—Who (Christ) gave Himself a ransom for all (1 Tim. 2:6; Matt. 20:28).
The Offering—He (Christ) offered Himself (Heb. 7:27).
The Altar—Himself. Who bare our sins in His own body on the tree (1 Pet. 2:24). The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all (made the iniquity of us all to meet on Him, mar.) (Isa. 53:6).

SERMONETTE

"For ever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven" Ps. 119:89.

The Bible does not contain the word of God, but is the Word of God. The Old Testament is the record of God's actions in government; the New Testament unfolds God's way in grace. In the Old we have revelations from God; but in the New we have God Himself revealed. In the Old we have the veil unrent—that is, God in light and man in darkness morally apart; in the New the veil is rent—that is, God is revealed and man brought nigh to God. In the former revelation the Almighty God sustained the hopes and became the strength of the patriarchs in their path of strangership.—Walter Scott.

THE PURPOSES OF CHRIST

He came "that they might have life" (John 10:10).

He was nailed to the cross to "draw all men unto me" (John 12:32).

He ascended (or went away) "to prepare a place for you" (John 14:2).

He is coming again "to receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also" (John 14:3).

—J. O. Richmond.

GRATITUDE AND COURAGE

"He thanked God, and took courage." Acts 28:15.

I. The Apostle's Conduct Respecting the Past. A model for us.
  1. The Grounds of our thanking God:
    (1) For our existence as a Christian Church. God made us a people who were not a people.
    (2) For our preservation as a Church to this day. The Church like a vessel at sea exposed to storm—a bush in flames—a city besieged by foes.
    (3) For the comforts and enjoyments His Church has afforded.
    (4) For tokens of divine approval. God has been rearing her walls.
  2. The Manner of thanking Him:
    (1) Vocal.
    (2) Spiritual.
    (3) Universal, all His people engaged.
    (4) Harmonious, all in concert.
    (5) Practical. The life should adorn the cause.

II His Feelings in Reference to the Future. An inspiration to us.
  1. The difficulties and trials passed are over forever.
  2. Amid all changes, our Rock and Help is the same.
  3. We have Christ's merit to plead, His sympathy to succor, His fulness to supply us forever.
  4. The Spirit's efficient agency still ours to guide, support and comfort.
  5. The promises shall never fail.
  6. In the prospect of meeting to celebrate the jubilee of the Church when God gathers His saints to Himself.

—J. Burns.

"The Old Testament," says Dr. A. J. Gordon, "is the watershed of the New. These deep springs which irrigate and fructify the New Testament church took their rise from the mountains of Judea, and descended, like the volume of the Nile, to fertilize and fructify the landscape around it."

NUGGETS

Gathered by D. L. Moody

Peace

"There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked." Isa. 48:22.

Christ came to bring peace. Luke 2:14.
He lived to give peace. John 14:27.
He died to make peace. Col. 1:20.
He rose again, having obtained peace. Luke 24:36.
Believing in Him, we have peace. Rom. 5:1.

Christ died for sin. 1 Pet. 3:18.
Believer dies to sin. 1 Pet. 2:24.
Unbeliever dies in sin. John 3:36.

Worship is the overflowing of a full heart; prayer the craving of an empty heart.

Five Degrees of Growth in Grace

1. New-born babes. 1 Pet. 2:2.
2. Weaned child. Isa. 28:9.
3. Little children. 1 John 2:12.
4. Young men. 1 John 2:13.
5. Fathers. 1 John 2:13.

Spiritual Blessings

A life that can never be forfeited.
A righteousness that will never be touched.
A pardon that can never be reversed.
A justification that can never be questioned.
A peace that can never be broken.
A joy that can never be diminished.
A rest that can never be disturbed.
A hope that can never be disappointed.

WHAT FAITH IS

Mental conclusions and spiritual experiences are two quite different things. Reason may gather piles of knowledge concerning the historic Jesus, but reason alone will give me nothing about the risen Christ. I want to know the Jesus of history, but I want to have communion with the Christ of faith. Such knowledge of the Lord comes to us through the act and attitude of faith. Faith is more than a mental decision; it is a surrender of the will. It is more than a verdict; it is the execution of the verdict.

It is of momentous importance to remember that the very core of faith is motion—a movement of the will toward the holy Lord. The act of faith is the yielding of the personal life to the God who is revealed to us in Jesus Christ our Lord. And the life of faith is the constant repetition of that act of surrender until the repeated acts become an attitude and every choice and will in life is stamped with the pleasure and fear of God.—John H. Jowett.

Let the saying of the ancient be remembered: "He who trifles in the pulpit, shall weep in hell," and the modern saying, "Cold preachers make bold sinners."—Mather.

The Evangelistic Field

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS

Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 6th of the month preceding date of issue.

"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns, and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work, nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

S. D. Goodale recently closed a meeting at Ashland, Kan. Many were turned away every Sunday night. Ninety-five professed conversion.

Mr. and Mrs. McKeegan held a successful meeting at Scugog, Ont. Seventy took a stand for Christ and the whole church membership was quickened into new life.

The Linden-Dixon Evangelistic Party since October first held meetings at Cairo, Ill., Council Bluffs, Ia., and Eldorado Springs, Mo. They began work the first Sunday in January at Brookville, Mo.

Oliver E. Williams closed a successful Christian Life Conference in Greensburg, Pa., Dec. 15; twenty conversions resulted. He is now in a promising campaign in Frederick, Md. He will then go to Johnstown, Pa.

Herbert C. Hart, of Hart and Magann, recently closed an evangelistic campaign at Collingswood, N. J. This meeting was said to be one of the most successful of any held in the historic revival Methodist church of that city.

"Just closed a good meeting at Pike, N. Y., with sixty-three decisions. Am now in a union campaign at Middlesex, N. Y., in the town hall. Our next meeting will be at Otego, N. Y., in February, and at Scio, in March."—S. E. Lewis.

J. Cardiff and wife closed a successful meeting in Mansfield, O., in November, and were looking for great results in their meeting in Bolivar, O., at the time of writing. They expected to be in Philadelphia in January, and then go to Massillon, O.

A mid-winter Bible conference on Christian Fundamentals was held January 11-18 at Immanuel Baptist Church, Cambridge, Mass. Among the speakers were C. H. Leggett, A. Gordon MacLennan, and Homer Stanley Morgan.

Le Roy J. Mitchell has just closed a four weeks revival campaign in Auburn, Ill. Two hundred decisions were made. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shimers conducted the music. The local ministers took active part in the services and the campaign was inspiring.

The Johnson-Hobbs Party conducted a successful meeting in Rosedale, Kan., in November. Over one hundred souls were saved; when the fuel administration had to close everything, splendid work was done in the Rosedale homes, and the people took great interest in the work.

Rev. James B. Muir writes from Lincoln, Ill.: "Dr. W. A. Bodell has just closed a two-weeks campaign in the Union Presbyterian Church. More has been accomplished in that short time than statistics can reveal. From the opening service until the close a remarkably deep and intense interest was manifested; of the forty-two people who will unite with the church, the large majority are men."

In a letter from Evangelist Chas. Reign Scoville dated December 17, he writes from Dewey, Okla.: "You will be delighted to know we recently closed a great campaign at Bartlesville, Okla., with 2,305 in all, coming forward, with 108 persons on the last day. We are just beginning in Dewey, and had 114 persons come forward Sunday, with 456 in the first seven days of invitation."

"We are launching out in a revival at our church in Detroit and we covet the prayers of the readers of the C. W. M. We have a lot of people who have nothing but an oyster-supper religion and we realize that the battle can be won only through prayer. Cottage prayer meetings have been held for two months and we are looking for victory. We hope to continue the meeting into February."—A. C. Emmons.

The Union Mission of Norfolk, Va., has recently commemorated its twenty-eighth year of service. The year has been full of fruitful work. The report shows attendance in chapel, 14,408; professed conversions, 1,650; Testaments and Gospels given out, 1,840; colportage books, 400, and thousands of magazines given out. It has been the most eventful year in the mission's history in many ways.

A three weeks revival meeting has just closed at Yountsville, Ind.; the pastor, Rev. Clifford Cody being assisted by Evangelist F. A. Geisenheiner, a former Institute student. In addition to a number of converts (some of them being representative people of the community) the Christians were wonderfully helped. A feature of these meetings was the systematic reading of the Bible daily, on the part of those that attended.

A campaign has recently been closed in Pella, Ia., by Myrtle M. Saylor with Suzanne Gardner as singer and children's worker. Aside from a large number of conversions, it was a real awakening for every follower of Jesus Christ to be more active in His service. Besides the regular meetings every evening, there were cottage prayer meetings, men's meetings, business people's meetings and meetings for women and girls in factories. They were all largely attended.

The Newell Brothers Evangelistic Party have just finished their 1919 schedule with a successful campaign at Greenwood, a suburb of Altoona, Pa. During the three weeks one hundred and thirty-eight were at the altar—a large proportion being railroad men. Entire families were saved, most of them joining the church. On the last day almost $500 were raised for the party. During January, February and March the party will conduct campaigns in Mexico, Harrisburg and Hawthorne respectively, all in Pennsylvania. Negotiations are also on for two early summer campaigns which will likely be held in the large tabernacle-tent carried by the party.

H. D. Kennedy recently conducted a four weeks campaign in Beamsville, Ont., and writes: "During the second week an all-day prayer meeting was held which began with forty present and the last three hours about one hundred were in attendance. When the revival began in earnest, the numbers increased. The oldest citizens of the town said they had not seen such a general awakening and far-reaching revival during the past thirty-five years; a large number of the converts were young men."

T. LeRoy Muir reports a union campaign at Greenville, N. Y., in October, with ninety-eight new decisions and two churches united for the winter program. In November meetings were held at Athens, Pa., with fifty decisions and forty uniting with the church. At the Port Ewen campaign in December many decisions were made. At the time of writing the party was in a meeting at Salona, Pa. Professor R. E. Kauffman of Dayton, O., is choir leader. In February the party will be in a union meeting at New Paltz, N. Y.

H. L. Stephens and party closed a successful meeting in Trenton, Ont., in December. No building in the town was large enough for a union campaign, so twenty influential people had a large rink built. Many of the Northern Canadian R. R. men have been converted, and their wives. It was the first meeting of its kind ever held in the town and the largest crowds ever seen in Trenton assembled on Sunday nights. They expect to have a large union campaign in Collingwood in January and part of February.

L. Berenice Luckow reports an old fashioned revival meeting just closed at Unionville, Ia., continuing nearly five weeks. The meeting was held in the Baptist church where Rev. Luther Childs, a former Institute student, is pastor; there were twenty-five conversions and reclamations and twenty-four additions to the church with others to come later. Evangelist J. Milton Whisler preached and Miss Whisler sang and did personal work. A reunion of several former M. B. I. students was held at L. Bernice Luckow's home.

Rev. M. F. Dawson of the Hartford City (Ind.) United Brethren Church has recently organized The Hartford City United Brethren School of Prophets which has for its purpose the holding of meetings in the churches near the city and assisting the pastor in the work of the Hartford City church which is one of the largest in this denomination. F. J. Evans, who six months ago returned from his service as chaplain with the A. E. F., with his party of helpers, conducted an evangelistic campaign in Hartford City in January.

The Vom Bruch Party closed their California work with meetings in the Boyle Heights, West Adams and South Park districts with good results. Seventy-eight decisions were recorded the last night in the South Park district. Eight meetings of one week each were held in eight districts; over six hundred decisions being recorded. As a result of the meetings several young people will enter the Los Angeles Bible Institute to prepare for Christian work; two will enter The Moody Bible Institute. The party next went to Hammond, Ind.

The Macon Bible Conference convened at Macon, Ga., Jan. 4-18. This Conference will be known as "Link No. 2" in a chain of Bible Conferences that is being organized by J. B. Phillips, who has been pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle, of Chattanooga, Tenn., for over five years. The speakers were: Dr. A. C. Dixon, Dr. R. A. Torrey, Dr. William Evans, Dr. Charles A. Blanchard, Dr. James M. Gray, Rev. B. B. Sutcliffe, Dr. W. M. Tidwell, Hon. J. B. Milligan of Chattanooga, and Miss Ena Bridges, who recently returned from Persia. The music was in charge of Mr. William Young.

Rev. Dr. J. Gordon McPherson, after spending eight weeks in Indianapolis, Ind., returned to Austin, Tex., to spend the holidays with his family and while there he delivered a series of patriotic addresses among the colored people. On the third Sunday in January he and his party opened a union evangelistic campaign at Muskogee, Okla.

J. B. McMinn reports that after spending eighteen months in the army, twelve of them in France, preaching to the boys with E. O. Sellers, I. E. Honeywell and others, he resumed his work last fall in the First Presbyterian Church of Maxwell, Ia., with W. H. Collisson as helper. Then with Mr. Wieand he had some good meetings at Cassopolis, Mich., where some splendid work was done among the high school students. They have just closed a meeting in the First M. E. Church of Waseca, Minn., with fine results; more than thirty family altars were established, and some of them through the efforts of the new converts of the meeting.

The Taylor-Fleming party had a very successful meeting at Superior, Wis., with W. E. Lucas, a former student of The Moody Bible Institute. Two hundred and twelve made decisions and eighty joined the church the last Sunday, with others to follow. Eighty-one dedicated themselves to Christian activity; and six expressed a desire to come to the Moody Institute to study. From this place the party next conducted a meeting at Lancaster, Wis. Their last report is from Menomonie, Wis., and they ask an interest in the prayers of God's children for the great possibilities there as Menomonie is a school town, and hundreds of teachers will go from there to shape the lives of our boys and girls.

The Franklin Evangelistic Party closed a very successful meeting at Ollie, Ia., on Nov. 23, with a goodly number of conversions, and God's people were wonderfully revived, strengthened, and unified, as many bore testimony on the closing night of the campaign. From there the party went to Oakdale, Neb., where they began on the thirtieth. A good number were led to give their hearts to Christ, many reconsecrated their lives to Him and over a score of family altars were erected. The work was carried on over the greatest obstacles and hindrances imaginable—coal shortage, contagious disease, etc. The party began its sixth year of service, at Leola, S. Dak., on Jan. 11.

Miss Constance J. Brandon, Deputation Secretary for The Heart of Africa and World-wide Evangelization Crusade, is making a tour of the United States and Canada for six months, for the purpose of explaining the nature and method of their work, addressing meetings wherever opportunity occurs, and organizing new centers of interest. The aim is primarily to create a deeper missionary interest by hearing of what can be accomplished through simple faith in God and obedience to Christ's command. Any one interested in assisting her in any way may address Messrs. Thos. Cook & Son, 245 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Richard Lowe writes as follows: "Woodston's (Kan.) four weeks meetings closed Dec. 22, with one hundred sixteen converts, forty accessions to the church and twenty-five baptisms. Among them were twelve young married couples, and the steward of the church. One night twelve high school lads knelt at the altar, and prayed through to victory. Twenty-five of the young people consecrated their lives and all to life service. The Woodston Welfare Club is doing a great work for the young people, a result of the Great Commission Band's Prayer Tract 'Suppose.' Praise God for a prayer hearing and prayer answering God. Brother Marston, of Jennings, Kan., was the evangelist. Pray for me."

Mr. and Mrs. John Imrie, singing evangelists, write that they have been in a meeting which continued through the holidays. Marble Hill, Mo., where they have been working, is a college town and many students publicly confessed Christ. Mr. Imrie had the joy of leading the marshal of the town, who had been a saloon keeper, sixty years of age, to Christ in his home. The preaching was done by the pastor, Rev. B. M. Shacklette for a few days, and then Rev. Mr. Setzer from Carruthersville, Mo., carried on the meeting to the close. Mr. and Mrs. Imrie with Rev. Setzer led the chapel exercise at the College every morning. From Marble Hill Mr. and Mrs. Imrie joined Evangelist J. L. Rayburn at Advance, Mo.

BREAKING THE POWER OF VICE PROMOTERS

The American Civic Reform Union, of Cleveland, O., Albert Sidney Gregg, superintendent, finds that in one county alone in Pennsylvania the Reform Union furnished evidence that led to over one hundred convictions, and in one Ohio city the Union obtained one hundred and twenty-five indictments. Nearly five hundred Reform Union Welfare Circle Workers are doing personal work among girls and women, and within the last year they gave direct warnings and teaching to 20,000 people relative to white slavery and vice. The Union is calling for 10,000 women to volunteer as Welfare leaders to circulate books and co-operate in other ways. The organization concentrates on women because they are the "mothers of the race" and in time, if they are properly instructed, they will teach their own sons and daughters. The Welfare work, however, reaches both sexes now through the Welfare leaders.

THE NATIONAL TRAVELERS' AID SOCIETY

This society desires to aid all travelers, especially women and girls, as they go into or pass through great cities. The service is religious in character, but not sectarian, and is rendered free of charge, without regard to age, race, sex or creed. In New York nearly fifty trained women workers are now on duty at the various railroad terminals and the steamship piers. There are organizations of this society in 168 cities of this country. The central offices are located at 465 Lexington Ave., New York City.

It is astonishing how soon the whole conscience begins to unravel, if a single stitch drops; one little sin indulged makes a big hole in the conscience.—C. B.

Book Notices

Any book favorably mentioned below may be secured at price named from the Bible Institute Colportage Association, 822 North La Salle Street, Chicago.

The Gist of the Lesson for 1920, by Rev. R. A. Torrey, D. D.

This is another of those fine condensations of teachings on the International Sunday-school Lessons that have been appearing for twenty years, and this one is as good as the best.

154 pages. 2¾ x 4½ inches. The Fleming H. Revell Company, New York and Chicago. 30 cents. J. H. R.

Vest Pocket Lessons for 1920, by Rev. Philip W. Crannell, D. D.

This little serial commentary on the International Sunday-school Lessons has only reached its third year, but it is a real multum in parvo. The author has a way of saying much in a few words, and is always fresh and stimulating. The size of this little compend is a feature of great practical value.

201 pages. 3 x 6 inches. The Judson Press, Philadelphia. 30 cents.

J. H. R.

The Acts by Professor Charles R. Erdman, D. D.

Our readers will be glad to know that Professor Erdman has followed up his interesting work on the General Epistles by this companion volume on the Acts of the Apostles. The manner of exposition is the same as that stated in our review of the previous work, namely, to quote a paragraph and then follow it with remarks in elucidation.

The author is thoroughly sound and possesses unusual teaching ability, so that we are able to commend this volume with cordiality. It is dedicated to "the students of Princeton Theological Seminary, my friends and fellow-workers in the furtherance of the gospel."

176 pages. 4½ x 7 inches. Limp boards. The Westminster Press, Philadelphia. 75 cents.

Why I Preach the Second Coming, by Rev. I. M. Haldeman, D. D.

We have here the latest book by the eloquent and fearless pastor of the First Baptist Church of New York City.

Briefly stated his arguments for preaching upon the Second Coming are eight: Because it is the most often recorded event in the Bible; because His coming is bound up with every fundamental doctrine; because only at that time will our personal redemption be completed; because not till then will the church be exalted to her place of rulership; because then the covenant promises of God to Israel will be fulfilled; because only then can a government of everlasting righteousness and peace be established upon the earth; because then the earth will be delivered from the bondage of corruption; because the coming of Christ for His Church is the most imminent event upon the horizon of time.

The author portrays present-day conditions in the professing church and in the world in a manner that is both thrilling and appealing. Altogether the book is a wholesome one to read and to pray over.

160 pages. Size 5 x 7⅜ inches. Fleming H. Revell Company, New York and Chicago. $1.00.

"The League of Nations in the Light of the Bible," by A. C. Gaebelein, editor of Our Hope.

This work, as might have been expected from its author, is largely expository, dealing in his most interesting and instructive way with Psalm 2, Daniel 2:40-45, Acts 4:22-27 and Revelation 13:1-10.

His summing up is that the Roman Empire will yet see a political revival, and that this confederation of nations will have a head who will be possessed by Satan. There will be also a revival of the Papacy in his judgment, which will once more domineer over the nations. However, the league of nations now under discussion in the United States Senate is not in his judgment that which is predicted in the Bible, although he believes the other may develop out of the present-day chaos. As the nations of Europe are regrouping themselves, and as new states are forming, the outward geographical restoration of the entire territory of what was once the Roman Empire may soon be seen.

He points out that Europe is at present waiting for a great leader who will take the political headship of the nations, a leader for whom the Jews are also waiting, whose restoration program can not be fully carried out till he arrives. That leader is revealed in the Word of God as "the prince that shall come." (Dan. 9:26).

The booklet concludes with a reference to the grouping of the other nations of the world, especially Germany, Austria and Russia, with a possibility of Japan, all of which indicate the ripening of the predicted end of the age, and makes the booklet extremely valuable for readers who have not been able to go into the subject as deeply as the author.

DR. GRAY ADDRESSES A BUSINESS MEN'S CLUB

While in Owensboro, Ky., January 7, to attend a Bible conference on "The Fundamentals," Dr. Gray addressed a noon meeting of the Rotary Club, which, said the Owensboro Inquirer, "in size and interest exceeded any held in many months."

"Dean Gray proved his right to speak," continued the Inquirer, "both as a minister and as a business man. In so doing his address linked together the two great constructive forces of religion and business.

"Speaking, as he said, for a God who never fails the preacher who trusts him nor the business man who trusts him, he also spoke for one of the fundamental needs in the country today. This was that it is incumbent upon the people of America to renew their interest in the slogan—law and order. Questions like the high cost of living and universal military training, while worthy of the best thought the country can produce, pale into insignificance compared with the need for never-failing law and order. The people of the country should call upon the conventions of the two great political parties, when they assemble this year, to set forth as a slogan—law and order. He expressed the belief that there is patriotism enough and righteousness enough in the United States to settle justly all disputes between capital and labor, when the settlement is allowed to be made in peace.

"Turning to religion he said he knew that he would fail in the respect of his hearers if he failed to touch on religion. Whatever might be their creed, he knew that all members of his audience had one vital concern in common, their relationship to the Great Creator. He urged as the vital necessity without which that of law and order would be an empty thing, godliness, for godliness is the basis of character, and character is the basis of citizenship. Pharaoh, one of the greatest kings in all history, recognized this when he needed a man to be a Herbert Hoover and a Georges Clemenceau, a food administrator and a premier, in one. In choosing Joseph he turned to his courtiers and said, 'Where will we find such a man as this one in whom the Spirit of God moves?'

"He called upon his hearers, if they aspired to be successful business men, to be men in whom the Spirit of God moves."

NEW ADDITIONS TO THE FORCE

An important addition to the faculty is that of the Rev. J. R. Schaffer, who succeeds Mr. Kirk as Assistant Superintendent of men, the latter having become secretary to Dr. Gray.

Mr. Schaffer is a Baptist minister who received his early training at Wesleyan University. He was ordained at the North Baptist Church, Newark, N. J., but for the last seven years has been pastor of the Spruce Street Baptist Church, Philadelphia, and also a teacher in The National Bible Institute and The Philadelphia School of the Bible. He is also general secretary for the United States of the Inland South American Missionary Union, and secretary of the Interdenominational Foreign Missionary Association of North America. He was strongly recommended to the Institute by such well known ministers as the Revs. Kenneth MacKenzie, Samuel G. Neal, I. M. Haldeman, Lewis S. Chafer, W. I. Pettingill, F. W. Farr, Carey S. Thomas and D. M. Stearns, and such laymen as Messrs. O. R. Palmer, Charles G.

Trumbull, Edward A. Steele and J. H. Jefferis.

One of his friends writing of him says: "He is truly a man of God, a choice Christian spirit, and thoroughly yielded to the Lord; has a strong personality and a most pleasing manner in his approach to people. He is a man's man, very gifted as a teacher of the Word of God, possessing good executive ability; qualifies in almost every respect for leadership among men."

Professor T. J. Bittikofer and Mrs. Bittikofer (nee Carlson) having been granted a year's leave of absence from the faculty of our Music Course in order to obtain experience in the evangelistic field, Professor A. E. Hosmer and Miss Cora Fleming have been called to take their work.

Albert Edwin Hosmer

Mr. Hosmer received his musical education in Boston and Washington, D. C., and served as supervisor of music in the public schools of Sudbury, Mass., and subsequently as head of the vocal department in Muskingum College, New Concord, O. His voice is a bass-baritone of very sympathetic quality, and as a soloist he has served Congregational and Episcopal churches in Washington, D. C., and New York City.

Mr. Hosmer is a Congregationalist as to his church membership, and is heartily in accord with the doctrinal position of the Institute, and has recently served as the director of music at the Victorious Life Conference at Princeton. Those who know him well speak of his refined instincts and bearing, his success as a teacher, and his lovableness as a man. He has been elected a member of the Faculty.

Miss Cora Fleming

Miss Cora Fleming comes from Colorado, and obtained her musical education in the Oberlin and Denison conservatories of music at Oberlin and Granville respectively, in Ohio. She also tutored in theory and harmony in Denison conservatory. She is a Baptist in her denominational connection, and stands with the Institute in its view of Christian life and service. She has served as state treasurer of the B. Y. P. U. of Colorado and recording secretary of the Colorado Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society. Miss Fleming may become permanently connected with the Institute.

The Institute was sorry to lose the services of Miss Daisie B. Williams from its English Course, but the physical condition of her mother required her presence at home in Missouri. As her successor has been secured Miss H. A. Dunlap, who was educated at the Indiana State University, and has had eleven years of experience in public school teaching. She was also at one time a student at the Missionary Institute at Nyack, N. Y., preparing for work in heathen lands from which she was prevented by ill health. It is needless to say that, like all the teachers in The Moody Bible Institute, she is in thorough agreement with its doctrinal position.

It should be added that Miss Dunlap taught English in the Nyack school and also in the Wilson Memorial Academy, while taking post-graduate work in the former. Among her testimonials was one from the late Dr. A. B. Simpson, in which he expressed his personal confidence in and regard for her.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT NOTES

Dr. Henry Ostrom severely felt the shock of the extremely cold weather which obtained at Winnipeg during his engagement for special lectures on "Christian Fundamentals," but he recuperated sufficiently to begin, January 4, a three weeks evangelistic campaign at the Derry Street United Brethren Church, of Harrisburg, Pa.

Rev. B. B. Sutcliffe was not permitted to quite finish his work as teacher of the circuit of Union Bible Classes, radiating out of Pittsburgh, on account of an attack of diphtheria which caused his detention in quarantine for a few days. However, he recovered quickly and after the holiday vacation went to Macon, Ga., where he appeared on the program of a Bible conference with Drs. Gray, Dixon, Torrey, Evans and Blanchard.

The success of the Union Bible Classes has stimulated other towns within easy traveling distance of Pittsburgh to seek inclusion in a new circuit now forming to begin work early in February.

During January Rev. Geo. E. Guille conducted a Bible conference at the Presbyterian church of Fountain Inn, S. C., and gave a series of Bible studies under the auspices of the Austin (Tex.) Y. W. C. A.

Rev. Rollin T. Chafer gave a Bible exposition and several addresses at the First Presbyterian Church of Knoxville, Tenn., preached at Crescent City, Fla., and at the Pryor Street Presbyterian Church of Atlanta, Ga. At the St. Mark's M. E. Church of Atlanta he gave an address at a banquet of Sunday-school teachers on "The Need of Trained Teachers."

Miss Elinor Stafford Millar began the new year at Superior, Wis., with a two weeks series of evangelistic addresses in Hope Congregational Church. Later in the month she filled an engagement with Union Mission, Akron, O.

Mrs. Margaret T. Russell's friends have a way of bringing her back for further teaching, which is illustrated by her return to Montgomery and Demopolis, Ala., and Meridian, Miss., for Bible studies during January.

Mr. C. E. Putnam filled a return engagement at Asheville, N. C., in connection with which he addressed the Y. M. C. A., and spent Christmas at Eliada Orphanage.

Mr. John R. Riebe on two occasions took the place of the pastor in the pulpit of the Morton Park Congregational Church, of Chicago.

FALL TERM GRADUATION EXERCISES

Rev. William Evans, D. D., Ph. D., gave the address at the Fall Term graduation exercises on the evening of Thursday, December 18, to an audience which filled the Auditorium.

In introducing Dr. Evans, Mr. Henry P. Crowell, president of the Board of Trustees, made mention of the fact that not only was Dr. Evans a former student of the Institute and a former member, for many years, of its Faculty, but also that he was the first graduate to receive the Institute's diploma, and that for years past he has been one of the country's foremost leaders in Bible teaching and evangelism.

In his masterly address on what the attitude of the Christian worker should be toward the modern demand for church reconstruction Dr. Evans made it crystal-clear that the only reconstruction worthy of consideration is that which would closely follow the pattern laid down for the New Testament church.

Class Song

Referring to unbelief in the miraculous he said that a sinless man in this world, as was Jesus Christ, was as great a miracle in the moral realm as any recorded miracle in the physical.

Sixty-one graduates, 23 men and 38 women, were presented with diplomas by President Crowell. Twenty-six of these had completed the Missionary Course, 25 the Bible Course, and 10 the Bible-Music Course.

Nine of the missionary graduates have already applied for assignments to foreign fields, and a number of others are to do so shortly.

It was announced that 134 Correspondence students representing 31 states and 4 foreign countries had been awarded certificates for the completion of their courses in the period from July 1 to November 12, 1919.

The speakers at the class exercises in the forenoon were Mr. Arthur M. Clarke for the men, who made a forceful address, and Miss Helen S. Bell for the women, whose message was one of much interest and blessing.

Mr. William L. Jester wrote the words of the class song, Miss Helen Ruth Lamberton the music.

Dr. Gray presided at the dinner to the graduates, following the reception in the afternoon given by the Faculty and Business Staff in the Women's Building. Presentation of the class picture to the Faculty was made by Mr. Gilbert A. Miles.

A REUNION IN MINNESOTA

John S. Dick, '18, writes of an interesting reunion that was held at his home in Mountain Lake, Minn., in December. Those present were Miss Katherine Pauls, '17, worker in the mission at Minneapolis, Minn.; Miss Helen Warkentin, '17, soon to sail for India; Ewald Rohloff, '17, pastor, Mennonite church at Butnam, Mich.; J. H., '18, now attending the Northern Baptist Seminary of Chicago, and Mrs. Wiens, Miss Tina Kornelsen, '19, J. S. Dick, '18, and Mrs. Dick, soon to sail for South China. Miss Helen Heppner, '19, will be one of the party going to China.

LIVINGSTON R. MORGAN, '18

"With the Lord"

In the death of Livingston R. Morgan, a graduate student of the music courses who was killed in an accident on December 17, the anniversary of his graduation with the fall term class of 1918, the Institute lost a man who typified the best aspirations of its student body. Mr. Morgan, who worked outside of class hours as a gas-fitter in a sub-basement of Marshall Field & Company, was killed with his companion at the bench when elevator counter-weights weighing more than a ton plunged down the shaft and pinned the two workers beneath them. He was twenty-five years old.

Mr. Morgan came to the Institute in 1916, less than a month after his conversion and renunciation of a life of sin. Because of his previous record he was denied admittance, but secure in the knowledge of his regeneration and determined to enter the Institute, he engaged a room nearby. Here, after several months, he was discovered in an attitude of prayer by Harry D. Clark, of the Practical Work Department, his plea being for admission to a course of Christian training. On Mr. Clark's testimony he was enrolled on trial, and his life as a student was exemplary. He was a potent influence for good among his fellows, was an assiduous student, and his personal work was most effective. His class address delivered at graduation was one of the most sincere and impressive ever heard in the Auditorium.

His companion in his night work was an agnostic and took delight in showing his contempt for religion. Mr. Morgan plead consistently with him, but with apparent futility, it being said that on the very day of his death the agnostic tossed a quarter in the air and exclaimed, "That is what I think of your God." A few hours later he was called to meet Him.

Mr. Morgan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Morgan, live at 240 West Sunbury street, Shamokin, Pa.

PROFESSOR GRANT STROH'S RETIREMENT FROM CARROLL COLLEGE

The Executive Committee of Carroll College adopted the following formal expression of regret on the resignation of Professor Stroh as a member of their faculty:

"In accepting the resignation of Professor Grant Stroh as Professor of Biblical Literature in Carroll College, we hereby express our regrets that he finds it necessary to leave the institution.

"Further, that we acknowledge the faithfulness with which he has filled this position; the mature thought and ripe scholarship which he has furnished; the splendid Christian character of the man, and the high ideals which are in accord with and give purpose to an institution of this nature.

"Further, that we extend to Professor Stroh our congratulations upon being selected by such a prominent and influential institution as The Moody Bible Institute. Since this new field offers such a superior opportunity of service for which Professor Stroh is particularly fitted, we can but congratulate both him and the institution and express our regret at having to lose him."

STUDENT VOLUNTEERS VISIT THE INSTITUTE

Echoes from the International Student Volunteers Convention, which closed at Des Moines, Ia., January 4, were heard the following Monday at a missionary rally in the Auditorium. Three distinguished speakers from the convention addressed the meeting—the Rev. C. A. R. Janviers, president of Ewing college, Allahabad, India; Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer, F. R. G. S., of Cairo, Egypt; and the Rev. Edwin M. Hursh, a missionary from Sierra Leone. These visitors, together with some hundred and fifty delegates to the convention en route to their homes in the East, were taken on a tour of the Institute.

An encouraging interpretation of the convention was made by Dr. Zwemer. Reviewing the outstanding events of the gathering he said: "When that great meeting, attended by 7,000 college men from all quarters of the world, came to an end, it was quite evident that its opinion of what would remedy the present world turmoil was unanimous. It was no program of social reform, no new economic system, no change in industrial relations, but the gospel of Jesus Christ."

A NEW AUXILIARY IN TENNESSEE

Twelve former Day Class students and Correspondence students gathered in the Chattanooga Y. M. C. A. building the evening of December 5, 1919, and under the direction of Rev. E. E. White, Secretary of the Alumni Association, organized the Chattanooga Alumni Auxiliary. The following were present: W. L. Swartz, '14, J. P. Fowler, '19, S. G. Frazier, '17, F. E. Hauser, '91, C. V. Bellamy, '18, Fred. Layfield, '12, J. Newton Dicks, '05, Jake M. Brown, '19, Paul R. Hodge, '16, A. O. '18, and Mrs. Wright and Miss Katherine Pierce, '16. Mr. Swartz was elected president, Miss Pierce, first vice-president, Mr. Wright, second vice-president, Mr. Dicks, treasurer, and Mr. Hodge, secretary. A splendid spirit was manifested.

MISS JOHNSON HONORED BY HER ALMA MATER

Miss Edna G. Johnson, our esteemed teacher of blackboard drawing and Bible story telling, has been elected a member of the governing board of the National Kindergarten and Elementary College of Chicago, of which she is a graduate.

W. E. Lucas, '16, writes he is now in his fourth year as pastor of the 59th St. M. E. Church of Superior, Wis. Many conversions and accessions to the church have been made. A new parsonage has been bought and they expect to build a new church to make room for a growing Sunday-school and church membership.

Mr. Ogilvie pursued a course in the Institute in 1905-6 but did not graduate. Later he attended McCormick Theological Seminary, studied abroad on a scholarship, and received the honorary degree of A. M. from Emporia College, Kan. His work in Peking, in which he has been engaged since 1911, was supported by the First Presbyterian Church of Oak Park.

The Gospel in Print

HOLY BOLDNESS COMMENDED

If all Christian people were as busy circulating religious literature and teaching gospel truth as errorists and infidels are in impressing their wrong views, there might be more progress in the right direction. The trouble is that too many Christians have a needless feeling of timidity. Infidels, without any sense of reverence or hesitancy, blurt out their attacks on the truth. Christian people ought to be bold, because they are under commission from Christ to tell about the way of life and salvation.—Herald and Presbyter.

BUY BOOKS!

The love of good books provides one of the purest of pleasures, the least expensive, the most convenient, the most readily and completely controlled.

Good books add to your life the intimate companionship of the best minds. Through books you can associate with princes of intellect and of soul. Through books you can travel to the ends of the earth without discomfort, at no cost, and instantly. Through books you can live in all ages, and heap up in your one existence the garnered thought and achievements of the past.

Carelessness in regard to books, neglect of them, false choices among them, are prime causes of essential failure in life. Therefore, buy books; but be sure to buy good books.—"Arrow," in Christian Endeavor World.

THE PRINTING PRESS

The printing press is to the man with a message what the machine gun is to the soldier. The printing industry is in every way one of the greatest of industries, because there are many who have something to tell the world and they know the power of the printed page. Just as a message in print will sell "oleo," or any other thing, so will the gospel in print save souls, and by the same process—men read and believe.

Reading matter is so profuse that one thing is greatly sought after to get a thing read, namely, the personal touch. It is hard not to inspect a marked copy of a publication, or one especially recommended.

Oh, let this wisdom be applied more widely to the gospel in print! Let the message be stated in all its simplicity; let testimony be straight and unfaltering; and let there be the extra personal touch of friend to friend: "Here is something good to read; it has helped me."

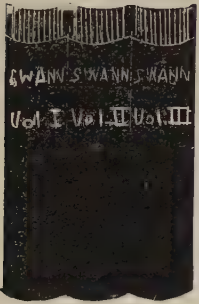
WHAT SHALL I PREACH NEXT SUNDAY?

Swann's books are designed to help answer this WEEKLY question, Just now beginning their FOURTH year of sale, they have been ordered from the uttermost parts of the earth. [Handsome cloth binding.]

Praise Letters have come by the HUNDREDS. A preacher doesn't 'voluntarily' write a publisher unless strongly impressed.

Volume THREE is NOW READY. Two sermons, "Strength of Weakness" and "Weight of the World" are bringing letters

219 pages; fine cloth. Price $1.50.



Satisfaction or MONEY BACK.

The product of a life dedicated to the one task of bringing out books really helpful to preachers.

Reduction in price by buying both.

Volume ONE is all sold out at present. Volume TWO is $1.25. Both TWO and THREE may be had for $2.50 when ordered together, Check or money order.

A Nebraska minister writes;

"I value them above any of my books."

52 COMPLETE sermons in the set. Arranged in thought, paragraph and sentence with one end in view--to have sermon "Suggestive" material.

HOMILETICAL

A Pennsylvania minister writes;

"In ALL my books I have not found so great help."

The sermon on "STRENGTH of Weakness" IS VITAL TO THESE TIMES. So is "Weight of the World"

The plan is to publish one of these books bi-ennially. Give them a test now

Address orders to GEORGE SWANN, Publisher, 928 Cherokee Road, LOUISVILLE, KENT

Each volume is complete in itself.

They are numbered merely to distinguish. So it matters not if volume ONE is out. These books are equally good for teachers.

JUST OUT--Two More Books on HIS COMING

"THE FIRST RESURRECTION."

"Nothing like it in print." "Worth its weight in gold to any preacher," or layman.

"THE RAPTURE."

"The best you have written yet." Makes the saints shout. These are companion sermons to "The Second Coming of Christ and Some Reasons Why I Think it is Near."

What 15 Cents Will bring You From the Nation's Capital

The little matter of 15 cts. in stamps or coin will bring you the Pathfinder 13 weeks on trial. The Pathfinder is an illustrated weekly, published at the Nation's center, for the Nation; a paper that prints all the news of the world and tells the truth and only the truth; now in its 27th year. This paper fills the bill without emptying the purse; it costs but $1 a year. If you want to keep posted on what is going on in the world, at least expense of time or money, this is your means. If you want a paper in your home which is sincere, reliable, entertaining, wholesome, the Pathfinder is yours. If you would appreciate a paper which puts everything clearly, briefly—here it is. Send 15c to show that you might like such a paper, and we will send you the Pathfinder on probation 13 weeks. The 15c does not repay us, but we are glad to invest in new friends.

Washington has become the World's Capital and reading the Pathfinder is like sitting in the inner council with those who mold the world's destiny.

The Pathfinder, Bx 547, Washington, D. C.

The Lord's Return

By

Rev. Jesse Forrest Silver

Revised Edition, with index; 311 Pages. Regular Price………… $1.50

This new book, which has passed through several editions, has gained an international reputation. A copy should be in the hands of every student of the Word of God. The author, who was a firm postmillennarian, was converted to the opposite view while engaged in exhaustive research on this subject.

Professor W. H. Griffith Thomas, D. D., says: "When any writers are able to disprove the contentions found in this book it will be time for premillennialists to capitulate." R. A. Torrey, D. D.: "It is simply invaluable."

We offer this book with a year's subscription to The Christian Workers Magazine, new or renewal, for only………… $2.50 or to anyone who will send us two new yearly subscriptions, we will send a copy of the book, postpaid.

Dr. Gray Especially Recommends

Atonement and Law

BY JOHN M. ARMOUR, D. D.

"An original line of argument that is at once clear, strong and conclusive." In popular edition, newly set throughout.

Dean Gray's Introduction Says in part:

"Can you name a strong but plain book on the Atonement?" How often in these last few years has this question been asked by young pastors, evangelists, missionaries, Bible teachers and lay-workers generally. There has been a sad dearth of such books, and correspondingly a serious absence of definite and Scriptural teaching upon this, the central truth of Christianity.

But now the need is supplied, and Dr. John M. Armour has arranged with the Bible Institute Colportage Association to reissue his great work "Atonement and Law," which is published at a price within the means of all. Let praise go up to God for this gift to His people at a time of so great spiritual darkness and soul-famine.

When the volume first appeared it was hailed by the religious press with exceptional commendations, every one of them deserved. "The Examiner's" testimony that it was one of the most remarkable books on the Atonement which that generation had produced stands unchallenged stil , and with ardor I recommend it to my brethren everywhere.

Popular Expository Lectures on the Epistle to the Colossians

Oneness With Christ

BY W. R. NICHOLSON, D. D.

Dr. Gray, in his Introduction as editor of this valuable work, says, in part:

"I am about to begin what I anticipate as one of the most delightful, and, in some respects, the most spiritually fruitful tasks of my whole life. The feast of my own soul in the perusal of Dr. Nicholson's manuscript I am impatient to share with as large a constituency of my fellow-believers as I can possibly reach, for such teaching, as to its deep insight into spiritual things, its vigor of appeal, its heavenly unction, its grace of manner and beauty of diction, is not commonly met with in this or any other day. And then the theme! Paul's letter to the Colossians, in which he touches the very high-water mark of divinely-revealed truth, the Person and the Glory of Jesus Christ."

These studies are divided into thirty-two readable chapters with suggestive headings.

12mo, cloth, 284 pages, with frontispiece of the author, $1.00 net.

A book deeply appreciated not only by Pastors and Bible Teachers, but earnest and growing Christians of all classes.

Christianity and Anti-Christianity in Their Final Conflict

BY REV. SAMUEL J. ANDREWS

After the Bible, a concordance, a Bible dictionary and, perhaps, an all-round work like Angus' "Bible Hand-Book," the next book I would recommend as indispensable for the library of the pastor, missionary or Christian worker of to-day is, "Christianity and Anti-Christianity in Their Final Conflict," by Rev. Samuel J. Andrews, he who wrote "The Life of Our Lord."

Dr. Andrews was not only a Bible student of exceptional insight and breadth of vision, but a prophet for these times beyond any man I know.

In this work he is dealing with the conflict in which we are now engaged, treating, first, of the teachings of the Old and New Testaments respecting the Antichrist and the falling away of the Church, and then the tendencies which are preparing the way for the final climax of the age. These tendencies include modern philosophy, Biblical criticism, science, literature and Christian socialism, leading up to the deification of humanity.

Pastors, missionaries, Sunday-school teachers and social workers, bear with me if I say, YOU MUST READ THIS BOOK. Here are no wild fancies, no foolish setting of times and seasons, no crude and sensational interpretations of prophecy, but a calm setting forth of WHAT THE BIBLE SAYS ON THE MOST IMPORTANT SUBJECT FOR THESE TIMES.

Theopneustia;
The Plenary Inspiration of the Holy Scriptures

BY L. GAUSSEN, D. D.

This most valuable book—a classic of its kind—is now reissued in attractive and serviceable binding, and at a reduced price.

Among scholars who are loyal to the Word of God this has been considered one of the best, if not the best setting forth of the doctrine of Verbal Inspiration, that has ever been written.

Dr. Gray says: The milestones on my spiritual pathway have been marked by certain books I have read, and one that stands out in my memory more than any other is Gaussen's great work, "The Plenary Inspiration of the Holy Scriptures." The day it came into my hands as a young minister just beginning his work marks an epoch, and I speak from experience when I say that a Christian who reads and studies it need never again be troubled by attacks on the Word of God. For years it has been out of print in this country, and hardly to be obtained even in an old bookstore. Now that The Bible Institute Colportage Association has purchased the plates and brought out a new edition, my heart rejoices that earnest Christian workers of this generation may have the same opportunity to be established in the faith that God thus sent to me at that time.

Jamieson, Fausset, and Brown's Commentary (2 vols.). Covers both old and New Testaments, elucidating difficult passages, historical allusions, unfamiliar customs, and so on; a massive storehouse of authoritative but lucid notes, concise but pregnant. 1,380 pages. Former price, $9. This set alone $4.50.

Smith's Dictionary of the Bible. A great standard classic, never superseded. All serious Bible users need their Smith only less than their Cruden. 1,021 pages, finely illustrated. Former price, $4.50. This volume alone $2.50.

Fausset's Critical and Expository Cyclopedia. A masterpiece of compressed riches: 3,700 articles of enormous variety, condensed yet complete and thorough, handling both historical and expositional questions with the highest scholarship and grasp. 750 3-column pages, 600 illustrations. Former price, $5. This volume alone $2.50.

Kitto's Illustrated Bible History. A brilliant work of immense popularity, filling up the gaps in the Scripture narrative and completing it in a rounded historic unity to the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus. 735 2-column pages, 220 illustrations. Former price, $4.50. This volume alone $2.50.

Farrar's Life of Christ. Dr. Farrar has contributed to many important works of religious literature, among them being Smith's Bible Dictionary, Kitto's Bible Cyclopedia, as well as to the Encyclopedia Britannica, but his enduring fame rests on his "Life of Christ" than which there is none more charming in style, masterful in interpretation or authoritative in its scholarship. Former price, $4.50. This volume alone $2.25

Conybeare and Howson's Life and Epistles of Saint Paul. A splendid work of enduring popularity and authority: a life-like picture of the great apostle and his work, an acute and illuminating commentary on his epistles, with a style at once full of fine scholarship and of literary charm. 917 pages· many fine illustrations, maps, charts, etc. Former price, $4.50. This volume alone $2.50.

Geikie's Hours with the Bible. (New Testament Series.) (4 vols.). Dr. Geikie has enriched these volumes with knowledge gathered through wide reading and study and through information obtained first hand—having traveled in Egypt, Syria and throughout every nook and corner of the Holy Land. His graphic explanation enables every teacher, Bible student, and preacher to put the old truths in clear, fresh, and winning form. 2,110 pages, richly illustrated. This 4-volume set alone $7.00.

Josephus' Complete Works. The priceless writings of the greatest Jewish leader and statesman in the generation after Christ. History and Antiquities of the Jews: the Roman-Jewish War, which stamped out the Jewish nationality in blood and fire, etc. 978 pages. Former price, $4. This volume alone $2.25.

Sanford's Concise Cyclopedia of Religious Knowledge. A surprising treasury of information regarding Church and Bible History, Names, Places and Customs, Creeds and Sects, the early Church, Story of the Reformation, Young People's Societies, Cathedrals, Churches, etc. 985 pages, beautifully illustrated. Former price, $3.50. This volume alone $2.50.

Gilbert's 3,000 Selected Quotations. A gold mine to speakers and writers. Pithy and eloquent passages from the literature of all ages, with complete index of authors and subjects. Undenominational, but evangelical. 681 pages. This volume alone $1.75.

Destructive Criticism
THE BIBLE
What can he do with it when he gets it?
"The Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God."
Candidate for the Ministry

Testimonies from Some Recent Letters

From a Jewish graduate of The Moody Bible Institute, class of April, '19, now attending a theological seminary in another city:

"Since I came I found out there are 40,000 Jews here without anybody to work among them. I was able to organize a group of students 'Moody Style' and we are having fairly good meetings. The blessing is not so much as in Chicago, because they don't have so much rotten fruit and ancient eggs. I am also doing house to house visitation. The opportunities are many. Will you please ask for prayer for me and for the work?"

From a Chinaman, now in evangelistic work, who was graduated in August, '17:

"God has wonderfully kept me busy since I started out again in the work this season. * * He surely can make a way for us where there is no way, and can bring down mountains and raise up valleys. Praise His dear name forever.

"Surely there is nothing that can compare to the joy of winning souls for Jesus Christ. In Christ there is no race or sex. The people do not let my nationality or their racial ideas stand in the way of the meetings. Kindly remember me in your prayers that God may indeed make of me a great soul-winner. For this is the work. No other work can even be compared to it."

From a woman graduate of December, '18, doing Italian work connected with a gospel mission in another city:

"I am writing you regarding the conversion of one of our Italian men of more than ordinary intelligence, with the disposition of a sphinx, and with his heel against every man and every institution and even God Himself. * * His misery was pitiful for even the smallest pleasantry brought forth a cynical remark. But God was surely plowing the ground and I was moved to pray. The more I prayed the greater seemed the tragedy and the greater became the burden of prayer. * *

"God has worked it all out; he has publicly professed Christ, prays among his fellow countrymen and does personal work among them. When a man gets right with God, everything else adjusts itself. Christianity is surely the simple and only cure for Bolshevism."

It cost the Institute $300 to train each of these students—$150 a year for two years. Is there any better way for investing money than in the training of such men and women? Facts For Mothers

SCIENTIFIC REASONS FOR BUBBLE GRAINS

Outer Wheat Does Not Digest

Experiments show that outer wheat goes largely undigested, however fine we grind it. Yet it is rich in rare elements, including minerals, which growing children need.

Puffed Wheat Does Digest

That's why Prof. Anderson invented this great process.

These are whole grains, steam exploded—puffed to 8 times normal size.

Over 100 million explosions occur in every kernel—one for every food cell.

The food cells are all blasted, as cooking cannot do. And blasted food cells are fitted for easy, complete digestion.

Puffed Wheat is whole wheat made wholly digestible. Every atom feeds.

After School Cookies or Puffed Grains

What for hungry children after school? Cookies are a part-wheat food. Confections must be restricted.

But crisp any Puffed Grain and douse with butter, and you have an ideal food confection.

These flimsy morsels taste like nut-meats toasted. Yet they are simply grain foods made easy to digest.

Milk Dishes Should Be Encouraged

Milk for children is a most important food. It supplies vitamines. Authorities say a child should drink at least a pint a day.

Puffed Grains make this dish enticing. They are airy, flaky, crisp and toasted—four times as porous as bread.

At Bedtime

The ideal dish is some Puffed Grain in a bowl of milk. It ends the day in a delightful way, and it doesn't tax the stomach.

In Candy

Puffed Rice or Corn Puffs adds a nut-meat flavor and makes the candy light. It makes each piece half candy and half grain. Stir plenty of Puffed Rice in.

Serve with cream and sugar in the morning. Mix in every dish of fruit. Use as wafers in your soups. Scatter like nut meats on ice cream. Keep all three kinds on hand so people have their choice.

Puffed Wheat Puffed Rice Corn Puffs

Also Puffed Rice Pancake Flour

Like Pancakes Made With Nut Flour

Now we mix ground Puffed Rice in an ideal pancake flour. It makes the pancakes light and fluffy, and gives a nut-like flavor. The finest pancakes ever tasted are made with Puffed Rice Pancake Flour. It is self-raising—simply add milk or water. Try a package now.

Prayer and Work for Israel

KNOWLEDGE!

What do YOU know about the situation of the Jews of the world to-day? Pogroms? Zionism? Mass conversion to Christ?

Magazines of general missionary information there are many. Prayer and Work for Israel is an old-established monthly dealing exclusively with the problem of Jewish missions the wide-world-round. It is scholarly; newsy; Biblical; also practical; soul-stirring; and condensed—a multum in parvo of Jewish missionary enterprise.

If you want to talk with authority on this profound and fascinating department of missionary endeavor, do not deny yourself access to Prayer and Work for Israel.

OPPORTUNITY!

Millions of Jews have by Divine Providence floated to the shores of The United States. Millions of these Jews have become lodged in the crowded Ghettos of Greater New York.

In Greater New York millions of Jews first hear our language spoken; first observe our customs; first become conformed to our laws; first breathe the air of liberty.

What are YOU doing to bring the message of redeeming love for the first time to the millions of Jews knocking at the door of Gospel opportunity here in Greater New York, and throughout America, and to every nook and corner to which the wandering sheep of the House of Israel have been scattered?

If the Good Shepherd should come today, could you look into His tender eyes and say that you had helped smooth out the wrinkles of fear and suspicion and despair on the face of one poor Jew?—One?

RESPONSIBILITY!

There have been many great and tragic crises in the miraculous history of the Jews. And who can doubt that the hour has struck for the greatest of all crises of the Jews? Revelation of the true Messiah, Redemption by the blood of the Lamb, Restoration to the promised land.

Do YOU believe in these three big "R's" of prophecy? And do they grip your will and impel you to pray definitely for Israel? And to work and give for the salvation of Israel? That is, do the three "R's" of prophecy move you to the fourth "R" of—RESPONSIBILITY?

> How then shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent?—Paul in Romans 10: 14, 15.

You Are Not Experimenting

when you enroll for a Moody Bible Institute Correspondence Course. These courses have been tested to entire satisfaction by thousands of students, including a large number of clergymen, well qualified to judge their value. What some of these clergymen say is given below.

REV. C. I. SCOFIELD, D. D.
Author of the Scofield Course

SYNTHETIC COURSE

Synthetic Bible study has been a wonderful blessing in deepening my interest in the Scriptures, in deepening my spiritual life, and in increasing the power of my ministry.—An Oregon pastor.

I can testify heartily that this course will be very beneficial to all ministers; indeed, I learned more from it than I ever did in the Seminary.—A Texas pastor.

I can truthfully say that these studies have been a delight and a blessing to me, revealing anew the depth and harmony of the inspired Word of God.—A Missouri pastor.

I am receiving a great deal of good from the Synthetic Bible study. I am giving it in outline to my people at our evening services with a marked increase in attendance.—A Michigan pastor.

I want to bear testimony to the blessing the course in Synthetic Study has been to me. In all my nine years in the ministry I have not had such help and inspiration from anything. What a blessing it would be if our younger men would take such work for their own growth spiritually and as a source of inspiration in the pulpit and elsewhere. I believe that in the study of the Old Testament alone I have found enough NEW material for sermon and Bible class work to last me five years. The Bible is a bigger, better and greater revelation of God and His will than ever before. You can quote me as one who believes mightily in this great work of Bible study and teaching.—A Nebraska pastor.

SCOFIELD COURSE

I look upon the Scofield Course as the best correspondence course I have ever seen.—Superintendent of a Bible Institute.

In all my thirty-three years in the ministry I have never enjoyed any study as I have this.—A North Dakota pastor.

This course, taken in ten months without interfering with my regular pastoral duties, has proved of incalculable value to me. I expected much, I received far more. I most heartily recommend it to busy ministers and laymen.—A Texas pastor.

I am using the course with my prayer meeting folks Wednesday night, turning the prayer meeting into a Bible study period of forty-five minutes and devoting the remaining fifteen minutes to the devotional service. Permit me to say that I have had better prayer meetings, with more satisfaction to myself, than I have ever had.—An Alabama pastor.

I am striving to get for myself and my people the meat of the lessons. The best part of it is that I can hardly wait from one Sunday until the next to give out what I have received.—An Alaska pastor.

This course in the whole Bible is incomparable. Regardless of previous training every earnest minister and Sunday School worker should complete this course. All students of the course will testify to the limitless blessings which it contains.—An eminent New York Bible teacher.

This has been the most helpful study I have ever undertaken.—An Ohio pastor.

BIBLE DOCTRINE COURSE

I enjoy the work very much and am getting more out of it than any Bible study I ever pursued, not excepting my work in college.—An Ohio pastor.

It is a wonderful help and I thank God from the bottom of my heart. It is beneficial to me and therefore must be to those who listen to me.—A Canadian pastor.

I have been more than pleased with the Bible study. It has been full of prayer meeting topics and sermon material. I highly recommend it to all who have not taken it.—An Oklahoma pastor.

A month ago I appeared before the Baptist council and was ordained. My examination lasted more than three hours but I came through with flying colors. I used statements from the Doctrine course in my whole argument.—A Pennsylvania evangelist.

I was not able to take a theological course at a seminary but when I was ordained I passed a rigid examination in which I based my answers upon knowledge obtained largely through the course in Doctrine.—An Iowa pastor

Five other courses are offered besides the three named above. They are: BIBLE CHAPTER SUMMARY, INTRODUCTORY BIBLE COURSE, PRACTICAL CHRISTIAN WORK EVANGELISM, AND CHRISTIAN EVIDENCES, all highly endorsed by satisfied students.

Don't Allow Anything

to cheat you of your wonderful privilege of systematically studying the one Book which outweighs in value all other books in all the world. Dig in it as for gold and you will secure treasure of value and extent beyond any calculation.

In these trying times men and women who really know God's Word are needed beyond the power of language to express. Trained Bible students are in great demand. Whether in the home, church, school or the business world, this training is of inestimable value.

DON'T DELAY

You will be a personal pupil—time, place and amount of study under your own control. The prices are very low—much below cost. There is no better time to start than NOW. Send the coupon at once for Free Prospectus describing our eight Courses in detail.

3000 Pages of Sacred Literature Brought to Your Home

Comprising the OLD and NEW Testaments—With the Most Treasured Religious Writings and Copious Explanatory Aids for Home Devotional Reading and Study.

THIS handsome and profusely illustrated five-volume library of Biblical knowledge will appeal to every one who desires the best and most up to date Scriptural literature that is available. The Bible Lovers' Illustrated Library is a complete encyclopedia of religious information, for in addition to both the Old and New Testaments of the Holy Bible (King James version Self-pronouncing), these five volumes contain the combined knowledge and opinion of all the foremost students of the Christian religion from its inception to the present day. They are indeed a treasure-house of the very best religious data, history and information that has ever been gathered together in a work of this kind.

Nothing has been spared to make the Bible Lovers' Illustrated Library the greatest Library of its kind. Time, money and effort have been freely spent to give every man and woman the most complete and the most beautiful Home Library of Biblical Literature. This library is replete with interesting interpretations and sidelights on Scriptural phrases and meanings which will appeal alike to layman or Bible student. It contains, in addition to a complete Bible dictionary and concordance, over 60,000 marginal notes and cross references, and five thousand questions and answers on subjects of universal interest in both the Old and New Testaments. There are also complete teachers' helps, maps, atlases, etc.

Bible Lovers' Illustrated Library

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED

With 1358 pictures, many of them full pages. They include photoengravures, drawings, halftones and wood cuts. There are reproductions of the most famous Biblical masterpieces and religious subjects gathered from all the galleries of the world. A superb picture frontispiece printed in four colors, and an illuminated two-color Japan Vellum title page is included in each volume. These beautiful illustrations of places, persons and incidents mentioned in the Bible will add a large degree of interest to a study of the Scriptures. They help you to visualize scenes and happenings and give you a deeper and more thorough understanding of Bible history.

Five Magnificent Volumes

This library contains over 3,000 pages, and is printed throughout in beautiful, large type that is easily read by old or young. The text is self-pronouncing, with the names of every person and place divided into syllables and accented as in a dictionary. Each page measures 7-1/4 by 9-1/2 inches, and the books are strongly bound in black buckram with red burnished edges. The cover design is stamped in genuine gold leaf and two colors—red and white. A ribbon marker is included in each volume. These are books which will grace any library—books you will be proud to own and show to your friends.

Special Features

The New and Old Testaments complete—the Authorized standard King James version, self-pronouncing.

Complete dictionary of the Bible, especially designed to fully explain all important subjects mentioned in the Bible.

Complete Concordance, or cross-index, to the Bible. Over 60,000 marginal notes and cross-references.

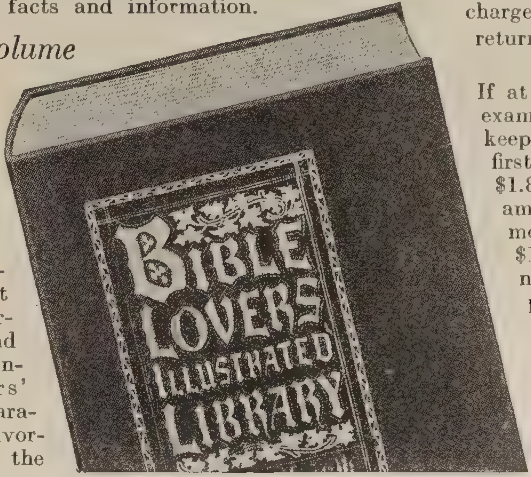
Five thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments and complete Teachers' Helps, including many valuable tables.

Historical museum of the Bible, atlas, colored maps, and 1,358 illustrations of Biblical places, persons and happenings.

An entire volume of this library, entitled "The Key to the Bible," containing over four hundred pages, is devoted to the explanation of all persons, places and things mentioned in the Bible, and is designed to give the Bible student a more thorough understanding of the meanings of the Scriptures. "The Key to the Bible" is a veritable store-house of Biblical facts and information.

The Children's Volume

The Children's Volume is written especially to appeal to and interest the minds of the little ones and the older brothers and sisters. It contains the Fireside Sunday School in 52 weekly Bible readings, the New Testament in verse, illustrated favorite Bible Quotations and Mottoes, complete Sunday School Scholars' Helps and illustrated Parables. This will be the favorite children's book in the home.



Send No Money—
See the Library First

Many pages could be written about this wonderful library, and still we could not tell you all of its valuable and interesting features. A College Professor Confesses!

SAYS HE: "I am a university man, and have taught many years in the universities. I was educated a 'high brow' rationalist, and was shot through and through with Higher Criticism, which I believed and taught in church work." His own story of his conversion is amazingly interesting: and then what follows is tragic—how his Christian stand cost him his university position, and what he discovered when he hopefully went into a denominational college and had a still worse shock there. These "Confessions" form a striking commentary on the startling series that made so much talk when published in The Sunday School Times in 1918, on "Our Pagan Universities."

Other human-life documents, written by the persons themselves, will give

during the study period. Do you, as a Sunday-school superintendent, make the best possible use of that time every week? Would you like to know how some of the most successful superintendents use it? A symposium on this subject will give you, not the theories, but the practise, of successful workers.

THE FUTURE OF BIBLE LANDS

A Scottish chaplain, William Ewing of Edinburgh, was with the British troops during the tragic Gallipoli campaign, then on to Egypt, Mesopotamia, and Palestine. A shell broke his jaw as the troops with him were about to capture Bagdad, but the wound healed well. Out of his present and past study of the Biblelands theatre of the war Chaplain Ewing has written an inspiring forecast of the possibilities that are now opening up in "those holy fields," for

The Sunday School Times

The above features are but a few of the many notable articles to appear in this great Interdenominational Journal for Adults in Bible Study and teaching, the International Uniform Lessons, Sunday-school management, and the Christian life. Don't forget that it is true to the whole Bible as the infallible word of God, and the shed blood of Jesus as the only way of salvation. Note also the following feature:

World Fundamentals Conference News:

The ever-increasing testimony to "the faith once for all delivered unto the saints" which found its first organized expression for a world-wide movement in the Fundamentals Conference held at Philadelphia in the spring of 1919, and which is sweeping through North America and around the world, will be reported from time to time in The Sunday School Times, so that readers may be kept in touch with what promises to be the most effective witness to the Word of God and the Gospel of Jesus Christ that has been known on earth in many generations.

REPRESENTATIVES WANTED

The Sunday School Times

Says: "It fairly 'makes one's mouth water' at the thought of using this book in an adult Bible class.

"He has made a book of tremendous interest. It logically moves through the entire great field of prophecy, from Genesis on. It is exceedingly up to date, in its discussion of problems created by the World War. At the end of each chapter are 'Questions on the Lesson' given in that chapter, of stimulating value for class discussion or for use by the individual reader. Christian people everywhere who have been wanting to study Bible prophecy for themselves now have one of the best possible opportunities in this valuable book."

Publisher's Stuff

Comment pro and con—just what we expected—results count—if you don't like this page say so—we will try to do better

FEBRUARY 5, 1920. Opinions on "Publisher's Stuff" came thick and fast by the time the February number was printed. Thanks for all the comments. Grant Stroh's book "When God Comes Down to Earth" started to sell but not all the 200 copies left the shelves. Mr. Stroh considered the suggestion of a new title and the new edition is now on the way. You may still get a copy at the old price of $1.25 (if you hurry). The new title will be announced later.

Space Limited

"Take all the spaceyou wish," has now been changed by the editor to "About a page and a half is enough." Possibly he will let me use the end of the second page for a "coupon." If you want more "Publisher's Stuff" you will have to ask the editor for it.

Club Offers

Mr. A. F. Gaylord sent the following letter:

"January 20, 1920.

"Dear Mr. Woodruff:

"In the quiet of the home last night, in going over some other magazines, I noticed that some are emphasing small club ideas, confining their efforts to clubs of five and ten. I do not know whether you have specialized on this or not. In this connection permit me to say that I congratulate you upon the idea as well as the copy itself, under 'Publisher's Stuff.'

"A. F. Gaylord."

Yes, Mr. Gaylord, we have an offer to subscribers of clubs of five or more at $1.00 a year each, and many take advantage of it. Harry Vom Bruch, the evangelist, sent in thirty-three names yesterday, February 4, from Philadelphia, for a club and said, "More to follow." The only restrictions upon club offers are that we do not give commission to agents for clubs, or premiums of any kind. Any subscriber may get up a club of five for $5.00.

A New Subscriber

Let us welcome him to our midst.

"Mass., Jan. 18, 1920.

"Dear Sir:

"I have just received a copy of your paper and want to subscribe. I want to take the place of that fellow who went up the 'miff' tree—the one referred to in your article 'Be a Regular Subscriber' in December. Please find P. O. O. for $1.50.

"Yours with pleasure,

"R. N. M."

We gave him the pleasure of taking the place of the man who quit.

From a "Publisher's Stuff" Coupon

"I do not know when subscription expires. How can I learn when wrappers do not indicate? Best paper I receive."

Answer: If you get The Christian Workers Magazine regularly it is paid for. When the subscription is out you will be notified by letter, or the one who sent it to you. Don't wait for the letter—pay up when you have the money handy. One subscriber recently sent a $50 liberty bond and we put him on for "life." Why don't you do the same?

"Colorado, January, 5, 1920.

"Dear Mr. Woodruff:

"I have been urged to write up scenarios for the 'Movies' but facts have always appealed to me more than fiction, so here is a scenario true to life, and I send it on just for your private satisfaction, for you will receive plenty of verses more worthy of publication.

"Best wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year.

"Sincerely your friend,

"Ella E. Pohle.

"P. S. I surely like the new department 'Publisher's Stuff' and shall always turn to it with eager interest."

The Red Letter Day

What a wonderful man the mail-man is,
As he hastens from door to door!
What a medley of things his brown bag contains
For the neighbors around, rich and poor!

How I watch for his little old one-horse-shay,
As it heaves round the curve in the road,
No matter how stormy the weather may be,
No matter how heavy the load.

There's one day each month that I love him the most,
With his little old horse, lank and lean;
'Tis the day that he hands me, well folded and sealed.
My beloved "C. W. Magazine."

The dishes must wait, and the sewing must, too,
And the call of the neighbor up street;
The old rocking-chair seems to hold out its arms,
While I yield to its tempting entreat.

For this is of all days my "Red Letter Day";
I open—but where to begin!
For to slight e'en the page of the "Publisher's Stuff"
Would seem like a red letter sin.

And so I read on while the tea kettle sings.
I can't for the life of me quit;
They surely have scoured the ends of the earth
For news, notices, wisdom and wit!

But at last, having read to the very last page,
I thankfully tuck it away;
While the old rocking-chair, in a sage, friendly squeak,
Seems to echo—"My Red Letter Day!"

Missionary Subscription Funds

I cannot tell what the results of the appeal for free distribution funds will bring as I am writing this while most of our readers are just receiving the February Magazine, but I must tell you of three donations brought to my attention so far. A gentleman came up to me the other day and pulling some bills out of his pocket said, "Mr. Woodruff, I am not a professing Christian, but I was reading that 'Publisher's Stuff' with my wife last night, and she believes in what you were writing about and asked me to give you this $5.00 for the missionary funds."

Yesterday morning a knock came on my office door. My stenographer opened the door and there stood a deaconess beside her and she was holding a $5.00 bill in her hand saying, "What would you do with $2.00? She has just paid for two subscriptions and wants to give the other $2.00 to some fund." I said "Put it in the missionary subscription fund." She smiled and said "All right."

This afternoon as I returned from an errand I found a check for $10.50 on my desk for the missionary subscription fund. A lady who recently sold some land was dividing up her tithe, and after reading "Publisher's Stuff" decided to subscribe for seven poor pastors, and left word she might call again.

Sorry I haven't room for some nice letters from missionaries, a president of the college, a couple of pastors, a college professor, a woman who received "How to Memorize" as a premium and at fifty years of age made such a success in memorizing she is planning to go to school again; and Dr. Gray's recommendation of the "Two Version Bible." I wouldn't be surprised if he hears from some subscribers for trying to squeeze "Publisher's Stuff" into "a page and a half."

Yours truly,
The Publishing Agent.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

In the April issue we will publish the first of a series of four great articles on

The Kingdom in Mystery

by the

REV. J. J. ROSS, D. D.,

Pastor of the Second Baptist Church of Chicago, and lecturer on Homiletics and the New Testament in the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Dr. Ross is an author of other works, but is best known by his brochure on "Facts and More Facts About the Self-Styled Pastor Charles T. Russell." He was the man who was sued by Russell for libel and vindicated by the court.

"The Kingdom in Mystery" makes a study of the Kingdom parables including "The Wheat and the Tares," "The Mustard Seed," "The Leaven," "The Pearl," etc.

You will desire the whole series, therefore subscribe now for another year in advance and mention these articles to your pastor and Bible students in your church. $1.50 a year.

The Gospel at Midnight

WHEN the clocks strike twelve in New York's famous Chinatown, a company of men and women, earnest Christian workers, are toiling for the Master. It is never too hot, it is never too cold, for these devoted folks to seek out some Mother's boy, or some Mother's girl, sympathetically and prayerfully place their arms around them, and in tenderness tell the old, old story that many, alas, had heard away back in their own home town. One would travel far to witness a scene just like it. It simply beggars description.

In the Wee Small Hours

We work. Work for Him, our precious Lord and Saviour. For twenty-seven years, THE RESCUE SOCIETY, Old Chinese Theatre, 5-7 Doyers Street, has stood solid as the Rock of Gibraltar, for the Gospel of Jesus Christ. We know nothing else. We preach nothing else, and for the tragic lives we meet, face to face, in this modern Nineveh, what else would suffice. We need YOUR help. YOUR gift will bring you our splendidly illustrated Annual Report. Whether you give or not, Pray for us.

FOR THEY SAY, and DO NOT!

Frankly, what's the use of saying, "Every time I see a Jew I want to take off my hat to him," when you are not willing to take out your dollar to help him know of that Name through which alone he can be saved?

Are you obeying God in your work, prayer and gifts in behalf of the Jew? Are you a layman? Just how much did you give for Jewish Missions last year, and how much to all other missions? Are you a pastor? How much did your church give for Jewish Missions last year?

Our mission merits your every confidence and support. We are here in the midst of almost 2,000,000 Jews. Just now your gift would be especially appreciated. Our paper, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE,—considered by many Bible students the most ably edited Jewish Christian paper in America,—is sent to all contributors. Regular price, 50 cents a year, or 10 cents a copy.

May we hear from you?

Editorial Notes

*"He * * * gave gifts unto men. And he gave some, * * * evangelists."* Ephesians 4: 8-11.

Cut from the Loaf

The gift of appeal! What a gift it is! Paul Rader's sermon on "The Three Mounts" we publish in this issue as an illustration of it. It was spoken at a down-town noon-day meeting to the passing throng, and he was unaware that we reported it, and never saw the manuscript. He will not take this as a discourtesy when he knows our motive, which is to give our readers as nearly as possible the first fresh impression of it.

Some men would weary their hearers and themselves by such repetition, but not Rader. Their entreaties would be sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal, but not his. It was the continual calling of the faithful shepherd after the wandering sheep. Each call brought one a little nearer to the fold. How then could he desist or even change his note?

It was delightful to listen to, thrilling in a way; it quickened interest and excited prayer; it commanded admiration and love—love for the sinner and love for the soul-winner.

You think it easy, but you are mistaken. Attempt to copy it and you will make a hideous failure. You may be a great orator, or a great interpreter or a great teacher, but you can not be a great exhorter unless God makes you one. To stir men's emotions and to move their will is divine.

How great is the need of real evangelists! Prophets are needed, too, and pastors and teachers, and sometimes it were well for them to precede and sometimes to follow the evangelist, but not one of them can take his place. All of them may do some evangelism, and they ought to do it, but when the real evangelist comes along he does not need an introduction.

Mr. Rader is now, we believe, successor to the great A. B. Simpson, as president of the Christian and Missionary Alliance. What he may accomplish as leader and administrator in that high office the future will reveal; but let us pray that he may never lose the gift of appeal, the insistent and repeated call to the wanderer to return, the lost to be saved.

"As to Better Ministers"

The title is that of an editorial note in the Watchman-Examiner, which came into our hands simultaneously with a newspaper clipping from another source, there being a close relation of thought between the two.

In the first, Rev. George A. Gordon, D. D., of the Old South Church, Boston, is quoted as saying that we are facing the fact of "the vanishing of a great ministry." He thinks that there has not been in fifty years a single great outstanding gift for the training of ministers, and that there is not discernible at present on the part of the leaders of the church a particle of interest in the creation of a better ministry.

In the second, Rev. F. B. Meyer, D. D., of London, is expressing his opinion as to why Rev. Dr. Fort Newton, the American preacher, has been a failure at the City Temple. It is his opinion that an American preacher commonly fails in England "because his preaching is topical and rhetorical rather than constructive and expository."

Will Dr. Gordon find a suggestion in the words of Dr. Meyer? Would it not be well for our theological seminaries to lay more stress upon expository preaching and less upon the other kind?

In raising the inquiry it is recalled that one reason why English preachers like Dr. Jowett and others who are frequently heard at Northfield are so popular, is because they are expository preachers. As a rule their ambition is not to display oratorical or rhetorical gifts, but to explain the Word of God to the people. So far as our knowledge or acquaintance goes, there are few leading ministers in this country who do that.

Incidentally it may be added that if our seminaries would lay emphasis upon expository preaching it would bring them back to the Bible in such a way as to materially combat or offset the pernicious influence of the destructive criticism which is gradually eating out their life.

An editorial note with this title appearing in our December issue, has been misinterpreted or misapplied by some of our readers. We said that we wished prohibition might have been brought about in a different way, but that did not mean that we regretted it had been brought about at all; indeed, we expressly said we were grateful for it.

The point we tried to make was that prohibition does not save men nor change their morals, our motive being not to depreciate prohibition, but to lay renewed emphasis on the necessity for the preaching of the gospel, as not a few have seemed to place prohibition on a par with the gospel, or almost to identify the two.

To visualize the matter we went on to speak of the effect of prohibition on the rescue mission work of the country, and were careful to say that it had not gone far enough to make the data of great value. Nevertheless, we have been charged with impatience for not waiting until the history of the law had exceeded its infancy. We mentioned that many are now becoming actually crazy from drinking other things, like wood alcohol for example, and we have been charged for that reason, with saying that prohibition is a failure before it has had a chance to be tried, but of course that is not true.

It is strange how prejudice and pre-conceived ideas in some people color the things they read. Nevertheless, we wish now to plead for the enforcement of the law, and echo the appeal to that end of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue which has gone out to all the ministers of the country. He urges local committees of citizens to receive and lodge complaints of violations of the law, promising rigorous action. Wherever any officer fails in his duty, public sentiment should secure his removal.

The Nebular Hypothesis

Mr. Benson's interesting article on the "Passing of the Nebular Hypothesis" in our October issue, was followed on the other side, though not controversially, by Mr. Huston, in January; and now another layman, Mr. Eugene C. Calloway, of Atlanta, Ga., has favored us with a third article entitled, "Evolution and Agnosticism," which will appear next month (D. V.). This, however, must bring the discussion of the subject to an end in these pages for the present at least, unless Mr. Benson should claim the privilege to be again heard in closing the debate.

Conference Postponement

The Moody Bible Institute had made large plans for its usual mid-winter conference, and there was a strong response from all over the country; but about ten days before the date of its opening it became necessary to call it off because of the epidemic of influenza.

Not only were the students stricken, but also the Faculty and Business Staff and members of their families, so that work in all the departments was seriously impeded. Even though recovery had come prior to the conference, the weakened condition of the force would have rendered them incapable of doing justice to the hundreds of visitors expected, and to have carried through the heavy program of the week as they would have desired.

It was learned, too, that friends in outside cities and towns who had been looking forward to the conference hesitated about coming under the circumstances, and this also had its effect on the question of postponement.

The Institute desires us in this way to present its regrets to its many friends among our readers, and to say that if circumstances point to another date in the early spring a strong effort will be made to make it known as widely as possible.

Heart Contrasts

By Eleanor Pilson

How faithless is this heart of mine
Sore pressed upon by lowering fears!
And yet within its cramped confine
Faith looks beyond the frowning years,
And sees a wondrous, deathless way,
A stretch of never-ending day.

How hopeless is this heart of mine
Depressed by vistas dull and gray!
And yet within its cramped confine
Hope finds amazing, boundless play,
Sprung from a hill where One atoned,
Leaping to where He sits enthroned.

How loveless is this heart of mine
Rarely enlarged by selfless throb!
And yet within its cramped confine
Love yearns to hush mankind's deep sob,
To count all selfish loves but loss—
Constrained by what? A blood-stained cross.

How strange it is this heart of mine
Should hold such treasures from above!
That e'en within its cramped confine
Are found these three: Faith, Hope, and Love;
And yet not strange, for 'tis not mine.
O Lord and Master, it is Thine.

Speak the Truth in Love

Editorial

THESE words contain an admonition for all of us, but especially premillenarians or students of prophecy and witnesses to the dispensational teaching of the Bible. These often exhibit a strange and unhappy disposition of contention and self-assertion that repels more than it attracts, and seriously prejudices the spread and acceptance of the truth. Personally, we had a dear friend, an earnest Christian, too, who imbibed an almost hatred of prophecy from the spirit and conduct of a teacher who stood out as one of its chief exponents.

We are moved to these remarks by an incident that occurred lately. A postmillennial preacher was taken to task for some sharp and unwise utterances against the opposite school of teaching, and in replying to his critic, he said:

"I am glad you are not one of those I had in mind when I spoke at * * * * You would hardly expect a man, however, who spent four weeks in * * * * as I did, to fail to warn innocents against the fanaticism of some."

We know something of the place and circumstances of which he spoke, and can sympathize with him in a measure; but we feel constrained to say that the fault is not always on one side, for this same preacher, a man of knowledge and culture, was himself guilty, not of fanaticism, but of something more serious. What he said was this, as credibly reported:

"Premillenarians dishonor the Holy Spirit. Premillennialism is not orthodoxy—it is rank heresy. Premillennialism and Christian Science are two heresies, and of the two premillennialism is the more dangerous. The second coming is being brought forward so prominently that it will split the Church."

A former devotee of Christian Science was among his auditors, one who had been delivered from it and won to Jesus Christ through having heard of the hope of His second coming.

"I had a spiritualized Bible for fourteen years," she writes, "and if I had died during that time I would have died believing in 'a right idea' instead of on the Lord Jesus Christ Himself. If I am to take some one's else spiritualizing of the Bible, why not take Mrs. Eddy's? The premillenarians are right if the Bible is taken literally, but if, as this man stated, the Bible is not to be taken literally, then what am I to do? If as a premillenarian, I am a greater menace to the Church than if I were a Christian Scientist, shall I step out of the Church?"

A preacher of influence who perplexes a soul like this is taking a great risk, especially when he knows better. And this preacher knows better. He knows that Christian Science is from the pit, and that it denies every fundamental teaching of the Bible and the gospel of Christ. He also knows that the very opposite is true of premillennialism.

To speak only of living contemporaries of this preacher, pastors, evangelists, bishops, educators in the United States and England, he knows that the following are premillenarians, every one of them, and he knows that their names are almost synonyms for orthodoxy and evangelical truth: Blanchard, Broughton, Cameron, Coyle, Dixon, Dobyns, Erdman, Hague, Haldeman, Hartzler, Holden, Jenness, Kyle, Marquis, Matthews, McAfee, McClurkin, McTavish, Moule, Munhall, Ottman, Pentecost, Riley, Russell, Scofield, Silver, Sneed, Stearns, Thomas, Torrey, Webb-Peploe, Wilkinson, Winchester. And what shall we more say? For the time would fail us to speak of them who "having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise, God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect" (Heb. 11:39,40).

We have in mind some whom this preacher knows and who have passed beyond: Anglican bishops like Ryle and Maurice Baldwin; great theologians and commentators like Bengel, Lange and John Lillie; mystics like Jacob Böhme; sacred poets like Horatius Bonar; battle-axes for the truth like James H. Brookes; evangelists like Dwight L. Moody and J. Wilbur Chapman; theological seminary men like Cooper and Kellogg and Stifler; ex-moderators like E. R. Craven; missionaries like Duff; pastors like Monod, Tyng, Parsons, A. J. Gordon; men of faith and prayer like George Müller and Andrew Murray; Bible teachers like Nathaniel West and A. T. Pierson.

Orthodox? Orthodoxy? Who is this modern defender of the faith that impugns these men?

Splitting the Church? These men so prominently brought forward the second coming of Christ that their successors of the present generation are only echoing what they said. Did they split the Church? Rather it is their faith and works which, by the grace of God, have kept the Church intact for our benefit and opportunity today.

Take the Bible literally? If the literal sense makes good sense, why seek any other sense? This preacher knows that rule of hermeneutics even if all his hearers did not know it.

He knows some other things too, that he should have told them. He knows that predictions even of spiritual blessing have had for the most part a literal accomplishment. He knows that the Jews are spoken of under both dispensations as still beloved for their fathers' sakes. He knows that many prophecies which speak of Israel and Judah are still unfulfilled. He knows that the language of these prophecies can not be confined to the Christian Church without doing violence to the commonest rules of speech. He knows that New Testament prophecies which had an early fulfilment in Jewish history and in the Christian Church have fulfilments still future in a literal and more extended sense. Why did he not speak these things?

Speak the truth, preacher, whoever you are, and speak it in love.

Interchurch World Movement

Editorial

PASTORS and others continue to ask for advice as to their relation to this movement. We quote a couple of letters:

This from Kansas

"I shall be so thankful to have you answer through the columns of the Christian Workers Magazine, what the ultimate aim of the Interchurch World Movement is. Should we pastors co-operate in carrying out what is proposed by this movement?

"This incident has just come under my observation: At * * * * is the State Orphans' Home. Until recently the children of that institution were permitted to attend the Sunday-school and church of their choice, but a federated community church having been organized, they were forbidden to attend any church except that one.

"The Baptist church appointed one of its ministers to talk to the superintendent of the Home, who reported that the superintendent said he was sending them to the church favored by the Government and it would ultimately be the only church the Government would recognize.

"Is this the thing aimed at by the Interchurch World Movement? Earnest pastors want to do their duty but do not want to be deceived. I shall be very grateful to have your instruction on the matter."

This From Indiana

"We are anxiously waiting to know the stand you will take upon the Interchurch World Movement.

" 'Is it of God or Man?' is the question upon the lips of many pastors. As spiritual leaders, we must know before advising our people as to right or wrong.

"If it has a program which will meet the needs of the world, and is God-given, then we are willing to co-operate with it.

"Any light upon this subject will be greatly appreciated, for from all over this country are people who are going to stand for the right, providing they know the right."

In reply to the above we said our say for the present in our issues of last May and January, the first of which articles is in pamphlet form and can be had free on application. We are now waiting for more light, of which a few rays may be found in the following extracts from other sources.

I

WHAT WE KNOW, AND WHAT WE DO

(An editorial under date of January 22, 1920, in The Presbyterian, of Philadelphia.)

"We know that the world of today is in a state of great unrest and is virtually turned upside down. The Church also is greatly confused, does not see the way to discharge its solemn and all-important duties under the conditions, and is more and more being drawn into unauthorized and frenzied movements.

"We know that the great Methodist church has pledged, but not yet collected, the fabulous sum of about $112,000,000 in connection with its Centenary, and at the same time lost 50,000 members.

"We are told that the Presbyterian church has reached the highest per capita contributions in its history and has compared with any of its evangelical sisters, and at the same time lost from its church membership more than 28,000 souls, and from its Sabbath-schools there has been a loss of about 70,000. We have not the figures from other denominations, but the reports from these two great churches are certainly very serious.

"We have read that the great Columbus (Ohio) Exposition cost the Methodist church about $1,300,000, and the income from it was about $300,000, leaving a deficit of one million dollars.

"The survey shows that the homes and hospitals are over-crowded and have been closed to many who are in dire need.

"This great Interchurch World Movement means great salaries and expenses. More than this, great conventions are being held at much expense, and there are now planned forty-eight state conventions, the delegates to be invited by the authorities in New York, and the expenses to be paid out of great central funds. The purpose of this, involving thousands upon thousands of dollars, is simply to show what needs to be done and how to do it, but not even a finger is to be used to help bear the burden.

"In the meantime, the survey of the Methodist church shows that ninety-two per cent of their ministers who are doing the real work of the church are getting an average of $907 per year. This includes their parsonages. We have not seen the records for other denominations but they are not likely to vary essentially. How can these men work, how can they live on this support? They cannot work; they cannot live.

"Reports are coming to this office that pastors' wives are compelled to go out from their homes to teach school and do other work in order to help support their families. The Church has no right to expect the blessing of God on such extravagance on the one hand, and such heartless injustice on the other.

"We know that the great movements have called pastors from many churches. At the Atlantic City convention there was a whole host of vigorous young ministers who have been taken from their churches to push the great what-to-do and how-to-do movement, while in every city, and almost every town and country, there are numbers of pastorless churches.

"Our Lord sent His apostles and ministers out to preach. Paul declared he was not sent even to baptize, but to preach. Preaching, personal preaching, is magnified in the New Testament and the history of the Church.

"Now the Interchurch World Movement is conducting at the Madison Square Garden, New York, (the largest place of public assembly in the United States), the great pageant developed and used by the Methodists at Columbus, with such a colossal deficit. The white elephant has been loaded on to the Interchurch World Movement. Are they, too, to enjoy a deficit?

"The miracle plays had a full test in the Middle Ages, and after the full test they were rejected because of their inherent profanity in attempting to put into human caste that which belongs only to the divine. Despite a certain restraint which appears in this performance, it is a clear evidence of modern degeneracy toward the corruptions of the Middle Ages.

"We need go no further with details. Have we not in some of these things explanation why the young people are leaving the Church and why there is such a slump in membership? Is it not all-sufficient to make the head sore and the heart sick?

"The bishops of the Methodist church (South) refused to endorse this movement and their General Conference will not meet for two years. The Methodist church (North) has not assumed responsibility for it and their General Conference will not meet before May. The great Baptist church of the South has refused endorsement.

"Is it not time that all the evangelical churches would relieve themselves of the responsibility for such frenzied movement before it is too late, and return once more to the care of the great cause and commission through their regular courts and agencies? If we go on at the present reckless rate, what must the outcome be?

"In the sky of modern Protestantism a portentous cloud rises above the horizon, showing the pride of big money, mighty organization, and low spirituality. This cloud is already larger than a man's hand."

II

"WILDCAT ECCLESIASTICAL CAMPAIGNING"

(This is part of a sermon of Rev. George A. Gordon, D. D., pastor of the Old South Church, Boston, reported and commented on in the Literary Digest, of January 24, 1920. The Old South bears about the same relation financially to New England Congregationalism as the Collegiate churches of New York do to the Dutch Reformed denomination of that city and its neighborhood.

It should be said that Dr. Gordon is discoursing on the Congregational Forward Movement rather than the Interchurch World Movement so-called, but the Congregationalist in opposing Dr. Gordon, couples the two and mildly suggests that they "are not destitute of idealistic elements." Philip Mauro long ago pointed out that "idealism" and "idolatry" were not far apart when it came to religion, and events are bearing out the aptness of his comparison).

"I am now to state to you in a few words some of my reasons for withholding my approval from the scheme of the National Council for a fifty-million drive to be realized in the next five years.

"First, it is the boldest and most ruthless piece of autocracy that I have ever known. Certain men whose names I have been unable to learn have for years, or for a long time, been devising a scheme by which every moral and religious need of the inhabitants of the planet shall be investigated and tabulated, and the condition of every Protestant in this country learned; this scheme has been taken to the National Council, adopted by that body with unthinking haste, and in the first months of the new year is to be applied to the Congregational churches of the nation.

"It calls for an army of paid promoters; it will take millions of money, so we are informed, to set it going; and from it in a period of five years a grand total of fifty millions is to be raised. It is further hoped that this scheme will become a permanent force in the denomination, and that every five years at least five millions will be raised for the use of our several mission societies.

"Not a word of all this has been submitted to the churches. Probably not one minister in twenty in this Commonwealth knows anything about the scheme. Few, if any, of the best informed laymen in this church have any idea of the colossal design. The whole thing has been devised by elect spirits, who are as clear of all responsibility and ability to pay the bills as the poor remnant of the American aborigines.

"This colossal scheme, devised in secret, and passed by the generously unthinking National Council, is in three months to fall like an avalanche upon the unsuspecting churches. This is not Congregationalism; it is Caesarism, and Caesarism gone mad.

"The sum sought is wildly excessive. Fifty millions in five years for 600,000 Congregationalists, men, women, and children! Does any sane man expect such a scheme to prosper? Would it not be a calamity to the business stability and efficiency of these persons if it should prosper? Exhaustion in giving is a duty to no community; exhaustion of the power to maintain a healthy industrial life is not good, but evil. Religion here needs to go to school to the clear intellect of sound business.

"By its friends and promoters the scheme is called the most splendid piece of idealism that modern Protestantism has known."

III

THE CHURCHES WAKING UP

What do you think this is? An editorial in Life, December 18, 1919. No, we are not regular readers of that entertaining sheet, any more than we regularly attend the circus. But when the circus comes round there are always "children" who have to be taken to see it; and in like manner there are thoughtful neighbors who occasionally send us an apt clipping from Life, and this is one of them:

"The churches are waking up, especially the various Protestant churches. They suspect that they have been laggers in the work of reordering and resuscitating the world. And they are eager to push on into the front line and do something worthy of their powers and resources.

"But they are a good deal perplexed to know what to do. They can raise money and produce motion and they are doing so, but to what end it should be directed stumps them a little.

"Of course, the primary job of the churches is to conserve and impart religion. What they do in the line of 'good works,' so-called, though important and beneficial, is all secondary to the duty of holding, realizing and imparting the faith. Their great office is to connect things visible with things unseen. If they do not do that, all their organization for benevolences, and all the dollars they entice from submissive contributors will not save them from failure as churches. Their errand is spiritual. It cannot be accomplished by mere material activities, though such activities are bound to follow if the spiritual errand really prospers.

"The great need of the churches is to get the clergy interested in religion and contrive that a larger proportion of them shall know something about it, and have more of it in them than they can comfortably contain. When people have so much religion in them that it keeps spilling over naturally into other people's minds, they are in about the right state to be preachers.

"But what usually happens is that the ministers, like other people, have to pump up religion for use as occasion requires. They know about organization, sanitation, legislation, penology, theology, how to raise money and how to spend it, but those that know the road across from the visible to the unseen are fairly scarce, and doubtless always were."

"Perils of Idealism"

This is an extract from a recent article of Rev. Joseph M. Duff, D. D., of Pittsburgh, Pa., in which he referred to the Interchurch World Movement as an example of the perils of idealism, and closed with these words:

"As for securing that power from on high which alone, in our business, can make any human effort effective, we should remember that Pentecost had neither numbers nor capital, nor organization, nor promoters, and yet the place where they met was shaken. 'They were all filled with the Holy Ghost.' The church of Christ needs, it is true, a great revival, but not an 'ultra-modern one, along the lines of big business.' "

Contentment

By Abbie R. Morrison

Just a little walk, and a little talk,
With the One we love the best,
And the day that was drear is bright and clear,
And all the day is blest.

For the God of love, who dwells above,
Can rest and comfort bring,
Can peace impart to the saddest heart,
And the cares will all take wing.

And the message sweet, we can all repeat,
As along life's path we roam,
For the One who cares, all sorrow shares,
And tenderly bids us "Come."

Just a little walk, and a little talk,
At the close of a day well spent,
When we've done our part with all our heart,
Brings rest and sweet content.

Modern History of Spiritualism

Editorial

I

SPIRITUALISM at its source is older than man, but we have no intention of tracing it to its source just now—that will come later. At the moment we wish to deal with it only for the period of time during which it has been known by its present name.

And yet its present name is not the best because it has too wide an application. At one time "Spiritualism" was used to designate the doctrines and religious life of mystics like Jacob Böhme and Madame Guyon, who lived very consecrated lives, subject to the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and in close obedience to the Word of God.

As a French investigator put it, "Spiritualism is the opposite of materialism. Whoever believes he has something within him distinguished from matter is a spiritualist," in which sense, of course, all true Christians are spiritualists, though it does not follow that they believe in communications with spirits of an invisible world.

Therefore, to designate this latter belief the word "Spiritism" has come to be used, which we shall employ hereafter, meaning by it the idea of some people that the living can and do communicate with the spirits of the departed, and also including the various practices resorted to in that intercourse.

II

Spiritism, which is also necromancy or the evocation of the dead, was a feature of that gnosticism which assailed the Christian Church in the apostolic era, and against which Paul, by the Holy Spirit, inveighs in his epistle to the Colossians. And this, in turn, indicates that it was not a new thing even then, but that it formed a part of the earlier pagan religions. Allusions to it have been found in Homer. Strabo ascribes its practice to the early Persians. Theodoret finds it in Chaldea and Babylonia, and readers of the Old Testament recall Moses speaking of it as among the abominations of the Canaanites (Deut. 18), of which we shall speak in a later article.

The Delphic oracles (more than 600 B. C.) are claimed by spiritists and we believe with good reason, and the same may be said of the lives of seers and clairvoyants and the facts of witchcraft in all ages. "Never would that oracle at Delphi have been so celebrated nor stored with so many gifts from all kinds of peoples and kings, unless every age had experienced the truth of its utterances" (Cicero, De Divinatione, 19).

To come to the Christian period, the early Church Fathers assume as unquestionable the agency of evil spirits in the pagan oracles and rites, showing themselves by divinations, cures and dreams. The records of the Roman Catholic church also speak of phenomena which bear a close resemblance to present day Spiritism. During the Reformation Luther published a treatise against "The Celestial Prophets," so-called, of Germany, whom he charged with exercising the imitative powers of Satan.

There were occurrences in the Wesley family ascribed to Spiritism (1716), and it is commonly believed to explain much in Swedenborg's alleged full and open communication with the spirit world.

In America, David Brainerd, in his work among the Indians, declared that one of his greatest difficulties was the conviction they held that their diviners had supernatural power, a conviction himself shared.

In 1843, the Shakers at New Lebanon, N. Y., became the subjects of strange experiences, and influences purporting to be spirits who had lived in the world in different ages took possession of their bodies and spoke through their vocal organs.

III

What is known as the "spirit-rapping" phenomenon began in March, 1848, in the family of John D. Fox in Hydeville, N. Y., whose daughters, a few years afterwards, began to give public performances.

The alleged spiritist manifestations of these young women became the subject of extensive newspaper discussion with the result that "mediums," through whom they were said to occur, were multiplied in different parts of the country by hundreds and thousands.

The seances of the Fox girls before the Civil War were attended by some of the most prominent men of the country, and when they visited Europe they had the nobility and royalty for their auditors. Societies were organized, and disciples and imitators came forward in great numbers.

Margaret Fox was married, in 1857, to Dr. Kane, the famous Arctic explorer, a few months before his death, and his heirs denying the marriage, agreed to give her an interest in the estate if she would cease giving seances. She did so for a while, and even published an exposure of Spiritism, which she subsequently retracted.

The newspapers some twenty-five years ago spoke of Mrs. Kane as living in obscurity and poverty in New York, an object of charity, a physical wreck and hopelessly insane, but her name and work are still honored by spiritists.

IV

This brings us to the scientific epoch in Spiritism, when such men as Sir William Crookes, the English chemist and physicist, who died recently, became actively interested in it.

In the London Quarterly Journal, of January, 1874, he classified the phenomena under some ten or a dozen heads, and also conducted exhibitions in his own house, mostly in the light, when it is said that the existence of an unexplained force was accurately tested by means of an ingenious apparatus.

In other words, with Sir William Crookes' investigations it began to be felt that the phenomena of Spiritism were not all fraud, and while the scientists were unable to explain the source of some of them, their ignorance in the premises went so far to confirm the teaching of the Bible that the source was to be found in the superhuman realm.

Sir William testified that "it was a common thing for seven or eight of us in the laboratory to see Miss Cook (the medium) and 'Katie' (the spirit) at the same time under the full blaze of the electric light." On one occasion, the electrician showed to the satisfaction of the spectators that the medium was inside of the cabinet while the supposed spirit form was visible and moving outside.

Nelson's Encyclopaedia informs us that it was the organization of the Society of Psychical Research (England, 1882; America, 1888) that revived recent interest in the doctrine. Its work has tended to put limits to the claims which have been made for communication with the discarnate, though it has at the same time strengthened the belief in it by giving it better scientific credentials. Reports on the remarkable case of Mrs. Piper were published in five different volumes of the proceedings of this society, and it is said that they offer the best mass of scientific evidence extant in support of possible spirit communication.

It was the evidence derived from this woman's case when she crossed the Atlantic in 1889, that finally convinced Sir Oliver Lodge that deceased relatives spoke or sent messages through her organism, informing him both of known and unknown facts subsequently verified. In other words, to quote him exactly, "that the brain and organism of a living person might be utilized by deceased personalities whose own bodies had ceased to work."

To avoid any erroneous supposition in the light of some things which we have said before, let it be stated clearly at this point that the Bible is against the conclusion of Sir Oliver. It reveals, as we shall subsequently discover, the possibility of materializations, but not the actual talking of the dead. By materialization in this case we mean the assumption of a material and bodily form by evil angels or demons who wickedly personate the dead and deceive the living, but nothing more. The proof of this will follow, but to avoid any possible misunderstanding at the outset, the fact itself is here stated.

V

The current revival of Spiritism, or "the Spiritist intrusion," as Life called it, dates from the recent war, and was predicted by close and earnest students of the Bible. It is "due to the bereavements of the war and to the longing of broken hearts to find out something concerning the destiny of those who have been taken from them." Instead of turning "to the law and to the testimony" as the inspired prophet exhorts, they have taken up with spirits "that peep and that mutter" (Isa. 8:19,20).

"There is hardly a home in England," we are told, "from which some boy has not gone forever during these last two years. Can they be reached? Can one have communion with them? Can they break through the wall between their world and ours?

"Then, one by one, such men as Sir Oliver Lodge and Sir A. Conan Doyle published books saying, 'We have had communications from our boys, and have spoken with them and with their comrades who perished on the field of battle.'

"Thousands of parents responded, 'If they, why not we?' And the result has been an almost overwhelming rush to mediums, and long lists of seances are now advertised in the papers." (Editorial in The Christian Work).

In our opinion the campaign of the powers of darkness gained its greatest headway up until that date during the fighting from Mons to Ypres.

Readers will recall a fantastic story of that period published at first in a London evening paper, and entitled, "The Bowman," which purported to tell how St. George and the old Agincourt bowmen appeared during the retreat from Mons and fought with the British against the foe. The author frankly declared it was pure fiction, but so heated was the British imagination at the time and so psychologically ready for the reception of the occult, that he was not believed by many who seriously entertained the opinion that angels appeared to the soldiers.

Nor were these in all cases the over-credulous, but in some instances intelligent and educated men and women, including a Christian scholar whom we personally know, and who is honored throughout Christendom. Indeed, an eminent clergyman of London is reported to have said that such a case of spiritual intervention was "eminently creditable. Joan of Arc saved her country owing to the vision of an angel, and why should not the phenomenon be repeated in this case?"

Immediately people began to hold intercourse with their beloved dead as was supposed. The Christian scholar, in a private letter to the writer, said: "My wife saw her boy in his spiritual body permitted to come once to comfort her. We know. It is the same with many. This war is given for the convincing of many that the future life is a real thing, and that God Himself speaks to man. This is the one consolation that remains out of this hideous and horrible time of trial. My wife was permitted to talk to her boy. He was even more radiant than in life, but otherwise the same. He told her of his death and the manner of it. We learned after a month that this was true. Some people call it a dream. I know it was a vision granted to soothe her sorrow and her longing. This has nothing to do with magic. The spiritual eye saw the spiritual body."

VI

It would not be the part of wisdom for the writer to delay warning the unwary until the consideration of this subject approached its ultimate conclusion. Hence a pause is made here to say that the experiences above recorded are very different from those of the Bible saints.

Let a brief reference be made again to Isaiah's words (8:19-22). He sees Israel in the latter days in great distress, doubtless far beyond anything known in the late war. They are "hardly bestead and hungry," "behold trouble, darkness, dimness of anguish," and inasmuch as they are seeking "unto them that have familiar spirits and unto wizards that peep and that mutter," he rebukes them, saying, "Should not a people seek unto their God? On behalf of the living should they seek unto the dead? To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."

In other words, are not the Word and the Spirit of God the source, and the sufficient source, of the Christian's comfort in this age? Does he need such visions to convince him of the future life and that God speaks to men? The rich man in our Lord's story in Luke 16 thought well of that kind of evidence, but we remember how fruitless "father Abraham" thought it would be. If such things are the only, or the strongest, consolation remaining for God's people in such a time of trial, what of the millions of them to whom they do not come?

Let the Christian ever keep in mind that there are such beings as evil spirits, of whom we shall learn considerable by and by, and let him consider further that fundamentally only these are in evidence in this modern outbreak of Spiritism.

In proof of this it may be mentioned that in all the accounts of the angels at Mons which came to our attention, not once was Jesus Christ so much as named. St. George was named, and Joan of Arc, and Socrates, and Swedenborg, and the Virgin Mary. God was referred to a few times, but our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ never. Even the private correspondence mentioned above, and from a Christian source, alludes to Him but once, and then indirectly, and by His human and family name, Jesus.

"What place do you give to Christ in Spiritualism?" was asked of a votary by a friend of ours. "Is He to you the Son of God, and do you worship Him as such?"

"Oh, no," came the reply. "He is to us simply the master medium."

In the words of our friend, the editor of the Life of Faith (London), "that confession is fatal. No creed, no cult, no religion, that dethrones our Lord and places Him on a level with men and mediums has any right to claim a Christian connection. And men and women who profess to be followers of Christ are putting Him to open shame when they join hands with those who would, if they could, rob Him of His deity and His matchless glory."

The Three Mounts

An Evangelistic Appeal

By Rev. Paul Rader

Reported at a Noon Theater Meeting in Chicago

I HAVE a text today in the twenty-fifth chapter of Isaiah, the seventh verse: "And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the veil that is spread over all nations."

He speaks of this mountain as being Mount Zion. There are three great mountains—Mount Sinai, Mount Calvary, and Mount Zion. When Moses came down from Mount Sinai, after God gave him the law, he had to put a veil on his face because of the glory and the brightness of his countenance. If that glory under the law was so great, what ought we to feel in the glory when God is giving out grace? It ought to make people afraid.

Glad to See Mount Sinai

I'm glad I saw Mount Sinai; saw the law of God and the terror of God. I'm glad I saw what it meant for God to have wrath for sin. I'm glad I never went to hell myself, but saw what it meant to have to be banished from the face of God.

I woke up one day to the awfulness of being banished from God. Sometimes we think God is far away, and we are banished from Him, out in the darkness. I hate that word "darkness." Don't you? "Darkness," that's what God calls it. My friends, I don't think I would have been here preaching today, if I hadn't seen it. It drives a person out for men to tell them about this glorious gospel of Jesus, where He took your place, the place of darkness, and God turned His back on Him when he sat in your place and paid your debt. How we ought to love Him!

Calvary Follows Sinai

After you have seen the awfulness of Mount Sinai, then you see Mount Calvary. Jesus gave Himself for us; poured out His life, in order that we might have life. I like to go over it again and again to see how He took my place.

I knew a fellow out in the northern part of Colorado, and every summer, about the first of August, he used to send for a bouquet of flowers. They came to him in a big box, by express. The ranch fellows would all go down and see them. He would take them on a buckboard out into the middle of the prairie where there was a big monument. One day out there, several years before, another had saved his life, and had been killed himself. He gave his life for him; he took his place.

Oh, the penalty that Jesus paid on Calvary, when He took my place there! Oh, the glory of salvation through Jesus! Only a man with a heart like a devil could walk away from Jesus.

It's horrible for men to have a philosophy. Why do men need philosophy when they have a friend like Jesus? Why put up another way, when Jesus has put up such a way for you? He took your place.

I couldn't keep from coming down here. If you tied me in bed, I would be the most miserable man on earth. Why? Because I have found out the love that Jesus had for me when He went to Calvary. I don't see how men can turn Him down. I don't see how you can keep away from Him. It's the easiest thing in the world to give up everything to Him. Just turn everything loose. Say, "Lord, you can do anything with me." A vision of Sinai and then a vision of Calvary ought to make a man shine with glory.

The Sin of Unbelief

Oh, such a Lord! He sends the third person of the trinity to come back into our hearts, so that we have a continual stream of life flowing into our hearts. The Holy Spirit will judge them of sin because they believe not on Him.

Oh, the sin of not believing on Jesus! I realized more today than ever before in my life the sin of not believing on Jesus. There is no hell deep enough for a man who turns away from that love.

That's the awfulness of your sin today, if you are turning away from Jesus. The Man of Calvary who took your place, and then says, "I will pour out my very life in your heart," and you turn Him down; you turn down such a proposition. God pity the man or woman who goes without Jesus! The Holy Spirit comes to condemn the world of sin because they believe not on Him.

Christ's Resurrection, His Credential

¶Jesus said, "I am right; I have proved that I am right, because I have gone back to the Father."

My brother and myself went out into an apple orchard one day. I helped him climb up into one of the trees. I yelled to him to hurry up with the apples. He said, "Listen to me, when I get the apples, you will know it." I wanted him to hurry, because I thought someone was coming; I could hear him. The first thing I knew I got one on my head. Just the minute he got it, he let it fall, and away it went.

Jesus has gone back to God, He is in the heavenlies. He has taken His very life and put it down into our hearts. The Holy Spirit comes on the third mountain to show you what Jesus does for you, to show you Mount Calvary. I tell you my friends, you wouldn't know anything about Calvary, if it wasn't for the Holy Spirit. He shows you the love of God.

The Mount of Olives and the Coming Day

The Scriptures say, "He will destroy in this mount the face of the covering cast over all people and the veil spread over all nations."

He will stand on the Mount of Olives again; He will be back there in that holy city again. In that day He will tear away the covering, and all the world will know that He is Jesus the Christ. On this mountain where He went up, He is coming down again. When He comes again all the nations of the earth will know that He is the Christ. "I will tear the face of the covering from off them."

Is there a covering? Why, of course there is. Oh, the veil that hangs between us and Jesus! That's what Jesus is going to tear away in that day. As preachers, we try to tear it away from your eyes so that you will get a vision of Jesus. I am so glad the Holy Spirit has taken it away from my eyes. To me, He is the Son of God. I know He is Christ. I know Him better than I know myself.

Saved from Hypocrisy

I thank God that Jesus saved me from hypocrisy. I don't believe there ever was a bigger hypocrite than I was. I had all the veneer and the varnish about me that any hypocrite ever had. Other people knew it; they were trying to give me what they knew. There came a day when I knew. I didn't go on what somebody else knew then, but on what I knew.

My friend, Jesus will take the veil off your eyes so that there will be no pretense about it. There will be no formality; but it will be a real thing. When you witness and testify, everybody around you will see that you know it. We need folks that know a real Jesus, so that they can talk out of their hearts not out of their heads. I would give my very life for Him. Chicago needs folks well saved, who know Jesus and will be willing to suffer the loss of all things for the glory of Jesus. The Lord is going to take the covering off, and all nations shall know.

One covering is infidelity. Thank God, men will have to believe some day. It don't make any difference whether they want to or not, they will have to in that day. It is the Holy Spirit's business to reveal Jesus.

It don't take a man any time to find Jesus if he wants Him. If a man came up to me and said, "Mr. Rader, I want to find Jesus," why that fellow would find Him in no time. The other day Mr. Woolley brought a man to me and I asked him if he wanted to be saved. I showed him some Scripture. I said, "That's what God says about it." He said, "Well, if that's what God says about it, thank God, I am saved." That fellow has been coming ever since.

Thank God it's all done in Jesus, my friend. The minute you see and believe what he has done, you are saved. If you are honest, if you really want a Saviour, you can have Him, this very noon hour. You can have Him this day, if you will believe this, that Jesus paid it all. Sin left a crimson stain and a debt, but He washed it white as snow. He paid the penalty so that it's all taken away now, you have life in Him.

Will you take Him? Grab for Jesus today. Reach out for Him. You can have Him if you want Him. Oh, receive Him! Don't get yourself into condemnation by turning Him away. Receive Him as he offers Himself.

The Oracle of the Country Store

When he comes back to the earth everybody will know that He is Christ. The whole book of Revelation is an unveiling of Jesus as He shall be and as He is now. It's an unveiling of what we are, too. It's true right now. Jesus is going to do those things in a greater sense in that day. All the pretense, all the formality, and all the hypocrisy shall cease, and every tongue shall declare that Jesus is both Lord and Christ.

Oh, what an unveiling! Some of them will look about for rocks to hide them from the face of the Man they have not trusted in. If you aren't trusting Him this afternoon, I pity you. Give in to Him this day. Trust Him.

In the southern part of Illinois there was a man who spent his time chewing and whittling, sitting on a box outside of a country store. There he was, spitting and whittling, and spitting and whittling. You won't have any place to spit down there. If you have anything to settle, you had better settle it right here.

Whenever an evangelist came to town he would talk about the trinity and ask the fellows about him. "What does that fellow know about the trinity? Three in one and one in three? What does he know about the trinity?"

Well, he kept on chewing, chewing, chewing, and talking about the trinity. Some one ought to have come along and slapped him on the head. My friend, that's the most horrible sin, to keep on rejecting Jesus.

One day, he was sitting on the box and an evangelist came and told him about what Jesus had done for him. He began to see what he was in his lost condition. Then all of a sudden, he saw that Jesus had taken it all away from him. He looked into the face of Jesus. After that he was always talking about what a wicked man he was and what a good Jesus he had. He met some of the old fellows who used to discuss the trinity and they said, "What about the trinity?" "Well, fellows, you will have to forgive me about that. I have got one of them here in my heart, and I know the rest of them will take care of themselves."

All these disputes and strifes come out of a rebellious heart. If you will yield your heart to Jesus, God will take away your heart and give you a pure heart. "Blessed are the pure in heart"—the pure by the blood of Jesus— "for they shall see God." He is going to tear away the covering from the face of the whole earth.

Do you suppose that if the nations today saw that Jesus was Christ, they would be fighting? They would be waiting for Him to come from heaven. There wouldn't be any war. We would be holding a camp meeting waiting for the Lord's return.

Tell Folks About Him

Tell everybody around you about Jesus. Try to get other folks saved. Oh, that Jesus might take the covering off our eyes, that we might see the One who is altogether lovely. My friends, He is going to take the veil away from the nations, and they will know Him.

Take Him today. How can you refuse such a gift from glory? Come, Lord Jesus, from glory and reveal Thyself! I'm so hungry to see you folks take Him that I don't know whether I am in the flesh or out of it. I want Him. Oh, if He would only send us a revival in Chicago that would take the veil from our eyes! I believe He is going to send it. God help us to pray for it and expect it.

My friends, have you accepted Him yet? "I will take Him." He took your place. Put up your hand. Come on, put it up. Somebody else. Take Him today as your Saviour. Will you do it? I would put up both hands, if I were you. Anybody else that wants to be saved? God help you this afternoon. Well, thank the Lord for Jesus! How many of you know that you are saved?

"Lord Jesus, I long to be perfectly whole,
I want thee forever to live in my soul,
Break down every idol, cast out every foe,
Now wash me and I shall be whiter than snow.
Whiter than snow, yes whiter than snow,
Now wash me and I shall be whiter than snow."

If He came this noon hour (He is liable to come before you ever get out of this house, He is liable to be here any minute) what would happen to you? God help you to take Him today. Remember that His coming is at hand. He will come in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. God help you then, to do it today. Now is the time.

God help men and women to take Him right now. Take Him as your Saviour. Lord Jesus, help us now! Send us out with a message on our lips. Help us, Lord, if there is any time left between now and the time you do come, to keep on working, that men and women might be saved, and we'll give You the glory.

A Prayer for 1920—A Heaven-Sent Revival

By Rev. Edward B. Jenkins, Kershaw, S. C.

A CONFERENCE was recently held in Philadelphia to discuss and pray for a revival to sweep our country. During the last few months God's people in America have been praying earnestly for a heaven-sent revival. Only such a revival can fulfill the needs of the hour. The social unrest, the industrial disturbances, the lawlessness, the ignoring of the divine Sabbath, all take the nation to a crisis.

The Tide of Worldliness

Some reformers during the war said, that when the war was over the people would return to the churches. Their prophecy has fallen flat. For since the war there has been a reaction in the matter of religion. People who prayed during the war have forgotten the God to whom they went when in sore need. On the other hand a great tide of worldliness has set in. The dancing masters of London said that dancing had swept England since the war as never before. In our country every city, town and village gave the returning soldiers a welcome with a dance.

The world, the flesh, and the devil have made great inroads into the church. False teaching is growing, and the people seem eager to be deceived. Nor is it confined to the laity. In conversation with a divinity student of * * * he said to me: "Any high school boy or girl, knows the statements in Genesis are not facts but fiction." Another minister said to me, while discussing the atonement: "I do not think it was the death of Christ, but the principles for which He stood that is the important thing. I do not like the bloody cross, as it has the smell of the slaughter house."

There is great need for revival of church attendance. What is true of one section of the country is true all over. If our forefathers could return and see the small attendance at church now, in comparison to their day, they would stand amazed at such indifference. People who say they do not go to church on account of the long services, or because they do not like the minister, are only camouflaging.

Is Religion Dead?

In the November issue of the American Magazine Sir A. Conan Doyle had an article on "Now that Religion is Dead? The Chance of the Church" in which he says, "It (the church) has not been an active, controlling force upon the minds of men. And why? It can only be because there is something essential that is wanting. Men do not take it seriously. Men do not believe in it. Lip service is the only service in innumerable cases, and even lip service grows fainter. The churches lose their grip upon the people, and lose it rapidly. The people go their way and religion is dead, save as intellectual culture and good taste can take its place."

It must be remembered that Sir A. Conan Doyle is not a churchman but a spiritualist, and is using his pen to advance Spiritualism in England. He was careful to put a question mark after the words, "Now that Religion is Dead." There were times in Old Testament history when it looked as though religion were dead, but, always there were the living coals of prayer on God's altar, kept aglow by His faithful ones. Even so now the coals are beginning to burn brightly as His people pray. As one has said: "God has a tremendous hold on the people yet, but they do not believe that God is in our churches. If they did, our buildings would be too small to hold them."

Sin Still an Awful Fact

Another great need of a great revival is the declining sense of sin. Professor James H. Snowden in the Homiletic Review asks, "Is the sense of sin declining?" He thinks it is, and points out the following as evidence: First, the declining sense of fear; secondly, the reaction against the extreme view of hell; thirdly, the decline of the sense of sin itself.

As he puts it, in the modern view sin is a misfortune, not a fault, the sinner a victim, not an offender. He has done no wrong, but wrong has been done to him. He does not owe penitence to God, but God owes an apology to him. Some hold that "God is too good to punish sinners, and sinners are too good to be punished," and any such view will greatly weaken our sense of sin.

Professor Snowden closes the article as follows: "Sin is still a frightful fact in the world. It writes its ruin in vice and crime, in individual murder, in the colossal convulsions of war, in human selfishness and cruelty, trials and tears, broken hearts and lost souls. It is the awful tragedy of the universe. Only fools mock at it. Angels weep over it, and the Son of God gave Himself as a sacrifice to atone for its guilt. Its retribution cannot be escaped. Hell cannot be dug out of the universe, or its fires put out. God's justice never slumbers nor sleeps. He cannot overlook sin and be a respectable God. The integrity of the universe cannot tolerate it. God will not let it mock Him, and it is still an eternal law of life, that the wages of sin is death."

Still another need of a revival is that in our country there is such a large percentage of the people unsaved, in the South thirteen millions, and in the nation approximately thirty millions. Last year the churches of America made the smallest gain in twenty years—284,540. Until these millions have been reached by the gospel the task of the church, in a large measure, remains at home.

With such a revival in the land, there will naturally come changes in the methods of business, the practices of society, and the life of the church. With the power of the Holy Spirit upon the people, hundreds of "hard cases" will cry unto God for mercy and be saved. Would to God that His Spirit might be present in such power that the theaters, moving picture shows, and all places of amusement be closed, as during the great Welsh revival—closed not because the owners will not want to keep them open, but because there will be none to attend, the people being under deep conviction of sin, at home, in church and places of business, praying to God for mercy!

Spiritualism Advancing

There is another great need of a heaven-sent revival, the advancement of Spiritualism. In the December issue of Success the leading article was entitled, "Can the Dead Speak?" and the doctrine of Spiritualism was set forth in these words: "Another interesting phase is that there appears to be no hell, in the old Puritanical sense. These startling communiques speak of a series of existences through which some souls must pass, of preparatory states in which the spirit must live until it is ready to behold the full glory of the Supreme Being. Here the unspiritual, the unfortunate, born in circumstances that led to ignorance and perhaps to crime, is remolded under divine influence, and prepared to join those whose earthly attainments entitled them to a swifter passage toward the great ultimate." Such a doctrine is that of demons and men.

The Revival Needed—God-Given

The coming revival will not be a man-made but a God-given revival. There will be no advertising, no announcing, no working up of interest, but a mighty moving of the Holy Spirit. It will be an old-fashioned, heart-searching revival. It will be directed by the Holy Spirit, led by the Father, and blessed by the Son, Christ Jesus.

In the revivals of the past some man has been the moving spirit: Savonarola in Italy, Zwingli in Switzerland, Luther in Germany, Wesley in England, Evan Roberts in Wales, Charles Finney, D. L. Moody, Sam Jones and "Billy" Sunday in our own land. But not so in the coming revival. There will be no man around whom the revival will center. God Himself will be the central figure. From the outset it will be acknowledged that this is a heaven-sent revival, and it will have every indication of being of divine origin. All through the revival there will be hundreds of evidences, that will clearly demonstrate, that it was neither planned nor organized by man.

The coming revival will not be confined to any one denomination, but all will share alike in the great outpouring of the Holy Spirit. The Church will be built up greatly, and will no longer be the taunt and sneer of the godless and unbelieving, but come into her own and be exalted as the Lord and Master intended it should be when He said: "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." The Church will be wonderfully revived, and will arise from its lethargy, to go forth as a witness for Christ and thus fulfill its commission.

There will come during the revival a new interest in the Bible, the Word of God. Men will search its pages, and discover its wondrous promises. The coming revival will renew an interest in the old songs of Zion, and may it continue, not for weeks but months, and its gracious results reach into years and decades to come. The world has received a baptism of shot and shell, and now may it receive a baptism of the Holy Spirit.

To look at it from a human standpoint many will say that such a revival is impossible. Perhaps so—but not from the divine standpoint.

How Will It Come?

In response to the earnest prayers of the church. All the denominations have "put over" great missionary, educational, and benevolent campaigns; now let them put on as intensive a prayer program as they have of money and the revival will soon come.

Christian do you not want a part in this revival? Will you not begin to pray for it each day? Pray till the Lord answers, till the angels shout and demons tremble.

"The morning breaks, the darkness disappears,
The light of God is shining upon the future years.
"O Lord, send the old-time power,
The pentecostal power.
That sinners may be converted and Thy name glorified."
"Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

Mr. Joseph MacDonald, 1514, Ninth Avenue, Greeley, Colo., writes to the editors of the Christian Workers Magazine that it has been laid upon the hearts of a number of the brethren in Greeley to give positive testimony to the gospel, and they are anxious to get in touch with as many lovers of the truth as possible in their vicinity. He mentions the towns of Ault, Eaton, Evans, Lucerne, Severance, Plattville, LaSalle, Gill, Kersey, Gilchrist, Johnstown and Milliken.

The Epistle to the Hebrews—A Book Study

By Rev. Robert Clark, Lyndon, Vt.

THE epistle to the Hebrews is one of the three great doctrinal epistles of the New Testament, Romans and Galatians being the others. Hebrews differs from them in that they treat, largely, the work of Christ and its results for men, such as "Justification by Faith in Christ Crucified." Hebrews treats, largely, the "Person of Christ," "His Sacrifice and Priesthood at the Right Hand of the Father." Hebrews belongs also to the Jewish-Christian group of epistles, with James and First and Second Peter, and should be read with them.

Authorship

The writer of the epistle is unknown and likely to remain so. From earliest times its authorship has been ascribed to Paul, and from earliest times his authorship has been denied. Other writers have been suggested, but where nothing is definitely known, one man's opinion is as good as another's. Evidently it was written by one like Paul, who was versed in the history, the customs, the worship and the aspirations of the Jews. After all, it is of little importance who penned the epistle, since "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God" and "Holy men spake as they were moved by the Spirit." While there were many penmen of the Bible, there is but one Author, the Lord Himself. Godet says, "This epistle without introduction or subscription is like the great High Priest of whom it treats, who was without beginning of days or end of years, abiding an High Priest continually. It is entirely fitting that this book should remain anonymous."

For Whom Written?

From internal evidence we learn that it was written for Jewish Christians, particularly for those dwelling in Jerusalem, who still kept the law and worshipped in the temple, offering still the Levitical sacrifices. They had not yet perceived that the Temple service was transitory and typical and abrogated in the sacrifice of Christ. But it was not written for them exclusively but for all who should believe on Jesus Christ.

Why and When Was It Written?

First, it was written to strengthen the Jewish Christians who were in danger of returning to Judaism because of persecution (10:34).

Secondly, to show the relation of Christ and His sacrifice to the Old Testament dispensation. The Old Testament dispensation was founded on sacrifices and services that were material, typical, transitory; the New Testament dispensation is founded on the work of Christ, and is spiritual and eternal.

It was difficult for the Jew to give up the law and the Temple, as it is always difficult to give up traditions and customs. This doubly so if these customs are of divine appointment. In a word the epistle to the Hebrews is a divine commentary on the Levitical system.

Professor Fairbairn says, "There must have been in the Old Testament the same great elements of truth as in the things they represented in the New Testament; and then, in the Old Testament, these must have been exhibited in a form more level to the comprehension, more easily cognizable by the minds of men."

Professor Moorehead says, "The religious system established through the agency of Moses was not an end in itself; it was the pledge and promise of our great High Priest, Jesus Christ, and of the eternal sanctuary of which He is minister. The value of it all lies in this, that it was a picture drawn by the hand of God Himself of the plan of salvation."

Thirdly, it was written for all Christians to show the provisions for all their needs in their earthly pilgrimage; that they have redemption from sin, access to God, sympathy, help, worship, service and reward.

Evidently the time when it was written was before the destruction of Jerusalem.

"Every high priest standeth daily offering the same sacrifices" (10:11). Clement of Rome, who lived in the first century, refers to this epistle more than to any other New Testament book.

Structure and Character

Before we take up the analysis we will make some general remarks about the structure and character of the epistle.

There are three principal subjects:

A. Jesus the High Priest, Personal and Official, Chapters 1-7.

B. The Offering and Ministry of Jesus the High Priest, Chapters 8-10:18.

C. The Trial and Recompense of the Faith of the Brethren whose High Priest He is and for whom He is Ministering. The background of the epistle or the field upon which it is painted is the new creation.

(Rev. 21:5 "Behold, I make all things new.") We see portrayed in the epistle:

A Future {
Habitable Earth, 1:6; 12:25.
Kingdom, 12:22-28.
Redemption, 9:28; 10:37.
Glory, 12:22-24.
City, 11:10-16; 12:22-24.
Inheritance, 2:5.
Rest, 4:9.

This outlook shows us humanity redeemed and restored into more than Edenic blessedness.

The method of the writer is that of comparison. He takes up an Old Testament person or institution and makes comparison with Christ and His ministry in the New Testament.

The key words of the epistle are "Better," which occurs eleven times, also "Greater" and "More Excellent."

There are five sections that come in parenthetically; they do not advance the narrative; the writer pauses to exhort us and to warn us against certain sins. These parentheses are instructive, they are drawn from biblical events and they are progressive and cumulative in their teaching. Two things are to be noticed in each: the biblical background and the sin against which we are warned:

Chapters	Background	The Sin
2:1-4	Sinai and Calvary.	Neglect.
3:7-4:13	Wilderness and Rest of God.	Unbelief.
5:11-6:20	Canaan and Fruits of Land.	Apostasy.
10:26-39	Sanctuary and Its Entrance.	Wilful sin.
12:18-29	New Jerusalem and Mt. Zion.	Obstinate refusal and indifference.

These exhortations illustrate a well known law of the human mind: Neglect will give place to unbelief, unbelief to apostasy, apostasy to wilful sin and wilful sin to indifference.

Analysis

I have chosen a simple analysis based on the writer's method of comparison. Leaving out the parenthetical sections there are nine divisions to the book. I shall analyze the first division only as an illustration of the way in which the book may be studied.

1. Christ the Son of God is better than the prophets. Heb. 1:3.

The Prophets.	The Son.
They were men.	He was the Son.
They were many.	He was One.
They extended over a long time.	He had one ministry.
Each had a fragment of truth.	He had the whole truth.

Beside this, He was Creator of the same substance as God, the visible Manifestation of God, Upholder of all, Redeemer of all, Highest and Heir of all.

2. Christ is better than the angels. Heb. 1:4-2:18.
   (1) In the celestial realm. 1:4-14.
   (2) In the terrestrial realm. 2:5-18.
3. Christ the Son better than Moses the servant. Heb. 3:1-6.
4. Christ our High Priest better than the Aaronic high priests. Heb. 4:14-8:5.
5. The New Covenant is better than the Old Covenant. Heb. 8:6-13.
6. The Sacrifice of Christ is better than the Levitical sacrifices. Heb. 9:1-10:22.
7. The supremacy of Faith. Heb. 11:1-40.
8. The Christian position and hope superior to the Mosaic. Heb. 12:18-29.
9. Hortatory. Heb. 13:1-25.

Spiritual Value of the Epistle

The first thing of spiritual value that I notice is the exalted place that is given to Christ. The advocates of a Unitarian Christ can find little to comfort them here. Christ is declared to be God pre-existent and eternal. The Christ of Hebrews is the Christ of John and Paul. The second thing is the exalted place that is given to the Old Testament. It is the Word of God, authoritative, sure, final. The writers disappear and the Holy Spirit alone is recognized as the author of the Bible. These two things—an exalted conception of Christ and the Word—will do more for the growth of the spiritual life than all else combined.

Homiletical Value

We see the interpretation that is put upon the death of Christ. His death was a real sacrifice. He was a substitute. Salvation was made possible by the removal of our sins by His death on the cross, and not by the moral example of His life. Horace Bushnell, who wrote a book on the Moral Influence Theory of the Atonement, said, that the gospel must always be construed in the language of the types. We know that the preaching of the cross has been the life of the church in the past, and as true ministers of Christ we cannot depart from this "Wisdom and Power of God."

Another suggestion of homiletical value is the use that the writer makes of the Old Testament characters and institutions. Men like Moses, Joshua, Melchizedek, Aaron, and institutions like the priesthood, the temple and the sacrifices, were all invested with a typical significance and could be used for the unfolding and illustration of Christian truth.

Sermons of this nature are seldom, if ever, attempted now, but scholarly men like Jukes, MacIntosh, and Bonar used to lead large congregations, with interest and profit, through the books of Exodus and Leviticus, dwelling upon the types and unfolding the riches and grace of Christ.

This book is an inexhaustible field for sermons and series of sermons. Think of the cumulative effect of a series on the five parenthetical sections! Think of the perfect balance that is kept between the deity and humanity of our Lord in the first and second chapters!

Themes spring up in our minds. "The Moral Glory of the Incarnation." "The Great High Priest." "The Throne of Grace." "The Author and Finisher of our Faith."

Chapter eleven is rich in the exposition and illustration of faith.

Did you ever sit and wonder at the poverty of man
When everything that God can give, is free?
And if we robbed all humans of the things that He calls rich,
What an empty place the souls of men would be.

—Frank P. Hoopes.

The Story of Job in Rhyme

By Rev. J. D. Kempster, Lyndon, Ill.

"In all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly" (Job 1:22)

IF we believe the Bible
Is a chronicle of facts,
Our views on any given book
Will not be very lax.

If this be so, there is no need
For us to further probe;
Nor ask the why and wherefore
Of the wondrous book of Job.

That such a man existed
There is no room for doubt,
The Testaments both Old and New
Have plainly pointed out.

So let us for a moment now
Just take an honest look
And see if we can understand
A little of this Book.

The man himself is first described
(And here I pause to say
I would to God that thousands more
Were just as he today.)

He feared the Lord, eschewing ill,
An altruist was he;
He helped the widow and the poor
And gave most generously.

And as a natural consequence
(Doth not the Scriptures say
That every one who doeth thus Shall prosper in his way?).

Yes, Job was prospered left and right
With cattle, lands and gold;
And no good thing at any time
Did God from him withhold.

But, ah! the scene is changing,
The skies become o'ercast;
The stormy clouds of sorrow
Are gathering thick and fast.

For Satan's been permitted
To now employ a test
And see of all the things of life
Poor Job did love the best.

Upon our trials and sorrows now
Much color here is lent;
We see that naught can happen us
But by the Lord's consent.

Returning to the subject then,
I've time nor space to tell
Of all the many cruel things
This righteous man befell.

For Satan by successive strokes
Robbed Job of all he had;
And were it only temporal things
It wouldn't be so bad.

For temporal things may be restored
And gain replace a loss.
But when our children all are slain
How heavy is the cross!

And here it is with luster rare
Did shine this man of God;
He did not murmur nor complain
Beneath the chastening rod.

With faith in God he spake those words
(Words of immortal fame)
"The Lord hath given, the Lord hath taken, Blessed be His name!"

"God moves in a mysterious way"
The poet Cowper said,
And you, I'm sure, agree with him
If you of Job have read.

The trials that o'ertake us here
Though seldom understood,
The Scriptures teach distinctly,
Are working for our good.

It was so in the case of Job,
It shall be so with all;
So let us place our "Trust in God,"
No matter what befall.

We will but find disappointment, if as children of God we seek the things of this world. It is well for us to remember we are strangers and pilgrims.—C. J.

The joy of the Lord is your strength; let us aim to cultivate a joyous spirit, that others may see in us that God is the source of our joy.—B. J.

He is truly a humble man who does not feel proud when people praise him for his humility. —Selected.

The Center of the Earth

By Rev. Clarence H. Benson, Kobe, Japan

DID you ever locate Palestine and the adjacent Euphrates Valley upon a continental map? It occupies a most significant place upon a narrow strip of land joining the three great continents of Asia, Africa and Europe. Asia at one time embraced all of the population and even today has fully one-half of it while with Africa and Europe it contains no less than seven-eighths of the world's inhabitants.

How well prophecy in Deuteronomy is fulfilled: "When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when He separated the children of men, He set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel." That is to say, in the providential distribution of the nations and in the divine allotment of their territories, Palestine was reserved for Israel, and the various people were grouped around this chosen center according to the sovereign will of God.

Many centuries later Ezekiel said, "This is Jerusalem: I have set it in the midst of the nations and countries that are round about her." This was the passage that gave rise to the rabbinical idea that Jerusalem was the actual center of the earth. In the church of the Holy Sepulcher is a large round stone which is supposed to mark the middle point of the world. However foolish this fancy may seem to us it is certain that this little neck of land has been the historical and religious center of the earth as it is even now the geographic center, while events are rapidly shaping themselves to make it the world's commercial and prophetic center.

Cradle of Civilization

In this strategic center we find the beginning of history and the cradle of civilization. The Garden of Eden can be definitely located in the Euphrates Valley while Mt. Ararat upon which the ark rested is just to the north. Here Nineveh and Babylon, the world's oldest cities, were built and here at Babel was the world's first monarchy.

Despite the dispersion of tongues ancient civilization for centuries clung to this continental center. It is in the archives of Egypt and Babylon that we find our sources of ancient history. For more than fifteen centuries Palestine was the connecting link between Asiatic and African civilization when, under David and Solomon, Israel became a great nation in itself. Solomon was the richest and wisest king that ever sat upon a throne, and for a short time Israel was the brilliant star in the ancient constellation of nations.

With the decline and fall of the Jewish kingdom we still find that this territory retains its reputation as the center of history. The great battles between Babylon and Egypt were fought there while Persia, Greece and Rome grappled for world honors in the vicinity. Three out of four of the great world powers of history had their seat in the Euphrates Valley, and four thousand out of six thousand years of the world's civilization centered in this spot.

Nebuchadnezzar to Napoleon

Nebuchadnezzar with the natural building material of the Euphrates Valley and the millions of slaves at his disposal made Babylon the greatest city of ancient times. One can hardly speak of its magnificent palaces, temples and walls without seeming to exaggerate. But the man with the spade today can testify to the truth of its claim as a world capital.

Two hundred and fifty years later the great Alexander, having conquered the world, established himself in the palace at Babylon, and projected improvements of the city and surroundings to make it the center of a universal empire. While in the midst of his plans he was stricken with a fatal fever.

Two hundred years later the unconquerable Caesar made similiar plans for the centralization of Roman power in the east but was cut off by assassination before he could carry out his project.

Mesopotamia was still a glorious country when Khalid conquered it for the Mohammedans, for ten millions of people flourished in these well-watered plains. Bagdad, the historic seat of Caliph Haroun Al-Rashid and the stage of the "Arabian Nights," in its palmy days, became the wealthiest and most civilized city in the world and approximated a population of nearly two millions.

Coming down to the time of Napoleon we find that only the destruction of the French fleet by Lord Nelson prevented him from including the Euphrates Valley in his oriental conquests. Indeed, after his death, among his papers there were found plans and specifications for the restoration of Babylon as a world-wide capital.

A Cause of the War

In 1902, twelve years before the recent world war, William Durban writing in the London Daily Express said: "An immense revolution is likely to be brought about in the near east within the next decade. The Kaiser has undoubtedly scored an important point when he received a concession from Turkey for the construction of a railroad to Bagdad. It is certain that the Kaiser entertains the dream of founding a magnificent empire in the near east.

"It is a favorite thesis with the people who

Christmas Day in Bethlehem

Christmas is a long business at Bethlehem. First comes the Latin ceremonies which take place on our Christmas Day, December 25. Thirteen days later the Greek services are held, as they still adhere to the old calendar, while thirteen days later again comes the Armenian Christmas feast. The services are held in the Church of the Nativity, which it is believed marked the actual site of the manger where the Saviour was born. It is an immense building more like a fortress than a church. This building is divided up among the various sects. The building is known to be over a thousand years old. All the Christmas services are very elaborate affairs. Photo depicts a procession of the Latin priests on the way to the church.

ponder over prophetic mysteries that both Babylon and Nineveh are to be resuscitated in more than the ancient glories of Nebuchadnezzar and Sennacherib."

When the Kaiser in Damascus stood at the tomb of Saladin and proclaimed himself the "Defender of Islam," it was a part of his world-wide plan to unite with Turkey for the conquest and development of the Euphrates Valley. This project which was set forth by the Berlin-Bagdad railroad, according to Professor Morris Jastrow, Jr., of the University of Pennsylvania, in his interesting book, The Bagdad Railroad, was one of the principal causes of the great war.

Thus it can be seen that this continental center has held its historical prestige in international events from the earliest times down to the present hour.

Palestine, the Religious Center

But this interesting spot in the midst of three continents has also been the religious center of the world. True, it is not the center of all religions, but it is the center of world-wide religions and as the center of Christianity and its great rival, Islam, no other portion of the earth has received such recognition and renown. While the Euphrates Valley was to contribute civilization, Palestine was to provide religion for the world. Jerusalem and Mecca were destined to be the international centers of religious worship from the day of their establishment down to the present hour.

It is interesting to observe that while Egypt was at the zenith of her glory during the sojourn of Israel in her midst, and Babylon likewise became a world power during the Jewish exile, God founded and fixed Jerusalem as the world-wide center of religious worship.

Unlike their contemporaries, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob did not contribute a city of crumbling walls to the world's civilization, but dwelling in tents they "looked for a city which had foundations, whose builder and maker was God." That eternal city to which the patriarchs looked was Jerusalem which since its conquest and dedication by David has never ceased to be the center of biblical thought, the seat of sacred history and the object of divine prophecy.

Well did the Psalmist sing, "Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together: whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord, unto the testimony of Israel, to give thanks unto the name of the Lord. For there are set thrones of judgment, the thrones of the house of David."

The River Jordan—in the Holy Land

The Jordan is the principal river of Palestine and the most sacred stream in the world. Some portions of it are very beautiful, the banks being covered with ferns and trees. Here Christ was baptized by John the Baptist and thousands of Pilgrims visit its shores every year to be baptized by the Greek priests. Prior to the war the Jordan was regarded as the personal property of the Sultan and under no consideration would he allow pleasure steamers to ply upon its waters. Since the armistice the British have placed motor launches upon it and have also thrown two steel bridges across it.

Revival of Interest

The idolatry of the ten tribes and their subsequent overthrow was the result of a political propaganda to substitute some other city for the ecclesiastical assemblies of Israel. Even after the downfall of the southern kingdom, the subsequent restoration under Ezra and Nehemiah once more established Jerusalem as a religious, if no longer a political, center.

There the long promised Messiah was not only to direct His footsteps but to complete His ministry in the tragedy of Golgotha.

Even after the dispersion of the disciples in the Gentile dispensation and the slaughter and scattering of the Jews in the second exile, Jerusalem was by no means annihilated nor did it lose its prestige in the religious world.

Its value as a center of religious associations was recognized by the Mohammedans and they made it the object of one of their first campaigns.

The great Crusades of the medieval ages which drew all the world forces of Christianity and Islam into action, and for centuries mowed down the armies of Asia, Africa and Europe, had for their objective the sacred city of Jerusalem.

Rome, Constantinople and even Petrograd have vied with Jerusalem as the seat of Christianity, but the fall of the Eastern Empire, the rise of the Reformation and the collapse of the Russian Empire have terminated these aspirations. Jerusalem today, after the wrecks of time, is the center of an increasng world-wide interest. This awakening interest of the religious world is due to an early prospect of the long anticipated restoration of the Jews to their paternal city and country.

Spoiling the Kaiser's Plans

When the Kaiser was in Jerusalem in 1898, he was particularly anxious to learn the extent to which the Jews were returning. "Do you believe in a future for the Jews," he asked Bishop

Blythe. When the bishop replied in the affirmative, the Kaiser, speaking with great energy said, "I don't agree with you at all! What future can there be for a people who crucified our Lord? It will spoil all my plans."

The Kaiser could not unite with Turkey for the realization of his dream for a world-wide empire and at the same time take Jerusalem out of their hands for the restoration of the Jews. But the Kaiser should have consulted prophecy before he allied himself with a nation that has for centuries trampled God's chosen city under its feet.

It was God that was going to spoil the Kaiser's plans and the very significant capture of Jerusalem by General Allenby, December 17, 1917, was to prepare the way for the fulfilment of the long predicted promises to the chosen people.

Said Frederick the Great to his chaplain: "Doctor, if your religion is a true one, it ought to be capable of a very brief and simple proof. Will you give an evidence of its truth in one word?" The good man answered, "Israel."

The title of the Jews to Palestine is as valid today as when it was granted by Jehovah to Abraham, as no adverse possession of the Gentiles can invalidate the right of the Creator to give it to whom He pleases. God's marvelous perpetuation of Israel "for many days without a king and without a prince and without a sacrifice" while "he has made a full end of all nations whither he has scattered them," is not only a testimony to the truth of God's Word, but also of the far reaching importance of General Allenby's triumphant march into Jerusalem.

What the Map Discloses

It would be well now for us to stop at this place and consult a continental map, that it may be possible to understand how this little neck of land joining three populous continents is the geographic center of the world.

It will be observed that the Sahara Desert diverts all African traffic northeast through Egypt while the Ural Mountains and the Caspian Sea likewise force overland traffic between Europe and Asia down the Euphrates Valley.

More than this: the great Arabian Desert throws Asiatic traffic so far to the north that communications with both Europe and Asia must of necessity pass through the Euphrates Valley, rendering it even more the center of continental communication than Palestine.

Now if a straight line be drawn from the North Sea to the Indian Ocean it will pass through this historic valley. You can now journey from Ostend to Constantinople in three and one-half days. Continue this overland line and you will be able to go from London to India in seven days and from London to Australia in one-half the time now required by way of the Suez Canal.

Draw a second straight line east and west between Paris and Pekin, and when due allowance has been made for the mountains and the seas it will be seen that it likewise must pass through the Euphrates Valley. A third line north and south joining Petrograd and Cape Town has a common conjunction with the other two lines at this strategic center.

During the war the Germans completed the railroad from Euphrates Valley to the Egyptian frontier so that the Cape-to-Cairo Railroad of Africa is in this way united with the great European and Asiatic systems.

A Set-Back for Chicago

Chicago has the reputation of being the greatest railroad center in the world, and it is to the multiplicity of railroads that it owes its remarkable growth and prosperity. But the position of Chicago in the midst of one hundred million people can never approximate the strategic importance of this oriental railroad center commanding the trunk lines of three continents containing fourteen hundred millions of people.

Nor is this all. It has already been pointed out how Australia would naturally be drawn toward this center by the overland route to London. South America, it will be noticed, is much nearer to Africa than either Europe or North America, and there are two steamship lines now projected that will bring these two southern continents within three days sail of each other. When the trans-continental railroad between Cairo and Konakri is once a reality South America will be in close contact with the eastern hemisphere and its produce will be drawn through the great geographical center in Mesopotamia.

Commerce of the Continents

This logically leads to the consideration of this geographical key to the continents as the commercial center of the world. No one can study ancient history without recognizing the fact that the commerce of the continents passed through Palestine and the Euphrates Valley.

Even when the Mediterranean Sea became studded with Phoenician ships, it was the transcontinental traffic to Tyre and Sidon that supplied them with cargo. The twenty-seventh chapter of Ezekiel well reveals the fact that these coast cities as well as Babylon and Nineveh owed their growth and prosperity to the continental commerce that passed through their midst. A glance at the map and at this international highway should convince any one that this would be the most natural result in the world.

What then was the occasion of the interruption of this continental trade route and the decline of the prestige of this great commercial center? There are two dates of special interest in this connection, 1453 and 1492 A. D. When in the seventh century the Mohammedans overran Palestine and conquered Jerusalem they blocked the ancient highway between Asia and Africa, but it was not until the fall of Constantinople in 1453 that Asia was finally shut off from European commerce. For a long time the trade with the near East was accomplished through Venice whose vessels went to the eastern ports of the Mediterranean, and there its traders met the merchants from the Orient who came across the desert on their camels.

Venice for a long time was one of the main entry ports into Europe and thus that city secured great wealth and importance. But the caravans were subject to exorbitant tribute by the Mohammedan master of the continental highway and even then were not assured of protection from the brigands that were permitted under Turkish rule to infest this important territory. For this reason merchants began to look to the sea for some other route to secure the wealth of the Orient.

The East Coming Into Its Own

Mariners crept along the coast of Africa and rounded the Cape of Good Hope to get to India. Spain sent Columbus west to discover a shorter route to India and he stumbled across America in 1492. Interest in the new world delayed attempts to break down the commercial barriers in the east for the Atlantic Ocean was destined to become the commercial center of continental relations. In the process of time the Suez Canal was cut through and this new water route still postponed the day for the opening of the ancient highway. But the increase of commerce and the marked success of the American railroads as well as the trans-Siberian enterprise of Russia, has again attracted attention to the importance of this overland route.

1917 A. D. an Epoch-Making Year

Germany claims to be credited with the greatest discovery of modern times. One of her newspapers declared that "the year 1492, when America was discovered, and 1916, when the colossal idea of the new road to India was born, are dates which generations to come will regard as co-equal and epoch-making."

But Germany was not the first nation to turn her covetous eyes toward the barricaded Euphrates Valley. Indeed, Great Britain joined Turkey in the Crimean War to thwart Russia's designs in this direction, as she united against Germany for the same reason in the last war. Germany hoped by control of the Euphrates Valley to have a greater portion of the oriental commerce than Great Britain enjoyed in the Suez Canal.

Now that both Russia and Germany, and more especially Turkey, have been removed as controlling factors, and the key of the Orient lies in the hands of the allies, the world once more is in a position to see its commercial highway restored. The year 1916—or more particularly 1917, which marked the capture of Bagdad by the British army—may yet be of as great significance, historically and commercially, as the year 1492.

Source of Raw Materials

There is another circumstance that is going to make the Euphrates Valley the world's commercial center. When properly drained Mesopotamia is the most fertile region in the world. It can provide one of the finest wheatfields for the starving multitudes of Europe, while there are excellent prospects for the cultivation of cotton and fruits. The vast undeveloped oil fields are of priceless value at this time when the needs for this commodity have increased so enormously.

Likewise the fertility of the Nile region sustains a reputation only rivaled by those localities that provide faster transportation than slow moving ships. Instead of looking for food in Russia, instead of constructing new ships, Europe has but to complete the Berlin-Bagdad Railroad to hasten the transportation of raw materials from Asia and Africa in exchange for the manufactured products of Europe and incidently develop the most fertile region in the world.

The More Sure Words of Prophecy

Most significant of all that is to be said about this fascinating center of the world is the place accorded it in prophecy. This does not refer to fulfilled prophecy, for that is already history. Prophecy is the mold of history, and if this has been the historical and religious center of the world prophecy must have staged its themes there also.

In the light of what has already been considered it should not be difficult to understand what Isaiah had reference to when he said, "In that day there shall be a highway out of Egypt to Assyria, and the Assyrian shall come into Egypt and the Egyptian into Assyria; and the Egyptians shall serve with the Assyrians. In that day Israel shall be third with Egypt and with Assyria, even a blessing in the midst of the land."

The ancient highway has but to be revived not only to bring these three nations in close contact but make them the largest and most prosperous in the world. And all that is wanting to fulfill this prophecy is for Israel as the important connecting link to be restored to her native land. In fact the revival of Palestine as well as the removal of the transcontinental barricade is dependent upon the return of Palestine's prophetic and patriotic people.

Times of the Gentiles

If the early church had studied prophecy she might have been spared the bloody wars of the crusades. Christ said, "Jerusalem shall be trodden down by the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." All the efforts of Europe to reclaim this strategic center from the centuries of the Crusades down to the time of the Kaiser were to prove unavailing. Why? Because the times of the Gentiles were not fulfilled.

And what did Christ mean by the times of the Gentiles? He meant a period dating from the reign of Nebuchadnezzar when God took away the independent sovereignty of the Jews, and gave it to the Gentiles. But the Gentiles were not always to control the kingdoms of this world. Jesus said, "until" and that one word set a limit to Gentile dominion. James also fixed a limit in the fifteenth chapter of Acts. Paul likewise in the eleventh chapter of Romans. Others may give a different interpretation to Old Testament prophecy but this is the interpretation of Christ, and James, and Paul, and in the light of subsequent events it must be admitted that they have been remarkably accurate in their disclosures.

Babylon to Be Restored

But the restoration of Israel and the rebuilding of Jerusalem will go hand in hand with the development of the Euphrates Valley and the reconstruction of Babylon as a great commercial enterprise. It is more than a mere accident that the old site of Babylon is the center between the transcontinental routes of Asia, Africa and Europe. It is more than an ordinary circumstance that the world's ancient capital should be the strategic key to the continents.

These striking conditions surrounding this interesting portion of the earth are but the means to the fulfilment of Bible prophecy. Revelation devotes a great deal of attention to a very large city of great commercial prosperity as one might expect of a centrally located city in the Euphrates Valley. The description of the prophet fits remarkably well into just such a flourishing, prosperous, cosmopolitan metropolis as under such remarkable commercial conditions would naturally arise in this particular spot. It is not difficult to understand how in a city so prosperously situated, that "the merchants of the earth and as many as trade by sea were made rich by her." As if to clinch the matter divine revelation calls this city Babylon, the only suitable name that history could suggest for a city of such unprecedented importance.

Isaiah and Revelation in Harmony

I know that Isaiah speaks definitely of the annihilation of Babylon, but has Babylon ever been annihilated "like Sodom and Gohmorrah," or in any other way to fit Isaiah's description? To be sure it suffered a decline and partial destruction under its many invasions, but in view of its prestige among conquerors, its present remains, and the splendid prospects of reconstruction and rehabilitation, the thirteenth chapter of Isaiah is only an argument in favor of the annihilation of a greater and grander Babylon than the celebrated city of Nebuchadnezzar.

This is undoubtedly the Babylon of Revelation. In the three hundred times that Babylon is found elsewhere in Scripture it refers either to the city or the province in which it was situated, and it is difficult to understand why the Holy Spirit should designate it as anything else in the book of Revelation. If Babylon does not mean Babylon what does it mean?

Jesus Christ, the Corner Stone

All the lines of prophecy converge for their final fulfilment in this historic, religious, geographic and commercial center of the earth. And the prophecies that relate to Jerusalem and those that relate to Babylon unite in Jesus Christ, the central figure of all prophecy. "The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner. Whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it shall grind him to powder."

The rejected stone shall become the head of the corner in Jerusalem for "when the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory," and the blind, broken nation of Israel shall be healed.

And the same stone, "the stone cut out of the mountain without hands," shall fall upon the centralized, commercialized Gentile kingdom which today only awaits its "head of gold," and "with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down and shall be found no more at all."

THE LUNCH WE USED TO CARRY

It would be trite to say that much of the increased cost of living is due to the increasing number of conveniences daily thrust before us and which our ready acceptance of effort saving devices bids us employ.

What has become of the old fashioned package of lunch? Not one loop worker in a thousand carries that homely little packet, simply because it is so easy to be served in a restaurant. Pride is costing us money. We are too metropolitan, too intolerant of homely fashions. The girls from the offices and stores complain about the prices of food in the restaurant, but they would be horrified at the suggestion that they bring with them each morning a lunch box filled with a quality impossible to get at any price down town.

This is not advice for those who must lunch down town. It merely is a suggestion for those who need not. Chicago is full of restaurants, all serving food at top speed. Fewer lunches means more food at a less price. The dwindling supply of food is what we are all complaining about.

How many men ought to shave themselves? How many men and women ought to polish their own shoes; clean their own hats; how many housewives ought to make their own ice cream; make their own candy?

We are growing more and more indifferent to trifles. The nickels we used to save are being tossed—with a penny for tax—into a thousand crevices that didn't exist a few years ago. In short, we are losing sight of the sagest of sayings: A penny saved is a penny earned.—Chicago Tribune.

The Ulster Delegation in Chicago

Or, The Other Side of the Sinn Fein Movement

By Joseph B. Bowles

THE three days' visit to Chicago of Ulster's representatives, "the official delegation from the Irish Protestant churches to the sister churches of America," ended Monday night, January 19, with an impressive demonstration by the city's united Protestantism. An enthusiastic mass meeting filled Medinah Temple, one of Chicago's largest and best auditoriums, seating about 5,000, and overflowed into the large auditorium of The Moody Bible Institute and the chapel of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, both about half a mile distant from the temple.

The mass meeting was held under the auspices of The Moody Bible Institute, the Chicago Church Federation co-operating, and was sponsored in the public press and the program for the evening, by fifty-two of the leading city pastors, representing all the Protestant denominations.

Preceding the program there was a half hour's stirring song service led by a well-drilled chorus of 300 Moody Institute students, conducted by Professor E. O. Excell, the well-known composer, assisted by Professor Guy C. Latchaw, of the Institute.

The presentation of Ulster's case was made with great ability and eloquence by the Hon. William Coote and Reverends Frederick E. Harte, Louis Crooks, Edward Hazelton and A. Wylie Blue; Rev. C. Wesley Maguire, Mr. Harte, Mr. Blue and Mr. Coote speaking in the overflow meetings. Right nobly did all acquit themselves on this occasion, momentous because of the fact that this great city has been so much in the dark as to the facts concerning Ireland and the Sinn Fein. The audiences were with them from the start and were strongly demonstrative in their applause throughout.

The chairman of the mass meeting, Mr. Frank J. Loesch, a prominent attorney, read the following resolution, offered from the floor, which was adopted by a rising vote:

Resolved, that this audience looks with marked disfavor upon the raising of funds in the United States at this time by the citizens of a foreign country for the purpose of fostering interference in the affairs of a friendly nation; and further respectfully suggests that the legal propriety of such action be made the subject of careful inquiry by the proper officials of our government. And, be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent by the chairman to each United States Senator and to each member of the national House of Representatives.

The six members of the delegation, together with the Rev. Dr. D. D. Irvine, of New York City, Commissioner of the Society for American and British Friendship, and the Rev. E. M. McFadden, D. D., President of the Ulster Society of Pittsburgh, accompanying them, were entertained at The Moody Bible Institute, which had undertaken all arrangements for Chicago at the request of the Society. An appeal to the Dean of the Institute, the Rev. James M. Gray, D. D., from the Rev. Henry Montgomery, of Belfast, a co-worker with the late D. L. Moody, was given a cordial response by cable. A request from Commissioner Irvine followed, prompt acceptance was given, and work started at once to arouse city-wide interest.

Preaching appointments were secured for the delegation and their clerical companions in leading city and suburban pulpits, for Sunday's morning and evening services, and several in the afternoon as well. These and the mass meeting, and their appointments to address the city's seven Protestant ministerial associations on Monday forenoon, were announced in the press and advertised in large display advertisements. The co-operation of the Church Federation was secured, and a letter was sent to more than 900 pastors enclosing tickets for the mass meeting for distribution, and a copy of the program.

On the evening of Saturday, the day of arrival, a banquet was given in honor of the delegation at the Union League Club, by Mr. Henry P. Crowell, President of the Quaker Oats Company and of The Moody Bible Institute, and active otherwise in the city's religious and philanthropic interests. A prominent guest remarked that the gathering was the most representative of the best life of Chicago he had ever attended. Among the 168 who sat down to the dinner were leading bankers. business men, judges, lawyers, educators, clergymen, representatives of the secular and religious press.

Dean Gray introduced the visitors, who proceeded to make the occasion memorable by happily framed addresses sparkling with telling hits at their opponents which brought the guests to their feet over and over and over again.

At the last meal served to the delegation in the Institute, Mr. Coote arose and said they had known Mr. Moody in years long past and had heard of the Institute he founded, but had never anticipated the privilege of being its guests; that they had expected much, but were not at all prepared to find such extensive work being carried on, and did not imagine so much would be done for their comfort while here. "Words fail," he continued, "to express our appreciation of your hospitality and the provision made for us. Last Sunday was the only Sunday since we came to the United States that we were able to have absolute rest and quiet in the afternoon without interruptions or disturbances by intruders. We have appreciated very much having a room set aside where we could have fellowship together with the different members of the faculty, who have acted as host at the table. The privilege of talking over our business matters undisturbed has been, indeed, a rare treat that we have valued very much. The spiritual uplift we have received here will always remain a sweet memory, and we will speak of the hospitality of The Moody Bible Institute to our friends in the United States and abroad."

Again on taking leave at the station, they said: "Be sure to tell Dr. Gray how much we appreciate his foresight and kindness in taking hold of the matter in the way he did."

This Remarkable Photograph Shows the City of Dublin In Flames As It Appeared on Thursday Night, April 27, 1919, When the Revolutionists Were in Possession of the City.

In the glare of the flames along Sackville Street, the central street of the Irish capital, are shown the McConnell Monument in the foreground and the Trafalgar Column to Admiral Nelson silhouetted in the background. Opposite the Trafalgar Column on the right is the Post Office Building, which was the center of the rebels' activities and the place of their first attack.

All in all the Ulstermen's visit to Chicago was a great success, and in a good degree their message was given by the newspapers to the entire city and a large surrounding territory.

It was a timely visit, especially in view of the strenuous organized efforts being made by Sinn Fein sympathizers to secure subscriptions for their $10,000,000 fund. Sunday night, January 18, pursuant to hand-bills headed, "The Irish Republic Bond Certificate Drive," a mass meeting was held in a large armory, presided over by ex-Governor Edward F. Dunne and addressed by Mr. Frank P. Walsh, "Chairman American Commission on Irish Independence," and other speakers. Monday's Chicago newspapers stated that many Roman Catholic priests throughout the city had urged their parishioners at the Sunday services to subscribe liberally for these "bonds." A staff photographer of a Chicago newspaper who took many views of De Valera and his party in Chicago, informed the writer that Roman Catholic priests continually hovered about the pseudo "President."

Clearly the authorities of the church of Rome in this country are giving active support to the Sinn Fein propaganda; a propaganda which is not merely anti-British, but in reality equally anti-American, since it aims to destroy that friendship between Britain and America on which hinges not only the reciprocal well-being of the world's two great English-speaking and predominantly Protestant peoples, but undoubtedly also the peace of the world and the security of modern civilization.

The Irish Crisis: Its Religious Aspects

By Rev. Henry Montgomery, D. D., Ex-Moderator, Presbyterian General Assembly of Ireland

An Address Given at Queen's Hall, London, and Copied from Evangelical Christendom

WE owe a deep debt of gratitude to The British Evangelical Alliance for convening these meetings on behalf of distracted Ireland. I heartily endorse the kindly remarks of our chairman (Admiral Sir J. Stanton, K. C. B.) when I say that we in Ireland deeply feel the need of continued and earnest prayer on behalf of our country. I speak, of course, chiefly about the northern part of the island; I come from Belfast.

Perhaps you should recall that the population of Ireland is divided into a larger and a smaller portion. About 25 to 30 per cent is Protestant, and intensely Protestant, and the other 70 or 75 per cent is intensely Roman Catholic.

Ireland Devoutly Roman Catholic

Ireland is the most devoutly Roman Catholic country in the world; for there is a larger percentage of priests and religious orders in Ireland, compared with the population, than there is in any Roman Catholic country in Europe. During the last twenty-five years, perhaps, the religious orders in Ireland have increased about 150 per cent, while the population has gone down 30 per cent. If you carry that thought in your mind it will give you an idea of the difficulty that confronts the legislature in trying to settle what is called the interminable Irish Question.

We who are the Protestant section are not only devoted to the Union; we love our connection with England, we feel it has been a blessing to us. Belfast at the time of the Union had only twenty thousand of a population; now it has over four hundred thousand.

The Union a Blessing

Some people say that the Union has been a curse to the country, while we, on the other hand, maintain that it has been a very great blessing indeed. England is our best customer; we find a market here for what we produce. We also find sympathy here, and now that the Union is 119 years old, God has blessed us exceedingly, and we are so devoted to the Union and to our connection with the larger Island that on no consideration will we dream of being separated from it. We do not think Ireland can stand alone; we are sure she cannot.

And now it seems to me that matters have gone from bad to worse because the Sinn Fein element has drifted beyond all control almost, and cold-blooded slaughter of public officials is taking place on the streets of the Irish metropolis for no other reason in the world than that they are representatives of law and order. You cannot help feeling that nothing but harm can come to a cause promoted in that way.

Roman Catholic Intolerance

We have great difficulties from the Protestant standpoint, because to give legislation of the kind proposed would mean that you would be giving to the Roman Catholic church the position of supremacy and control to which it is not entitled, and that would endanger our civil and religious liberty.

I do not wish to speak disrespectfully of any religious community, but you know very well that the church of Rome prides itself upon being intolerant. It does not think that any body of Christians is right but itself, and when it has the opportunity it asserts its power.

I think you friends are deeply interested in the question of Ireland because if the Roman Catholic church in Ireland becomes supreme, and the Protestants are crushed out of Ireland, then Ireland will only become a jumping-off place to ultimately subject this land. You have a great many in this land already who are working towards bringing England down to the feet of the See of Rome. God forbid that that day should ever arrive, for it will be the day of England's disgrace and downfall.

Somehow or other we speak with bated breath and velvet lips about this. But it seems to me Protestant means to protest—to be against what we believe to be wrong. You know as well as I do—for I have lived in Ireland all my life and know a little about this Irish Question—you know that they dislike civil and religious liberty and they do not allow their people to read the Word of God.

No Sinn Fein Threats Spoil Hunting in Ireland

It takes more than threats of the Sinn Feiners to halt the sport loving populace of that land. The strange spectacle of a hunt meet being held under the protection of police was seen at Finglas County, Dublin. The constables were sent on a previous occasion—the War Union. Photo shows the hunting party starting out.

young girl came up to me with a shawl tucked under her chin.

She said, "Do you think your reverence can you get me a Bible?"

"Yes, I think so."

And so we went together to a bookstall and I got her a Bible.

She was an intelligent mill-girl, and the Spirit of God had been working in her heart at that open-air meeting. She knew there was something she needed that she did not have. She took the Bible away.

Another evening, three months afterwards, she came back and asked to see me, and I said, "I'm glad to see you; but what has gone wrong?"

"Oh, your reverence, the Bible is gone!"

"How? What is the matter?"

"Well, two or three mornings ago I slept in—I kept it under my bolster—and I had to rush to be in time for the mill-horn and get in to my work. My mother went up to make the bed and found the Bible under the bolster. She brought it down and threw it on the kitchen table, and as luck would have it, Father—came in that morning. He looked at the Bible, and he said, 'Who allowed this Book to be brought into this house? This is a dreadful thing!' So mother had to clear herself, and she said, 'I knew nothing about it. Mary Jane slept in this morning, and when I made her bed I found the Book under the bolster.' Then she said, 'His reverence took his walking-stick, pushed the coals to one side, put the Bible into the fire and poked it down with his stick, and it was burned to a cinder.' If you can get me another Bible I will try and put it where neither my mother nor the priest can get it."

Can a country get on that is robbed of the Bible?

At a Moody Meeting

I was speaking at the Theater Royal, in Limerick, a good many years ago, when following up the work of Mr. Moody.

After the meeting I said to Major Whittle, "What's the meaning of these sixty or seventy fellows waiting here?"

"They are every one of them Roman Catholics, and they are waiting to talk to you."

Then I plunged down amongst those young fellows, who had come out of the shops, the post-office and other places—intelligent, clear-headed young fellows—and I said:

"Boys, we are going to be gentlemen to-night, we are not going to have any recrimination or hot words. I am told by my colleague that you are waiting behind to speak to the preacher."

"Yes."

"What is it that you want to say?"

Then one of then said, "Does not the priest come in before a man gets salvation?"

I said, "I will read to you out of your own Douay Scriptures if you will give me one."

Those sixty or seventy lads looked at one another. They did not have the Douay Scriptures; they had never seen them.

I opened my Bible at John 1:12: "As many as received him, to them gave he power." In the Douay Version it is "to them gave he the right," and one of the lads who had heard it before interrupted me by pointing that out. "As many as received him, to them gave he the right to become the sons of God."

We talked about Christ's salvation that night for two hours, and those seventy lads shook hands with me before leaving. They had never seen the Word of God before.

Is a church that does that right? We object to that church getting any more power in Ireland, or in any other place, that we can help it from getting.

Getting the Cream

Let me illustrate the point by an incident. A smart Irishman had got a copy of the Scriptures, and the priest, wanting to inveigle it from him, said to him:

"You know, this is too deep a book for you. You are an ignorant man; you can only skim the surface."

"Now, your reverence, is not the book called 'the sincere milk of the Word'?"

"Yes."

"Well, your reverence, is not it the cream that comes to the top?"

"Yes."

"Well, if I only skim the surface, your reverence, will not I get the cream?—and let whoever likes get the blue milk that is below!"

There is some shrewdness there, and you can make something out of people if you are willing to give them the Word of God.

Dublin Castle Where the Irish Rebels Made a Desperate Stand

Though rebels of the rank and file followed the example set by their leaders by laying down their arms at the foot of Parnell's Monument in Sackville street, the thoroughfare where the Irish made their headquarters in the General Post Office Building, some of the Irish rebels continued "sniping" the British troops. The photograph shows Dublin Castle, where the rebels made a desperate stand.

The Case of the South and West

I appeal to you on behalf of the Protestants over in Ireland. I think of the South. We love our co-religionists in the South and West, as well as in the North. We want to be united, but if they are going to make a dangerous and deadly experiment by putting power into the hands of savages like what we have now devastating and seeking the ruin of the country, you cannot help what may happen. In any case, I want to make it clear to you that by the help of God the northern Protestants will never have anything to do with anything of that kind.

Answer to Prayer

We are going to pray our way through. We ran a prayer meeting every week in Belfast during these past troublous years, and it was well attended. There were people praying all over the city at the time when we were going to be overrun.

A gunboat was sent to Carrickfergus, and you know how a British general offered to surrender his sword rather than go north with parts of his artillery. You know that when the commander-in-chief told him he was to go, and gave him half an hour to think about it, he said, "I don't need half a minute!"

Sir Edward Carson Visits Ulster Hospital

Sir Edward and Lady Carson on a visit to the Ulster Hospital in Belfast shaking hands with a young Ulsterman who had been wounded in France. Sir Edward recently resigned his place in the War Cabinet and returned to Belfast to lead the fight against home rule.

We honour a military man who for a great cause—for the cause, as he believed, of civil and religious liberty—became disobedient. But the hand of God was in it. We were delivered, and God, who did what appeared an impossible thing then, is going to work for us still.

Ulster in the War

But we claim and crave your sympathy for another reason. Ulster, when the war came, gave of the noblest and best of her boys, and there is hardly a home in Ulster that has not been desolated and ravished by the war. We had a great march past of our soldiers about seven or eight weeks ago. Thirty-two thousand men, chiefly of the Ulster Division, marched past our City Hall. I had the privilege of sitting on the Lord Mayor's platform in the great City Hall, and they marched past—the maimed, the wounded, people who had lost their arms and were blinded were there.

There was a gentleman sitting near to me—in front of me a little bit. I was keeping all the cheers I had for our own Ulster Division; I could not shout for them all. But there were a number of men near to me, and they shouted tremendously for the Enniskillen Fusiliers when they came along—noble fellows. The more those people shouted, the more that gentleman—a godly clergyman—the more his head fell down lower and lower. He was a friend of mine, and I knew that those cheers were stabbing him like pricks of pain because his beautiful boy was not in it.

John Oxenham sings:

"In Flanders' fields the poppies grow
Among the crosses row on row;"

and I knew that that brother clergyman's beautiful boy was sleeping under one of those crosses.

So I say to you today, you cannot forsake that Province that has given her bravest and best for the cause of God and for the cause of liberty among the nations of the earth.

"One good I covet, and that one alone—
To do Thy will, from selfish motives free,
And to prefer a dungeon to a throne,
And pain to comfort when it pleases Thee."

The Roman Catholic Question in the Y. M. C. A.

Ey W. P. England, formerly Associate Executive Secretary of the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A.

THE Roman Catholic question as it relates to the Young Men's Christian Association is not a new issue. It has recurred at varying intervals throughout the history of the Association and the contention that Catholics should be admitted to a voting and office holding relation is not always raised by Roman Catholics. More often the issue is brought up by Protestants, or those who have no church relation, who feel that there would be a decided gain to the Association if such a relation could be established.

It will be remembered that ex-President Roosevelt raised the issue a few years ago and expressed his disapproval of the evangelical basis of the Association which brought forth extended comments not only from Catholic prelates and journals, but from Jewish organs as well. One of the statements from a Jewish editor is worthy of comment. It says, "It is perfectly proper that religious denominations should form associations for the purpose of furthering the welfare of their particular creeds, and it is also perfectly proper to exclude from the management of those associations all who are not followers of those creeds, though outsiders may be permitted to participate in some of the conveniences provided for social and physical culture."

What Is the Question at Issue?

It is important to remember that the question at issue between Roman Catholics and the Young Men's Christian Association is more fundamental and of greater significance than that of voting and office holding. The fundamental objection of the Roman Catholic clergy is directed mainly against the religious principles of the Young Men's Christian Association; against its right to teach religion and to interpret the Bible. A few quotations from leading Roman Catholics will serve to establish this point. The Right Rev. Timothy Corbett, Bishop of Crookston, says:

"The Young Men's Christian Association is a Protestant organization, in which Catholics are admitted only as associate members. They have no voice in the management of its affairs, and are not eligible to office. Catholics are only tolerated, but their money is welcome. The Young Men's Christian Association is essentially a Protestant institution, with the secret purpose of proselyting. Its anti-Catholic spirit appears now and then in the lectures, bubbling over with calumnies and lies, delivered in its halls and under its auspices. Catholic young men should not suffer themselves, therefore, to be duped by an organization, for the sake of bodily advantages, a position, or social standing. Catholics possess the precious heritage of the faith of nearly twenty centuries. They belong to the grandest organization the world has ever witnessed. How far, then, is it beneath the dignity of a Catholic to forget the tradition of his church, to disregard the precious jewel of faith, unflinchingly held by the blood of his forefathers amidst the worst of persecutions, and to trample under foot all sense of honor by becoming a secondary member of that Protestant organization called the Young Men's Christian Association!

"No young man with honest Catholic blood flowing in his veins will suffer the indignity of becoming an inferior member of an organization. The church cannot compromise with error. Catholicity is essentially tolerant, as truth is intolerant. The bearer of God's message to mankind, she cannot accommodate herself to the changing modes of human thought to please a fickle and corrupt world. Her mission is to correct error when at variance with the doctrine of Christ. No Catholic, to my knowledge, ever became a permanent member of the Young Men's Christian Association without growing lukewarm in his faith, and finally descending so low as to abandon the only and true church of his forefathers. Catholics who join that sect organization soon imagine that one church is as good as another."

Archbishop Blen has warned Catholic young men against affiliating themselves with the Association in the following communication: "The consensus of opinion derived from the most authoritative sources ought to determine the attitude of all Catholics toward the Young Men's Christian Association. This society contains all the elements conducive to realize a systematic propaganda detrimental to the spiritual life of a Catholic young man. It encourages the reading of the Protestant Bible and gives to its members tickets to lectures on religious subjects. It bars from active membership and from office those who are not members of one of the evangelical churches. For these reasons, the Catholic young man should give it a wide berth and never contribute one cent toward its support."

It will be seen from the above statements that the main objection of the Catholic clergy is directed against the religious principles of the Association. If, therefore, Catholic young men were admitted to active membership, there would still be this objection to the religious principles of the organization.

A striking example of this fact is found in the Manila (P. I.) Association which is operated on the Paris basis—a personal rather than a denominational test. Here, I am informed, a Roman Catholic layman was elected president of the Association, but, notwithstanding this fact the Roman Catholic Bishop of Manila indulged in a most bitter attack on the Association and warned Catholic young men against becoming members. This would undoubtedly be the attitude of the Catholic clergy everywhere under the same conditions.

Co-operation Withheld

It should be remembered that the Roman Catholic church withholds its co-operation from almost every organization of whatever kind. Catholics have been repeatedly invited to co-operate with the religious education association in its broad platform for moral and religious education, but such co-operation has steadfastly been withheld.

The same is true concerning the Boy Scouts of America which is in no sense a religious movement. A prominent Catholic priest in Chicago stated only recently his willingness to lend his assistance to the Boy Scout movement, but said further that he was restrained from doing so, due to the fact that the archbishop of Chicago had refused to endorse the movement.

The Roman Catholic church in Chicago has also refused to co-operate in any official way in the various social centers of the city, and at the present time it is agitating the question of forming a Catholic social center on the West Side, and is urging all loyal Catholics to lend their support to this movement.

Shall the Membership Test Be Broadened?

What would be the effect of broadening the membership test of the Young Men's Christian Association so as to admit Roman Catholics to active membership? Many secretaries and others are embarrassed over this question. Some, when attacked by Roman Catholics, assume a compromising attitude and others even apologize for the evangelical character of the Association.

First, the Association in admitting to its active membership, its conventions and fellowship, members of the Roman Catholic church would conspicuously ignore the action of the Federation of Churches which declines to admit as delegates members of this denomination.

Secondly, if Roman Catholics were admitted to active membership they would at once claim a place among the employed staff of the Association which would lead to radical differences among the working forces of the Association. It would give place to a proselyting campaign among the Protestant membership. Every true Catholic believes it to be his duty to convert other Christians to the Roman Catholic faith.

Thirdly, it would mean the probable loss of the virile, evangelical note which has led to such results through confession of Christ and union with His church. The Association to be courteou and consistent must make less prominent and practically abandon the cardinal place as held in common by the evangelical churches. The Association would thus practically abandon a basis which has made for unbroken harmony in an ever expanding brotherhood.

Is the Y. M. C. A. Narrow?

Against the contention that is sometimes urged that the Association is narrow because it refuses to admit Catholics to active membership I would answer, that no Protestant is ever admitted to membership in a Catholic organization. The Young Men's Christian Association, therefore, is broader in its attitude for it offers its privileges to Catholic young men and seeks to benefit them in every way possible.

It must be borne in mind that the Young Men's Christian Association is fundamentally a laymen's movement and that before Catholic young men seek to have a voice in its management they should first be permitted to manage their own church affairs. Catholic laymen can have nothing to say about the management of their church property. They are, therfore, unfitted by training and experience to manage any other Christian organization.

It is well to remind our Catholic friends that a few years ago a few Catholic laymen in the state of Maine who were dissatisfied with this condition, were instrumental in introducing a bill in the state legislature to give them the right to control their own church property, for which they were promptly excommunicated by the Roman Catholic church.

The old question of taxation without representation is sometimes raised by Catholic critics of the Association, who insist that Catholics are taxed for the support of the Association but can have nothing to do with its management. Such contention is hardly worthy of an answer since no one is "taxed" for the support of the Association—all its support is entirely voluntary. Neither is any young man compelled to become a member—this is purely a voluntary act on his part.

No Compromise on the Faith

A well-known Association leader in writing on this subject recently has said, "In my judgment there is but one course for the Association to follow in its relation to this question and that is unswerving loyalty to the fundamental Christian Protestant evangelical objective for which the Association stands. No financial gifts should be accepted; no obligations assumed and no activitives introduced which would weaken or compromise the Association in its specific work.

"The fact that so many men of non-evangelical faiths are now members of the Association is due to the practical interpretation of Christian religion which meets these men at a point of need. As a rule, the majority of men of non-evangelical faiths who affiliate with the Association are not loyal adherents to their own religious beliefs. Their danger is materialism and infidelity. While the Association should not adopt any proselyting program among men of such faiths, there should nevertheless be no compromise in city, railroad, industrial or any other type of work in clearly demonstrating the Christian principles for which the Association stands.

"The writer does not believe that there is any call for the Association to modify its membership basis or its message in order to please the occasional man of Catholic faith who demands recognition as a voting member. The Roman Catholic church as a whole is an out-spoken opponent of the Young Men's Christian Association. It is evident that the Roman Catholic hierarchy will do anything in its power to keep the adherents from the membership or influence of Protestant organizations. While there are individual priests in certain localities who are wise enough to conform to public sentiment, and who therefore recognize the value of the Association to the community at large, they know full well that any attempt on their part to identify themselves officially with the Association would not be approved by the higher officials of the church.

"The Young Men's Christian Association has little to gain and much to lose by any attempt to compromise this question. Strong and sensible men of the Roman Catholic faith will respect the Association all the more if it is true to its objective and principles as a Christian, evangelical movement."

"If the Christian church were what she ought to be, and could be, for one single day, the world would be converted before nightfall."—Chas. Kingsley.

THE POWER OF PRAYER

"Prayer is the most potential thing in the world. It is not that prayer is anything, but rather that God is everything. For prayer lays hold on God, or, more accurately, permits God to lay hold on man, so that it brings God into human affairs as the Infinite One. And when the Almighty is in the midst of things he proves himself to be the invincible, all-conquering God.

"So then the man who prays is the most potential man in the world. It is not that man is anything, but rather that God is everything. For the man who prays puts himself in his true place as a suppliant, and God in his true place as the Benignant and Beneficent One. And when God's grace is thus set free it flows earthward in floods of blessing so that the desert places of life are made to rejoice and blossom as the rose.

"What we need then in this world is prayer. And what is necessary to obtain prayer is to secure men who will pray. Not men who will think about prayer, or will talk about prayer, or will purpose some time or other to take time for prayer, but who will now and continually pray. Theorizing and good intentions do not move the arm that moves the world. What does this is nothing else or less than sacrificial prayer. 'This kind goeth not out save by prayer and fasting!' "—Henry W. Frost in Episcopal Recorder.

HUMILITY

Humility is perfect quietness of heart. It is to have no trouble. It is never to be fretted, or vexed, or irritated, or sore, or disappointed. It is to expect nothing, to wonder at nothing that is done to me, to feel nothing done against me. It is to be at rest when nobody praises me, and when I am blamed or despised. It is to have a blessed home in the Lord, where I can go in and shut the door, and kneel to my Father in secret, and am at peace as in a deep sea of calmness, when all around and above is trouble. —Andrew Murray.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S BIBLE

The Bible which fed the soul of Abraham Lincoln in the Kentucky log cabin of his boyhood was one of the cheap little Bibles imported from England by vote of the American Congress in 1777.

Lincoln loved the Bible above all other books and once paid the following tribute to it:

"I am profitably engaged in reading the Bible. Take all of this book upon reason that you can and the balance by faith and you will live and die a better man. In regard to the Great Book, I have only to say that it is the best book which God has given to men."

G. Campbell Morgan on Preaching

By Rev. J. W. Weddell, D. D.

Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, D. D., of England, whose gift as an expounder of the Bible is well known, has been giving a series of expository and evangelistic discourses in various centers of the United States this winter. In connection with one of the series in Cleveland, O., he met the ministers at a noon-day luncheon, where he spoke on preaching. Our correspondent, Rev. John Weaver Weddell, D. D., was present and captured his free off-hand remarks which are here set down with the permission of the speaker as given.—Editors.

YOU ask me about preaching and its place in the work of the ministry today, and it is the one theme on which I am glad to respond. I regard it as absolutely paramount in the evangel of the hour. From the outset I have sought simply and solely, for myself, to be a preacher of the gospel. I began forty-three years ago, a very young man, at Staffordshire, England, going from there to Birmingham afterward to New Court Church in London, afterward to Westminster Chapel, where I would be today if impaired health had not compelled the relinquishment of my loved pastorate. There were two years of eclipse, I may say, when I was fighting the specters of the mind. I thank God I was enabled to keep my mouth shut in those days. It was thirty years since that I received ordination in the Congregational ministry. My aim from first to last has been to open the Word and proclaim it to the people.

Has It Passed Its Prime?

Some people say that preaching has passed its prime, that worship has the larger place today. But when did preaching cease to be worship. You are worshiping when you are hearing God's voice out of the Book as much as when you are making prayerful response, however fervent. Others say that the printed page has largely set the pulpit aside. The pen is mighty we must admit, but the human voice is mightier, when the Spirit attends. We want the message plus the man. Joseph Parker used to say at the close of his great afternoon discourses at City Temple, "You can have this sermon at the door for a penny." Arthur Mursell sitting under the pulpit called out one day, "But it cannot give us the thunder and the man in the pulpit." Still others say that the pastor's work interferes, he has too much to do. Do not let it interfere. There is important work connected with the pastorate which a minister must look after, but the man of God who lets this draw him aside from his legitimate pulpit preparation, loses his grip upon the people and his true vocation from the Lord. In all my ministry I have insisted on my five morning hours in my study with the Word of God, and never in all that time have I allowed a marriage or even a funeral to call me away. One has a good pastor's assistant in the lady of the manse to prevent needless interruptions to these sacred hours of study. "While thy servant was busy here and there the thing was gone." In God's name do not permit it.

Its Nature

May I speak a word about the Nature of preaching. There are two leading words for it in the Greek; Evangelizo and Kerusso. The one means telling the good news of the gospel as a teacher. The other signifies pronouncement of the message as a herald. The first explains and amplifies with long-suffering and love. The second with swift sharp utterance declares "Thus saith the Lord." It takes both to fill out the gracious content of God-given preaching. Let the pulpit proclaim the message as revealed in the Word. Be sure of the truth, and then speak with authority. Do not take your questions or doubts into the pulpit. There is a place for discussion of such in the close fraternity of the ministers' conference. We had such a gathering at Westminster, and we had two rules. No paper read ex cathedra; no reporter allowed. It was for free, frank interchange of opinion and growing thought. But when you come into the pulpit speak only the Word clearly revealed. And be careful of the way you do it. Dale, of England, said one time in my hearing that Moody was the only man who seemed to him to have the right to preach about hell. And when asked why, he said, "Because he always preached it with tears in his voice."

Its Method

That brings me to speak of the method. In a word preaching consists of two things: bringing out the doctrine of Scripture—applying it to the life. We must not only get it out but get it in. The truth must be lived. I am free to say it, "You may be as orthodox as the devil and yet be lost." I agree with Dr. Lyman Abbott when he affirms that religion is the life of God in the soul of man and theology is what you think about it. To get creed into conduct and bring truth to trial and triumph is our business as preachers, and it is an art in itself. Harold says the war has produced no great prophet, but let me tell you it was the village preacher that held England to its great task in the recent war and that saved the day.

Somehow we must get the people to realize the mind of God, and send them away from the church saying, "That is it, that is it. God is there!" Other worldliness is at times descried. But unless some men are bringing the people the mind of God, we will sink into the pit. The world has not changed in its needs and yearnings. We must have God.

Written Sermons

Use manuscripts if you can do it well. I never hear J. H. Jowett, my successor at Westminster, with his notes, but that I say, "There is the way to preach." But I could not do it, you know well enough, and the most of us serve our day and generation best by digging out the truth, and then expressing it freely and face lifted to face in extempore utterance. It gives you also a chance to declare the God-sent thought that comes to you as you speak. But do not try to ramble over the passage and call it exposition. Have a clearly defined course of thought drawn from the Word. And work, work. The Bible requires it. Dr. Dawson said, "A good deal of bad theology is due to suppressed perspiration." Study the Word. Don't be satisfied with what you learned in the seminary. Search it out for yourself. Be ready for new revelations to your mind, and then tell it out. That is the preaching that this and every age demands and for which the world is waiting today.

The Critics on Deuteronomy

A Note from Dr. Thomas

The Editor,
The Christian Workers Magazine,
Dear Mr. Editor:

In your "Editorial Notes" for November, the statement is made that "Deuteronomy mentions one sanctuary only, and the early historical books speak of many." This is exactly what the higher critics say, and yet for several years past Mr. Harold M. Wiener has pointed out that the statement is only possible by the confusion between "sanctuary" and "house." The word "sanctuary" is ambiguous and may refer to an altar or to a house, and Mr. Wiener contends that the higher critical position is really based on this ambiguity. He points out that in the book of the covenant, as the critics term it, there was a plurality of altars (Ex. 20:24-26) but only one house (Ex. 23:19; 34:26), and that the same line is taken in Deuteronomy where there is both a plurality of altars and yet the implication of only one house (16:21, 22).

It seems to me that this confusion between "altar" and "house" as expressed by the ambiguous word "sanctuary" should be strongly emphasized in order to show the groundlessness of the higher critical contention in regard to Deuteronomy.

Yours sincerely,
W. H. Griffith Thomas.

Germantown, Pa.

[We are aware of Wiener's argument, but admit that it was not in mind when the editorial note was written. Perhaps this is explained by the particular object in view, from which a reference to his argument would have diverted us. Nor have we ever been quite as satisfied with his argument as Dr. Thomas seems to be, though his confidence in it is reassuring and will cause us to consider it again.—Editors.]

A GAIN FOR CORRECT SPEECH

A facetious contemporary informs its readers that as a result of "Better-English Week" in the schools, "bad English is receiving some mighty swats."

The temptation to be jocular over a commendable effort at reform in boys' and girls' speech is natural enough—too natural, indeed. It is a part of the habit of the time.

The newspapers are responsible for much of it, or at least faithfully reflect it. The headline artificer sets the pace, the reporter finds in slang the necessary color to his story, and the editorial writer is not at all free from it. Language would indeed be a poor vehicle for the expression of thought without it — at least of current thought.

It is "Better-English Week." What we started out to inquire was as to whether or not it is also "No-Slang Week." Not that we object to slang, in the right place, as we have intimated; but it may well be criticized when it garnishes conversation or writing to the exclusion of simple and lucid language.

Without slang or profanity, or both, many men are not able to say ten consecutive words; and without slang—some women ditto.

But for our part, we would as soon hear a good round oath as the annoying, nauseous, and senseless "Say!" or "Listen!" of many women, or the "I'll say it is," of men, women and children. Does anybody know why he or she says it, unless it is because he is vacant of thoughts?

If a "No-Slang Week" shall follow in the schools, and if it shall eliminate such silly words and phrases, in whole or in part, a great gain for coherence and saneness in mere talking by young and old will have been made.—The Oregonian (Portland).

Life Lessons from the Book of Proverbs

Proverbs 20:1-15

The book of Proverbs, together with Job and Ecclesiastes, constitute what is known as the "wisdom literature" of the Hebrew people in the Bible. The book of Proverbs contains a multitude of separate sayings embodying the highest wisdom. Most of these sayings originated with Solomon and are the chief result of the wisdom promised to and bestowed upon him at the beginning of his reign (I Kings 3:12). The Scofield Bible describes the book of Proverbs as a collection of sententious sayings of divine wisdom, applicable to the earthly conditions of the people of God.

A glimpse at the scope and variety of these wise sayings is afforded us in the verses of our lesson. The mockery and deceitfulness of wine (v. 1); the folly of provocation and strife (vv. 2, 3); the dire results of laziness (v. 4); the beneficial results of understanding (v. 5); the rareness of a faithful man (v. 6); the blessedness of the upright man (v. 7), etc. through this and other chapters.

According to Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, the first verse of the book constitutes the title-page—"The Proverbs of Solomon, the son of David, King of Israel." The next six verses are occupied with the preface in which the purpose of the book and the method of the writer are clearly stated. The preface ends with the fundamental affirmation of the Hebrew philosophy—"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge; but fools despise wisdom and instruction."

Among the great lessons of the book are these:

1. Right relations with God (3:5, 6). As another has well said, "No man can begin to be wise until his life is properly related to the all-wise God, whose gracious provision in Christ is sufficient for all needs." Turning to Him as in 1:23, results in the outpouring of the Spirit from Him, and the making known of His words unto us.

2. The old lesson concerning the maintenance of good works (3:27, 28). Here in this book of wisdom, as in the later revelation of the New Testament, it follows the exercise of faith and trust in the Lord.

3. Another important lesson concerns the matter of perseverance (4:25-27). Look at the verses carefully, "Let thine eyes look right on, and let thine eyelids look straight before thee. Ponder the path of thy feet, and let all thy ways be established. Turn not to the right hand nor to the left: remove thy foot from evil." These three are the dominant lessons of the book, namely: Right relations with God; right relations with man; these relations continually sustained by the grace of perseverance.

Patience and Its Rewards

I Corinthians 13:4-7

The Scripture lesson takes us to the great classic on Christian love found in 1 Corinthians 13. Patience is so closely akin to love that the two words could be often used interchangeably without doing violence to the truth or sentiment expressed. Verse 4 is an illustration—"Patience suffereth long and is kind." What better description of this virtue could be found?

The kind of patience here mentioned is rare. It is the product, not of fallen human nature, but of the divine Spirit dwelling within human hearts. This is not the "grin and bear it" kind of attitude which passes for patience in the world's judgment, but rather that quality which the apostle has in mind when he wrote of "patience and long-suffering with joyfulness" (Col. 1:11). For this kind, we must, indeed, be "strengthened with all might according to his glorious power."

That which follows in the remaining verses is equally true of patience, as of love. Patience does not behave itself unseemly, because it seeks not its own, is not provoked when the plaudits of the world are withheld, but persistently goes on its way, bearing, believing, hoping and enduring.

Patience like love is the product of faith. Faith is the root of which love and patience are the fruit. As the root lays hold of unseen forces, so does faith lay hold of the unseen resources of the redeeming Christ, the fruit of which is seen in Galatians 5:22, 23.

The rewards of patience are apparent in achievement and character. The world's progress in knowledge and invention is traceable to this quality of patience. Stevenson and the locomotive; Morse and the telegraph; Bell and the telephone; Edison and the phonograph; Marconi and wireless telegraphy; all these speak of a patient endurance with beneficial and lasting results, both to the inventors and the world at large.

The rewards of patience in the realm of character are just as pronounced. "Let patience have her perfect work," says the apostle, "that ye may be perfect and entire, lacking nothing." In other words the perfect character is the result and the reward of the development of patience. Refining influences are set in operation by a patient striving and waiting to reach the goal of our endeavors, or to achieve some great and worthy end set before us.

Both in the revelation through nature and through His Word, God calls us to patience and its rewards. Take for example the words of James 5:7, 8—"Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient; establish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." The world is full of injustice and the consequent suffering by the helpless makes usindignant and we say, "Does God care?" Yes; God cares and bids us patiently wait the development of His plan so that His will may be wrought out in our development through patient waiting, and ultimately His glory be manifested in the earth. "For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise" (Heb. 10:36).

Everyday Courtesies

I Peter 3:8-12

The common courtesies are becoming decidedly uncommon in our busy, bustling age. What a rare thing it is, for example, to find a street-car conductor courteous enough to give to passengers proper direction concerning the best way to reach their destination, especially if the inquirer's speech has a foreign accent or is somewhat broken! How pleasant an experience it is to find a policeman who is obliging as well as officious! How happy one feels in finding an usher who is considerate rather than commanding! What a thrill one gets when in a crowded department store he finds the floorman and elevator man courteous and kind! Comparatively speaking these experiences are rare. Notwithstanding all the talk about brotherhood, the thing itself is conspicuous by its absence. An extreme case of need will excite sympathy, leading to some measure of consideration, but consideration and courtesy, as a rule and principle in the daily life, are not much in evidence.

Courtesy appears in our Scripture lesson as a command. It follows in logical sequence the unity, compassion, love and pity that precede it. Where these four are not found, courtesy will not abide. It is the product of love, and love is the fruit of the indwelling Spirit of God. There is apart from this a superficial courtesy which manifests itself in external matters and has its own reward. But the courtesy enjoined by the apostle is a deeper and more abiding quality. It belongs to the heart life and as Dickens said, "A man can never be a true gentleman in manner until he is a true gentleman at heart." On its negative side courtesy is described in our lesson as "not rendering evil for evil," but positively rendering good for evil, blessing and cheering other lives through the blessing that we inherit from God. This is faith working by love. On this principle one can avoid conflicts and misunderstandings, and thereby as the apostle says "see good days," not involving himself in troubles which make life a burden. There is an old Parisian proverb which reads "He that planteth thorns shall not gather roses." It is common knowledge that evil speaking and "railing for railing" produces results which burden many lives and provoke endless controversy and conflict, while a courteous answer is productive of peace and good-will. According to verses 11 and 12 these are the things to seek definitely and continually. The favor of God rests upon all who do this, but His face is against them that do otherwise.

Courtesy is due to all, the old, the young, the poor, the stranger, and the weak. This claim can be easily met if we are rightly related to God in Christ, and properly adjusted to the Holy Spirit day by day. Then the joy of the Lord is our strength and we do not become weary in well doing.

The Country's Need of Christ

Acts 4:11, 12; Romans 10:12-15

"Jesus is the world's only Saviour. He alone can bring order out of social revolution. He alone can democratize industry. He alone can destroy racial hatreds. He alone can perfect peace. Civilization's ultimatum is Christ or chaos * * * The supreme business of the church is to reveal Christ, to introduce Christ to the world. Here will the church be judged. By the success with which she demonstrates this program will it be measured for or against her." These are the words of Dr. Daniel A. Poling in a sermon reported by the Christian Herald.

To bring Christ to the world is undoubtedly the task of the church, and the only task. Bringing the world to Christ is another matter which the biblical revelation of God nowhere requires of us. The world will ultimately be brought to Christ, for every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, but that will not come to pass in this present age which extends from Christ's first coming to His second. This age will close in judgment, preparatory to the establishment of God's Kingdom and the doing of His will on earth as in heaven.

America's need of Christ is appallingly great. Under a surface of civilized veneer, there is a deep-seated moral corruption which nothing can displace except the regenerating power of God. Only as one becomes a partaker of the divine nature can he escape the corruption that is in the world through lust (2 Pet. 1:4). This corruption may be covered by civilized agencies and restrained by civil law, but its power can be overcome only by a translation out of the kingdom of darkness into the Kingdom of the Son of His love (Col. 1:13; Acts 26:18).

Practical and Perplexing Questions

Answered by the Editors

R. W. R., Shamokin, Pa.—You inquire as to the meaning of "baptism," in Matthew 28:19. It may be defined as the symbolic act in the use of water whereby a believer in Jesus as Lord is officially inducted into membership among His followers.

D. H. D.—(1) From the beginning the animal kingdom was made subject to man. We have no direct evidence as to when animals became ferocious towards man. It is supposed to have occurred when the curse fell upon the world with the beginning of sin.

(2) In millennial times, when the nature of ferocious animals is changed, the curse also will be removed from the earth.

H. P. W., Holmesville, O.—You probably have reference to certain books mentioned in the Bible, but which never were a part of the Bible. These lost books are "The Book of the Wars of the Lord" (Num. 21:14), and "The Book of Jasher" (Josh. 10:13; 2 Sam. 1:18). There are also eleven additional books referred to by name as having been used in composing 1 and 2 Chronicles. (See 1 Chron. 29:29; 9:1; 2 Chron. 9:29; 12:15; 13:22; 20:34.)

O. J., Fertile, Minn.—The eating of blood as you affirm, was strictly forbidden in the Old Testament. Following the Flood the commandment was given to the race through Noah (Gen. 9:4) and the law of Moses forbade it (Lev. 17: 10,11). It would seem also that the commandment to abstain from blood in Acts 18:20-29 is still in force. The reasons for giving the law not having been changed, we must conclude that the law itself has not been abrogated.

G. E. B., Watertown, Minn.—(1) We know of no passage in Isaiah which teaches positively that the Jews, as a nation, are to be saved in one day. Isaiah 66:8 may raise the question.

(2) Concerning the salvation of the Jews who have died during the present dispensation, we would say that those who have accepted Christ as the Messiah are certainly saved. Those who have rejected Him are lost. Many Jews, however, know nothing about the gospel. Would not this latter class be judged by the law of Moses? If a "doer of the law," there is certainly hope for him (Rom. 2:25).

C. P. M., Knoxville, Tenn.—It is scarcely conceivable that the marriage supper of the Lamb will be so private that no wedding guests will be present. It will be a quiet affair, indeed, if only the Bridegroom and bride are there. Some are of the opinion that these guests are represented by the wise virgins of the parable in the twenty-fifth of Matthew, and perhaps also by the invited guests in the parable of the Marriage Feast. (Matthew 22.) Let us think of the marriage supper of the Lamb as the greatest event of the near future, an event in which both heaven and earth will rejoice, all except those who are not written in the Lamb's book of life.

(Anonymous).—We must be willing to endure persecution for the truth's sake, but the truth must be preached in love. No doctrine, however precious, is to be preached out of proportion to other doctrines. We should be wise not to arouse needless opposition, in order to give no occasion for the weaker brethren to stumble. The minister of Christ should preach not only sound doctrine, but the whole doctrine. A minister who cannot get a church because of some one doctrine which be believes and teaches, better first of all examine himself. Possibly he may have been unwise in over-emphasizing that doctrine. Then in humility of spirit let him trust God to bring the impossible to pass.

E. C., Columbus, O.—Christians observe the first day of the week instead of the seventh in order to commemorate the day when Christ arose from the dead. Both days seem to have been observed by the apostles, but as the Church became preponderately Gentile, the first day of the week became established as the day of worship and service for Christians. No special date can be assigned to the change. The first day was observed from the beginning and it gradually became fixed in the custom of the Church. That God's blessing has rested upon this custom is most evident. Also it is worthy of consideration that so many Spirit-filled men and women through the Christian centuries have observed this day in preference to the seventh. (See Bible Problems Explained, by Dr. Gray).

W. P., Marksville, Ont.—With reference to the fossil of man recently found, which some scientists claim to be over 600,000 years old, we have no information to furnish you. We would suggest that you make inquiry of the Nelson Loose-leaf Encyclopaedia, whose address is Thomas Nelson & Sons, New York City.

We may say in general, however, that such claims upon the part of scientists are not uncommon. So far as the descendants of Adam are concerned, there is a decided swing of the pendulum back to the shorter chronology which places the creation of Adam about 4,000 B. C., as you well know. It is conceded that the Bible chronology does not exclude the possibility of a Preadamite race. No archeological discoveries need cause us any alarm for they could not conflict with the Bible teaching about the antiquity of the Adamic race, if the Bible account be correctly interpreted.

R. R., Munden, Kan.—(1) We are not familiar with any verse in the Bible that speaks of Japanese aggression, neither do we know the Bible name for Japan. It is possible she may be included in Revelation 16:12,13. The time referred to is still future, when the Euphrates is dried up in order to make way for the coming of the "Sunlight Kingdom." It may be significant, but not greatly so, that Japan is sometimes called the "Sunrise Kingdom."

(2) With reference to Isaiah 28-33, we would say that the references are to the past and future rather than to the present. The prophecies of the destruction of Jerusalem have reference to the destruction of the city by Nebuchadnezzar; the references to Assyria and to Egypt belong also to the past; but in the midst of the prophecies of the coming destruction of Jerusalem and the punishment of the people are glorious descriptions of the millennium when their King shall reign in righteousness and rejoice over His people. These are all future.

J. MacF., Dubuque, Ia.—(1) Your desire to know the condition of those after death is natural, but not much is revealed in Scripture. Your questions presumably have reference to Christians, "the dead in Christ." When our bodies die our spirits go at once into the presence of God. The apostle Paul speaks of death as being a departure to be with Christ (Philippians 1:23). Paul longs for this experience as something "far better" than present experiences. How this could be, apart from conscious existence and the capacity of the enjoyments of fellowship with Christ, we cannot conceive. The ability to recognize and to enjoy Christ would naturally lead us to believe that this enjoyment would extend to fellow-Christians who are in heaven and to all other of heaven's inhabitants.

(2) That spirits have substance, we can scarcely deny, but the spiritual bodies of which Paul speaks in 1 Corinthians 15 are not assumed until the time of the first resurrection. "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." The spirits of Christians which are now with Christ, will be united with the spiritual body at the time of the resurrection. The identical bones for material remains of our dead bodies are not to be raised. These are sown as natural bodies, but raised as spiritual bodies.

H. H., Keenesburg, Colo.—(1) With reference to Job's complaint (Job 14:5) we must not take too seriously, or as infallible, the statement of a discouraged and suffering saint. The record is inspired but not necessarily every human statement within it. Yet what Job says is literally true, if we consider the context of the verse. Job is speaking of man in general and of the brevity and uncertainty of human life. These facts, or "bounds," no man has power to change. Death is certain. Humanly speaking no one can prolong his life indefinitely. Sin is at work in the body and its wages is death.

(2) Job 7:17 states what is a matter of common observation. By reason of their exceeding wickedness and foolishness men all around us are shortening their lives. The glutton and the sot are notorious instances. The case you mention, that of the carelessness of either doctor or nurse in the giving of wrong medicine which caused the death of a patient is sad indeed. There is nothing in the Christian religion that encourages carelessness or that relieves us of the responsibility of our acts.

(3) Yes. God knows when we are going to die, the very day; but God's foreknowledge of that event does not take it entirely out of our hands. It does not require us to commit suicide, nor to become careless nor negligent, nor convert us into mere fatalists. The Christian who is in God's will does not die before God intends, nor before his time.

(4) Christ's glorified body was His human body glorified. This can be true only of the second person of the Trinity.

(5) It is not necessary for you to think of God as different from Christ. Indeed, you should not. Christ was God manifested in the flesh. In Him dwelt the fulness of the Godhead bodily.

(6) Your meaning is not clear as to "God's judgment in David's time." God's judgments are for the world; God's chastenings are for His people.

A. T. H., Philadelphia, Pa.—The apocryphal books have never had a place in the Hebrew Bible, altho found in the Greek and Latin translations. They originated during the second and third centuries, B. C., at the period when the Hebrew Scriptures were translated for the first time into Greek. They emanated for the most part from the Jewish colony in the city of Alexandria where the above-mentioned translation was made. This translation is known as the Septuagint version. It included at first the apocryphal books but in later copies these books were excluded. As the books of the Hebrew Bible came to be regarded as canonical and authoritative the apocryphal books ceased to be copied by the scribes.

Jerome, the most accomplished scholar of the fourth century, classified as apocryphal all books found in the Septuagint which its translators did not find in the Hebrew Bible, nevertheless, the Latin translations included them in their versions of the Scriptures.

At the time of the Reformation the Protestant churches adopted as their Old Testament Scriptures, the books that had formed the Jewish canon and threw out all other books found in the Latin Vulgate and the Greek Septuagint.

The Unveiling of Jesus Christ to John on the Isle of Patmos

Revelation 1

Golden Text:—"Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and forever."—Hebrews 13:8.

This and the next lesson are from the Revelation, the book which contains Christ's last message to man. It is passing strange that such a book should be so grossly neglected, since a special blessing is promised those who read, hear, and keep its sayings (v. 3). The author is John the apostle, the son of Zebedee. He calls himself by this name some four times in this book. The book was written from Patmos, a small, rocky island in the Aegean Sea, about 96 A. D. This date has the support of the early Church Fathers, and internal evidence.

I. The Introduction (vv. 1-3).

1. The Title of the Book (v. 1)—"The Revelation (unveiling) of Jesus Christ." This does not mean the making known to Jesus Christ some secret, but the unveiling of His person. The revelation of Jesus Christ, then, refers to His personal appearing in glory to judge the world and establish His Kingdom. The word "apocalypse" translated "revelation" signifies, according to New Testament usage, the unveiling of a person (2 Thess. 1:6-10; 1 Pet. 1:7). The theme of the book is Christ's second coming, His personal, visible appearance in glory (vv. 1, 7, 10). It is a failure to grasp the central theme that has wrought such confusion in the interpretation of this book and robbed the people of its blessings and power.

2. To Whom Made Known (vv. 1, 2). To His servant John, "to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass." It is peculiarly a servant's book. Those who are really His servants have no trouble in understanding the meaning of its message. Trouble arises when the professor in the theological chair attempts to interpret according to his own theory what God should have said and meant. John bore record of the Word of God, and of the testimony of Jesus Christ and all things he saw. As a good servant he recorded what he heard and saw, not merely what he thought.

3. Benediction for Those Who Read, Hear, and Keep the Sayings of the Book (v. 3). It must be possible to understand these sayings, else the promise is meaningless, for it is impossible to keep those things which cannot be understood.

II. The Salutation (vv. 4-8)—Grace and Peace.

1. To Whom (v. 4)—the Seven Churches in Asia. These were historical churches then existing in Asia Minor. Seven, the number of completion, suggests the idea that this number is symbolic of all the churches at that age, and from the messages to these churches found in the second and third chapters we legitimately infer that they are representative of the periods of church history throughout her course.

2. From Whom (v. 4.) (1) From Him which was, is, and is to come; (2) from the seven spirits which are before the throne (v. 4). By the seven spirits is meant the Holy Spirit in His sevenfold plentitude. His sevenfold office is set forth in Isaiah 11:2; also in the Gospel of John (John 16:8; 3:6; 4:14; 7:37, 38; 14:16, 26; 16:12). (3) From Jesus Christ (vv. 5, 7). While presenting Christ as the gracious Redeemer, John's prophetic eye caught the vision of the coming One in glory, exclaiming, "Behold, he cometh" (v. 7), declaring that the coming One was the Alpha and Omega (v. 8).

III. The Vision of Glory (vv. 9-18).

1. The Seven Golden Lamp-Stands (v. 12). These lamp-stands or candle-sticks are the seven churches (v. 20). The churches are presented under this figure because they are the light holders in this time of the world's darkness.

2. The Son of Man in the Midst of the Lampstands (vv. 13-18). The vision shows us Christ in the midst of the churches, indicating that the church only gives forth light when Christ is made the central figure. Note the glorious description of the Son of Man:

(1) Clothed with a garment down to the foot (v. 13). This is a robe of royalty as well as of the priest (see Isa. 22:21) and signifies His right to judge and to rule, as well as to offer sacrifice. Note that His girdle is about the breasts, signifying His fidelity and affection.

(2) Head and hair white as wool (v. 14; cf. Dan. 7:19, 20). This has a twofold significance—purity and eternity. The One who stands here as a Judge is the One who was, and is, and is to come. As a Judge He stands forth with unsullied character.

(3) Eyes a flame of fire (v. 14). This suggests His infallible knowledge; He is able to see through and through, even detecting hidden thoughts.

(4) Feet like burnished brass (v. 15), indicating that as Judge and King He comes with irresistible power.

(5) His voice as the sound of many waters (v. 15). This suggests that His voice of judgment will be outside of man's control. All excuses of man will be swept aside by His resistless word.

(6) Seven stars in His right hand (v. 16). According to verse 20, stars mean the angels or messengers of the churches, perhaps pastors or representatives sent forth from the churches to comfort John in his lonely exile. The stars are in His right hand, indicating the high honor given to the minister; he lies in the right hand of Jesus Christ, hears His message and then speaks it out. This dignity in large measure is for the Sunday-school teacher and Christian worker.

(7) Out of His mouth went a sharp two-edged sword (v. 16). Observe that this is not a hand sword, but a mouth sword—"The word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him" (John 12:48); "The word of God is sharper than any two-edged sword" (Heb. 4:12). The sword has two edges, indicating its double action, always condemning the evil and approving the good and excellent.

(8) His countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength (v. 16). The effect of sunshine is healthful and joyous to some things, while it is death and hardening to others. The sunshine of God's love cheers some while it hardens others; the gospel message converts some and hardens others; the manifestation of the glorified King will be hailed with delight by those who have an affection for Him, and will create consternation and dismay to those who do not love Him.

IV. The Command to Write and the Interpretation of the Vision (vv. 19, 20).

In this command are indicated the divisions of the book:

1. The Things Which Thou Hast Seen (chap. 1).
2. The Things Which Are (chaps. 2, 3).
3. The Things Which Shall Be Hereafter, or After These Things (chaps. 4-22).

The lamp-stands are the churches and the stars are the angels of the churches.

John's Picture of Worship in Heaven

Revelation 7:9-17

Golden Text:—"Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honor, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen."—Revelation 7:12.

I. The Worshipers (vv. 9-14).

1. Who They are (vv. 9, 11). (1) Redeemed men (v. 9). They are mainly Gentiles—"of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues." They are those to whom the "gospel of the kingdom" has been preached by converted Israelites (Matt. 24:14). In the first part of chapter seven we saw God sealing His chosen ones from Israel. They were sealed with the seal of God in their foreheads, which doubtless means the supernatural endowment of the Holy Spirit (Eph. 1:13). The prophet Joel foretold that wonderful outpouring of the Holy Spirit in the last days (Joel 2:28-32). While this was partially fulfilled on the day of Pentecost, its realization is still in the future (Acts 2:15-21). This outpouring is for the equipment of the Jews for their divinely ordained mission, namely, to preach the gospel of the Kingdom to the whole world. When God sends forth the 144,000 Jews with the unction of the Holy Spirit, an innumerable multitude from all nations will receive Christ, the slain Lamb for their redemption. In Acts 15: 13-18 the divine program is outlined (a) "the taking out of the Gentiles a people for his name" (v. 14). This is now being carried on through the preaching of the gospel. (b) The return of the Lord and the rehabilitation of the Davidic throne (v. 16). This will be the next step in the unfolding of God's plan. (c) "The residue of men and all the Gentiles" (v. 17). This residue of men and all the Gentiles constitute this innumerable multitude from all nations and kindreds.

(2) All the angels (v. 11). These angels endorse this ascription of praise offered by these redeemed men by saying "Amen." The angels are closely associated with God in His administration. No doubt they had intimate connection with these redeemed ones in their salvation. Angels are ministering spirits sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation (Heb. 1:14). Perhaps they shall teach the redeemed what to say in their ascription of praise (v. 12).

2. Whence Came These Redeemed? (vv. 13, 14). They came out of the great tribulation (v. 14). After the rapture of the church (1 Thess. 4:13-18), awful days of suffering and trial shall come upon the world. This period of suffering is called the great tribulation (2 Thess. 2:7, 8). It is the time of sorrow when the Antichrist shall hold sway; such days as were not before nor shall be after, which if not shortened no flesh could be saved (Matt. 24:15, 21, 22; cf. Dan. 7:8; 9:26, 27).

3. What They Say (vv. 10, 12). (1) Salvation to our God and the Lamb (v. 10). They ascribe their salvation to God through the sacrifice of the Lamb, Jesus Christ. Those who have experienced salvation do not talk of salvation through character or their own sacrifice, even the sacrifice of the brave soldier, but salvation through the blood of the Lamb which taketh away the sins of the world. (2) "Blessing." They acknowledge that all blessings come from Him. (3) "Glory." They acknowledge Him as the glorious one and the one to whom all glory should be given. (4) "Wisdom." He is infinitely wise and all wisdom comes from Him. If any man lack wisdom let him go to Him for it (James 1:5). (5) "Thanksgiving." Their hearts go out to Him in thanksgiving, because salvation was provided by Him and wrought out by Christ. (6) "Honor." Their hearts went out to Him in high esteem; they attached dignity to Him. (7) "Power and might." They recognized that all power inhered in Him and desired that He be recognized as such for ever and ever.

II. The Blessedness of the Worshipers (vv. 13-17).

1. They are Before God's Throne (vv. 9, 15). They are in heaven and near the throne of God. Jesus Christ is now preparing mansions for those who shall go to heaven (John 14:1-3). He has already been nearly two thousand years in making preparation. What unspeakable glory and blessedness there must be for those who are permitted to be before God's throne!

2. Clothed with White Robes (vv. 9, 14). Their white robes suggest their character. They have been made such in the blood of the Lamb. Only those who have white robes can enter heaven. The only way for a sinner to be made ready for heaven is through the blood of Christ.

> What can wash away my stain?
>   Nothing but the blood of Jesus.
> What can make me whole again?
>   Nothing but the blood of Jesus.

3. They Bear Palm Branches (v. 9). The significance of the palm is found in the use that the Jews made of it at the Feast of Tabernacles This was their harvest feast. It was a time of great joy, because it represented the gathered harvest. The bearers of the palm branches will experience the blessedness of not only being in heaven, but of enjoying rewards for their work on earth. Let us see that our works are such as shall yield an abundant harvest, that we may have joy and not sorrow in that day.

4. They Serve God Day and Night (v. 15). Heaven is not a place of idleness, or altogether of singing God's praises, but a place where real, vital service is rendered to God. The efficiency of that service will be according to the definite preparation which we have made here.

5. God Dwells among Them (v. 15). To get to heaven at all would be truly blessed, but to be there and have God to dwell among us will be wonderful. Those who receive Him now and give Him the proper place in their hearts will have His presence forever.

6. Hunger no More nor Thirst (v. 16). Here life is one continuous round of hungering and thirsting, eating and drinking. In heaven we shall neither hunger nor thirst, for Jesus Christ, the Lamb, shall feed us. The straits and necessities of life will then be over. We shall enter upon that rest which remains for the people of God. What abiding satisfaction that will be!

7. Neither Shall the Sun Light on Them nor any Heat (v. 17).

8. God shall Wipe Away all Tears from Their Eyes (v. 17). Life here is one continuous round of sorrowing and crying. In heaven all that will be over, because God shall wipe away all tears. It will be better than the mother's wiping away the tears from the eyes of her children, because in such case they are only wiped away to return again, but when God wipes away the tears He will dry up the very source of sorrow and grief.

Review: The Life-Work of Peter and John

Golden Text:—"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen." Matthew 28:19, 20.

Selection for Reading, Revelation 21:21-22:5.

The review of the quarter's lessons can be profitably made to center in the service of Peter and John, or perhaps better, the activity and power of the risen and ascended Christ manifest in the service of Peter and John.

Lesson 1. Peter Preaches at Pentecost (Acts 2).

Peter proves that Jesus Christ arose from the dead, ascended on high, and poured forth the Holy Spirit upon the Church; the evidence of it was the unusual behavior of the disciples.

Lesson 2. Peter and John Heal a Lame Man (Acts 3).

This remarkable miracle wrought in the name of Jesus Christ proved that though the Jews had crucified Him He was now alive and continued His work through the disciples.

Lesson 3. Peter and John Witnessing of the Risen Christ before the Sanhedrin (Acts 4).

As a result the Sanhedrin took knowledge that they had been with Jesus, that is, His life and work were being reproduced in and through them. Being with Christ will: (1) Give an experimental knowledge of Him, so that the life will remind one of Jesus. (2) Take away the fear of man. Peter who a little while ago quailed before a Jewish maid, is undaunted before the august Sanhedrin. (3) Opens a man's lips. Peter said, "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard." What the heart feels, the mouth must speak out.

Lesson 4. The Risen Christ Vindicating His Church (Acts 1:5-16).

He passed judgment upon Ananias and Saphira for their hypocritical pretense of generosity. The living Christ knows the intents of the heart; nothing can be concealed from Him.

Lesson 5. The Living Christ Saving Men and Women in Samaria (Acts 8:4-25). His sanction of the preaching of the gospel by Philip in Samaria is shown by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Peter and John were sent by the mother church to confirm the work.

Lesson 6. The Living Christ Healing the Sick and Raising the Dead (Acts 9:32-43).

That Christ is alive is proved by the vanquishing of the dreadful malady of palsy and the retenanting of a corpse by the departed soul. Nothing like this had been known since the days of Christ.

Lesson 7. The Risen Christ Revealing Himself to a Gentile (Acts 10).

Peter testifies to Cornelius that Jesus Christ died for sin and is to be the judge of the quick and the dead, and that everyone who believes on Him shall receive remission of sins.

Lesson 8. Peter is Delivered from Prison through the Living Christ sending His Angel to Open the Doors (Acts 12:1-19).

The Church prayed for Peter's deliverance and the prison was opened. All power is given Him in heaven and in earth; there is nothing too hard for the living Christ.

Lesson 9. Peter Shows the Resurrected Christ as the Head of the Church (1 Pet. 2:1-5, 11-25). Because Christ is alive, those who are joined to Him by faith grow. Because of the contact with Him they are able to maintain seemly behavior in the various relations of life.

Lesson 10. Christ is the Revealer of God's Love (1 John 4:7-21).

The proof that Christ is alive is the love of God in the hearts of those who have been born again.

Lesson 11. Christ is alive because He is walking in the midst of the churches (Rev. 1:4-18).

Lesson 12. In heaven the crucified, risen and glorified Christ, shall be the center of worship. All glory and honor are ascribed to Him because of His marvelous work of redemption.

April 4
Easter Lesson
Luke 24:13-25

Golden Text:—"Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?"—Luke 24:26.

I. Two Disciples Journeying to Emmaus (vv. 13-16).

1. Who They Were. One was Cleopas (v. 18). Some think the other was Luke, whose modesty forbade him to give his name, but it is not definitely known. Why they were going we can only conjecture; perhaps merely walking away from Jerusalem to relieve their anxiety and drown their sorrow. The ordeal through which they had passed left them somewhat stunned; they needed the physical exertion and quiet of the country to calm their nerves. They were sad (v. 17).

2. What They Talked about (v. 14). "All the things which had happened." Strange and wonderful things had taken place, and they could not but commune together concerning them. The conversation of Christians reveals what is in their hearts. Alas, how little the conversation among average Christians shows that their thoughts are about Jesus!

3. Jesus Joins Them (vv. 15, 16). It was while they communed together and reasoned about Jesus that He appeared to them. He never leaves those in doubt who sincerely seek the light. He promises to meet even with two or three who gather in His name (Matt. 18:20). Those gathered in His name have their hearts toward Him in love, and their talk is concerning Him. Those who are really gathered in His name do not spend their time in gossiping. The reason why Jesus does not more frequently appear to us is due to our conversation. How embarrassed we would be if Jesus were to join us at times! If we would have Jesus draw near to us more frequently then let us more frequently commune together concerning Him!

II. The Conversation on the Way (vv. 17-27).

1. Jesus' Question (v. 17). Though He was a stranger to them His question did not provoke resentment; there must have been something in His manner and tone which unlocked their hearts; His sympathy was elicited and He desired to give help to them. Jesus is saying to all of us, "Tell me your troubles and perplexities." He wants us to confide in Him. Telling Him our perplexities will do us good.

2. The Disciples' Answer (vv. 18-24). Though surprised that there should be a single man in the confines of Jerusalem unacquainted with the things which had recently come to pass, they spoke fully and freely of what they had communed.

(1) It was concerning Jesus of Nazareth (v. 19). This Jesus was mighty in deed and word before God and the people. (2) Delivered, condemned and crucified by the chief priests (v. 20). (3) Shattered hopes of the disciples (v. 21). They reposed their hope in Him as the Redeemer of Israel—now the one whom they trusted would free them from the Roman yoke had been killed. (4) Their bewilderment (vv. 22-24). The story of the women concerning the empty sepulcher reminded them of Christ's words that He would arise on the third day. A new hope seemed to be arising in their hearts, yet they were too timid to take their stand upon it.

3. Jesus Expounding the Scriptures to Them (vv. 25-27). He chides them for their unbelief of the prophetic Scriptures (v. 25). What sorrow and perplexity they would have escaped had they believed what God had recorded! The professing church today would be freed from much sorrow and great perplexity if it would but believe the record which God has given concerning Jesus Christ and His triumphant work. Jesus showed them that what had happened was exactly what the Scriptures had foretold concerning the Messiah and that it behooved Christ to thus suffer and to enter into His glory. They would have been glad for the way things had turned out if they had believed what God had revealed. We would be saved endless worry in this day if we would but believe what God says about the way He is going to consummate His plan. He brought the disciples to the written Word to prove His resurrection. To the Word and to the testimony should be our way always; such practice saves from fanaticism and from the imposition of false teachers. Christ will be the interpreter of the Scriptures to all who will hear Him. Just as these disciples had a rare privilege on that memorable walk to Emmaus, so it will be our privilege all along life's way if we but commune together concerning Him.

III. The Lord Reveals Himself (vv. 28-35).

1. Nearing the End of the Journey (vv. 28, 29). He made as though He would go farther, but they constrained Him to abide with them. It would have been a great loss to them and to us if He had not been "constrained." Christ delights to be urged to remain in fellowship with those who desire Him.

2. Sitting Together at the Table (vv. 30, 31). His blessing of the bread and breaking it were so familiar that they knew Him. Then, too, they may have seen the nail prints in His hands while He brake the bread. They now knew for a certainty that the Lord whom they had mourned as dead was alive and in their very presence. If we had eyes to perceive we could see Jesus daily walking and talking with us. What a different life would be ours if we would but see Him!

3. The Disciples Convinced (vv. 32-35). They at once returned to Jerusalem and reported to the eleven what things were done, and how the Lord had revealed Himself to them in the breaking of the bread. They exclaimed, "The Lord is risen indeed." May Christ come to every believer on this Easter occasion in such a way that we may know beyond the peradventure of a doubt that He is really alive!

Sunday-school News, Methods, Appliances and Questions

By Hugh Cork

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL

From an Address by Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States

I take it for granted that the significance of a Sunday-school lies in this circumstance: that it is an attempt to carry along the religious education of the nation with its secular education. Almost all my life I have been engaged in educational work. I have always had the same conception of it, from the beginning until now, namely, that education is a fundamental part of progress, and that you cannot make progress unless you tie one generation in with another.

You know that one of the experiences of the Christian Church has been that from time to time it has feared the effect of discovery and the effect of scientific thought—the effect of the thought based upon the mere phenomena of nature—upon the teachings derived from the Bible. It has turned out to be an idle fear, because there have never been any fundamental discrepancies between the teachings of the Bible, which is God's written Word, and the teachings of nature, which is God's cipher—which we make out more and more distinctly from generation to generation. Religious education is education in this very Word of God; not the Word of God written in nature, for that is the study of the schools on week-days, but the Word of God written in His Scriptures. The only book that can have any possible significance as a text-book in the Sunday-school is the Bible itself, and as we must train our children in the rest of the thought of the world, we must, if we are to make progress as a nation, ground each generation as it comes along in the established and tested moral judgments of the world.

The Bible Wholesome and Symmetrical

The beauty about the Bible is that it is the most wholesome, the most perfectly symmetrical, the least morbid picture of life and motives of men in the world. Almost every other book has a streak of morbidness in it, but this book is wholesome and sweet and natural and naïf from cover to cover. Here are no dull moralizings; here is the life of man set forth as it was simply lived from generation to generation.

In every circumstance of life, for the child as well as for him who is grown, in every day and in every turn of every day, the question is: "Shall we rule our own spirits?" and here, set forth in such simple terms that the child may understand it, in the annals of the Holy Scripture, are written the histories of men of every kind, whose glory was that they did master their own spirits, and through the whole thing lies what the Greek tragedies were never able to supply—the key to the solution of the problem, the answer to the eternal question.

He alone can rule his own spirit who puts himself under the command of the spirit of God, revealed in His son, Jesus Christ, our Saviour. He is the captain of our soul; He is the man from whose suggestions and from whose life comes the light that guideth every man that ever came into the world.

Indoctrinate the Children

If we can make our Sunday-schools the blazing centers of that light, then indeed will the darkness of the world be dissipated. The happiness of seeing a great company of people gathered together in the interest of the Sunday-school is the happiness of knowing that there are those who seek light and who know that the lamp from which their spirits can be kindled is the lamp that glows in the Word of God.

Every Sunday-school should be a place where this great book is not only opened, is not only studied, is not only revered, but is drunk of as if it were a fountain of life, is used as if it were the only source of inspiration and guidance. No great nation can ever survive its own temptations and its own follies that does not indoctrinate its children in the Word of God; so that as schoolmaster and as governor I know that my feet must rest with the feet of my fellow men upon this foundation only; for the righteousness of nations, like the righteousness of men, must take its source from these foundations of inspiration.

Daily Bible Reading

I am sorry for the men who do not read the Bible every day. I wonder why they deprive themselves of the strength and of the pleasure. It is one of the most singular books in the world, for every time you open it, some old text that you have read a score of times suddenly beams with a new meaning. Evidently the mood and the thought of that day, bred by the circumstances that you cannot analyze, has suddenly thrown its light upon that page and upon that passage, and there springs out upon the page to you something that you never saw lie upon it before. There is no other book that I know of, of which this is true; there is no other book that yields its meaning so personally, that seems to fit itself so intimately to the very spirit that is seeking its guidance.

The Bible—the Foundation of Government

There are great problems before the American people. There are problems which will need purity of spirit and an integrity of purpose such as has never been called for before in the history of this country. I should be afraid to go forward if I did not believe that there lay at the foundation of all our schooling and of all our thought this incomparable and unimpeachable Word of God. If we cannot derive our strength thence, there is no source from which we can derive it, and so I would bid you go from this place, if I may, inspired once more with the feeling that the providence of God is the foundation of affairs, and that only those can guide, and only those can follow, who take this providence of God from the sources where it is authentically interpreted.

The Teaching of the Scriptures

I sometimes wish very candidly that there was more simple reading and interpretation of the Bible and fewer elaborated Sunday-school lessons. I want to say very frankly that I never saw a Sunday-school lesson that yielded the meaning of the text that it was trying to interpret. If you will only give these little people the pure bread itself, you will not have to ask some inexpert chemical analyst to tell them how the bread is made up. There is no man with insight enough to see how the bread of life is made, and I wish sometimes that we could strip off these superficial explanations and get down to those things that sustain our spirits. I want to urge that we get down to hard-pan again, that we regard the whole business of the Sunday-school as the familiarizing of the children with the Word of God.

Give It to the Children Straight

If you only made them read it again and again, and added no comment that they did not ask for, you would be doing an incomparable service for American morality and American progress. Give it to them unadulterated, pure, unaltered, unexplained, uncheapened, and then see it work its wholesome work throughout the whole nature. It is very difficult, indeed, for a man or for a boy who knows the Scripture, ever to get away from it. It haunts him like an old song. It follows him like the memory of his mother. It reminds him like the word of an old and revered teacher. It forms part of the warp and woof of his life.

MORE TO THINK ABOUT

"The home is God's first and holiest school."

"You can give without loving, but you cannot love without giving."

"The world will be evangelized in that generation in which the Christian teachers of its youth determine it shall be done."

Superintendent, you are the official spokesman of the Sunday-school forces in the meetings of your local church. In the midweek prayer services, do you keep the church informed as to the spiritual developments in the school? Do you urge intercessory prayer on behalf of the church for yourself and associates? It is prayer which gets things done.

Teacher, you know how many are on your class roll, but do you know who are Christians or even members of the church? Are you praying and working to bring each and all to Christ this year? If they ask, "Which way shall I take?" will you give the directions from the Bible, or from your own experience? Before you even make sure of the next lesson, make sure you know the way of salvation so as to point a soul to the "Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

An Indian who had a wonderful knowledge of God's Word was asked how he obtained it, and his answer was, "When I open my Bible for study, I always provide two seats. I sit in one and the Holy Spirit sits in the other. I read until I get to a place I cannot understand, then I turn to Him and ask Him what He meant when He wrote that. He tells me, and so I go on trusting Him as my teacher to reveal the hidden and hard things to me which He always does." Oh, for such faith and such honoring of the Holy Spirit by our Sunday-school teachers!

That "the life of the teacher is the life of his teaching" was forcibly shown at the death bed of Mr. A. J. Cassatt, for many years president of the Pennsylvania Railroad. As the time of his departure was drawing near, in his palatial Philadelphia home, his relatives asked him if he wanted his pastor with him in his last hour. "No," said he, "but I do want John. Send for John. You will find him in the switch yards." John, who was in the eyes of the world just an ordinary switchman, but in the eyes of Mr. Cassatt, a prince of God, was brought. As he sat by the bedside of his dying chief, Mr. Cassatt said, "John, your life has been a living sermon to me, and I wanted to feel its benediction in my last hour. As you hold my hand just as I am going, please read to me from the Book from which you have given me so many precious truths as we have talked in the switch yards." And as John, tenderly holding his hand, read "Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God," the great industrial magnate's soul sweetly took "the wings of the morning and was at rest."

The State of Sao Paulo, Brazil, S. A., held their annual convention in the city of Sao Paulo in November. Popular meetings were held each evening. The seventeen Sunday-schools of Sao Paulo participated in the Sunday afternoon mass meeting, and by actual count 1,276 persons were present. Many visitors came to the doors, saw the seats all taken, and turned away. A very interesting and helpful program was carried out with great enthusiasm; the singing was inspiring. The schools were called one by one, each arose in a body and sang one or two verses of a hymn, recited a passage of Scripture, or were represented by recitations from little girls especially chosen for the purpose. One item on the program was of very special interest, writes Rev. H. C. Tucker, field secretary for Brazil of the World's Sunday-school Association, who was present. "Twenty little girls bearing the flags of twenty different nations marched to the platform and formed a semicircle. When the presiding officer called the name of each country the representative stepped forward and gave the Sunday-school statistics for that country. The last who came forward, who not only gave statistics but made a little speech, was Brazil's representative. Just as she was about to begin, the postmaster of the city arose and interrupted the program by saying to the chairman, 'Since Brazil received the gospel from the people of the United States, I propose that the representative bearing the flag of the United States be requested to take her position beside Brazil.' The suggestion was accepted with enthusiasm, and the applause was deafening for a time."

"SIDE-LIGHT" SUGGESTIONS

Teachers of the International (Uniform) lessons for April, 1920, will appreciate the aid given by the following books and leaflets:

Luther included the apocryphal books in his translation, but with this preface, "These are books not to be held in equal extent with Holy Scripture but yet good and useful for reading."

The sixth article of the Church of England, after mentioning the canonical books, refer to the apocryphal books on this wise, "And the other books the church doth read for an example of life and instruction of manners, but yet doth it not apply them to establish any doctrine."

The apocryphal books vary both as to their contents and value. Some are histories, others historical romances, and again others are collections of wise sayings or philosophical treatises intended to supplement the canonical books or to illustrate the acts and words of persons mentioned in them. These books have come down through the ages in close companionship with the Hebrew Bible but never as an integral part of it.

How can you tell whether you are growing? Ask yourself these questions: Are you getting taller? Are you able to overlook some things you were unable to overlook last year? To overlook the sneering glance, the harsh word, the selfish, unkind or malicious deed? Serenely to overlook failure when you have done your best? Bravely to overlook misfortune when it was unavoidable? Cheerily to overlook dark days and darker frowns? Are you getting tall enough for this?—Amos R. Wells.

THE MEANING OF THE MASS MOVEMENT IN INDIA

The meaning of the mass movement in India in a nutshell is just this word—opportunity. Some would criticize the mass movement because its Christians have but a very limited knowledge of the meaning of Christianity. But this is the wrong angle of vision. The mass movement is of tremendous importance to the Kingdom of God, not so much because of its accomplished results, as because of its unequaled challenge of opportunity.

In India when a missionary approaches a Hindu or a Mohammedan on the question of religion, he with very few exceptions knows that the hearer is bitterly prejudiced, if not actively opposed to the message of Christian salvation which he has to bring. And so, no matter if he has been received with many ingratiating smiles, and protestations that all he has said is quite the truth, he is nevertheless quite apt to come away with the feeling of having been baffled. Now this is the thing that the mass movement largely eliminates. The poor village Christian sweeper may not know nearly so much about Christianity as his Hindu landlord, who perhaps has read in a mission school and holds several certificates testifying the Bible examinations well passed, nevertheless as regards faith in Christ, the sweeper's is the home of hope, and not that of the landlord. Both of these men represent opportunities, but with the one, opportunity is built about by a stone wall with its gate closed, while the other, although a stone wall of Hindu environment still stands about it, stands with its gate wide ajar. The wretched outcaste Christian has accepted the missionary and Christianity as his only hope, both socially and religiously. His attitude instead of being one of subtle and covered opposition is frank and open acceptation. He is yours and you are his, and this is the situation that spells opportunity.

It is true that missions have not made the advance that they should have made with this remarkable and glorious opportunity. This is the fault of the missions and of the home church. Such an entirely new situation has required a great deal of adaptation on the part of missions, and in many instances the adaptation has been very slow, and hence much opportunity lost. On the other hand missions have been sadly handicapped by a lack of means and of men to go in and to claim fully these thousands of souls.

After having heard of the mass movement work, if one has formed the picture of many widely separated families converted to Christianity, and living intelligently according to its standards, he has gained a very exaggerated and incorrect idea. But if he has formed the picture of scattered thousands having turned their faces toward Christ, all their prejudice and opposition broken in their acceptance of His name, with their hands outstretched in mute appeal, then he has somewhat glimpsed this unmatched opportunity for Christ and the Church.—The Assembly Herald.

CHARACTERISTICS OF KOREAN CHRISTIANS

By Rev. H. C. Whiting, M. D.

Extract from an address given before the class in Mission Fields at The Moody Bible Institute, Dec. 5, 1919

In the first place, God seems to have prepared the Koreans in a special way for the reception of His wonderful gospel. The preparation is a negative preparation, in that they tried other religions, such as Confucianism, and Buddhism, and found them wanting, practically discarding both of them as not satisfying their souls, so that the Koreans practically have no religion except one of fear of evil spirits.

Every Korean home has a little basket hung in the room, in which the spirit is supposed to abide. This religion, if it could be called a religion, left the people with just a sense of fear. The missionary came out with the gospel in which fear is eliminated. The fear of death, of sickness and catastrophe are completely removed through faith in our Heavenly Father, so the Koreans accepted this religion in which fear was eliminated.

The characteristics of the Korean church are three: (1) The Koreans believe the Bible to be the very Word of God. It is refreshing to see how simple their faith is, and it is often a rebuke to our highly trained missionary to be reminded that we must become as little children in faith before we can enter the Kingdom of heaven. (2) The simplicity of their belief in prayer. To a Korean Christian prayer is not talking to a far off God, but an intimate conversation, or speech with a loving Father through His divine Son. The simplicity of their faith in prayer is a constant inspiration to us missionaries. Praying is not a form, but a delight. I have seen many remarkable answers to prayer. One which occurred recently was when my former secretary was engaged in carrying around printed instructions in relation to the recent uprising, which if a Japanese had discovered on him, would have meant imprisonment or death. While in an inn in Seoul, the Japanese soldiers surrounded the inn, and sent in a searching party to arrest him. (The rooms of a Korean inn are separated only by sliding paper doors.) He was in one of these little rooms when the inn-keeper told him that the Japanese soldiers had come to arrest him. He knelt in prayer, simply told God that he was His child, and told Him to care for him, saying, "Oh! Lord, blind their eyes." The soldiers searched the building, but were unable to see him. Thus in response to their simple faith God works wonders for them.

(3) Self-support. The Presbyterian Church (North) has from the first built on this foundation of self-support, so that today the church is being carried on wholly by the Koreans. They build primary schools, churches, pay pastor's salaries, helpers, teachers, and carry on the church work at their own expense, and last year raised $6,500 gold, for missionary work in Shantung Province, China, and Manchuria, so that today, if the foreign missionaries should be withdrawn the Korean church could go right on.

IN THE BEGINNING, MISSIONS

The missionary idea is neither an amendment nor an evolution, but an article in the gospel's original constitution. It is a part of the supreme law of the spiritual land. "I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all the people." The very announcement of the Saviour's coming is in the universal key. The messenger, straight from the courts of the King, could not be mistaken in the nature of the message.

The underlying philosophy is obvious. God "made of one every nation of men to dwell on the face of the earth." Thus having one source, they have the same needs as we, and those needs can be met only by the Saviour that meets ours. The logic of the situation is inexorable and inescapable. And the world was representatively around the cradle. The two grand divisions of mankind were Jews and Gentiles. The shepherds—Jews, representing that division, were there, and they glorified and praised God for what they had seen and heard. Out of the mystic East came the wise men—Gentiles, bringing costly gifts to the new-born King. The world was there, because that Saviour was for all, and not merely for a part of, the race.

The all-important fact is that the attitude and purpose of God be duplicated by His disciples. Missions is a co-ordinate branch of the gospel's task. The same lips that said Christ was for those that heard the announcement said in the same sentence that He was for all the people. Thus our business of spreading the tidings round is co-ordinate with that of keeping the home fires burning. The truest American patriot today is not one who would keep liberty and democracy for this land alone, but who will fight to give every other nation those same rights. Those possessions are so priceless to him that his heart is restless and heavy till all others of the same body, mind, and soul shall drink from the same sweet cup. In like manner the truest Christian, the best friend of the local church, is not one who subordinates the missionary interest, but who co-ordinates it in his thinking, praying and giving. God's mathematics do not figure up in every case according to man's calculations. We may keep till we have nothing that is worth keeping. Let every man be persuaded in his own mind; but the day is not in sight when I am willing to give one penny more to have the gospel preached in the local church than I give to have it preached elsewhere; for "I bring you good tidings of great joy," but not to you more than to "all the people."

WOMEN IN HINDOOISM

A Quotation from the Sacred Scriptures of Hindooism

"With women there can be no lasting friendship; hearts of hyenas are the hearts of women.

"The husband should not eat in the presence of his wife. Such, indeed, is the divine ordinance.

"Woman, the low caste Sudra, the dog and the black crow, are untruth. Stealing grain, base metals or cattle, slaying women and low caste Sudras are minor offenses."

Contrast with this Jesus and the woman of Sychar; Jesus in the home of Mary and Martha; Jesus and Mary Magdalene; Jesus and the woman taken in adultery; Jesus and his mother during the hours of crucifixion.

The debt of womanhood of Christian lands to the Lord Jesus Christ can never be paid, however lavish the devotion and service rendered to Him. And yet American women are to be found who will congregate to hear some Hindoo "swami" or theosophist purveyor of Hindooism as though sitting at the feet of an oracle of God.

"Since the armistice, wherever the Allies have set foot they have turned the country wet. Saloons and cafes are springing up in the sacred city of Constantinople like mushrooms, whereas formerly liquor was sold in European stores and hotels patronized by its followers. In Asia Minor, too, all zones occupied by the allied troops are getting wetter and wetter." Essad Bey.

"Jerusalem now has a brewery, and there is a distillery on Mt. Lebanon. American saloons have been opened in Damascus, but no new Christian missionary work is allowed to open in these lands at present."

"More than forty-four tribes in one section, with almost a million and a half people, not yet reached by Christian missions."

"Every Mohammedan trader is a Mohammedan propagandist."

"STEMMING THE MOHAMMEDAN TIDE"

From Proceedings of the Africa Conference held in New York City, by H. Karl W. Kumm, Ph. D., F. R. G. S., Director, Sudan United Mission

"The defeat of the religion of the Arab as a governmental force is very far from meaning the collapse of the religious enterprise and enthusiasm of the followers of Mohammed. On the contrary, political defeat frequently spells spiritual revival. Do we not see it in Korea and in the Dutch Reformed Church of South Africa? Thus let us beware lest we be led to see in the victory of the Christian powers over Mohammedan chiefs the success of the Christian religion over the Mohammedan faith. Hardly a letter reaches me from the representatives of the missionary enterprise in which I am interested that does not tell of the Mohammedan advance in Central Africa.

"As all the colonies in Africa are European colonies, we in America have largely left the carrying through of the plans of the Edinburgh and Lucknow conferences for a solution of the Mohammedan peril in Africa to the European societies to face this alone. They cannot cope with the situation. The danger is too pressing, and time and circumstances are entirely in favor of a Mohammedan victory. It has been said (and it is true), that for every Christian convert our missionaries make in Central Africa, the Mohammedans make ten."

AMERICA'S PART

Rev. Charles R. Watson, D. D., Board of Foreign Missions of the United Presbyterian Church, says:

"There is no adequate realization of the seriousness of the peril. The church at home has not yet realized how much greater is the problem of evangelization when Islam has once entered in; how much easier it is to stem the tide than to win back the territory that has been lost; how for every single year required to evangelize a pagan tribe we must invest ten to reconquer from Islam the territory that so easily might have been ours, if we had only been on time. Islam is not a step upward from paganism.

"Three steps in 'America's Part':

1. Awaken the church to the greatness of the peril and its past neglect.
2. Mobilize our political and commercial contacts with Mohammedan Africa.
3. Enlarge the scale of our operations, rather than the reverse policy."

HOME MAKING IN ARABIA

By Mrs. Dirk Dykstra, in Neglected Arabia

"Home, Sweet Home" could hardly be a popular song in Arabia. One never gets over feeling the awful void in the home life there. I remember the first week in this country—we were invited to call on a new bride. She was a beautiful young girl and seemed almost happy, and natural, as she sat there decked out in her borrowed jewelry and silk dresses. She was married to a young man, and was his first wife. Although she did not know him, they were cousins and it really seemed a fine match. We could almost congratulate her with sincere joy.

But some time later when I went to call on her I found that she had gone to live with her husband's parents. I found the house and knocked. But not only my young bride friend, Ayesha, received me, but her foster mother, her mother-in-law, and her mother-in-law's partner wife. The house was a small one and the courtyard, hardly more than a pen, was crowded with goats, chickens and cats. At the right was a smoky place which served as a kitchen; to the left a two-by-four room belonging to one of the wives of the father-in-law. A tumble down stairway led to the room of the other wife and to Ayesha's room. Where the foster mother slept I do not know. This was Ayesha's home. She did not complain about it, but I wondered what some of us would have done under the circumstances.

Things did not go right in that house, naturally. The father-in-law was a perfect tyrant. The foster mother had a barbed tongue and talked so incessantly that the husband, in self defense, threatened to divorce his bride of less than a year. Her fate hung in the balance, but the coming of a little child re-instated her. I go there to call. Ayesha rocks her little baby, the foster mother pesters me with questions at the rate of fifty a minute. Across the room (for there is no privacy with one's friends in Arabia) sit the wives of the father-in-law. One of them is holding a baby also, and I refer to the child as her own. "No, she is not mine," she tells me, "she is the child of my husband's wife." What a blunder to make to a Moslem woman!

The street door creaks on its wooden hinges, and immediately the women all whisper "Sh-h," and hold up warning fingers. The very babies in arms seem to sense something serious, and hush their cries and whimperings. In the courtyard below there is a great squawking of chickens and bleating of goats as they scatter to every side. There is a heavy tread across the little yard and into one of the rooms, followed by silence. Farewells are whispered and I make myself as small as possible as I sneak (there is no other word to describe it) out of the house and away. The father-in-law had come home!

The rules and customs of the Moslem home are a blight upon the things that might be most sacred and beautiful. A beautiful woman sits in the house of a wealthy sheikh, and as best she knows serves her lord and master. But she too admits, "I am his sixth wife, and God knows how long he will keep me." A sweet little girl who would go wild with delight if you gave her a doll, tells you, "Yes, I was married three months ago. I did not want to be married, but my father and mother arranged for it. I do not live at home any more but in my husband's home. I used to go out and play lots, but now I can not, my husband will not allow me to go." An old man of sixty marries a young girl and she becomes the mother of sickly, puny children. A woman is made the butt of jest and ridicule from her friends and partner wives, and finally divorced because she is childless. No wonder the women marvel at the way the missionaries live, and say, "You are different, your husbands love you and respect you." No wonder they cannot understand our common meals, our evenings spent in each other's company, our walks and good times together. And they will never find the answer to their longings in Islam. As long as the religion of Mohammed holds sway over their lives, just so long must they live outside the rule of home, love and home life. "A tree is known by its fruit." How eagerly we tell them that our happy homes are only the fruit of the Spirit of Him who gave us the great ideal of the home and who, when He wanted to bring us nearest God, spoke of Him as Father.

A SUGGESTION FOR TODAY

The most remarkable body of men from the standpoint of physical vigor, mental acumen and moral courage had met day after day for nearly five weeks without deciding upon a single word or a single sentence. On the last morning of the fifth week in the midst of a heated discussion concerning a national constitution, they were about to adjourn and abandon the great purpose for which they had met when Benjamin Franklin arose and, addressing George Washington, said:

"Mr. President, the small progress we have made, after four or five weeks' close attendance and continual reasonings with each other, our different sentiments on almost every question, several of the last producing as many noes as ayes, is, methinks, a melancholy proof of the imperfection of the human understanding. We, indeed, seem to feel our own want of political wisdom, since we have been running all about in search of it. We have gone back to ancient history for models of government, and examined the different forms of those republics which, having been originally formed with the seeds of their own dissolution, now no longer exist, and we have viewed modern states all around Europe, but find none of their constitutions suitable in our circumstances.

"In this situation of this assembly, groping, as it were, in the dark to find political truth, and scarce able to distinguish it when presented to us, how has it happened, sir, that we have not hitherto once thought of humbly applying to the Father of Lights to illuminate our understandings? . . .

"I have lived, sir, a long time; and the longer I live the more convincing proofs I see of this truth, that God governs in the affairs of men. And, if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without His notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without His aid? We have been assured, sir, in the sacred writings, that, 'except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it.' I firmly believe this; and I also believe that, without His concurring aid, we shall succeed in this political building no better than the builders of Babel; we shall be divided by our little, partial, local interests, our project will be confounded, and we ourselves shall become a reproach and a by-word down to future ages. And, what is worse, mankind may hereafter, from this unfortunate instance, despair of establishing government by human wisdom, and leave it to chance, war, conquest.

"I therefore beg leave to move that hereafter prayers, imploring the assistance of Heaven and its blessings on our deliberations, be held in this assembly every morning before we proceed to business, and that one or more of the clergy of this city be requested to officiate in that service."

From that moment they began to make progress in the framing and adoption of the constitution, which Gladstone said was "the greatest piece of work ever struck off by the brain and purpose of man."—Harry F. Atwood in The Chicago Daily News.

A CALL, DISTINCT AND SPECIFIC

"He calleth thee."—Mark 10:49.

The divine call from God to man is voiced in a variety of ways, but is always a distinct message from a definite personage to a specific individual.

God, the Father, invites men to "come now, and let us reason together" (Isa. 1:18) that sin may be put away; God, the Son, invites all "that labor and are heavy laden" (Matt. 11:28-30) to come unto Him for rest; God, the Holy Spirit, says that "whosover will" (Rev. 22:17) may take of the water of life freely.

The call comes by God's providences (Jer. 31:18, 19), by His Word (Ps. 119:105), through His servants (Num. 10:29) and through the Church (Rev. 22:17) and is repeated often and often again.

The call of grace is to the sinful (Mark 2:17), the indifferent (Eph. 5:14), the self-righteous (Ezek. 33:13) and the anxious (Mark 10:49), and the supply is suited to the need (Phil. 4:19) of each and every one both in quality and quantity, because it is "according to his riches in glory," which is limitless, unfailing and eternal.

It is the Father's call of love ("my Son") (Prov. 23:26), which is backed by Christ's assurance, "no wise cast out" (John 6:37), and is emphasized by the Holy Spirit's working in the heart (1 John 5:6). The call of love and mercy includes all and excludes none; obligates all and excuses none; invites all and compels none; but must be sought to be found and accepted to be enjoyed. God's free grace says: "Whosoever will, let him take."—Fred Scott Shepard, in Herald and Presbyter.

THE TRIUMPHAL ENTRY

Matt. 21: 1-17

The last journey was almost done. Bethany was the abode of one family that loved Jesus. To that hospitable home, probably He went. He arrived there before the Sabbath. Remember, the Sabbath began at nightfall on our Friday and lasted until the same hour of Saturday. Then came the first day of the week. We call it now Sunday. Jesus rested in Bethany over the Sabbath and on Sunday went into Jerusalem. Went as He had never gone before; fulfilling prophecy; went acclaimed as King by thronging thousands; this day the Church has long celebrated as Palm Sunday. This lesson emphasizes the kingship of Jesus.

This was Palm Sunday. It was a day of triumphal manifestation; and of sore disappointment. I have tried to see Him as He was that night in Bethany. How near His heart must have been to breaking. On Friday night, only five days away, He would be dead, and buried in the tomb of Joseph of Arimathea. Why were not Joseph and Nicodemus as anxious to save Him as they were to bury Him? But death was God's way. And He walked that way for me. I know He did. Do you know that He walked it for you? "Is He yours? Is He yours? Is the Saviour who loved you yours?"

Great lessons:

1. The calm preparation of Jesus for His own death must always be a lesson for His people.
2. "The Lord hath need of them" was enough for the owners of the ass and colt. But that message fails to open the purses of many who say they love that very Lord today.
3. It is easy to follow the crowd whether it be into Jerusalem strewing palm leaves, or out to Calvary crying, "Crucify him!"
4. Everyone was talking about Jesus that day. It is strange how people have kept on talking about Him ever since. Everyone talks of an evangelist when in the full tide of preaching he arouses a city. When he goes away they forget him. But always some one remembers the Christ.
5. Who would you have said He was had you been there that day? You cannot answer. You were not there. Who do you say He is today? You can answer. You are here.
6. What will He say you are when you stand before Him in judgment?
7. Not many churches are "dens of thieves" nowadays. But many of them are not better than cold storage establishments.
8. The chief priests and elders tried to make Jesus repress the enthusiasm of the children. He would not. We have no chief priests now; but we have elders. A church without enthusiasm in its children is hopeless.
9. This was the last offer Jesus made of Himself to His nation. His next act was to make an offering of Himself.
10. Confession of Christ is easy when nothing turns on it. To shout hosanna on the hillside costs nothing.—R. S. Holmes, in the Expositor.

WHAT IS THE ATONEMENT?

1. In Relation to God, Satisfaction.
2. In Relation to Sin, Expiation.
3. In Relation to the Believer, Substitution.
4. In Relation to the World, Salvation.
5. In Relation to the Church, Separation

—C. Edwards.

THE DEATH OF CHRIST

"In due time Christ died for the ungodly." —Rom. 5:6.

The gospel has many distinguished characteristics which show its excellency. One of these is the fact that its Founder died to save the guilty and the helpless. Other religions derive their influence from the life and teaching of their founders, but Christianity derives its power mainly from the death and resurrection of Him who founded it.

I. Observe What Is Said as to the Time of Christ's Death

"In due time." In another passage the apostle speaks of Christ as having been sent when the "fulness of time was come." The time was chosen by infinite wisdom, and therefore was the most suitable as regarded mankind.

1. Christ came when the world had had time to see its need of a Saviour.

2. Christ came when the way had been prepared by promise and prophecy.

3. Christ came when the time was most favorable for the spread of the gospel.

II. Observe Who It Was that Died

The greatness and glory of our redemption appear when we consider who the Redeemer was. Christ died for us.

The work of human redemption was effected by a superhuman agent.

1. It was a divine Saviour who died for us.

Christ was more than a man—He was the Son of God.

2. As a divine Saviour Christ was morally perfect.

He became truly human, but was free from human sinfulness. "He knew no sin."

III. Observe What It Was Christ Did

What Christ did shows the greatness and cost of man's redemption. He died for man, for only by His death could He give life to sinners. Christ did not save us by His example. Nor did Christ's teaching suffice to save men.

1. Christ died as a sacrifice for sin. An atonement was needed—Christ's atoning sacrifice was full and complete.

2. In the death of Christ was manifested the love of God.

IV. Observe the Persons for Whom Christ Died

This last word of the text may be understood to mean sinners in general, without distinction of race, rank, or condition.

1. It is the glory of the gospel that Christ died for sinners.

"Scarcely for a righteous man will one die," etc.

Christ was the Friend of sinners and died for such.

2. Since Christ died for the ungodly there is hope for every sinner who will repent and believe in Christ.

If Christ died for sinners, He will save all who come to Him in faith.—G. Charlesworth.

LINKS AND LIGHTS IN THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST

Matt. 28:1-20

The resurrection of Christ is the heart and soul of Christianity; everything depends upon this fact. It is the center of all truth (1 Cor. 15:1-5); the foundation of the Church of Christ (Col. 2:12) the living link which unites all true believers together (Col. 1:18); the channel of blessing for all the saved (1 Pet. 1:3,4); the mainspring of all Christian service (Matt. 28: 18-20); the pledge of our own resurrection (1 Cor. 15:23). Matthew 28 gives us several bright links and lights in this wonderful scene of Christ's resurrection, power and glory.

1. The Interested Women. The Power of Love (v. 1). It was a united, anxious, devoted love; the true mark of earnest seeking souls.

2. The Illustrious Visitor. The Power of Light (vv. 2-4). "His countenance was like lightning." A shining, mighty, overpowering light from heaven. This mighty power opened the grave, scattered the darkness, and brought the light of hope to every true believer.

3. The Invitation to the Seekers. The Power of Life (v. 6). "Come, see the place where the Lord lay." This is the place of instruction, life, comfort, and hope. The greatest evidence of Christ's mighty power. The power of an endless life. The power of His resurrection (Phil. 3:10).

4. The Instruction to the Disciples. The Power of Liberty (vv. 7,8). "And go quickly, and tell, etc." This is the right and privilege of every saved soul, to go forth and tell of a risen, living, loving Saviour, who has conquered every foe, overcome death, and lives to save to the uttermost.

5. The Incentive of the Master. The Power of our Leader (vv. 9, 10). "And as they went to tell his disciples, Jesus met them." With the salutation of love, with the cheer of hope, and with the assurance of His presence, Jesus always does this with those who are in the path of duty and service.

6. The Invention of the Enemy. The Power of Lying (vv. 11-15). Whilst the followers of Christ were hastening with the good news of His resurrection, Satan was busy inventing lies for his servants; but the power of truth will always overcome the devil's lies.

7. The Inspiration for Service. The Power for Labor (vv. 16-20). The great inspiration for all Christian service is the person, peace, and power of the risen Christ. The power of Christ—"All power is given unto me" (v. 18); the command of Christ, "Go ye, therefore" (v. 19); the word of Christ "All things" (v. 20); and the presence of Christ, "Lo, I am with you alway" (v. 20).—C. Edwards.

THOUGHTS ON THE ATONEMENT

"God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." —Rom. 5:8.

He loved you and me personally. He died for you and me personally. If there were but one sinner in all the world, and I were that sinner, still Jesus Christ would have loved me and died for me.—Henry van Dyke.

"The Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me"—Gal. 2:20.

Do you suppose that it was the nails that held Him to that cross; that it was helplessness that made Him yield to death? No, no, it was His redeeming love that bound Him to the cross, and kept Him there until he had completed our redemption.—Geo. F. Pentecost.

HOPE OF THE RESURRECTION

For all who have believed on Christ to the saving of their souls, the hope of the resurrection of the body is:

A comforting hope (Job 19:25,27; 1 Thess. 4:13,18).
A satisfying hope (Ps. 17:15).
A sustaining hope (2 Cor. 4:17, 18; 5: 1, 3).
A lively hope (1 Peter 1:3,7).
A glorious hope (Rom. 8:18).
A sure hope (John 14:19; Rev. 1:18).
A triumphant hope (Hosea 13: 14; 1 Cor. 15:55).
A jubilant hope (Isa. 26:19).
A blessed hope (Rev. 20:6).
A believer's hope (1 John 2:25).

—J. Ellis.

"FROM EVERYTHING THE MASTER SAW"

From everything the Master saw,
Lessons of wisdom He did draw,
The clouds, the color in the sky, (Matt. 16:2,3).
The gentle breeze that whispers by. (John 3:8.)
The lilies that the vale adorn, (Matt. 6:28.)
The fields all white with waving corn. (Mark 2:23.)
The reed that trembles in the wind. (Matt. 11:7.)
The tree where none its fruits may find. (Matt. 21:19.)
The shifting sand, the flinty rock,
That bears unmoved the tempest's shock. (Matt. 7:24, 27.)
The thorns that on the earth abound. (Matt. 13:7.)
The tender grass that clothes the ground. (Matt. 14:19.)
The little birds that fly in air. (Matt. 10:29.)
The sheep that needs the shepherd's care. (Luke 15:4.)
The pearls that in the ocean lie. (Matt. 13: 45, 46.)
The gold that tempts the miser's eye. (Luke 12:15.)
All from Christ's lips some truth proclaim
Or learn to praise their Master's name.

YOU ARE A MISSIONARY—DO YOU REALIZE IT?

Dr. Grenfell tells a story of how, at a dinner given in his honor, a lady remarked to him, "Is it true that you are a missionary?"

"Isn't it true that you are?" was his unexpected reply.

Do we ever stop to think of it? For that is just what we all are, missionaries sent into the world by God to testify of His love. That is what the word "missionary" means—one sent. Perhaps some of us are unfaithful missionaries, who have refused to deliver the message given to us, who have gone about our own business and acted as if we had no message; but we were truly sent, for all that, and our faithfulness or unfaithfulness rests with ourselves.

Not every one that is so sent is called upon to preach audibly. The daily conduct of life may be the best of sermons; for it is not what we with our lips tell people that we believe, which counts, but what we daily act as if we believe.—The Presbyterian.

WHEN IT'S "THE OTHER FELLOW"

Have you ever noticed? When the other fellow acts that way, he is "ill-tempered"; when you do it, it's "nerves." When the other fellow is set in his ways, he's "obstinate"; when you are, it is just "firmness."

When the other fellow doesn't like your friends, he's "prejudiced"; when you don't like his, you are simply showing that you are a good judge of human nature.

When the other fellow tries to treat some one especially well, he is "toadying"; when you try the same thing, you are using "tact."

When the other fellow takes time to do things, he is "dead slow"; when you do it, you are "deliberate."

When the other fellow spends a lot, he is a "spendthrift"; when you do, you are "generous."

When the other fellow holds too tight to his money, he is "close"; when you do, you are "prudent."

When the other fellow dresses extra well, he's a "dandy"; when you do, it is simply "a duty one owes to society."

When the other fellow runs great risks in business, he is "foolhardy"; when you do, you are a "great financier."

When the other fellow says what he thinks, he is "spiteful"; when you do, you are "frank."

When the other fellow goes in for music and pictures and literature, he is "effeminate"; when you do, you are "artistic."—Selected.

NO MINISTER WANTED

A bishop tells this story. A church was badly split over a pastor. No matter what the occasion. The thing was done; the bomb had burst and the fragments and what should have been unity in the bonds of peace was nothing but mutually repugnant fragments. And when it was made known that this bishop would probably remove the pastor he was notified that if he did and appoint another pastor the church doors would be locked against him.

It was a little mining town. There in the mountains men have strong feelings. And that curse of the little town, gossip and jealousy, had in this instance run their full course. And yet the people in the little town were not bad at heart.

The bishop sent another pastor. Before reading the appointment he called in the new man; he told him the situation; he did not blink at the sacrifice; he summoned him to the altar. The new man could sing. And there was one hymn, the bishop's hymn, he, too, particularly liked to sing. It began, "O Thou, in whose presence my soul takes delight."

The two prayed. The appointment was made.

The new man came to the town on the stage. He was met by the officials at the tavern and was told that the church was locked and would stay locked. He might as well climb on the stage when it left the next day; he was not welcome. He would please them only by hitting the trail, and the quicker the better.

The pastor listened. We do not know how heavy was his heart; though many a Methodist preacher knows what such heaviness might mean. He said:

"Very well; it shall be as you say. But before I go shall we not have one word of prayer?"

To that the official censors could not object. They knelt. He prayed. When he was done he called upon the oldest of the men to pray. The critic prayed. Another was called on, and when he had finished, the new pastor called on another and yet another, until all had prayed. When they arose to their feet the oldest said:

"I guess we will unlock the church."

The church was opened, the lights were lit. The people turned out. The pastor stepped to the organ and sang the bishop's hymn, the hymn they had sung as the conference closed. While he sang the fountain of tears was opened in that congregation. There was here and there a sob, and some members wept in silence.

The pastor preached tenderly, telling the story of redeeming love, the old, old story of the love of Christ. The congregation was dismissed. The door was not locked that year.

And when the spring came and the summer and the months gathered themselves to the end of the conference year, a committee went to the bishop and implored him not to take that shepherd away from that flock.

Love did it. The hymn did it. The prayer did it. The life did it.—Central Christian Advocate.

LABOR FOR THE LORD

We do not labor to get the Lord, but we labor for Him who has begotten and gotten us.

1. "In the Lord" is the Circle of Labor. Such labor can never be "in vain" (1 Cor. 15:58). If we are faithful in obeying Him, He will be faithful in blessing us.

2. Love is the Spring of Labor. When we have the "labor of love" (1 Thess. 1:3; Heb. 4:10). When love oils the wheels of service everything runs to purpose and pleasure.

3. The Holy Spirit is the Power of Labor. "Whereunto I labor . . . according to His working" (Col. 1:29). The worker is the Holy Spirit. We are not agents to use Him, but instruments to be used by Him.

4. The Work of God is the Authority of Labor. "Labor in word and doctrine" (1 Tim. 5:17). We command the Lord's blessing when we obey the command to preach the Word.

5. Others are the Companions of Labor. "Other men labored and ye are entered into their labors" (John 4:18). The ministry of the Lord is not only for the Lord, but the joints which supply the several members too.

6. Christ is the End of Labor. "For my name's sake hast labored" (Rev. 2:3). When His love moves and molds us, we serve others out of love to Him.

7. Reward is the Friend of Labor. "Every one shall receive his own reward according to his own labor" (1 Cor. 3:8). No work will go unrewarded, which is done on the above lines. —F. E. Marsh.

BRITISH AND AMERICAN PREACHING

There is a claim that English, and especially Scotch preachers on the average rate higher than Americans. Whether this is true or not would be impossible to determine. The advocates claim that the superior quality of most Scotch and much English preaching seems to derive from such circumstances as these:

"There is a greater background of wide reading behind it.

"There is deeper foundation of hard thinking beneath it.

"There is a loftier conception of the use of it overhanging it.

"There is a more systematic and orderly way of presenting it.

"There is much less consciousness of self in the preacher's mind.

"There is much more consciousness of the sermon's destination.

"And there is much more persistency in seeing that the truth hits and sticks where it is aimed."

The Evangelistic Field

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 2nd of the month preceding date of issue

"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns, and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or particulars in this line of work, nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

P. H. Kadey reports a union meeting at Middleton, Mich., during the month of January.

C. R. Haudenschield Evangelistic Party recently closed a most gracious work at Filer, Idaho.

H. T. Crossley and J. H. Leonard began a meeting in Walkerton, Ont., January 25, with good prospects.

The Evans-Burly Party held a successful campaign in the Christian church at Hartford City, Ind., during January.

J. Gordon McPherson, known as "Black Billy Sunday," reports a successful campaign held at Muskogee, Okla., in January.

Mr. and Mrs. Bray have just closed an eighteen day meeting at Summer Hill, Ill., with forty-four decisions for Christ.

Edward Clare Harding assisted in a meeting at Rupert, Idaho, in January. He reports that the influenza hurt the meeting somewhat.

L. W. Breaw and J. W. Erskine report a successful meeting at Knox, Ind. in January. The meeting was held in the Methodist church.

The H. L. Stephens Evangelistic Party was engaged in a meeting at Collingwood, Ont., during January. The meetings were held in a large rink.

Dr. H. Wyse Jones. evangelist, and Ralph E. Stewart, singer, held a successful meeting in Owego, N. Y., in January, with fifty decisions for Christ.

The Minges Evangelistic Company report a great meeting at the South-side Church of Christ, of Lima, O. There were 220 conversions in nine days invitation.

J. L. Rayburn writes: "Closed a campaign at Advance, Mo., in which sixty-five professed faith in Christ. The singing was under the direction of John Imrie and wife."

The meetings held in Aniwa, Wis., by evangelist Othie Sackett and E. C. Williams resulted in several of the leading men of Aniwa and the surrounding country being converted.

James A. Armstrong held a meeting in Weskan, Kan., in January. He reports twenty-five conversions in five days invitation. February 1 he entered a six weeks meeting at Meadville, Mo.

Earl W. Clark and wife report twenty-three saved and many reclaimed at their meeting in Grammer, Ind. They next went to Fredonia, Ind., where the Lord richly blessed them in their work.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Edward Faust write as follows: "Just closed a very successful meeting in Murrayville, Ill., with J. C. Bell, pastor, with seventy-seven conversions. Began at Wellington, Ill., February 1.

Ray G. Swartzbaugh and wife have been assisting evangelist E. DeWitt Johnston in a union campaign at Shedden, Ont. They next went to the East Minster Presbyterian Church, Kansas City, Mo.

C. B. Brooks assisted Rev. Jacob A. Frazier in a three weeks campaign at Wakarusa, Ind., in November. Mr. Brooks had charge of the music and Mr. C. Glenn Grace was pianist. They report fifty conversions.

Miss Sara C. Palmer spent February 1 to 15 in Louisville, Ky., where she held inspirational, evangelistic Y. W. C. A. vespers, church and special group meetings in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium and in the churches.

The Franklin Evangelistic Party closed a blessedly successful meeting at Leola, S. Dak., on February 4. Many were turned to God and many others greatly blessed. From there the party went to Herrick, S. Dak.

Tremayne Thomas writes: "We recently closed a most successful series of campaigns through Texas and Oklahoma where many conversions have taken place. At Ramona, Okla., forty-five persons came forward for reconsecration, while seventy-five professed Christ."

The Steve Burke Evangelistic Party closed a fine meeting at Joplin, Mo., in January, and spent the month of February in a union meeting at Breckenridge, Mo. The meeting was held in a new garage with a seating capacity of 600, five churches participating.

L. J. Derk writes: "Have been assisting Rev. P. B. Boyer of M. E. church at Bunker Hill, Pa., November and December. Had thirty-five conversions and nineteen united with the church. Am now at Ono, Pa., with twenty-five conversions to date."

During December G. A. De Flon held a meeting in Traer, Kan., which was blessed in spite of bad and cold weather, much snow and shortage of fuel. In January he went to Scotia, Neb., where the Lord blessed his work with thirty conversions. His next meeting was held in Brooks, Ia.

The report of The Morning Star Mission, Joliet, Ill., P. H. McCarthy, superintendent, for the first quarter of the eleventh year is as follows: 124 conversions, 541 free meals, 234 free beds, 76 persons clothed, 120 Gospels given out, 73 jail and police court visits and railroad fare paid for 9 persons.

During the month of January Evangelist H. D. Kennedy held a campaign in Cadillac, Mich. It was a union meeting of the Methodist churches of the city, and from the first night the invitation was given, seekers thronged the altar at every service. The next meeting was held in Petoskey, Mich.

William Caldwell recently conducted special evangelistic services in County Antrim (Ireland), at Ahoghill, Grange, Tullygarley, Crea, Ballymena, Ballybollan, Slatt; and also at Bangor, County Down. Mr. Caldwell was expected to return to the States February 22 to take up work in the Presbyterian Synod of Wisconsin.

Evangelist A. E. Laraway supplied the pulpit of the Baptist church at Alcolu, S. C., during the month of December. Mr. and Mrs. Laraway expect to leave for China within a few months. They will be associated with Rev. T. L. Blalock in independent work in Shantung Province, with headquarters at Tai-An-Fu. (Since the above was written Mrs. Laraway has passed away.)

Victoria Booth-Clibborn Demarest writes: "The four campaigns of this Fall—held in Virginia, Michigan and Ohio, brought forth extraordinary results. We are again in Newfoundland, where to our great joy and gratitude we hear that the work done last winter has advanced. We expect to visit some of the outposts and remain here until the middle or end of March."

Floyd John Evans and party held a successful meeting in a large tobacco warehouse at Weston, Mo. A large number of conversions was reported and over $15,000 raised for community welfare at the close of the campaign. At Medicine Lodge the Evans Party had remarkable success in December; the churches have invited them back for a tabernacle campaign next fall. Their next meeting was held in Hartford City, Ind.

Mrs. L. H. Thomas writes: "Have been here in a meeting with Evangelist Beem in the Church of Christ, and before leaving for a few days rest at home was engaged by the Methodist church to take charge of the music in their meeting in February. A splendid spirit of Christian brotherhood exists here between preachers and people, and the united choir is doing excellent service. Also have a junior chorus of thirty voices.

The Ham-Ramsay Party began their first meeting of the season at Harriman, Tenn., January 18. Evangelist Ham delivered the message at the opening meeting of the Louisville, Ky., Y. M. C. A. at Macauley's Theater on Sunday, January 4, to a great and enthusiastic crowd of men. Mr. Ramsay was called to his boyhood home, Boston, Va., to attend the funeral of his father, who died January 9.

The Vom Bruch Party closed a two weeks meeting in the Grace Evangelical Church at Naperville, Ill., with between two and three hundred decisions. Over 100 young people surrendered their lives for Christian service. Several will enter The Moody Bible Institute for preparation. Mr. Homer Hammontree and the American Four Quartette assisted Mr. Vom Bruch in the meeting. The party next went to Philadelphia, Pa.

Some interesting instances of the way the straight gospel message is counteracting the teachings of Bolshevism in New York City are given in the annual report of the Evangelistic Committee of New York City. Meetings held on the streets in Russian, Hungarian and Italian were interrupted at first, but the speakers' good-natured persistence won a hearing from the I. W. W.'s, Bolshevists, Anarchists and Radical Socialists. There is a church whose lay assistant was once an anarchist editor, and another whose staff is chiefly made up of former radicals.

The Rayburn-Wickland Party closed their campaign at Pratt, Kan., a few days before the Christmas holidays. The meeting was unusually happy in the work and in results. In spite of fuel shortage the meetings in the large tabernacle continued regularly. When the state order to conserve coal came, sixty men of the town, with the mayor leading, went out to a nearby grove and cut down and hauled to town in army trucks, twelve truck-loads of logs. They report 715 professions as a result of this meeting, including nearly all the office force of the Rock Island division. From there the party went to Wellington, Kan., and during February were in a union tabernacle campaign of the South-side churches of Wichita, Kan. They will be in McPherson, Kan., in March.

A steadily growing interest is being manifested in the expositions from the Pauline epistles and the book of Genesis by E. G. Zorn, secretary of the Gull Lake Bible conferences, at the Kalamazoo, Mich., Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. A large hall has been rented in Kalamazoo where the Saturday evening class will be continued, and also February 8, a Sunday night meeting began. The various phases of the Lord's return will be the subject on Sunday night. It is the plan, when the summer Bible conferences are in session at Gull Lake, to bill some of the speakers for Kalamazoo on Sunday evening, the city being only twenty miles from the lake. The speakers at Gull Lake during July and August will be Dr. William Evans, Max Wertheimer, R. E. Neighbour, B. B. Sutcliffe, William L. Pettingill, W. Leon Tucker and George E. Guille.

Book Notices

Any book favorably mentioned below may be secured at price named from the Bible Institute Colportage Association, 822 North La Salle Street, Chicago.

Old Bible Characters, by George E. Morgan, M. A.

These characters were drawn, according to the title, by a "modern pen." The chapters are all short, and contain practical and usable suggestions. Such characters as Abraham, Jacob and Joseph, get more than one chapter. The name of the publishing house always insures the reader against liberal and skeptical doctrine. Such books on the center tables of Christian homes will always be a blessing.

The Return of the Lord, by Rev. Ernest Baker, Johannesburg, Africa.

This is a very sane presentation of the whole subject of the Lord's return, and has reached a second edition. A very considerable part of it is given to a consideration of the signs of the times, making it unusually interesting from that standpoint. The book is written from the premillennial position, and will take its place as among the best of the many books favoring that belief. The chapter entitled "The Slumbering Church" is quite out of the ordinary for interest.

The Riddle of the Nearer Asia, by Basil Matthews with introduction by Viscount Bryce.

The flood of literature on regions devastated by the recent world-war carried to us this concise and vivid analysis of the nearer and middle East by an author well informed, and who has written several volumes on those parts of the world. The purpose is to furnish facts that will aid the missionary particularly, but all others, and to stimulate the efforts made to furnish relief to the hundreds of thousands of people suffering in those regions during and since the war. The volume has gone through many editions in England, where the problems of reconstruction in the near East are pressing with greater weight than in America.

The Modern Craze of Spiritualism, by Rev. F. B. Meyer, D.D.

This booklet consists of three Sunday evening sermons preached by Dr. Meyer to his London congregation, in which he deals vigorously with this modern outburst of hellish teaching. We never read anything from his pen in which such blows were directed against error.

He is not arguing against Spiritualism so much as presenting the warnings of Scripture to keep Christians from tampering with it. The first sermon presents the Bible teaching on the subject in a general way, while the second deals particularly with Christ's attitude towards demonism. The third is a treatment of Saul and the witch of Endor.

We commend it with a single caution. In one place we think he deals too tenderly with clairvoyance, which we regard an easy stepping-stone to the seance; and in another he astonishes us by saying that "in passing over, the soul may sometimes manifest itself to the beloved ere it is definitely withdrawn into the presence of God." We consider this erroneous and dangerous.

Religions of the Past and Present, edited by Professor James A. Montgomery.

The fourteen lectures comprising this volume were delivered by professors of the University of Pennsylvania in the Department of History of Religion in that university. The names of some of these lecturers are widely known, such as W. Max Muller, Morris Jastrow, and the editor, and all of them are men of certified scholarship. The subject is well covered, and there is not a great world religion, either past or present, but has received intelligent attention. Each author sets forth his subject according to his own ideas and as to the proportion of its importance. Many will read these lectures with suspicion, as they are delivered by teachers in a great state university. That there may be lacking certain notes that some readers would like, we believe. As a whole, however, the lectures can not but be of very great value to any one interested in the history of religion, and especially, comparative religions. Mormonism, Christian Science, etc., are not discussed as worthy to be named among the religions of the world, a fact worthy of notice.

The bibliographies at the end of each lecture are of the greatest possible value to the scholar. Many hundreds of books are named, opening the door to a wide field of investigation. It is quite true that many of these books were written by men recognized as not belonging to the evangelical school of thinking, but the discriminating investigators need not suffer on that account.

Sir Robert Anderson, K. C. B., LL. D., a tribute and memoir, by his son, A. P. Moore Anderson, M. A., M. D., with a Foreword by the Rev. J. Stuart Holden, D.D.

While this is not a "Life" of this distinguished man and able defender of the faith, but simply a collection of reminiscences, yet it has great interest for the many readers of his books in this country. It deals with him as a servant of the State, as he was for thirteen years at the head of Scotland Yard, the Secret Service Office and the Criminal Investigation Department of London; but it is as an author and theologian that we knew him best. One chapter is given to him in this capacity, another treats of him as a preacher of the Word, a third as a friend and counselor, and so on.

He was a fearless and able foe of the destructive critics, and as Dr. A. C. Dixon once said of him "with the conscientiousness and courage of an Old Testament prophet he sounded the trumpet of alarm, and led the battle against the errors which he believed were destroying the fundamentals of Christianity."

We had the pleasure and profit of his personal acquaintance, have spoken with him on the same platform, have been entertained as a guest in his hospitable home, and are glad to repeat what we once wrote of him, that in some respects he is the "most remarkable of current writers on religious subjects, whether we consider his personal history or the range and character of his work."

The Crisis in Church and College, by Rev. G. W. McPherson.

The author of this book has tackled the most alive question of the day, and does his work bravely. He has a realization that the book does not entirely meet the situation. His previous book, "The Modern Conflict Over the Bible," carried him forward to this book; but this one should be followed by another, possibly by the same author, or, in any case by some one to take up the subject more thoroughly and with the avoidance of what we fear is a fundamental error as to remedying the present sad conditions in the church and in the colleges. The remedy presented by this book is by education, reformation, and organization. There is pertinence in the remedy when the college is in mind, but with the church in mind the remedy should give larger cognizance to the power of the Spirit of God. The book speaks of revival as "helping," but a genuine spiritual revival should be the chief remedy, and the matters mentioned contributory.

We would earnestly advise the reading of this book. It gets hold of the problem, and no one reading it will let the problem drop. The responses recorded as having been received from presidents of colleges and great educational institutions are too few to give adequate basis for a judgment as to conditions. Many of the citations of the modernists and skeptical expressions are not located, and, of course, will not be considered of much value with persons of discrimination. But enough is given, with proper certification, to stir those most indifferent to the lamentable conditions in the church and in educational institutions, including theological seminaries.

The only illustration in the book is a cartoon formerly appearing in the Christian Workers Magazine, entitled, "Dr. Doubt It."

The Annotated Bible, Vol. VI, Ezra, Nehemiah, Esther, Job and Psalms, by A. C. Gaebelein.

We thank God that this faithful and able expositor has been spared to complete the sixth volume of this great work. Those who have never given patient study to the poetical books of the Bible covered by it, little dream what they have missed. And here is a treatment of them by one who can be trusted absolutely as to his soundness in the faith. What a rarity in these days of religious authorship! His work in the Psalms alone is the fruit of close study and research for twenty years, and gives in smallest compass the theme and treatment of each. We wish that the question of cost (possibly) had not limited him, as to space, as we would have liked the much fuller comment for which he is so well qualified.

WINTER TERM ENROLMENT

The enrolment for the present term has surpassed all previous records of the Day Classes. Total number of men 422—returned 315, and 107 new students, an increase of 118 over last year's figures. Total number of women 403—returned 326, and 77 new students, an increase over last year of 47. Total enrolment 825, as against 660 a year ago, an increase of 165.

The Institute's rooming accommodations for students were overrun to such an extent that 130 had to be quartered in outside furnished rooms—a larger number than are housed in the six-story Men's Dormitory at 152 Institute Place.

PRACTICAL WORK REPORT FOR THE FALL TERM

Figures furnished by Rev. C. P. Meeker, Director of the Practical Work Course, show that during the fifteen weeks of the Fall Term, ending December 18, the students of the Day Classes distributed a total of 52,717 tracts, besides 807 Gospels and 53 Bibles. Personal work talks numbered 18,135 and reported conversions 1,763.

In the same term students of the Evening Classes distributed 20,146 tracts, 751 Gospels and Scripture portions, and 141 Bibles. They held conversations on personal salvation with 2,878 persons, and reported 264 professed conversions.

THE PACIFIC COAST REPRESENTATIVE

The Jacksonville, (Ill.) Courier published in a recent issue an article headed, "Will Work for Moody School" and quoting from the Albany (Ore.) Herald the information that Dr. W. P. White, well-known in Jacksonville, and a Monmouth College graduate was about to resign his pastorate at Albany after nearly a score of years' service.

Rev. W. P. White, D. D.

At a banquet to Dr. White he had given notice of his resignation, having been appointed regional director of The Moody Bible Institute for Bible conferences up and down the coast and in British Columbia.

It was said that Dr. White was in his nineteenth year as pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church, the longest coast record for continuous pastorate save one. He had been associated recently with Dr. Gray in Bible conferences on the coast, also with Drs. Riley and Dickson at the Los Angeles conference, was well-known in the east as a deep student of the Bible and had made a name for himself by lectures on biblical archaeology.

FOUNDER'S DAY EXERCISES

Thursday, February 5, which was to have been "the great day of the feast" of the Mid-Winter Bible Conference (postponed as noted elsewhere on account of the influenza epidemic) was observed in honor of the memory of D. L. Moody at a gathering of the Faculty, Business Staff and the entire student body in the Auditorium from 9:00 to 10:00 A. M., and by a stereopticon lecture on the life and work of Mr. Moody given in the Auditorium in the evening by Mr. Hugh Cork.

Dr. Gray presided at the morning service and related personal reminiscences of Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey. Two others who knew Mr. Moody personally also participated, Professor Warren C. Coffin of the Music Faculty, who led the singing, and William Norton of the Bible Institute Colportage Association, who offered the opening prayer.

Before his address, Dr. Gray read a telegram just received by him from Mrs. Frank J. Bell, '15, of Houston, Tex., as follows:

"Christian greetings to Faculty and all who this day are thanking the Father for the man who had the vision and faith to step out and give and dedicate unreservedly and forever his life and all that he had and hoped for, to be used by Him in whatsoever place He chose to appoint. I thank the Father that the next greatest day in my life was when He led my steps to The Moody Bible Institute where I was helped to know the Book and to see the needy field and hear the call. I thank the Faculty for their unselfish lives and the gift of their minds to so many of us. I thank all for their fellowship. To meet a Moody student means to love him. Pray that our Southland will learn to look for Him and that one of the outstanding leaders will be led to receive this truth. His influence is far reaching. Pray earnestly."

Dr. Gray related that as a young man he first heard Mr. Moody at the Hippodrome meetings held in New York City (1876). He divulged the interesting information that he sang in the choir, adding that the first of the four meetings held on Sundays began at 8:00 A. M.; that to obtain admission to the choir it was necessary to be on time, a point about which Mr. Moody was always very particular; and that although he lived five miles distant, he was always punctual, though sometimes missing his breakfast.

Mr. Moody would come on the platform through a small side door on the tick of the hour for the meeting to begin, walk quickly across the platform with vigorous tread, and instantly raise his right arm straight up as a signal for prayer, usually led by himself and always briefly. Mr. Moody's prayers were always short. Dr. Gray never heard him make a long prayer either in public or private. Furthermore, he did not favor all-night prayer meetings, since he recognized that we live our life in earthen vessels and need to be careful lest they crack. He was always thoughtful for the health of those associated with him and believed they should exercise due care for the bodies entrusted to them with which to glorify God.

Mr. Moody was the first and only speaker who had ever moved him to tears; at the Hippodrome meetings again and again he was moved until the tears coursed down his face. Marvelous was the power of those great sermons by Mr. Moody on "The Blood," "Grace," "Daniel," and others.

Mr. Sankey, he said, did not lead nor train the chorus, his part of the service being always the singing of gospel solos. When he sat down at his little Estey organ and began fingering the keys, a great hush always fell upon the audience—a hush which caused one to realise the presence of the Holy Ghost. Mr. Sankey was not a great singer from the standpoint of technical voice culture, yet none other of the great gospel singers who followed him has equaled him in the effect produced upon his audiences. He always sang in the power of the Holy Spirit, and frequently the "net" would be drawn following his song, before the sermon was delivered, with the result that many accepted the Lord.

Here Dr. Gray digressed to say to the music students in the audience that the calling of those who sing the gospel is a great and holy calling, and that he hoped none would go out into this service and attempt to sing other than in the power of the Holy Ghost.

He had never heard any other soloist sing "The Ninety and Nine" as Mr. Sankey did; when this song was sung, or "What Shall the Harvest Be," the effect upon the audience was remarkable.

Dr. Gray told also of his first connection with Mr. Moody's work, eighteen years later, when he was invited to lecture at the Northfield Summer Conference during Mr. Moody's absence in London. Dr. A. J. Gordon of Boston had suggested the invitation, which resulted in yearly appointments at Northfield until Mr. Moody invited him to come to Chicago to take charge of the Institute during the annual summer vacation of Dr. Torrey, and to take the latter's place in the Moody Church pulpit.

Concluding, he read from an old letter written by a Christian worker who related that in one of Mr. Moody's meetings in St. Louis, the latter said to him in his customary abrupt, forceful way, "Are you a Christian?" to which he replied "Yes," and expected to receive some pleasant word in response, but that Mr. Moody instantly said, pointing to a man in a seat near by, "Talk to that man about his soul." It was a lesson in personal work that had been a great blessing to him.

The service ended with the singing of a verse of the Institute fellowship song, and prayer by the Rev. J. R. Schaffer.

Exercises in honor of Mr. Moody's birthday were held also on Friday evening, February 6, in the Auditorium, when the Evening Classes were addressed by Dr. Gray, who again gave reminiscences of Mr. Moody's life and related incidents of his great work in London, England. Mr. Cork also repeated his stereopticon lecture, following Dr. Gray.

MISS WARREN CALLED HOME

In the death of Miss Grace Warren, who was called to be with the Lord on January 28, the Institute loses a faithful worker from the card record room of the Financial Department, whose beautiful Christian character made her presence always a blessing to those associated with her. Never physically strong, she succumbed to an attack of influenza which quickly developed into pneumonia. The sympathy of the Institute family is lovingly extended to Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Gaylord, who had been for many years as a father and mother to Miss Warren; also to the bereaved sister, Mrs. Frank Knowles, Los Gatos, Calif., and the brother, Mr. Charles E. Warren, Bogota, Columbia, S. A.

Miss Grace Warren

COME AGAIN!

Among the student volunteers who visited the Institute on returning from the International Student Volunteer Convention at Des Moines, were a number from the Gordon Bible College, of Boston, Mass. A letter addressed to the Institute has been received from them dated at Boston, January 15, 1920. It reads as follows:

"Dear Friends:—We wish to thank you for your kind hospitality to us while on our homeward journey from Des Moines. We appreciate very much the opportunity to visit Moody, the cordiality of our entertainment and the courtesy of Mr. George Sagen in showing us around Chicago.

"The inspiration of your fellowship meetings will linger as one of our pleasant memories. May our Lord Jesus Christ continue to bless you with such power as we saw manifested that evening.

"Faithfully your fellow servants in Christ Jesus."

A TOUCHING GIFT

Mr. A. F. Gaylord, Business Manager, received the following letter:

"Binghamton, N. Y., Dec. 11, 1919.

"Dear Sir: I am so sorry that I cannot do as you say, as I am poor myself and sick. I here send you $5.00, the last I shall send. I am almost 102 years old. I wish you joy and God's blessing.

"C. M. Hoefer."

A PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATION OF APPRECIATION

"Enclosed please find check for $25 to be used as a gift to the Institute," wrote a former student of the Correspondence Department recently. "I wish to show my appreciation for what the study of the Synthetic Bible Study Course has been to me."

TWO BELATED PORTRAITS

Mention was made in the February issue under the heading, "New Additions to the Force" of Rev. J. R. Schaffer, Assistant Superintendent of Men, and Miss H. A. Dunlap, teacher of English. Their portraits were not then available, and we are glad to be able to present them herewith.

Rev. J. R. Schaffer

REUNION AT BERNE, INDIANA

During the Eighteenth Annual Bible Conference held at Berne, Ind., Dec. 28—Jan. 4, a number of M. B. I. students met for a reunion at the home of Miss Helena Liechty, '12. Those present were C. A. Montanus, '97; A. W. McKee, '12; Henry Moser, '19; Charles W. Schlegel, '19; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Dro, '14; Mrs. Menno Amstutz, '09; and Miss Loretta Lehman, '19. Dr. W. B. Riley of Minneapolis, and W. J. D. Coutts, '16, pianist, were present as guests.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT NOTES

New Workers

A notable enlargement of the activities of the Extension Department has been assured by the engagement of Rev. William P. White, D. D., as Regional Director for the Northwest and Pacific coast, with office for the present at Hotel Francis, Albany, Ore., and Rev. Rollin T. Chafer as Regional Director for the Southeast, with office at 287 Gordon St., Atlanta, Ga.

Miss H. Adella Dunlap

Dr. White is a graduate of Monmouth College, Ill., and Xenia Theological Seminary. His doctor's degree was conferred by his alma mater. He has held pastorates of the United Presbyterian churches at Little York, Ill., Indianola, Ia., and Albany, Ore., the last named for nineteen years. Further information concerning him is given elsewhere in this issue.

Rev. R. T. Chafer

Mr. Chafer is a member of Atlanta Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church (U. S.), and is a brother of Rev. Lewis Sperry Chafer. He also is gifted in teaching and evangelism, speaking with conviction and holding the interest of his hearers by an earnest and direct address.

Dr. Henry Ostrom's meeting in the Derry Street United Brethren Church of Harrisburg, Pa., was given liberal recognition by the press in the reporting of his addresses. During February he conducted an evangelistic meeting for the Moravian Congregation of Lititz, Pa., particulars of which are not available as this is written.

Twenty-eight persons publicly confessed Christ, and a half dozen young people expressed a desire to train for Christian work as a result of the Rev. B. B. Sutcliffe's service with the Washington Street Mission of Springfield, Ill. One church attended the Sunday evening meeting in a body, and a conservative pastor who for seven years avoided inviting a stranger into his pulpit through fear of unsound teaching or spectacular methods, engaged him for ten days of Bible teaching next fall. This church has the largest Sunday-school in the city. Mr. Sutcliffe also gave a series of Bible lectures at the Gospel Church of Cleveland, O.

Rev. George E. Guille conducted a Bible conference in the First Baptist Church of St. Petersburg, and was one of the teachers at the Southfield Bible Conference at Crescent City, both in Florida. His engagement with the Y. W. C. A. in Austin, Tex., was richly blessed.

Rev. Rollin T. Chafer preached at the Second Presbyterian Church of Greenville, S. C.

Miss Elinor Stafford Millar gave evangelistic addresses at the Evansville (Ind.) Rescue Mission and conducted a two weeks meeting in the First United Brethren Church of Canton, O., in February.

Judging by clippings from the Meridian Dispatch, Mrs. Margaret T. Russell strongly impressed that little Mississippi city. Her meetings were largely attended, and the ladies of the different churches paid her the compliment of a noon luncheon, warm with southern hospitality. During February she taught the Bible at Queen's College, Charlotte, N. C., and at the City Rescue Mission, New Castle, Pa.

Since January 1 Mr. C. E. Putnam gave Bible lectures at Kissimmee, Bartow, Groveland, Clermont and Lakeland, Fla. From his letters it is apparent that a real work of grace is being done in the hearts of many of his auditors by this quiet business man of faith and prayer, who has the knack of plain, direct and simple statement.

Mr. John R. Riebe spoke on the subject of missions at the Fourth Congregational Church of Oak Park, Ill.

A FORMER STUDENT'S JAPANESE WORK

East San Pedro Japanese Church

Japanese Mission, Moruto, Calif.

H. Y. Shibata, '06, has charge of the Japanese church at the fishing town of East San Pedro, Calif., which has a Japanese population of over 2,000. The picture above shows the building in which he preaches and the lower one is a picture of the Japanese Mission at Moruto, Calif., fifteen miles from Los Angeles, on the day of its dedication. So far as is known, Mr. Shibata is the first Japanese student from the Institute to have charge of a native congregation in America.

DOING BUSINESS ON A BULLETIN BOARD

In the basement of the Men's Dormitory, 152 Institute Place, hangs a bulletin board covered with small placards, whose announcements read like the inventory of a village general store. One's eye is caught by such items as "Typewriters," "Umbrellas," "Jewelry" and "Raincoats." Under each is a brief typewritten exposition of the merits of the particular brand of typewriters, umbrellas, etc., advertised, followed by such a line as "John Doe, Institute agent, Room 152."

By means of the bulletin board a system of reciprocal patronage has been developed by self-supporting students to keep as many of their hard-earned dollars as possible where there is a likelihood of getting them back again.

The aggregate expenditures of the student body amounts to a considerable sum. The idea that the profits made by merchants whom the students patronize could as well be reaped by their needy companions took hold gradually until now there are student salesmen to supply almost any article that a young man or woman desires to buy.

When one wishes to purchase writing paper he does not go out to a stationer's. He consults the bulletin board and finds that Richard Roe in Room 95 is agent for one of the city's best shops. He buys his paper from Richard at the regular market price, it saves him a trip to the store, and his companion has pocketed a commission. Perhaps the buyer of the stationery himself is agent for a typewriter concern, so when Richard would buy a machine, he remembers his friend's patronage and goes to him to be supplied.

Now, as through all the years since the Institute was opened, the idea is carried into other lines than merchandising. A former tailor pursuing a Bible course stands ready to press and repair clothing. A student of some tonsorial ability conducts a barber shop in a small room provided by the Institute, while another makes good money repairing his classmates' shoes.

One could live at the Institute today without ever spending a cent for merchandise outside its walls. Clothing may be ordered from half a dozen students; books from the Colportage bookstore; magazines and newspapers from a student. If you play in an orchestra you can buy musical instruments from one of your classmates; if you play basketball, gymnasium suits and shoes are likewise to be had; and if you should fall in love, an enterprising young man can supply you with a diamond, he advertises, at any price from $3 to $2,625!

"THE DRIFT OF MODERN TEACHING"

Under the above heading "The Life of Faith" of London, England, published in a recent issue a letter to the Editor from Rev. Joseph C. Hart, '17, (whose address is 10 Brook Bank, Harwood, near Bolton, England) reading as follows:

"Dear Sir:—I am wondering if you will allow me space to say a few words regarding 'Modern Teaching in Schools,' especially to any of your readers who may be thinking specially of preparation for the ministry.

"I speak as a young man, recently ordained to the work of the Lord, when I say that it appears a very hard task to find a school or college where the Word of God is fully honored. There are a few such places, thank God, and I, for one, went over the sea to The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago and found this Bible School true to the whole Word of God. * * *

"I am glad I ever graduated from such a school in this dark day of apostasy, when the very truths most vital and most precious to many of our hearts are being openly assailed. What England needs today is a band of clergymen, ministers, and Christian workers who will preach the simple gospel message, in the power of the Holy Ghost, with the direct object of winning precious souls everywhere. There is no time for mere sermonising; we must appeal to the hearts of the people, and to do so must preach Jesus in all His wondrous fulness, for only Jesus can save and satisfy.

"If any of your readers think I can help them in any way by giving information relative to the above-named school, I shall be glad to hear from them. Yours till the coming glory."

A LINCOLN (NEB.) MISSION

The above is a picture of the People's City Mission, Lincoln, Neb., of which a more extended notice appeared in a recent number of the magazine. G. O. Rogers, '16, is the superintendent.

PERSONALIA

James Ostema, '03, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Baptist Church, Savanna, Ill.

Harry C. Grimes, '09, is pastor of the Baptist church at Stanton, Mich. A helpful "Message to New Converts" in leaflet form was recently issued by him.

J. F. Steiner, '10, missionary to Nodoa, Hainan, China, under the Presbyterian Board, is on furlough, with home address at Pandora, O.

Howell Isaac, '08, is director of the music department of the Seattle Community School for Music Study, Seattle, Wash.

Matt. S. Gallagher, '11, is editor of the Bulletin, published monthly by the Jewish Evangelization Society of Philadelphia, with which he is actively associated as a member of the Board of Directors.

C. H. Leggett, '19 is superintendent of the Rescue Mission, 36 Willow Street, Springfield, Mass.

Ernest D. Christie, '19, is now pastor of the Central Methodist Church, South Texas City, Tex. He reports great blessing on the work and asks for prayer.

W. E. Bilyeu, '15, was discharged from Y. M. C. A. camp service last November and assigned to military work under the new Educational Commission, with the rank of second lieutenant, from which he has resigned to re-enter the evangelistic field. His address is Campbellsburg, Ind.

Robert A. Cameron, '06, accepted a call to a pastorate at Billings, Mont., and commenced work there January 1.

Mrs. George A. Snider (nee Zoa French, '10), reports a successful revival in the church at Hoagland, Ind., of which Mr. Snider is pastor. The church has recently sent a missionary to India.

Edna Broyles, '19, sailed in January for India, where she will work in the Punjab under the United Presbyterian Board.

In a letter to Mr. Gaylord, William D. Ogg, '97 says: "Yours is a wonderful spiritual testimony at the dear old M. B. I., and how wonderfully God is blessing and increasing its usefulness! I am longing for the discovery to be made by my people here of the great spiritual possibilities that are theirs in their God. Pray that we may know the privilege and power of prayer. I am beginning to see just a little of the wonderful possibilities of what prayer is meant to bring about. By His grace I am going to see His power manifested. This year must be different."

Louis C. Stumpf, '10, has received twenty-five members, and baptized twelve infants, since entering upon the pastorate of the Presbyterian church at Monett, Mo., last June.

J. A. Davis, '93, is field secretary for the Inland South America Missionary Union with a territory extending from the home office at Philadelphia to the Pacific coast. Prayers are asked for the workers on the field, the native Christians, and for the work among the young.

John Lager, '17, is working under the Inland South America Missionary Union at Villarrica, S. A.

Rev. John Dornhoefer, '08, is now serving two Congregational churches in Dupue and Bureau Ill.

Professor Foss L. Fellers, organist and choir director at Fullerton Avenue Presbyterian Church, presented two programs on Christmas Sunday at the morning and evening services, which were admirably rendered by the quartet and choir of twenty voices.

Rebecca Forman, '19, is working at the Philadelphia Jewish Mission, which is located in the heart of the Jewish population of that city. The work includes sewing classes, girl scouts, "Blue Birds," and during the summer, a daily vacation Bible school. The members of these classes have been gathered by house to house visitation, the workers often meeting with opposition. She says, "I praise God for having answered prayer. The seed sown is beginning to bear fruit. Pray for our much needed building, and that the right workers may be secured for this neglected field."

A call to the Watch Night service held in Honululu, T. H., at the Gospel Mission, Dec. 31, was received from W. E. Pietsch, '12, who is connected with that work. He speaks of the inroads that higher criticism is making there, and earnestly requests prayer that God-sent men who will fearlessly preach Christ may be raised up.

H. Lee McLendon, '15, is pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, Cleveland, O.

Mrs. Parke O. Bailey (nee Nellie M. Lauer), and Miss Mabel Grebe, '18, graduated from the Illinois Training School for Christian Workers, Shannon, Ill., Oct. 10, 1919. Mrs. Bailey will work in the United Evangelical Church, Polo, Ill., of which Mr. Bailey, '17, is pastor, and Miss Grebe will assist in the evangelistic meetings throughout the state during the winter.

R. A. Ramsay, '96, sends most encouraging news from Shuntehfu, China, where he held a two day harvest home Thanksgiving meeting, with more than four hundred Christian delegates, and a daily attendance of nearly one thousand. During the fall a stereopticon campaign was carried on through the surrounding country, which drew audiences sometimes numbering 10,000. Many conversions were reported. An unusual incident mentioned is the gift of a pagan temple from two converted Chinese, which was emptied of its images and suitably fitted up for Christian worship.

James K. Thompson, '94, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Fort Worth, Tex., sends the Christmas issue of his church bulletin, bearing on the front page a picture of the "Church With the Chimes," as it is popularly designated. L. M. Aldridge, '14, has recently been appointed associate pastor.

Wilbur M. Smith, '14, recently held special meetings at Ocean City, Md., with F. N. Bonney, '17, in charge of the singing.

Edick A. Anderson, '17, was ordained as a Baptist minister Dec. 10, 1919, at Kalona, Ia., where he has been preaching.

Elmer M. Moser, '17, is now pastor of the Presbyterian church at Gelena, Ill.

Miss E. Milton, '18, sailed Dec. 30, for Wellington, C. P. S., Africa, where her address will be Huguenot Seminary.

Miss Ollie Hart, '17, is teaching school among the mountaineers at Bostic, N. C., and also helps in the Methodist Sunday-school there. She says, "I so often think of the Saturday morning prayer meeting at the Institute, and to know that wherever we are, prayer is offered for us, is an inspiration and help."

Albert S. Reitz, '18, is pastor of the Baptist church at Berlin, Wis., and Mrs. Reitz, '18, has charge of the Sunday-school and Juniors.

Ethel Miller, '17, spent last year at Chemulpo, Korea, studying the language, and is now stationed at Yeng Byen, from which place she does itinerating in the surrounding villages.

An unusual news item is furnished in the arrest of L. Jack Clark, '17, for speeding one day in December, in Houston, Tex., the reason given for the offense being that because of the intense cold he was forced to drive fast to keep the engine warm. After receiving some timely advice in regard to the gear suitable for zero days he was released.

The following tribute to Miss Rose Sturman, '15, was received from one of her fellow workers on the field: "She was working under the Central American Mission, and has been on the field a little more than two years, going first to Guatemala City, then coming to Nicaragua six months later. Her year and a half here was a time of self-sacrifice and unceasing labor for the Master. Surely He has been glorified and lifted up through her life. Miss Sturman's illness was very short, lasting less than a week. We had her taken to the American Railroad Hospital, where she was given the best possible care, but God's time had come and in three days she closed her eyes. Tell the Moody students that some one must take her place, and that there are yet thousands of people in these little republics of Central America that know not our Lord Jesus Christ, and that we shall have to answer for their souls in the final day."

William H. Swann, '12, has charge of a three-point circuit in the Sedalia district of the St. Louis (Mo.) Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The parsonage is at Dresden, Mo. He asks an interest in the prayers of the Institute for the work there.

Aganetha Fast, '16, Kai Chow Chihli, China, in writing of some of the hindrances that face the missionaries there, says: "I am so thankful to hear that the prayer bands are so well attended. I wish they would make it a special aim to pray for the women and girls of China concerning the foot binding and marriage problems. These people need our prayers. They do not want big feet because they are laughed at, yet they realize how awful it is—how it hurts, and are frank in telling us how their daughters cry when they bind their feet. China's millions need to have their eyes opened to behold the Saviour who alone is able to set them free from all bondage."

Edgar E. and Mrs. Strother, '07, general secretaries U. S. C. E. of China, with headquarters at 1 Quinsan Gardens, Shanghai, sent Dr. Gray one of the booklets, Hints and Helps on Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topics for 1920, which is published there yearly for the use of Chinese Endeavor societies. The growth of the work is indicated by the fact that an increase in the demand for them of over 20,000 copies is anticipated this year. Last year three times as many of them were ordered in December as were sold during any previous year. The prayers of the Institute are desired for Christian Endeavor in China.

Einar Dahl, '13, is attending a Bible school in Christiania, Norway, to prepare for work in the northern part of that country, where he and his wife hope to go later on. In a letter to Dr. Gray, he says: "We remember you and The Moody Bible Institute very often in our prayers, and thank God for such a place."

Yun Ho Choy, '18, is pastor of the First Korean M. E. Church of the middle West. It was dedicated in September at Chicago, Ill., and has started out under most promising conditions, with a membership of forty Koreans.

Arthur B. Strickland, '00, field secretary of the National Baptist Memorial, toured the eastern states during December and January, giving his illustrated lecture, "How Liberty Came to America." His address is Scotch Plains, N. J.

Mrs. A. B. Strickland, '00, has appeared before nearly one hundred audiences during the past year in her missionary monologue, "Liberty Land," and is now preparing a series of addresses as an aid to missionary study classes.

V. D. Roberts, '19, supervisor of Branch No. 2 of the Chicago Boys' Club; Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Wilhide, '97, who are on their way to Palestine, and Miss Elizabeth Hoopes, '09, were among the recent callers at the Institute.

T. M. Kingsley, '15, Chicago, Ill., has returned from overseas after serving thirteen months with the Polish Army. His work was warmly commended by the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A. and a cordial appreciation of his spirit and efficiency was received by Mr. Pope.

W. Teeuwissen, '16, located at Nickholst, Russia, is working under the Y. M. C. A. among 4,000 prisoners of war, largely Austrians and Hungarians, with a number of Germans and Turks, some of them Jews. He lives in a box car, with an interpreter, and is finding in this service a great opportunity to present Christ and teach the Bible. He says, "I certainly praise the Lord for the study of His Word at the Institute. It may be that some of these men may become students of the Institute or of the Correspondence Courses. I ask you to pray for me that I may be kept faithful to the Word, for there must be no compromise at this time." His address is Y. M. C. A. Building, Vladivostok, Siberia, Russia.

Miss Bessie Lovell, '15, writes from Theodora Hospital, Kijabi, British East Africa, speaking of her work in the Guild when she was a student and referring to the blessing which Mrs. Gray brought into her life many times. She urges prayer on behalf of herself and her fellow-missionaries, and especially that a physician may be sent to take charge of the hospital, which is in sore need of one.

The Rev. William J. Rutherford, '03, is now pastor of a Baptist church in Port Washington, Long Island, N. Y. He recently sent the Institute a check towards its current expenses.

In a beautiful letter referring to Founder's Day he said: "I have been thinking of the volume of prayer going up this week for the Institute. The earth is literally belted with prayer ascending as incense for you."

H. J. Vander Linden, '15, in referring to the set of slides illustrating the "Life and Work of D. L. Moody" says, "I used the set at First Church, Buffalo, some years ago, and as a direct or indirect result two students recently graduated from the Institute, and two more are there now. My wife (Jessie Bechtold, '15), and I are both much prouder of being former students than we were on the day we left."

J. Allen Spidell, '93, after giving twenty years to pastoral work, and several months service as religious work director in Camp Humphries, Vt., has entered the evangelistic field. During the winter he worked under the Baptist State Convention as state evangelist for Vermont, and this spring he begins independent work. His address is Montgomery Center, Vt.

The marriage of Miss Florence E. Cole, to Ralph A. Brown, December 30, 1919, at Dearborn, Mich., was quite a Moody Institute affair. The bridegroom's best man was Gilbert Miles, '19, and the maid of honor was Miss Hazel Dennison, '19. Miss Esther Sheets, '17, played the wedding march, and also played for Warner R. Cole, '17, who sang "Because." Other Moody alumni present were Miss Zoe Palmer, '18, and George Muran, '18. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father, Rev. Wesley W. Cole. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are at home in the Oneida Baptist Institute, Oneida, Ky., where 250 students are taking regular college preparatory work.

"I AM THE PRINTING PRESS"

I am the printing press, born of the mother earth. My heart is of steel, my limbs are of iron, and my fingers are of brass.

I sing the songs of the world, the oratorios of history, the symphonies of all time.

I am the voice of today, the herald of tomorrow. I weave into the warp of the past the woof of the future. I tell the stories of peace and war alike.

I make the human heart beat with passion or tenderness. I stir the pulse of nations, and make brave men do braver deeds, and soldiers die.

I inspire the midnight toiler, weary at his loom, to lift his head again and gaze, with fearlessness, into the vast beyond, seeking the consolation of a hope eternal.

When I speak, a myriad people listen to my voice. The Anglo-Saxon, the Celt, the Hun, the Slav, the Hindu all comprehend me.

I am the tireless clarion of the news. I cry your joys and sorrows every hour. I fill the dullard's mind with thoughts uplifting. I am light, knowledge, and power. I epitomize the conquests of mind over matter.

I am the record of all things mankind has achieved. My offspring comes to you in the candle's glow, amid the dim lamps of poverty, or the splendor of riches; at sunrise, at high noon, and in the waning evening.

I am the laughter and tears of the world, and I shall never die until all things return to the immutable dust.

I am the printing press.—Exchange.

Be kind, for everyone is fighting a hard battle. —Rev. John Watson.

The Gospel in Print

THE MINISTER A READER

"Reading maketh a full man," Lord Bacon declares. It does, and the minister who does not persistently and systematically heed the summons to resort to it will, in his sermons, in no long period become little other than sound. The charge is openly made at times that many of our ministers do not read. They are busy here and there; a hundred and one things engross them, so it is said, and the opportunities for reading from week to week slip through their fingers unimproved. It is a fatal mistake. None scarcely could be more so. A minister's mind must become as an empty cistern unless constantly replenished. This replenishing in the main must come from reading.—Philip L. Jones, in Watchman-Examiner.

VITAL POWER IN A TRACT

On one occasion, as Leigh Richmond was traveling by coach in England, the passengers got out to walk a bit and lighten the horses, as well as to enjoy the magnificent prospect, he began to give a tract to every wayfarer he met. One of his fellow-travelers smiled derisively as he saw a tract treated contemptuously by the receiver, torn in two and thrown down on the road.

"See how your tract has been used," said he; "there is one, at least, quite lost."

"I am not so sure of that," replied Mr. Richmond; "at any rate the husbandman sows not less because some of the seed may be trodden down."

When they turned round at the top of the hill to take another look at the scene before mounting the coach, they saw distinctly the fate of the little tract. A puff of wind had carried it over a hedge into a hayfield, where a number of haymakers were seen seated and listening to the said tract which one of their number had found. He was observed carefully joining together the two parts which had been torn asunder, but were held together by a thread! The devil had done his work imperfectly; for instead of tearing the tract to tatters, his agent had left it still available for use, a little pains sufficing to make it legible. Thus the poor man who had torn the tract in two was the means of its being read by a whole band of haymakers, instead of by a single individual. But this was not all—the reader of the torn tract was led to reflection and prayer, and subsequently became an earnest Christian and tract-distributor himself. Of the company that were with him in the field, three became, within twelve months, diligent laborers in their neighborhood in behalf of the truth as it is in Christ.—A. J. Gordon.

Someone says that the correct way to spell "vaudeville" is "vauDEVILle"!

What 15 Cents Will bring You From the Nation's Capital

The little matter of 15 cts. in stamps or coin will bring you the Pathfinder 13 weeks on trial. The Pathfinder is an illustrated weekly, published at the Nation's center, for the Nation; a paper that prints all the news of the world and tells the truth and only the truth; now in its 27th year. This paper fills the bill without emptying the purse; it costs but $1 a year. If you want to keep posted on what is going on in the world, at least expense of time or money, this is your means. If you want a paper in your home which is sincere, reliable, entertaining, wholesome, the Pathfinder is yours. If you would appreciate a paper which puts everything clearly, briefly—here it is. Send 15c to show that you might like such a paper, and we will send you the Pathfinder on probation 13 weeks. The 15c does not repay us, but we are glad to invest in new friends.

Washington has become the World's Capital and reading the Pathfinder is like sitting in the inner council with those who mold the world's destiny.

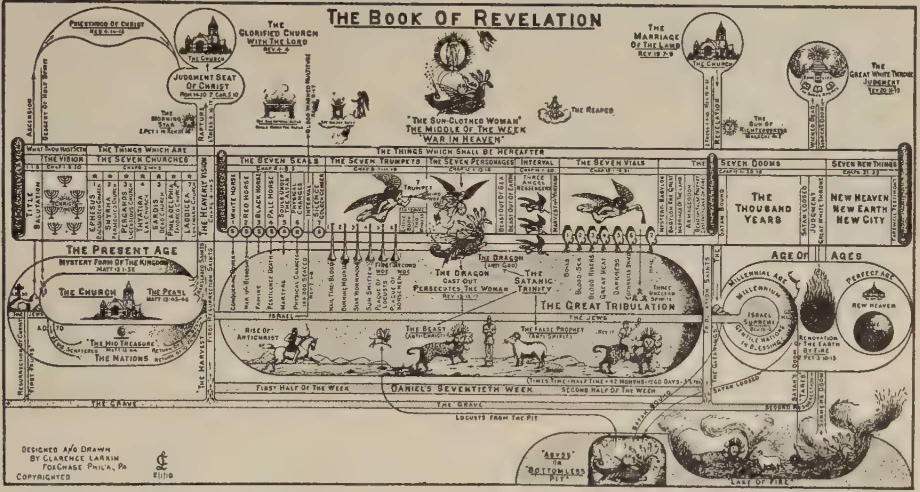
ANOTHER GREAT BOOK

By the Author of the Great Book "DISPENSATIONAL TRUTH"

THE BOOK OF REVELATION



THE BOOK IS ILLUSTRATED WITH 30 FULL PAGED CHARTS AND MAPS AND NUMEROUS CUTS OF THE BEAST AND SYMBOLS MENTIONED IN THE BOOK. THE SCRIPTURE TEXT OF THE OLD VERSION IS EMPHASIZED IN BLACK TYPE AND PRINTED OVER EACH SUBJECT. THE DESCRIPTIVE MATTER IS ALSO EMPHASIZED IN BLACK TYPE.

The Writer's aim has been to prepare a standard work on the Book of Revelation from the Futurist standpoint, and to show that it is to be taken literally, and that it is written in chronological order. The size of the type and the page (6 x 9 inches) makes it equivalent to an ordinary book of 400 pages.

Revised Edition, with index; 311 Pages.
Regular Price.......... $1.50

This new book, which has passed through several editions, has gained an international reputation. A copy should be in the hands of every student of the Word of God. The author, who was a firm postmillennarian, was converted to the opposite view while engaged in exhaustive research on this subject.

Professor W. H. Griffith Thomas, D. D., says: "When any writers are able to disprove the contentions found in this book it will be time for premillennialists to capitulate." R. A. Torrey, D. D.: "It is simply invaluable."

We offer this book with a year's subscription to The Christian Workers Magazine, new or renewal, for only.......... $2.50 or to anyone who will send us three new yearly subscriptions, we will send a copy of the book, postpaid.

Through the Bible Book by Book

By William Evans

Assoc. Dean of the Bible Inst., Los Angeles

"Each Biblical Book is carefully analyzed down to the minutiae, but apart from the analyses the treatment is popular. Perhaps its greatest value is just here to the ordinary student. It abounds in suggestive applications to present day conditions; even in the study of the legislative laws of Moses we find 'the practical lessons for us.' The diagrams and condensed analyses will be helpful to the teacher."

As a Thief
As the Lightning

Address delivered by

James Ostema

Rev. William Colby, Executive Secretary for The Alliance for the Evangelization of Russia, says: "Thank you for sending me advance copy of Mr. James Ostema's new pamphlet entitled, 'As a Thief—As the Lightning.'

"I have read it with much interest and am sure that it will be very helpful to all who need a simple statement of this great difference in Truth.

"Mr. Ostema rightly divides the Word of Truth and is a safe teacher of the Divine Oracles.

"I trust, most sincerely, that a great number of these pamphlets may be distributed and am sure the Holy Spirit can use it to magnify the Christ of God."

Price 10 cents. Special prices in quantities.

Has GOD Called YOU?

I secured 120 subscriptions in two months, while soliciting in Wisconsin. I would advise anyone desiring to secure a scholarship to begin early, as it is less difficult to secure the required amount, and you will enjoy the work far more than if put off until a few weeks before entering the Institute. I am still soliciting subscriptions. —P. J. Andreasen

It affords me pleasure in recommending The Christian Workers Magazine scholarship plan to any-one hungering for a broader knowledge of God's Word. I won the scholarship in four weeks. What has been done can be done again. I praise God for the trials and difficulties which He led me into while canvassing for this scholarship. If God has called you, go to day. —D. A. Chapman

I am glad to recommend the offer given by The Christian Workers Magazine as a desirable and profitable, as well as enjoyable means of obtaining a scholarship for entrance to The Moody Bible Institute.—Sadie Poage

I take pleasure in recommending to anyone this plan, who is contemplating coming to The Moody Bible Institute. I am now enrolled in the Institute and enjoy my work very much. The spiritual as well as mental training is wonderful.—Mildred Couch Robinson

I wish to thank you for the opportunity to secure subscriptions to your magazine, to help pay my expenses through school; the task was very easy, I secured 125 subscriptions in two weeks; all I met were willing subscribers, and my friends are still sending in subscriptions, and I can recommend this plan to anyone that has not the necessary funds to start their schooling with.—C. E. Taylor

to do Christian Work

If you feel the Lord is calling you to do more definite work in winning souls, remember He has provided for you a place to be thoroughly trained for that work. Christian people are providing the funds for your education. All they ask is that you pay for your board, room and washing. This training is offered to you FREE at

The Moody Bible Institute

You may have a catalog giving full particulars, about the courses of study in the Bible, and music on request.

Are You Delaying The Work

by not responding to the call?

If it is because you need funds for your board and room, we offer you a plan of self-help by securing new subscriptions to The Christian Workers Magazine as follows:

Scholarship Offer

To any earnest young man or woman, pastor or Christian worker who desires a better preparation for Christian work and is accepted as a student of The Moody Bible Institute, who shall send in 130 new annual subscriptions, cash with order, within five months from the date of acceptance of this offer, The Christian Workers Magazine will provide a scholarship for one term (fifteen weeks) stay at the Institute, consisting of board and room (with another), heat and light (tuition being free). The student will be amenable to the same rules and conditions as apply to other students enrolled.

Candidates will send orders to The Christian Workers Magazine, 163 Institute Place, Chicago, and must complete the payment for the required total of 130 subscriptions within the specified time. In case of failure to fulfil this condition, the publishing agent will refund to the candidate the usual agent's commission on every subscription.

The acceptance of this offer insures (1) a helpful business experience, (2) a valuable training in how to meet and interest people, and (3) untold good, done by the circulation of a helpful religious magazine.

Suggestions An entire young people's society or Bible class may work for a scholarship, nominating one of its members to use the same.

A pastor needing a trained layman to assist him, will find the scholarship plan an advantageous one for educating a young man or woman from his own congregation.

The scholarship plan may be used to extend the term of training for a student already in attendance at The Moody Bible Institute.

A series of scholarships may be planned, insuring the beneficiary, for instance, at least a year's uninterrupted stay at the Institute.

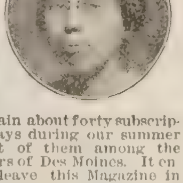
The Christian Workers Magazine
163 Institute Place Chicago, Illinois

I heartily recommend this method to obtain the comparatively small amount of funds necessary to secure what I believe to be the best instruction in the Bible or in Bible Music, that can be obtained anywhere.—Minerva S. Weil

We are very glad to recommend this plan for securing a scholarship to anyone wishing to enter The Moody Bible Institute. We are now soliciting subscriptions for the magazine—Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Young

I encourage every prospective student to act upon this splendid proposition. My testimony as a member of the Senior class, is this: I considered no effort too great which would enable me to enroll as a student in The Moody Bible Institute, upon which the richest blessing of God continually rests and where I have enjoyed the happiest two years of my life preparing for the service of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.—Geo. F. Orloff

I am grateful for the opportunity presented by The Christian Workers Magazine to secure a scholarship to The Moody Bible Institute, and would recommend this plan to anyone who loves the Word of God and is anxious to study it. I also recommend to anyone to begin work immediately. As a rule it requires some time and effort to secure the necessary number of subscriptions. I worked four months to secure the necessary number. Some may succeed in less time.—Myrtle P. Harrod



It is with pleasure I recommend obtaining subscriptions to this magazine to secure a scholarship or money towards the expense of attending The Moody Bible Institute. I was able to obtain about forty subscriptions in ten days during our summer vacation, most of them among the church members of Des Moines. It enabled me to leave this Magazine in homes of people where the Word of God is appreciated, and to come into personal contact with the people and, in many cases, to speak a word for my Saviour.—Beulah Mac Millan

WHAT IS THE MUSICAL OBSERVER?
It is a monthly music magazine published in the interests of the student and teacher and the music lover in general.

WHAT IS IT LIKE?
It is in a class by itself. Not only does it go into detail for the various branches of musical art, but it also keeps you abreast of all the musical happenings in the concert and operatic field in all the large cities.

WHAT WILL IT BRING ME?
It will bring you 100 pages of reading matter—articles by such writers as Leo Ornstein, Leopold Godowsky, Fritz Kreisler, Eugene Gruenburg, Leopold Auer, Eleanor Sherwood, including 20 pages of music—carefully selected copyrighted numbers for piano, organ, voice and violin.

WHAT DOES IT COST?
It costs $2.00 a year. Less than 17c a month. Just stick a two dollar bill in an envelope, write your name and address carefully and mail it to us. Uncle Sam will deliver it safely to us—HIS BOYS ARE HONEST.

Thousands of students and teachers read the Musical Observer every month and rely on it to help them in their work and to keep them informed of what is going on in the music world. Try it, you will find it is just what you have been looking for.

In Chicago, the second largest city in America, crime increased last year 46 per cent over the preceding year. The leading newspaper of the city reports that crime has been at the rate of fourteen "jobs" a day. This city is not worse than others in its moral tone. The facts presented simply indicate conditions such as exist everywhere. Another indication of this existing corruption will be seen from the following recent clipping taken from the same newspaper:

Rev. Dr. M. P. Boynton of the Woodlawn Baptist Church went to the theater the other night. Here are a few of the things he told his congregation yesterday about his visit: 'The vilest dances now known in America were shown in their extremities and glamored with music and light. Dancing that was not permitted ten years ago in the redlight district of Chicago can be seen in any number of the show places in Chicago. The costuming of the chorus was the limit. That sort of thing has gone just as far as it can go this side of nudity. Anybody who would say he attended that show just to hear the music would be a plain liar. This was at one of the supposedly high-class houses in the loop. The thermometer that night was at zero, yet that theater was comfortably filled. It was estimated that there were $3,000 worth of seats occupied. The audience was three-fourths men. There were a number of children. Some of the boys and girls were not fifteen years of age. I have never listened to a more insidiously filthy play. It is almost unbelievable that such a double suggestion can be made in public and receive applause and awaken laughter. A literal and true description of the performance could not be sent through the mails."

These things together with many others that may be cited enable us to see clearly how great is our country's need of the saving power of our Lord Jesus Christ.

A Wonderful Easter Sale

Of this superb combination Teachers' and Students' Genuine American Standard

BIBLE AT THE STARTLINGLY LOW PRICE OF $2.65 Mailed Postpaid

Important! Only 100 of these Bibles can be allotted to readers of The Christian Workers Magazine for this Easter Sale. Another advance of 15% has been made since these Bibles were purchased for you and you are the gainer by our foresight.

EXACT SIZE

THE American Standard Bible should be in every Christian home. Compare the faithful accuracy of its translations, the beauty of its diction, with all other versions that have gone before and enjoy the purity of its language. Line for line, word for word, its value to you who cherish the Word of God is so apparent that you will never again be without this priceless book.

Every detail of this wonderful Bible is perfect; the binding is not cheap, inferior leather so commonly used in Bibles costing 50 per cent more. It is genuine Leatheroid, with a beautiful Morocco grain, which makes it not only look better, but it is guaranteed to outwear two ordinary leather bindings. Its superb Bible paper, its red under gold edges, its large, easily readable type, its splendid workmanship, places it in a class by itself. It contains, in addition to the beautifully printed text:

4000 Questions and Answers A feature that is a wonderful study help for both teacher and scholar and makes it a truly remarkable combination Bible. These questions leave no important event in the Sacred Story untouched. The questions go below the surface of text or story, and the answers give the sincere inquirer after the truth a fund of information that places teacher or student in a peculiarly advantageous position with relation to Bible knowledge.

31 Beautiful Full Page Illustrations in Sepia. These are pictures that really illumine the text, arouse interest, and satisfy the imagination.

25 Outline Maps, 12 Colored Maps So many maps are rarely found in a Bible at anywhere near the price of this truly remarkable production of the printer's art, and the possession of a Bible containing these valuable maps gives you a distinct advantage over those not having access to them.

Satisfaction absolutely guaranteed Money back for the asking. Order at once, for the Easter demand this year will be enormous. Remember, we have allotted only 100 of these wonderful Bibles to readers of The Christian Workers Magazine at this price and cannot promise more.

For 75c. additional you may have the additional convenience of a Thumb Index and any desired name stamped in pure gold leaf on front cover.

Easter Dawn

By Ina Salome Delo

How many Easter-tides have come and gone
  Since Mary at the tomb beheld her Lord;
And heard Him softly speak the gracious word
  That turned her mourning into joyful song!

In tropic climes, by summer breezes fanned,
  White lilies grow in wild profusion sweet;
Their fragrance offers incense rare, and mete
  To herald Easter-dawn in that far land

Where darkness like a pall enfolds the days,
  And waters still are locked in slumber deep;
There Nature's voice as well is raised to keep
  Tryst with the age-long years, in Easter praise.

That love, so precious through the years a-gone,
  By many weary hearts is still unknown,
They bear their heavy burdens on alone—
  Oh, who will tell to them, 'tis Easter-dawn?

By altars, lily-strewn, we kneel and pray:
  "O Light divine, shine in each heart today"

An Eminent Christian Educator Says:

"The Bible teaches that God expects and requires His people to use and improve the talents which He bestows. He requires His servants to do this not for themselves, but for Him. When He finds one who has allowed his talent to lie idle, He is displeased. To neglect the opportunity is a sin, for which the servant will be called to account.

"Although there are a thousand ways in which a Christian may invest his powers and possessions for the glory of God and for the building of His kingdom, there is none greater than the privilege and duty of making investments in the education of young men and women.

"In the world today there is perhaps no phase of Christian work so largely ignored and neglected as that of contributing to Christian training. Millions of dollars are bestowed upon technical training. Millions are lavished on schools where the principal purposes are athletic sports and social pleasures.

"The beneficial influence spreading from a Christian school can not be overestimated, and it makes itself felt in every sphere of life, in the family, in business, in politics, in the Church.

"Since we must use the money which we have received from God to do His work, should we not use it where it can do the most good? Should we not invest it in that section of God's work which yields the noblest, the most far-reaching, and the most enduring fruits?"

All of which applies to any Christian school which deals not merely with the intellect but with the souls of men. With how much greater emphasis does it apply to such a school as The Moody Bible Institute and its work of training Godly young men and women for life work devoted wholly to Christian service?

A recent newspaper editorial headed "Paying High for Education" said concerning the vast sums of money given to secular universities and colleges: "All the donations of millions have not helped the student to get through cheaply. With all our reforming we should make a liberal education more available for the bright young fellow with small means."

In contrast with this, training at The Moody Bible Institute is free and board and room are furnished to the students at cost.

Like Nut Bubbles

Yet It's Whole Wheat Puffed

There lies the fascination of Puffed Wheat.

The grains are light and airy—puffed to eight times normal size. They almost melt away.

An hour of fearful heat has given them a taste like toasted nuts.

Yet they are whole wheat. Every food cell is exploded so digestion is easy and complete.

They supply whole-wheat nutrition as no other food can do. In lesser ways of cooking, the outer wheat coats pass largely undigested.

Dozens of Delights

The three Puffed Grains with their different flavors offer dozens of delights.

They are not for breakfast only. Every home finds countless uses for these nut-like, flimsy grains.

Remember These Three

Puffed Wheat in milk is the utmost in a food. With every food cell broken it is easy to digest.

For luncheons, suppers and at bedtime there is nothing to compare with this dish.

Puffed Rice or Corn Puffs mixed with fruit adds a delicious blend. It adds what a light and dainty crust adds to shortcake or to pie.

Puffed Rice or Corn Puffs, crisped and lightly buttered, become a food confection.

Have a dish ready when the children come from school. They will eat them like peanuts or popcorn. And they take the place of foods less healthful, less easy to digest.

Millions of children are now enjoying Puffed Grains, but not half of them get enough.

Every home should keep all three Puffed Grains on hand.

Puffed Wheat Puffed Rice Corn Puffs

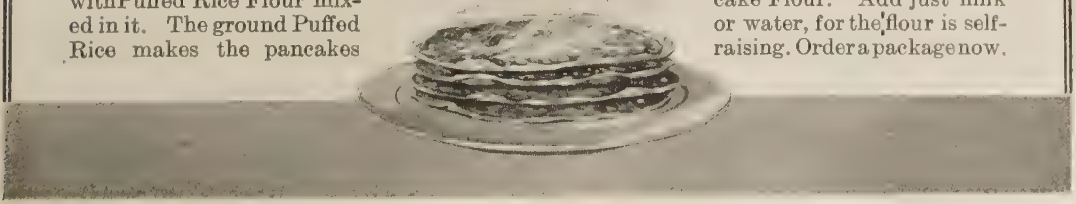
Also Puffed Rice Pancake Flour

To Make Royal Pancakes

Our food experts have worked for years to make an ideal pancake mixture. Now it is ready—with Puffed Rice Flour mixed in it. The ground Puffed Rice makes the pancakes fluffy and gives a nut-like taste. You can make the finest pancakes ever tasted with Puffed Rice Pancake Flour. Add just milk or water, for the flour is self-raising. Order a package now.



New Liberty Folding Organ

THIS New Model Liberty Folding Organ is our latest contribution to the world of music, art and science. This instrument is a happy medium between our higher and lower-priced Folding Organs, and represents the best value for the money of any organ that has yet come into the field. When closed, it has the appearance of an ordinary suit case and is just as convenient to handle.

The Case is made of three-ply basswood which makes it light and strong. It is covered with a fine grade of waterproof Fabrikoid, otherwise known as leatherette, beautifully ornamented with steel and brass trimmings. The substantial legs and riveted pedals give it strength and rigidity.

The Bellows is also made of three-ply basswood and the best Gum Rubber Sheeting, insuring lightness, strength and wonderful durability, and ample capacity for both single and double reed action.

The Action may be provided with either single or double reed as desired, either of which is as good as money can buy. The Sounding Board is also three-ply and will never split or leak. The Keys are No. 1, and full length, which makes playing perfectly easy and natural.

The Tone of this New Model Liberty is truly marvelous, both as to quality and volume. Any one hearing this instrument without seeing it cannot conceive how an organ of its size is capable of producing such results—unless they fully understand our method of construction. Not only are the reeds of the enlarged type, but our peculiar method of constructing Reed Cells gives the instrument this wonderful Pipe-Tone quality, not to be found in any Folding Organ outside of the White patents. Every instrument fully covered by Our Guarantee.

America Famishes for Bible Teachers

For men and women of yielded hearts, and minds trained in the Bible through faithful persevering study; who know God and His Word and hence are able to teach others.

Oh, how great is the need for such teachers, in and out of the churches, in the homes, in the Sunday-schools, in Bible conferences, everywhere!

False substitutes for the glorious gospel of the Son of God are deceiving millions!

Theodore Roosevelt said:

"To every man who faces life with real desire to do his part in everything, I appeal for a study of the Bible. No man can afford to be ignorant of the Bible."

Yet storm-tossed hearts, hungry for comfort and help, on every hand in thousands, starving for the Bread of Life and the Living Water, are being snared and deceived by Satan through ignorance of the Bible.

Theodore Roosevelt

Announcement of Sunday services in the newspapers of the large cities are mainly those of Spiritualism, Rationalism, New Thought, Christian Science and Sunday Evening Clubs that fail to hold up the Cross of Christ; pitifully few of them are of churches which honor God's Word and are full of zeal for the gospel.

What is the lesson for the readers of this advertisement? Is it not this?

CHRISTIAN, PREPARE!

Enter without delay upon systematic study of the Bible; or, if already such a student, press on to the goal in view!

No matter what your occupation, you can study the Bible by correspondence.

Doing this, you will find that as you proceed with your studies your life will be wondrously enriched and blessed; your latent intellectual powers will develop and expand; your stores of knowledge and wisdom increase; your vision and understanding gloriously broaden!

And then, as you humbly place all at the Master's disposal, how the Holy Spirit will use you to bless this so terribly needy, sin-cursed world.

Don't wait until a more convenient season! Fill out the coupon below at once, and a prospectus will be sent to you promptly, telling all about our eight Bible Correspondence Courses—the Synthetic Course, Chapter Summary Course, Bible Doctrine Course, Scofield Bible Course, Introductory Bible Course, Christian Evidences, Practical Christian Work, and Evangelism.

ENROLL NOW BEFORE THE PRICES ARE ADVANCED!

These courses have never been sold on a commercial basis, but always below cost, in order that as many as possible might have the priceless opportunity of systematic training in the Scriptures. No advance has hitherto been made in the prices, in spite of the great increase in costs. Soon, however, advances must be made, but those who enroll now will have the advantage of the present rates.

A letter from a Methodist minister in Australia (dated December 31, 1919) who had just completed the Scofield Course, said:

"I must speak a word of appreciation for the Scofield Course. (1) I like it because it is built on the Granite Rock—the Bible. (2) It shows great spiritual understanding. (3) It lays bare the sores of the soul and mind and applies the healing word. (4) It shows a careful examination of the works of our great spiritual teachers. (5) It primarily shows the mind of the Spirit rather than the mind of the writer—it is written for the glory of God. (6) It has been generally helpful to a young Methodist minister by teaching him what is in the Bible and how to use it, more than all his previous theological training. (7) It is a course he can recommend to his young brethren in the Methodist ministry—or any ministry."

February 18 a Vermont student wrote: "I am getting far more out of my Scofield Course, than I had in all my Bible training heretofore."

A recent letter from a Philadelphia student says: "I wish to express my deep appreciation of the Synthetic Course. It has been the means of a marked change in my life, and helped me to study the word as I never have before. It is truly wonderful."

Another student of the Synthetic Course, a Methodist clergyman in Maine, wrote February 14: "It affords me unspeakable pleasure to express my appreciation of what the Synthetic Bible Study Course has done for me."

Here is a testimony from a distinguished clergyman of Tsinghua College, Pekin, China: "I have been so impressed with the value of hiding the Word in my heart, that I have taken the study of this course up again (Practical Christian Work), which I had dropped for a term."

Enroll before the prices advance! Fill in and mail the coupon at once.

You will be a personal pupil—time, place and amount of study under your own control.

The Crying Need of Russia

Russia is a menace to Europe, Asia and America
Because

Slavs have been uneducated in Christian belief.
They have had the form of religion without the power.
They have not been taught to know the Bible.
While they have a reverently religious nature
They have not had an opportunity to understand evangelical Christianity
They have worshiped ikons and been led by ignorant priests
Therefore they have not learned to know Jesus Christ
Intellectual training has been divorced from Christianity
Students have been trained in infidelity
The bourgeois have failed to exhibit Christian principles
Bolshevism has resulted
The great need in Russia today is Christian education
Bibles and Christian literature should be distributed
Bible teachers and evangelical preachers should be trained
The masses should be taught to know and follow Jesus Christ
He alone will cure Bolshevism and other evils
Think of the immense field:

Russia	185,000,000	Czecho-Slavonia	13,500,000
Roumania	15,000,000	Greece	5,000,000
Bulgaria	5,000,000	Afghanistan	6,000,000
Jugo-Slavia	12,500,000	Galicia	8,200,000

Including about 9,000,000 Jews

The Russiat Bible and Evangelization Society will send preachers, teachers and Scripture Colporteurs to Russia.

Will you help to heal this open sore of Europe and Asia?

Will you help to place a Bible in every home of these 250,000,000 stricken people?

Will you help to send without delay preachers and teachers already trained to these hungry distressed millions?

Will you help to train those who have been called by God for this work?

The Kingdom of Heaven

What Is It? And When? And Where?

By Philip Mauro

Revised and Enlarged Edition Just Published

Cloth 85c, Paper 50c

THIS IS the Book that has recently awakened interest in THE KINGDOM OF GOD and started the discussion now in progress in magazines and on the platform. It should be read by all who wish to be informed as to the deeply important subject of the Kingdom which lies at the foundation of the New Testament Teaching, and also of Christian life and character.

The Charm of "Little Old New York"

DO YOU know that charm and how it affects people? Some years ago a Southern editor wrote: "We confess to a sneaking fondness for little old New York." What makes this charm?

It is the appeal of LIFE, of CHANGE, of VARIETY, of MANIFOLD PERSONALITIES and NATIONALITIES gathered from all over the earth. It is the attraction of great streets, enormous buildings, concentered activities. It is the power of radiating influence, reaching into every land and touching men and women in every nook and corner of the earth. All the world looks towards New York. It is the only city on earth reached by letters from anywhere with just the name of the city added to the name of person and street. There are other Londons, other Chicagos, other Constantinoples, even other Jerusalems.

But there is only One New York

Nearly everybody comes to New York, or wants to. Even Satan comes here. The angels visit it. God is at work here. Christians everywhere think of it, and pray for it, and seek to bless its inhabitants. It is full of business, of commerce, of politics, of SIN. Life's deepest tragedies are enacted here. Many find in it the sweetest joys of true living. All these deepen and heighten and color the charm of little old New York.

The Charm of Two Million Jews

What a crowd, nearly two million Jews in one center! About them is the spell of antiquity and the memory of past dealings with God. The smell of persecuting fires has swept over them, and the lure of gold is in their eyes. They are keen, eager, intense, but not for God. These two million Jews are New York's charm for Jesus Christ. JEHOVAH LOVES THEM. DO YOU LOVE THEM? If not, why not? If you do, what are you doing for them? Would you learn about them? Are you concerned for their future?

See it all in "PRAYER AND WORK FOR ISRAEL," the world's finest Jewish missionary magazine. A monthly, 24 pages, vibrating with news of these Jews and of what God is doing for them. YOU NEED THIS MAGAZINE. Sign the coupon below and read of the Jewish charm of little old New York.

The Devil's World-wide Revival

Is that what Spiritism is?

It is startling to think of Satan as conducting a world-wide revival. But many sound Christians believe that is what is now happening. The Sunday School Times recently published an editorial making this declaration; and that journal will continue, this spring, a series of startling disclosures as to the real facts and teachings of Spiritism as a religious system. Statements of the master minds of Spiritism to-day are quoted, and the searchlight of God's Word is turned on the whole diabolical, death-dealing business.

If Spiritism is in any way touching your community, will you not bring these articles in The Sunday School Times to the attention of those who may need them?

Problems of the Christian College Student

College and University life to-day perplexes the conscientious Christian student as never before.

How shall he choose the golden mean between being a recluse, an ascetic, and on the other hand engaging in activities that will injure both his life and his testimony?

Shall he, as a Christian student who would keep close to his fellow students, join a college fraternity?

Shall he go in for college dramatics?

If musical, shall he join a glee club, banjo club, mandolin club, orchestra?

These and similar questions are discussed with rare helpfulness by a young college professor, not many years out of undergraduate life himself, who is a consecrated Christian, a practical man, and a clear thinker.

Every Christian student, and the Christian parents of students, will be interested in this unusual series soon to commence in

The Sunday School Times

And in every issue you get a dozen unusual lesson-help features. on the International Improved Uniform Lessons, by the best Bible teachers in North America.

But the very best thing about this Every-Week Interdenominational Journal for Adults in Bible Study and Teaching, Sunday-school Management, and the Christian Life and Service, is that it stands for the whole Bible as the infallible Word of God, and the shed blood of Jesus as the only way of salvation.

What 15 Cents Will bring You From the Nations Capital

The little matter of 15 cts. in stamps or coin will bring you the Pathfinder 13 weeks on trial. The Pathfinder is an illustrated weekly, published at the Nation's center, for the Nation; a paper that prints all the news of the world and tells the truth and only the truth; now in its 27th year. This paper fills the bill without emptying the purse; it costs but $1 a year. If you want to keep posted on what is going on in the world, at least expense of time or money, this is your means. If you want a paper in your home which is sincere, reliable, entertaining, wholesome, the Pathfinder is yours. If you would appreciate a paper which puts everything clearly, briefly—here it is. Send 15c to show that you might like such a paper, and we will send you the Pathfinder on probation 13 weeks. The 15c does not repay us, but we are glad to invest in new friends.

Washington has become the World's Capital and reading the Pathfinder is like sitting in the inner council with those who mold the world's destiny.

"The Guest of the Storm"

THE intense cold of winter had gripped us. A blinding snowstorm paralyzed traffic and pitiless, icy winds hurled themselves, as in a rage, against the few who braved their blasts.

Down in Chinatown, that Mecca of the Great Unknown, a thin clad form was literally blown across our threshold. She was nearly frozen. A steaming cup of coffee from sympathetic hands quickly warmed her. "Let me rest a little" she pleaded—"just by myself—alone." Shortly after, when kindly voices spoke, the "Guest of the Storm" made no response. The play of life had ended. "Did you hear about that one we sent to the Morgue?" said an officer, some days later. She was —— ——, the rage of New York, back in the nineties. "Who buried her?" I asked. He jerked his finger toward the Island. As he disappeared in the distance, I wondered where she came from. I tried to picture the laughter of youth—the Mother—the old home town. All I could see, was the grim specter of Potters Field.—

A BOX OF PEARLS

¶ A Pastor in the West wrote us recently:

> ¶ "I have read and re-read your little paper, and am so interested in it that it is impossible for me to let it alone. I do not like to term your paper 'little' as it is like a small box of pearls compared with ever so large a one filled with rocks. I have studied, preached from, and lectured on the prophecies of the Bible for more than 15 years. This is the best paper to keep one informed on the up-to-date occurrences that I have seen."

Editorial Notes

Cut from the Loaf

"He showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs." Acts 1:3.

We love to introduce every issue of our magazine with a cut from the loaf of the heavenly bread, the Word of the living God, the food which our Heavenly Father has provided for the nourishment of human souls.

The text in this case is a declaration of fact, the most important fact in human history since the fall. It is not elaborated in the context or we would proceed with its exposition; but, instead of that, we offer to our readers the following beautiful and convincing outline of an address by Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D. D., on "The Resurrection of Christ as a Fact and a Force":

Here are four proofs of the fact:

1. Christ's own words that He would rise again.
2. The absence of His body; was it taken by human or superhuman hands?
3. The testimony of His disciples, who did not expect Him to rise again, and who, in three days, were changed from gloom to gladness because of it.
4. The history of the Church, which started by a belief in the resurrection, and still continues as built on an empty tomb.

Here are four illustrations of the force:

1. It is associated with our pardon (Rom. 4:25).
2. It is associated with our purity (Rom. 6:4).
3. It is associated with His presence (Matt. 28:20).
4. It is associated with His promise (John 14:2,3).

The President's Power

In Elihu Root's "Key-note" speech last month he spoke of the necessity of decentralizing the powers of the executive which have made the President "more autocratic than any sovereign in the civilized world."

The fact will not be disputed, and may be spoken of without partisanship, because it is a condition which has grown up with the years, and for which no individual and no one political party is entirely responsible.

In a republic like ours war necessarily makes for an accretion of power in the hands of the chief executive, and when the war is over the receding agitation never leaves less authority with him than it found. Abraham Lincoln's administration illustrates this, and so does McKinley's, at the time of the Spanish war. In fact that form of the centralization of power known as "Paternalism" became more pronounced under President McKinley than in any previous administration, and it was greatly augmented under President Roosevelt, because of his personal energy and his predilection for doing things. Of course, circumstances, unprecedented in history, have conspired to make the present occupant of the White House the autocrat that he is, without reflecting at all upon any supposed bias of his own mind. And it is this fact which leaves any of us free to comment upon it without inviting a charge of lèse majesté.

We think that Mr. Root, and others of our statesmen of both parties whom we are pleased to honor, deserve the most serious attention when they call upon us, as he does in the speech mentioned, to "restore the habit of freedom." It is dangerous for a people to acquire the opposite habit of bowing to power without limits. They soon become subservient, and then the character essential to freedom degenerates.

We have always thought that this notion of making the President the arbitrator in labor disputes was as dangerous to real freedom as it is unseemly to the conception of his high office. Men are now saying that the Federal administration must cease interference, however well-meant, with the natural course of business, and permit the laws which commonly govern it to operate again in order to restore it to normal conditions. But, what is more vital to business, and where are normal conditions more devoutly to be wished, than in the relations of capital and industry? A better day will dawn when the Federal administration shall cease interference at this point, and make it incumbent upon both parties to take care of their own business which they are abundantly able to do. The function of government, from the executive point of view, is to enforce the laws and keep the peace, and when it does this, class control, which is always dangerous, is unable to raise its head.

Universal Military Training

An expert military man recently said in a public address in Chicago, that "the army has lost all possibility of becoming militaristic by the experience of the war," an opinion which our personal intercourse with military men confirms. When we now speak of "military men" we have not in mind those of a professional character, or those who are making military life their vocation, but such as the mass of men who composed our great army that went over to France or prepared to go, and have since returned to their customary callings.

This opinion of theirs should be put alongside of their advocacy of what is termed "universal military training," and have weight in influencing the thinking men and women of the country in its favor. They know what war is, as the rest of us do not know, and they have been well-called the most devoted supporters of the policy of peace. To have them assure us that "war comes to peace loving peoples as a penalty for unpreparedness," and that there could be no better preparedness than universal military training should make us pause before opposing it.

Wise heads in this country say that such preparedness on our part in 1914 would have kept us out of war, and that the Germany of that day would not have ventured on the liberties she took with the lives and property of our citizens if she knew that quick reprisals could have followed.

It may seem strange that a Christian magazine should take such ground, but who can think in terms of Christianity when it comes to international quarrels in these days? It is our knowledge of history, of humanity and of the Bible too, that leads us to warn our fellow-citizens that while, as a nation, we continue to trust in our own wisdom and prowess rather than in the living God and in His Son Jesus Christ, we had better pause long enough in our money-making, and our pleasure-seeking and our promulgation of "ideals," to prepare ourselves for the next assault of some covetous or angry neighbor.

General Wood said in Baltimore some time ago: "Do not talk of this as the last great war. God will have to change human nature before we can discuss such a thing. There will be other wars, and America, to keep them from her shores, must build up her strength. We must have forces to prevent war as well as to wage it."

Since writing the above we have seen Col. Roosevelt's letter to Sir George Otto Trevelyan in 1911, which appears in the March number of Scribners.

Referring to his visit to Berlin, he speaks of a conversation with Von Tirpitz, who was intensely interested in the voyage of the American battle fleet around the world, and who said he expected Japan would attack it. Col. Roosevelt intimated that he had thought it possible, and then adds, in his letter to Sir George:

"I had been doing my best to be polite to the Japanese, and had finally become uncomfortably conscious of a very, very slight undertone of veiled truculence in their communications in connection with things that happened on the Pacific slope; and I finally made up my mind that they thought I was afraid of them.

"Every particle of trouble with the Japanese Government and the Japanese press stopped like magic as soon as they found that our fleet had actually sailed and was obviously in good trim."

Von Tirpitz and William, he said, told him that they regarded the voyage of the fleet as having "done more for peace in the orient than anything else that could possibly have happened."

The above incident recalls the reply of a Swiss general to William Hohenzollern, when the latter was emperor of Germany. He had asked after reviewing the diminutive Swiss army,

"What would happen to your little band of thirty thousand Swiss guards, if they were surrounded by my Prussian guards?"

Out of his confidence in the training and accuracy of his youths, who had been only three or four months under training, the Swiss general replied:

"We would have to shoot just twice; that's all."

H. C. of L.

It is a great thing to listen to, or read after, a man who seems to know what he is talking about. We had that feeling last month when reading the speech of Assistant Attorney General of the United States, Howard E. Figg, at the convention of the National Dry Goods Association, who named six reasons for the high cost of living, placing "profiteering," of which we hear so much, at the end.

The other five were: The increased volume of money and credits; the wide increase in wages; lessened world production; increased cost of distribution; reckless extravagance and a spirit of speculation.

Mr. Figg predicted that there would be no appreciable reduction in prices until labor "considers itself a part of the whole of industry and consents to co-operate."

"I do not mean," he explained, "that labor must give up its short work days and its high wages; but I do mean that labor must bend its back and work a full sixty minutes in each hour."

We should like to add a word about that "reckless extravagance" which marks particularly a certain stratum of the middle class, perhaps the lower middle class, and which is well illustrated by two authenticated instances recently brought to our attention. One is that of a Chicago woman who purchased a suit of clothes for her little son at $45, whereas formerly she had been in the habit of paying $3.50 for the same necessity, and who explained to the astonished saleswoman who knew her, that her husband's weekly wage was $90 now, and hence she could shop on a different scale from formerly. Evidently she had not paused to calculate how long even that wage could support such expenditure.

Another is a Cincinnati woman of the working type, who bought three silver candlesticks at $25 each, for Christmas presents and had them sent home to a part of the city where the concern had never had a customer.

Men are about as weak and silly in this direction as women. A wage earner went into a hat store the other day and paid $20 for a fedora.

Tradespeople are not green. Why should they reduce prices when there is no need of it? And they are kind-hearted, too. Why deny any of their fellowmen the supreme pleasure of making fools of themselves?

Line Up!

Senator Borah has been after the presidential aspirants as to where they stand upon international issues. If a candidate is unwilling to declare himself we usually feel either that he does not have honest convictions, or is lacking in moral courage.

What is true in politics is true in religion. These are days when the greatest moral and spiritual issues are at stake, and lines of division are being more and more sharply drawn.

The Bible itself is one of these dividing lines. Is it the Word of God? Does it still speak with authority? If not, what have those who have rejected it in whole or in part, to offer as a substitute? Should not the candidates for spiritual leadership be willing to declare themselves upon these and other issues when asked so to do?

This was put up to one who has recently taken a chair in a leading theological seminary. It is reported that he was asked by an editor of his denomination to make a simple statement of his beliefs as to certain fundamentals, but he refrained from doing so. He has been charged with holding perversive beliefs, yet he refuses to state to the contrary. What is the logical conclusion?

When so much error is abroad, has not the time come when they who aspire to teaching and other positions of influence in the Church, should go on record as to the vital issues? If sincere, and in accord with the accepted teachings of the Bible, would they not gladly avail themselves of the opportunity? Followers of Jesus Christ must be out and out for Him.

Organization or Life, Which?

Life cannot be organized. Work may be organized, and thought and people, but not life.

Life is soul and growth and mystery. Organization is imposed from without; life operates from within.

Things and people and thoughts may be organized, but life is bestowed. It is from above.

Human organizations have their place, and much may be accomplished by unity and intelligent co-operation, but the danger is that we substitute them for life.

At present the churches of America are being organized into vast forward movements, looking towards the speedy evangelization of the world. The object is imperative, of course, and every Christian should be so motived; but in the midst of so much organization and machinery, we raise the inquiry, How much life is there, life imparted and molded by the Holy Spirit? Human schemes, however vast and perfected, will eventually prove powerless and ineffective in the work of evangelization without that.

God's method of evangelizing the world is men, Spirit-filled men, and mere organization backed up by money can not produce them.

The Y. W. C. A. Amendment

On the eve of the national convention of the Y. W. C. A. in Cleveland, we again utter our protest against the "Proposed Student Amendment." That it will be adopted we fear, but that it should be withstood by every true witness for Christ goes without saying.

It is an incalculable encouragement to find ourselves in the company of such influential bodies of Christians as the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, the General Assemblies of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. and U. S., the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church (South), the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church (North), the Board of Bishops of the M. E. Church (South), and others which have registered resolutions against the amendment in the last two or three years.

Let the amendment be adopted for college associations, and soon it will be demanded for city associations, which, indeed, is already the case. What then will be the future of the Y. W. C. A. as an evangelical organization? If its disruption is intended by those who are pressing the amendment, they have taken the sure course to bring it about.

In the Same Fix

The Watchman-Examiner says:

"We have had an unusual request. Our subscription clerks have petitioned the editor to let up in his solicitation of new subscriptions until they can catch up with their work of entering new names and making new stencils! We wonder if any editor on earth ever had such an experience as this before? Nearly 400 new names were added during the past week."

Yes, brother, here's another editor in the same fix. We wonder if there's an epidemic on? Who will speak up next? Shake.

Satan—His Origin, History and Doom

Or, Spiritism at Its Source

Editorial

I

SATAN is the source of Spiritism, and since the Bible is the only place in which we can learn anything reliable about him, we now open its pages for that purpose.

As we are writing for Christians chiefly, it is assumed that the Bible is the revelation of God and not only credible as to its statements of fact, but an inspired record of them. The evidence of this is convincing, and never more so than in the twentieth century, as could easily be demonstrated if circumstances permitted or required it.

Even the casual reader of the Bible will recall the outstanding occasions when Satan appears on its scenes. First, as the "serpent" in the Garden of Eden tempting and overcoming our first parents, for twice in the New Testament the serpent is identified with the Devil and Satan (Rev. 12:9; 20:2). Next, in the history of Job (chaps. 1,2); then, later, in vision, in the Old Testament as the accuser of Israel after their return from Babylon (Zech. 3).

In the New Testament he first comes before us as Christ's tempter in the wilderness (Matt. 4:1-11 and its parallels). He entered into Judas to betray Christ (John 13:27), and into Ananias and Sapphira to lie to the Holy Ghost (Acts 5:3). He hindered Paul in his missionary work (1 Thess. 2:18). He is said to walk about as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour (1 Pet. 5:8), and in the end of this age he will give his power to the lawless one to deceive, if possible, the very elect (Matt. 24:24; 2 Thess. 2:8-10; Rev. 13:1,2).

Satan has many names in Scripture, each of which reveals some feature of his character. "Satan" itself means the adversary; "Devil," slanderer; "Apollyon," destroyer; "Beelzebub," prince of the demons; "Belial," low, abject; "The wicked one"; "the god of this world"; "the prince of darkness"; "the dragon," "tormentor," "accuser," "deceiver," "liar," "murderer," "he that hath the power of death." This sufficiently reveals the kind of being he is and furnishes a reason why we should beware of him.

II

As to the origin of Satan, some who class the cherubim as angels, think he was one of them, and anointed probably for a position of great authority. This authority may have been over primitive creation, i. e., heaven and earth as at first created, and before the earth became without form and void (Gen. 1:1). See Scofield Bible, foot-note; Great Epochs of Sacred History (Gray), chapter 1; and for a fuller treatment of the subject, Earth's Earliest Ages, by G. H. Pember.

He fell through pride (Isa. 14:12-14). Some think he was then cast out of heaven according to Christ's words in Luke 10:18, on which supposition, he then made the earth and the air the scene of his activity (Eph. 2:2; 1 Pet. 5:8).

A scriptural basis for this conjecture is in Ezekiel 28:11-15. The chapter is a rebuke of the King of Tyre, but at the verses named the language goes beyond him to Satan described in his unfallen state.

If this interpretation is correct, the chapter teaches much about Satan which is summed up by R. A. Torrey in What the Bible Teaches, thus:

1. He was the sum of created perfection (v. 12).
2. He was in the garden of God (v. 13). This does not mean the Eden of Adam, but an earlier one. The Eden of Adam was remarkable for its vegetable glory, but this for its mineral glory. (cf. Rev. 21: 10-21).
3. He was the anointed cherub that covereth (v. 14). First, he was a "cherub," the highest rank in the angelic world, secondly, "the anointed" cherub, i. e., one who was set apart for a formal work, thirdly, the anointed cherub that "covereth." The meaning of this word is not given, though it suggests Exodus 37:9.
4. He was upon the holy mountain of God (v. 14), which may mean the place where God manifested His personal glory.
5. He walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire (v. 14). This suggests Exodus 24:10, 17 (R. V.), and Ezekiel 1:15, 22, 25, 26 (R. V.). In the former the seventy elders saw the Lord of Israel, and "there was under his feet as it were a paved walk of sapphire stone," and "the appearance of the glory of the Lord was like devouring fire on the top of the mount." This may afford an idea of what the "stones of fire" were, and indicate how near Satan may have been to God.
6. His heart was lifted up because of his beauty (v. 17). (cf. 1 Tim. 3:6, R. V.).
7. He was cast out of the mountain of God, and destroyed from the midst of the stones of fire (v. 16).
8. He shall be cast to the earth and be made a spectacle (vv. 17, 18). (cf. 2 Thess. 2:8; Rev. 12: 9, 10; 19:20).

III

To go a little farther into the nature and character of Satan:

1. He is a person. i. e., he possesses self-consciousness and free-will, because the facts stated in the preceding paragraphs could not be predicated of an influence or a principle of evil.

2. He has great dignity, since he is styled the "prince," "the god of this world," and "prince of the power of the air," and it is said that Michael the archangel "durst not bring against him a railing judgment" (John 12: 31; 2 Cor. 4:4; Eph. 2:2; Jude 8, 9, R. V.)

3. He has great power, since he is able to control the forces of nature, human property and life, demons, the world-rulers of darkness, and the whole world of men out of Christ, (Job 1: 10-12; Luke 11:14-18; 1 John 5:19, R. V.; Acts 26:18; Eph. 6: 11, 12).

4. He has great cunning and deceit, since he transforms himself into an angel of light, uses wiles and devices, signs and lying wonders (Matt. 24:24; 2 Cor. 2:11; 2 Cor. 11:14; Eph. 6: 11, 12, R. V.; 2. Thess. 2:9, R. V.).

5. He has great malignity, being called the evil one, a liar, a murderer, and a sinner from the beginning (Matt. 5:37; Luke 8:12; John 8:44; 2 Cor. 4:4; 1 John 3:8).

6. He has great fear, for if we resist him he will flee from us (James 4:7).

IV

As to Satan's present location and work, he is referred to as being in the heavenly places, and also as going to and fro in the earth. As in the age to come, Christ and His Church, though abiding in the heavenly places, will rule an earthly people, so now Satan and his hosts abiding in the heavenly places are ruling an earthly people. (Job 1: 6, 7; Eph. 6: 11, 12; 1 Pet. 5:8; Rev. 12:9).

As to his work particularly:

1. He is the author of sin and tempts to sin (Gen. 3:1-6; 1 Chron. 21:1; Matt. 4:1-11.
2. He produces sickness and has the power of death (Luke 13:16; Acts 10:38; Heb. 2:14).
3. He lays snares for men (1 Tim. 3:7).
4. He takes the Word of God out of their hearts (Matt. 13:19).
5. He puts wicked purposes into their hearts (Eph. 4:27).
6. He blinds their minds (2 Cor. 4:4, R. V.).
7. He harasses and accuses them (2 Cor. 12:7; Rev. 13:9, 10).
8. He enters into them (John 13:27).
9. He does all this and more by means of the angelic messengers who carry on his work (2 Cor. 11:14, 15; Rev. 3:9).

Happily, however, there are certain limitations of his work and power. For example, being a finite and created being he can be only in one place at one time, though what is done by his agents being attributed to him, he is practically ubiquitous.

In the second place, it is re-assuring to know that his influence over the bodies of men is entirely subject to God's control (Job 2:7; Luke 13:16; Acts 10:38), and that his influence over the souls of men is simply moral. That is to say, he may offer suggestions and deceive or persuade men, but he is absolutely unable to change their hearts or coerce their wills. "Every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed" (James 1:14).

Our responsibility in regard to Satan, therefore, is three-fold: We are to watch against him (1 Pet. 5:8); to give no place to him (Eph. 4:27); and to resist him (James 4:7).

We watch against him as the context of the passage shows, by humbling ourselves under the mighty hand of God and casting all our anxiety upon Him. We give no place to him by restraining wrath and eschewing falsehood; and we resist him by the sword of the Spirit which is the Word of God.

V

It only remains for the present, to say that there are two ways in which Satan is particularly manifesting himself today in the lives and affairs of men. The Sunday School Times recently called it "the devil's world-wide revival." One is in the form of demonism and the other Spiritism, though the two are closely allied.

1. By Demonism is meant just now the worship of demons and human possession by demons. We learn from the Bible that the apostate Israelites sacrificed to demons, and that the gods of the heathen were demons. Paul charged the Athenians with being too much addicted to demon worship, which is the real meaning of the word "superstitious" in Acts 17:22. He also adds that the things which the Gentiles sacrificed they sacrificed to demons and not to God.

It is true that the Bible teaching about demoniacal possession has been denied by some, who explain the symptoms referred to as those of physical disease simply. They admit that Christ taught the contrary, but meet this by saying that He conformed His language to the vulgar notions of the times, the argument they use with reference to other subjects of His teaching, the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch, for example.

Nevertheless, the New Testament puts it beyond question that demoniacs were possessed by demons. For example, (1) they evinced superhuman strength and knowledge, even recognizing Jesus as the Son of God, as well as His power and purpose to punish the ungodly. (2) In addressing Him the demons distinguished themselves from the persons they tormented, saying in the case of the Gadarenes, "What have we to do with thee, Jesus?" and "If thou cast us out, suffer us to go away into the deep" (Matt. 8:28-31). (3) Moreover, in delivering those who were possessed, Christ spoke not to the persons themselves, but to their tormentors, saying to the latter, "Go," or "Come out." In other instances also the demons are expressly distinguished from the diseases they created, as when we read of Christ that they brought unto Him all sick people, and those that were possessed with demons, and those that were lunatic.

Nor is demoniacal possession limited to the time of Christ. It existed before Christ came, because the Jews of His day professed to cast out demons, showing that the phenomenon was not new to them; and it existed after He departed, because He commissioned His disciples to cast out demons, a commission upon which they acted.

Early Church Fathers testify to the casting out of demons in their day, and the Reformation Fathers do the same. It exists now as seen in our missionary annals, especially that recent volume, Demons and Demon Possession, by Dr. Nevius, and in current discussions on Theosophy and Spiritism and the subject of speaking with tongues.

Finally, demoniacal possession will constitute one of the awful features of the judgments of the tribulation at the end of this age, as is clearly indicated in the book of Revelation in more than one instance. The battle of Armageddon is to be brought about by the spirits of demons working miracles (Rev. 16:14).

2. The other way in which Satan is manifesting himself and is likely to do so until the end of the age is in Spiritism. The dictionary defines it as the belief that the spirits of the dead communicate with and manifest their presence to men. It is supposed that they usually do this through the agency of a human person called a medium. As was stated before, we deny that the spirits of the dead do this, but we affirm that there is a counterfeit materialization of the dead by demons. That is, demons assume a material and bodily form to deceive the living into the belief that they are communicating with the dead.

In other words, we believe that certain facts of Spiritism are true. There are some things which pass for facts that are not facts, for Satan has no desire that his work should become too apparent, but nevertheless there is a basis of fact underlying the pretensions of Spiritism, which we must not only admit, but insist upon as a testimony against it.

The scientists bear witness that while there is a large element of fraud in Spiritism, there is still a residuum of facts demanding explanation. They would refer some of these to the powers of the human mind, the "subliminal consciousness" just below the level of the normal waking life, but there are still other manifestations for which that explanation will not suffice, and to which such men testify as Alfred Russel Wallace, Sir William Crookes, Sir Oliver Lodge and the late Professor William James of Harvard. It is Sir William Crookes who in his Evidences of Spiritualism, said that "certain phenomena occur under circumstances in which they cannot be explained by any physical law at present known, is a fact of which I am as certain as I am of the most elementary fact in chemistry."

Coming to the Bible however, and it is upon that we stand, we find God legislating for Israel, and saying, "A man also, or woman, that hath a familiar spirit, or one that is a wizard, shall surely be put to death" (Lev. 20:27). This means those who are instructed in the art of intercourse with demons, and the warning it expresses is repeated in one form or another in the Old Testament very frequently. Moreover, take such illustrations as the story of Saul and the witch of Endor, or that of Paul and the Philippian damsel. The latter was what is now called a medium, and according to the Greek was possessed by the spirit Pytho, the same that guided the Delphic oracle. Her testimony to Paul and his companions proves that the messengers of Satan sometimes speak truth, when it is to their advantage to do so.

Now the Bible asserts the continuance of such satanic agency throughout this dispensation (Gal. 5:20, 21; Rev. 9:21; 16:14; 18:23; 21:8). Whether it shall continue in the form and under the name of Spiritism or not, it is impossible to say, but nevertheless as the end of the age approaches Satan's emissaries will act more and more without disguise, and "show great signs and wonders insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect" (Matt. 24:24).

VI

In summing up this distinctive branch of our subject, therefore, it is needful to keep in mind that first, Spiritism is deceitful both in its denials and in its claims. It is deceitful in its denials, for it negates the existence of Satan, the evil character of its unseen agents, and the sinfulness of communicating with them. It is deceitful in its claims, affirming that its manifestations are identical with the miracles of the Old and New Testaments. As examples of this, it classifies its phenomenon of "spirit hands" with such passages as Ezekiel 8:3 and Daniel 5:5, the latter the handwriting on the wall. A house vibrates in connection with a spiritualistic seance and it is paralleled with Acts 4:31, "the place was shaken where they were assembled together, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost."

Secondly, it is seductive. People are led into it by curiosity, and the desire for amusement with such things as "table turning," and "Planchette" and "Ouija." They are led into it by the hope of physical healing; by the professed love of science; by covetousness or the desire to increase their income through the exercise of superhuman knowledge and power, as in the case of Simon Magus (Acts 8). Some are driven into it by bereavement as we have seen, or even by distress and despair, a consciousness of being abandoned by God, as it was with Saul in the case of the witch of Endor and as it will be at the close of this age (Isa. 8:19, 20).

Thirdly, it is tenacious. To follow Satan into its snare is easy, but deliverance is difficult.

Outside of God such deliverance is impossible, and is to be found only by those who repent and forsake their sin and cast themselves on His mercy through Christ.

Hearken, therefore, to these warnings. Beware of persons who profess to have experienced sudden vivid impressions which they make the basis of subsequent action, as well as those who claim to have received peculiar endowments from God accompanied by physical manifestations of power. The higher the claim they make the more rigorously should it be tested, the test being always the Word of God. Demand that they conform thereto both in doctrine and practice, and where this is not done resist their claims.

Beware, in the second place, of all mesmeric, hypnotic and spiritistic developments which require the surrender of the will to become a passive instrument of the will of another. God has given us powers of reflection and judgment for which we are held individually responsible, and He never guides us without calling these powers into action. To forego their exercise is sin, and the temptation in that direction is now increasingly prevalent and strong. "I speak as to wise men, judge ye what I say" (1 Cor. 10: 15).

Our next contribution on this theme will deal with angels and demons, or Spiritism's personnel.

Jesus Christ, My Saviour-King

By Andrew Sherwood

A hymn in memory of D. B. Towner, one of the world's greatest gospel singers and composers.

NOTE:—When a lad of ten years my father took me to "An Evening of Song" given by John G. Towner and P. P. Bliss, who had come over to our town from an adjoining county in Pennsylvania, not many miles away, under the name of "The Yankee Boys." They were fine looking men and fine singers, whose songs I have never forgotten.

"The jolly, jolly Yankee boys are we,
And the Keystone state's our home,"

(their opening song) is still ringing in my ears after the lapse of considerably more than half a century.

John G. was the father of Daniel B. Towner, with whom I came in contact and learned to love many years later during Mr. Moody's World's Fair campaign in Chicago, when he so often sang "Christ Returneth," which I think was his favorite hymn in those days. Recalling how some song about Jesus was always his choice, I am dedicating these lines to his memory.—A. S.

On a sun-kist, sun-lit shore,
Where the shadows fall no more,
Reigneth One whom I adore—
  Jesus Christ, my Saviour.
He's the light of all that land;
Worlds were made at His command;
He is mighty, He is grand—
  Jesus Christ, my Saviour.

He it is my soul doth love,
All things else, all friends above;
Oh, how faithful I would prove—
  Jesus Christ, my Saviour.
All my hopes on Him depend;
I can trust Him to the end;
Sing, my soul, for such a friend—
  Jesus Christ, my Saviour.

Though misfortunes should befall,
Fears oppress, and woes appall,
He'll forsake me not at all—
  Jesus Christ, my Saviour.
He who gave His life for me
Said that I with Him should be,
Through the long eternity—
  Jesus Christ, my Saviour.

Lost, undone, unreconciled;
I repented—Lo! He smiled;
Born again, I am His child—
  Jesus Christ, my Saviour.
Touched with pity for my woe,
'Twas His blood, shed long ago,
Washed me whiter than the snow—
  Jesus Christ, my Saviour.

Of all faces most benign,
Of all beings most divine,
How His grace and glory shine—
  Jesus Christ, my Saviour.
He's my fortress and my tow'r,
He's of all our race the flow'r,
Lord of lords and God of power—
  Jesus Christ, my Saviour.

He is coming by and by,
From His morning-lands on high,
We'll be with Him, you and I—
  Jesus Christ, my Saviour.
As He went, so He will come,
Down the blue, ethereal dome,
Taking all the ransomed home—
  Jesus Christ, my Saviour.

Refrain:
Jesus Christ, my Saviour-King,
Loyally to Thee I cling;
Thou to me art ev'rything—
  Jesus Christ, my Saviour.

The Kingdom in Mystery

Or, the Parable of the Tares Amidst Wheat

By Rev. J. J. Ross, D. D., Pastor, Second Baptist Church, Chicago, Ill., and Lecturer on Homiletics and the New Testament in the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary

In accordance with our announcement last month, we herewith publish the first of a series of four articles on the general subject of "The Kingdom in Mystery" by Dr. Ross. It was our hope to be able to cover not only his treatment of the parable of the Wheat and Tares but also the Mustard Seed, the Leaven and the Pearl. The contributions are longer than was anticipated however, and we fear that the four articles will be necessarily limited to two of the parables only. It is a matter of regret that our space will not enable us to do more, but obligations to other contributors prevent. —Editors.

"ANOTHER parable put he forth unto them saying, The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field: But while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way. But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also. So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares? He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up? But he said, Nay: lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them. Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn."—Matthew 13:24-30.

Rev. J. J. Ross, D. D.

This parable opens with the phrase "The kingdom of heaven," used thirty-two times in the Gospel by Matthew, and eight times in the chapter before us. Five times in this book we have "The kingdom of God." This teaches us at the outset that the phrase is important, and of the greatest significance. In fact, it contains one of the most remarkable ideas of all time. The use of it by the Lord is most interesting because it was His watchword, or comprehensive term, for all of his teaching and ministry.

The Meaning of "Heaven"

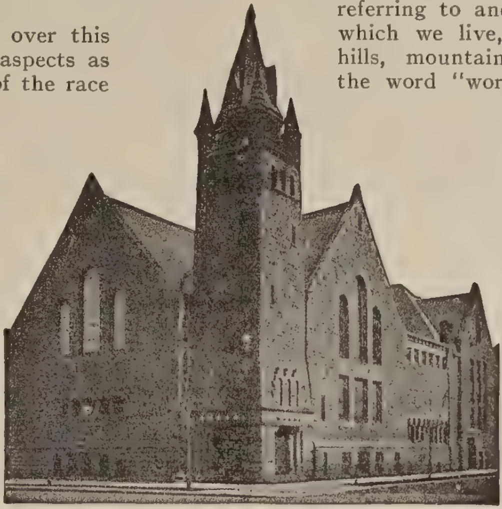
Manifestly, there are four "heavens" distinguished in the Bible. First, the lower, or aerial heaven, or the region of the clouds (Gen. 1:6-8). This heaven is spoken of as a "firmament," or expanse, between the waters above and the waters beneath. There is also the stellar, or planetary heaven (Ps. 19:1). This heaven shows forth not the mercy, love and grace of God, but His glory, which is His wisdom, power and divinity. There is the heaven of the heavens, the abode of God, of the glorified Christ, of holy angels, and of the departed, saved dead (Luke 24:53). There is that heaven which is another name for God. This is the heaven referred to by the prodigal (Luke 14:21), when he confessed, "Father, I have sinned against heaven and before thee." The heaven here is not a sphere, a state, or a condition, or even a place, but a person, and that person is God, the One against whom all have sinned.

In this phrase, then, as thus used in these parables, heaven is a name for God. That this is clear, we will observe when we notice that the phrases "The kingdom of heaven," and "The kingdom of God," are used interchangeably in the Gospels. The "kingdom of heaven" in Matthew is the "kingdom of God" in Mark 4:30. "The mysteries of the kingdom of heaven" in Matthew 13:11 is the "mystery of the kingdom of God" in Mark 4:11. So that the Kingdom of Heaven means the Kingdom of God.

The Meaning of "Kingdom"

The word "kingdom" is used one hundred and eighteen times in the four Gospels, and has a variety of meanings. According to one, it signifies the territory, or country, subject to a king. In this sense we speak of the kingdom of Belgium, Holland, Italy, and Great Britain. The word is used also to describe one of the extensive divisions into which natural objects are classified the animal, vegetable, and mineral kingdoms. Then, the word "kingdom" has the meaning of dominion, rule, reign, sovereignty, or government. This is its significance as employed in this remarkable phrase: "The kingdom of heaven," meaning the rule, reign, dominion, or government of God, in and over this earth.

But the reign of God over this earth has at least three aspects as it relates to the history of the race and of the world. There is its past aspect, dating from the commencement of time up to the first advent of Christ. That was the reign of Jehovah, as God, on the earth. There is that aspect of the rule of God as it relates to the period of time between the first and second advents of Christ, a period of about two-thousand years. This is the reign or rule, of the Son, and may be described as the "Kingdom of heaven in mystery." Further, there is the government of God which will be established on the earth sometime in the future when Christ comes a second time. It will extend on into eternity, and is spoken of as "The kingdom of the Father." This is the Kingdom of God referred to by Christ (Matt. 24:34), when he said to those on the right hand, "Come ye blessed of the Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from before the foundation of the world." This is also "The kingdom of the Father," mentioned in Matthew 13:43.



Second Baptist Church, Chicago.

The Meaning of "Field"

There was a field mentioned in the previous parable. In the chapter this word is used seven times, verses 24, 27, 31, 36, 38, 44. Three times it is spoken of as "the field," twice "his field," once, "thy field," and once, "that field." In the original, the definite article "the" is always used before this word, referring to it as "the field," signifying that it is a particular field, and the only field. The field in these parables is the property of the "man," to which he holds the title, having made it his own at a great price (v. 44).

Now what did the Lord mean by "the field?" There are those who think that the field means the individual human heart. Others have taken the field to be the community of genuine Christians. Others have made the field to include both true and false Christians. But the Saviour fully explained what He meant by the field when He said, "The field is the world" (v. 38).

The Meaning of "World"

There are several words for world in the New Testament. The first of these words (Rev. 13:3), means "earth" or "land," referring to and describing the globe on which we live, with its plains, valleys, hills, mountains and rivers. There is the word "world" (Matt. 24:14), which is used fourteen times, and means the habitable earth. Further, there is the world (Matt. 12:41), which describes an indefinite time, age, epoch, or dispensation.

This word is used at least thirty-one times in the New Testament, and of that number it is employed four times in this series of parables, verses 22, 39, 40, 49. When we read about "the end of the world," here, it does not mean the end of the material earth, nor the beings that inhabit the earth, but rather the close of a certain epoch, era, or dispensation. The first of these words describes the earth in relation to the creation of God; the second is the word used to describe the earth in relation to the animal kingdom; and the third is the term used to set forth the earth and its inhabitants in relation to time.

Furthermore, there is the word world (Matt. 4:8), which literally means beauty, order, arrangement, symmetry, law. This word is employed over two hundred times in the New Testament, and refers to the social order as organized, federated, and estranged from God and His Christ. This is the world of mankind, in tribes, families, unions, clubs, nations. This is the term used in the phrase, "The field is the world." It is used twice in this chapter, verses 35, 38.

Then the field, or the world, is that great evil system, or order, in the earth, made up exclusively of unregenerate humanity, and organized under the authority of Satan. It includes all unsaved men and women who have lived since the first advent, are now living, and will yet live, before the second advent of Christ, with their evil undertakings, plans, ideals, and federations. It includes in its sweep the whole mass of unsaved, fallen humanity.

Of this system Satan is represented as the dominating head. Though there is much religion, culture, intelligence, or social order in the world, yet this satanic system, of itself, and apart from God, has never improved its own moral condition, but has rather grown worse and worse, until it is now said to be under condemnation (John 3:18). Though the world of the unsaved may be moral, educated, refined, and even religious, not a member of that system is righteous in God's sight, for we read: "There is none righteous, no not one," and, "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:10,23). This world hated Jesus Christ and crucified Him, and in like manner it hates the one in whom Christ dwells (1 John 3:13). The world does not understand the Christian, because it does not understand Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the Christian (1 John 3:1).

The "field" in our parable then, is the world, and the world is all of that social order, organized and federated, under the inspiration and domination of Apollyon, to which the Church is giving her testimony concerning Christ and His power to save.

We are now prepared to study this parable in particular, to see its meaning, and how it is related to the history of the Kingdom of Heaven on earth in this dispensation. It is important that we should understand every symbol in it, so we will separate four different things, and notice them carefully.

I

In the first place, this parable mentions two sowers. It reads: "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field; but while men slept his enemy came, and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way." We are not left in doubt as to who these sowers are, for in explaining this part of the symbolism, the Master said: "He that soweth the good seed is the Son of Man," and "The enemy that sowed them is the devil." Nothing could be plainer than this explanation of the two sowers.

The Meaning of "Son of Man"

The first sower, then, is the "Son of Man." This title was a self-designation of Jesus. In the Gospel by Matthew alone it occurs thirty-one times; in Mark, fifteen times; in Luke, twenty-five times; and in John, twelve times. It was always on the lips of Jesus Himself, except once, when the by-standers asked what He meant by the title (John 12:34). Outside of the Gospels, it occurs only once (Acts 7:56), and twice in the Revelation. At first, it seems like a very apt title for the human element in our Lord's person, the divine element being denoted by the phrase, "Son of God."

That this was supposed to be its meaning by many, is clear from many statements we read upon the meaning, or significance, of this title. There were those, and there are those, who think that the title sets forth the loftier conception of Christ's nature and person on His human side. They claim that the title placed Christ before us as the head, the type, the ideal, of the race. There are those who claim that by this title the Saviour set Himself forth in a humbler fashion, not having a place in this earth to lay His head, as the "Son of man" (Matt. 8:20).

An Old Testament Title

But Jesus did not invent this phrase, because it is frequently found in the Old Testament. In the prophecy by Ezekiel, it is used ninety different times. It is frequently found in the Psalms. In the book of Ezekiel, it is always applied to the prophet himself, and designates him only when fulfilling his prophetic mission.

There was one other before Christ who bore this title, at least, in certain moments of his life. He was addressed from the same high source, in the same terms as was Ezekiel (Dan. 8:17). Daniel said: "So he came near where I stood; and when he came I was affrighted and fell upon my face; but he said unto me, Understand, O son of man."

Some think that Jesus borrowed this title from Ezekiel and Daniel, to express His consciousness that He belonged to the same prophetic line.

However, there is, in the same book of Daniel, another occurrence of the phrase in a totally different sense, to which attention is called (Dan. 7:7-14). In this chapter there is one of the apocalyptic visions common to the prophet. In this vision, four beasts are seen coming up out of the rolling, tossing sea—the first, a lion with eagle's wings; the second, a bear; the third, a four-headed leopard; and the fourth, a terrible monster with ten heads. These beasts, standing for four successive world empires, bear rule over the earth; but at last the kingdom, or world government, is taken away from them and given to a fifth ruler, called "The Son of man," to whom is given dominion and glory and a kingdom that all people, nations, languages, should serve and obey him: his dominion to be an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom, that kind of a kingdom which shall never be destroyed.

Jesus as Coming Judge

When we compare these words with the words of Jesus during the trial (Matt. 26:64), we hear the echo of the Old Testament words, which cannot be mistaken. (See also Matt. 24:30).

Evolution and Agnosticism

A Business Man's Viewpoint

By Eugene Charles Callaway, Atlanta, Ga.

SOME years ago while visiting the Broken Arrow coal fields of Alabama, a friend presented me with a small stone worn smooth, evidently by the action of water. It seems they were prospecting for coal, and first cut down the original forest that had been growing on this spot from time immemorial. Then the solid earth was removed for a depth of about eighteen feet, and a bed of coal was found. In cutting through the seam, an additional distance of about five feet was excavated.

Under this coal was found a bed of sand filled with pebbles, one of which was given me, and which I in turn presented to a college where it is now on exhibition in the museum.

It is an interesting speculation as to how long ago a stream of water flowed over this little sand bed, and then how many ages the water flowed over these rugged stones, and finally imparted to them the smoothness they finally acquired.

Continuing our speculations, we are carried back to the time when there was some internal convulsion of the earth which rent the stones into fragments. This was undreamed of ages ago when the water first began its operations on these rugged bits of stone, until they were finally polished by succeeding ages of flowing water.

Then followed the carboniferous age when the coal beds were formed above this stream, evidently diverting it from its course. Succeeding ages followed, when the coal was covered to the depth already mentioned, with solid earth, and on top of that the growth of the forest, with all the time required for its maturity.

Such, indeed, would be a reasonable hypothesis to account for these stones being imbedded at that particular spot. Or were they placed there by a special divine creation, with the strata of coal and earth, crowned with the forest, all placed in the exact location as described when the excavation was made?

Is it incompatible with a sincere belief in the inspiration of the Bible and in evangelical religion, to believe the first hypothesis given above as to the physical changes that took place in this stratum of the earth? Or is it agnosticism not to believe that all these strata were originally created and placed there in the beginning?

I had another friend to present me with a piece of hardened clay on which was the imprint of the foot of a fowl, resembling that of a turkey. This piece of earth was found in the excavation of a well, about thirty feet beneath solid clay. If we believe in cause and effect, there must have been an animal at that time to make such an impression in the plastic clay.

Miraculous Creation vs. Agnosticism

Surely no one, even those claiming the earth was made perfect in the beginning, would deny the subsequent physical changes that took place. When this is admitted, however, the way is opened for indefinite changes since that perfect creation, and evolution of some kind is admitted. If constant change is denied, then how account for the impress of the foot of the fowl in the heart of the earth? If, on the other hand, constant physical changes are admitted, where shall the line be drawn when such changes began, and from what stage of perfect creation?

Evolution is such a comprehensive term that whenever the word is employed in a critical sense its complexion of meaning should be clearly set forth in the criticism. The evolution subscribed to by Henry Hudson and Henry Drummond would be a different evolution from that expounded by Haeckle. The evolution of agnosticism could find no sympathy and no support in the scientific deduction of the former, although there are similar terms employed by both.

The papers recently carried the announcement of the passing away of Rev. James W. Lee, D. D., of St. Louis, a writer of considerable note. I recall that on one occasion some years ago he informed me that he had in the press an exegesis of the Bible, which he wanted me to read. When I replied that I did not care to read his interpretation of the Bible because I had read about all the criticisms on that book that I cared for, and had long ago made up my opinion which could never be changed by further readings, he was greatly surprised that I thought he was critical.

In that conversation we passed on to the subject of evolution, and had several subsequent conversations relative thereto. These talks convinced me that he was sound in the faith, which I had greatly doubted at first, and I suggested his making himself clear on the subject of evolution. He submitted to me his next manuscript for criticism.

The position he took was that while all creation was in fact a miracle, nevertheless it was brought about by the process of evolution, which was preceded in several instances by a special divine creation.

Among these special miraculous creations was first that of the nebulae; which in turn was developed by evolution under the direct superintendence of the Creator. Then later there was the special miraculous creation of life; the miraculous birth of the Saviour, and His miraculous resurrection; and still further the miracle of the new birth that we call conversion, or the beginning of spiritual life. From this statement it can be seen that there are opinions of evolution, and opinions of evolution.

I believe the opinion of a great agnostic on this question is well worthy of the most thoughtful consideration:

"Little as it seems to do so, fearless inquiry tends continually to give a firmer basis to all true religion. The timid sectarian, alarmed at the progress of knowledge, obliged to abandon one by one the superstitions of his ancestors, and daily finding his cherished beliefs more and more shaken, secretly fears that all things may some day be explained, and has a corresponding dread of science: thus evincing the profoundest of all infidelity—the fear lest the truth be bad."

The agnosticism of Mr. Spencer; his sin of pride, conceit, and arrogance, as well as his religious philosophy, should not so militate against whatever truth he might present, that we cannot select the pearls. Even the threshing machine separates the wheat from the chaff. Why, then, cannot a man, stayed on the divine principle of evangelical and eternal truth— be able to reject the chaff while accepting the truth?

The logic of John Stuart Mill might not appeal to the heart and mind of the evangelical believer, and his free trade propaganda may not appeal to the intellect of the majority of us; and yet shall we not read John Stuart Mill? For how else can we refute his logic, or learn to discern between the chaff and the wheat that is so prolific in his writings?

Given an analytical mind such as Herbert Spencer's, who could present so clearly his viewpoint of the law of evolution from the homogeneous to the heterogeneous, it is indeed strange how he could "slowly and insensibly" form a false perception of any radical incongruity between the Bible and the order of nature—when in fact there was no incongruity, and such conviction on his part was the conviction of an untruth.

Did the attitude of the church to Galileo prejudice other scientists coming after him? And did they have good reason when a great truth appealed to them, which truth was denied by the church, to be prejudiced against those other truths which they had not investigated and which the church held so dear?

We have the spectacle of a man of genius discovering a great truth which is rejected by the church which holds another great truth—and both perceiving the infidelity of the other, neither perceiving the truth which was in the other.

There have been exceptions. Perhaps Henry Hudson was a man of far less genius than Spencer or Wallace, and yet his scientific presentation of the divine origin of life is unassailable; and his logic presenting the evolution of life—bears the stamp of eternal truth.

When pussy cat was asked in Mother Goose Rhymes where she had been, she replied that she had been to London town and to Westminster Abbey; but pussy cat did not see the wonderful architecture of Westminister Abbey, nor all the marvelous beauty of the throne, nor the great queen who sat thereon; but pussy cat, like so many intellects of a higher order, saw only what she was looking for.

Undoubtedly, the reason that a man like Spencer could not find God as the mighty Creator, whether by the nebular process or otherwise, was simply because he was not looking for Him. Henry Hudson, on the other hand, found God as the scientific divine origin of life because his heart was open for all truth, and he accepted evolution as truth, and he accepted God working through evolution, as truth.

Notwithstanding the fact, however, that Herbert Spencer failed to find God, it does not preclude the fact that he did realize other truths. It may be that the nebular hypothesis cannot be demonstrated or established by mathematical calculations, but many of the great truths which he presented in support of that hypothesis were self-evident, and so strongly supported the nebular hypothesis that in reading the Bible account of the creation in a parallel column, it might surprise even some of the critics of Herbert Spencer.

The Agnosticism of Charles Darwin

Believing as I do that the Bible can never be successfully assaulted, it would therefore be an axiom in my mind that the Bible and science absolutely correlate. It is therefore the more strange that Darwin should assault the Bible because he conceives a disparity between the account in Genesis of the creation, and the hypothesis that he accepts, and which he endeavors to substantiate. A simple faith in God should never be staggered by the thought that the creation might have been planned and executed through the use of nebulae—by the Logos proclaimed in the first chapter of John; nor that such a manner of creation should in the least antagonize the account in Genesis that "in the beginning God created the heaven and the earth."

And right at this point I conceive to be the real divergence. One denies the plausibility of nebulous matter, and can conceive only of an earth created, as it is pleased to be called, "perfect." Another one wonders that the mind of finite man should confine the great Creator within the limits of any single plan of creation.

If the church made a mistake with Galileo, could she not make a similar mistake in regard to this cosmogony? And why at every step of the investigating mind of man has the church been appalled with the fear that he might discover some truth that has not already been embraced by the church? Surely this is not the faith of Abraham and the patriarchs! There certainly can be no antithesis between the spoken and written Word of the Creator and His work. I must confess that although I have read many sketches of Darwin's life, which had assailed his peculiar religious philosophy, my impressions nevertheless from reading his works, have always been that he was profoundly impressed with the immanence of God. I have always been under the impression that he was less dogmatic than some of his critics; and that he ascribed to God the creation, though in the plan of that creation he might have been thought an agnostic.

As stated previously, I am also sincerely of the opinion that some of those dear men who preach to us against evolution, have really lost sight of the real presentation of the nebular hypothesis by its advocates.

The Deadly Parallel Column

To discover the real difference of opinion, or the real analogy between two or more schools of thought, the recourse to parallel columns is the most effective way to demonstrate that which each one believes, and to determine the divergence of opinion between them. With this in view I am presenting herewith in the first column the Bible version; parallel, in the second column the nebular hypothesis in the exact words of Herbert Spencer himself: in the third column the dogmatic position held by our ministry (shall I say the church?) as expressed in a recent article in the Christian Workers Magazine on the "Passing of the Nebular Hypothesis."

In presenting these parallel columns, the first will be headed simply "The Bible Statement"; the second column will be headed "The Nebular Hypothesis"; the third column will be headed "The Dogmatic View."

THE BIBLE STATEMENT	THE NEBULAR HYPOTHESIS (SPENCER)	THE DOGMATIC VIEW
(Gen. 1:1,2). "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep: and the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters."	"It is settled beyond dispute that organic progress consists in a change from the homogeneous to the heterogeneous. With a view of showing that if the nebular hypothesis be true, and that the genesis of the solar system supplies one illustration of this law, let us assume that the matter of which the sun and planets consist was in a diffused form; and that from the gravitation of its atoms there resulted a gradual concentration. "It is now generally agreed among geologists that the earth was a mass of molten matter; and that it is still fluid, and still incandescent at the distance of a few miles beneath its surface. Originally then, it was homogeneous, and in virtue of the circulation that takes place in heated fluids, must have been comparatively homogeneous in temperature; and it must have been surrounded by an atmosphere consisting partly of the elements of air and water, and partly of those various other elements which assume a gaseous form at high temperatures."	" 'In the beginning God created the earth.' Why should not a perfect God create a perfect earth in the beginning? The earth was created perfect, La Place and Darwin notwithstanding, and that it became void and a waste by a great catastrophe, which is suggested by Scripture. 'It cannot be demonstrated by observations or established by mathematical calculations. It has never been altogether satisfactorily agreed to as a hypothesis, and the advance of the years has accumulated against, rather than in its favor.' "

		which the most of the system is obedient, was probably introduced by the visit of an ancestral sun. The Holy Spirit has not seen fit to reveal the method by which the earth became 'without form and void.'"
(Gen. 1:9,10). "And God said let the waters under the heavens be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear; and it was so. God called the dry land earth, and the gathering together of the waters called he seas: and God saw that it was good."	"The intermediate surface must have followed the contracting nucleus with less uniformity; and there must have resulted large areas of land and water. A surface varied by table-lands and intersected by mountain chains, must when raised out of the ocean have an outline extremely irregular, both in its leading features and in its details. Thus endless is the accumulation of geological and geographical results slowly brought about by this one cause—the contraction of the earth."	"By mathematical investigation it has been shown that there are great mechanical differences in the contraction of a ring into a spheroid as simply and as promptly as supposed by La Place. On the other hand from our present knowledge of gases, we know that the tendency would be to disintegrate rather than to condense."
(Gen. 1:11,12). "And God said let the earth bring forth grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit tree yielding fruit after its kind, whose seed is in itself upon the earth; and it was so. And the earth brought forth grass and herb yielding seed, and the fruit tree yielding fruit after its kind, whose seed was in itself upon the earth: and God saw that it was good."	"Omitting detailed explanations, and allowing for the qualifications which cannot here be specified, it is clear that geological annotations have all along tended to complicate the formation of life. Whether regarded separately or collectively, the same causes which have led to the evolution of the earth's crust from the simple into the complex, have simultaneously led to a parallel evolution of the life upon its surface."	(We do not have the exact quotation convenient, but it is well known that dogmatism imputes a perfect creation in the beginning of animal life just as it claims a perfect physical earth creation.)
(Gen. 1:14-16). "God said, Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven to divide the day from the night; and let them be for signs, for seasons, for days and years: and let them be for lights in the firmament of heaven to give light upon the earth: and it was so. And God made two great lights; the greater light to rule the day and the lesser light to rule the night; He made the stars also."	"Without committing ourselves to it as more than a speculation, though a highly probable one, let us again commence with the evolution of the solar system out of the nebulous medium. From the mutual attraction of the atoms of a diffused mass, whose form is unsymmetrical, there results not only condensation, but rotation: gravitation similarly generates both the centripetal and centrifugal forces. While the condensation and the rate of rotation are progressively increasing the approach of the atoms necessarily generates a progressively increasing temperature. As this temperature rises, light begins to be evolved; and ultimately there results a revolving sphere of fluid matter radiating intense heat and light—a sun."	"Putting together our recently acquired knowledge, the presence of numerous dark suns, and the observation of new stars and their nebulae, Chamberlain and Moulton have worked out the arrangement of systems by the collision or near approach of two dark suns—the reaction of which is the spiral nebulae with which the heavens are covered."
(Gen. 1:26,27). "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing	"The smallest known remains of mammals are those of small marsupials, which are the lowest of the mammalian type; while conversely the highest of the mammalian type—man—is the most recent."

that creepth upon the earth. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them."

Conclusion

After presenting the above quoted parallel views, there is very little more that could be said in the space available for this article. The three statements are presented, and one can take his choice. So far as I can see, the nebular hypothesis coincides remarkably with the statement in Genesis; nor can I see any disparity between them. The second verse of Genesis where the statement is made that "the Spirit of God moved" would account for all the phenomena that has happened in the universe since time began. The nebular hypothesis as presented in the exact words of

Easter in Armenia

Or, Where Our Customs Found Their Origin

Furnished by the Near East Relief Committee, 1 Madison Ave., New York

EASTER in America has become in so many places a fashion-opening, the time for new bonnets and straw hats, that some of us have perhaps forgotten the days, so long ago, when these customs first found light. In the days before the war, according to one of the young refugees who found her way to America through the Near East Relief, Easter and its preceding days of fasting and repentance, was a series of ceremonials of great interest and beautiful memory.

Even the bright colored eggs left by agile bunny rabbits in grassy nests in the garden or queer corners about the house, have in the far-away land by the Mediterranean, a meaning very much more serious and sacred than the mere pleasure of children.

In Armenia, where for the last five years there has been no Easter morning, this year will prove of new significance, a light after darkness indeed.

And it is strange, and yet not so, since Armenia is the oldest Christian nation, to realize how close our own customs follow those of the Near East; to know that as our children are "cracking eggs" on Easter morning, so over there little children are playing the same quaint game.

The Origin of the Easter Egg

Before the days of fasting, which corresponds to Lent, there are two weeks of carnival. During the first week everyone abstains from meat, and during the second only dairy products are allowed. This is known as "Cheese Week," when milk, butter, cheese, and eggs may be eaten, for after this period of feasting all animal products are prohibited. The truly pious Armenian will not touch meat, fish, or even milk and eggs, or any animal fats, during the forty days of fasting and prayer.

Perhaps we have found the origin of the Easter egg in the fact that eggs are the last bit of "food of the flesh" eaten before Lent begins; and the brightly colored Easter eggs are the first food of this kind tasted after the Lenten season.

In the Greek and Armenian churches during Passion Week, which begins with Palm Sunday and ends with Easter, the greatest events in Christ's life are reiterated with appropriate ceremonies, as for example, Christ's entrance into the city amid the enthusiastic demonstrations of the people.

The pageant of the ten virgins also is a feature, where, with appropriate services ten maidens enter the church, and march toward an inner door. Five enter this door and then it is closed, while those without wail, and sing a chant of mourning.

The Thursday before Easter, in both the Greek and Armenian churches, the ceremony of feet-washing is performed in memory of the Master, who, at the last supper, washed the feet of His disciples. The bishop of the church, after the communion, washes the feet of twelve priests, while twelve passages are read from the Scriptures on the sufferings of Jesus.

On this day also, the eggs which have been stained with henna and other native vegetable dyes in beautiful shades, especially the brilliant purple and deep red, are taken to the church, where they remain throughout Passion Week, to be taken home on Easter morning, for the breaking of Lent.

Good Friday, the day of Christ's crucifixion, is commemorated by a procession, when the tomb of the Lord, represented by a shrine, is carried through the church and into the surrounding grounds, that all the crowd may see and touch the hangings.

"Crying Night" and "Joyful Morn"

At midnight between Friday and Saturday there is the "crying night" celebrated with hymns and Scripture reading on the sufferings and burial of Jesus.

Eastertime in Palestine—A Typical Coffee Scene Outside Damascus Gate, Jerusalem

The real Easter service takes place early Sunday morning when the spiritual leader stands in front of the altar with a lighted candle. As he looks into the shrine, which represents the tomb of Christ, he calls out, "He is not here." This is the dramatic climax, when the attitude of the congregation changes to rejoicing, the singing takes on a new glad note, and as the cry is heard, "He is risen," the people in one voice acclaim, "Blessed be the resurrection."

For three days following Easter morn, this is the greeting of friend to friend.

"Christos hareav!" "Christ is Risen!" And the salutation in return:

"Orhneal eh harootune Krisdosee," "He is risen indeed!"

From the candle on the altar, all light their little tapers, signifying that Christ is the light of the world, shedding hope on a world of darkness.

To Jerusalem, at the Holy Sepulcher, where the fire is always kept burning, pilgrims journey from as far off as Russia during the Easter week, and there, on Easter morning, light their tapers from the candle of the prelate as he returns from the altar. If it is possible to reach home with the flame still burning, the light is regarded as sacred and guarded carefully.

Now follows rejoicing and merry making, and friendly greetings. One is very impolite in Armenia if he does not pay respectful calls on all his friends, sometimes with little gifts, sometimes with a word of greeting, when he is always served with sweetmeats or other delicacies.

On Good Friday the church is draped in mourning, the people wear black, and business houses close. On Easter, the house of worship is decked in its finest hangings, flowers strew the aisles, and the congregation is garbed in gala attire. Perhaps from this originates our intense desire for new millinery and dresses for Easter day.

Another quaint custom follows the Sunday after, for as there can be no marriages during Lent, the week after Easter proves a time of nuptials.

So the Armenians in their way celebrate this greatest day in the history of all the world. Happily they are again able to turn to their friends with the glad greeting "Christ is Risen!" and receive the reply, "Blessed Be the Resurrection!"

Some Interesting Things About Jews

IS THE NAME "SHEENY" A REPROACH?

By Ex-Rabbi Henry Bregman, of New York.

IF A HEBREW Christian speaks to a Jew on Christianity, the latter sometimes says to the former, "Do not Christians call the Hebrews 'Sheeny,' an epithet of contempt?"

But is the name "Sheeny" a reproach? On the contrary, the word "Sheeny" is an appellation of honor and respect, as I shall go on to show.

The original of the word was due to the rare and beautiful method of recognizing a Jewish house, or a Jew in olden times by the letter "Shin" which stood for Shaddai, or God Almighty, and "Sheeny" is but a corruption of this name.

If the reader will open his Bible to Psalm 119, between verses 160 and 161 he will find the

(Copyright International)

Eastertime in Palestine—Mount Zion from the West, on the Road to Bethlehem word "Shin" or "Schin." In some Bibles after this word there is a peculiar mark.

This Psalm is divided into twenty-two parts or stanzas in the original Hebrew Bible, and is known in the synagogue as "Eight Alphabets," because each stanza contains eight verses.

The first letter of each verse is that which gives the name to the stanza. For example, the first eight verses begin with "Aleph," the second eight verses begin with "Beth" and so on. The twenty-first division begins with the letter "Shin."

Now, as soon as we are familiar with the letter "Shin," let us examine its value in the Jewish religion.

This letter is more frequently used in Jewish daily life than any other of the twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet.

On each Jewish house there is a small scroll of parchment with the inscription of fifteen passages of Scripture (Deut. 6: 4-9; 11: 13-21), in obedience to the commandment, "And thou shalt write them upon the door posts of thy house, and on thy gates" (Deut. 6: 9; 11: 20, R. V.).

In order that the scroll should not be exposed to danger or decay, it is put into a case made of glass, wood or tin. Outside the case a big "Shin" is engraved, and each time upon entering or leaving the house, the "Shin" is kissed as a token of love for God, because it stands for Shaddai, God Almighty.

The whole thing, the scroll and the case, is called "Mezuzah."

Also on the phylacteries, or "tefillin," which are scrolls of parchment inscribed with passages of Scripture (Ex. 13: 1-10; 11-16; Deut. 6: 4-9; 11: 13-21), enclosed in a black calfskin case, and worn on the left arm. On the forehead of every religious Jew, there is a large "Shin" on the one worn on the forehead, on both right and left sides, in conspicuous places.

It is clear that the origin of the term "Sheeny" is this well-known "Shin" on the "Mezuzah," and on the phylacteries or "tefillin" and indicates a Jewish house in the one case and a Jew in the other.

The modern word "Sheeny" is used in a degrading sense, as also is occasionally the name "Jew" itself. Alas, it is thought by some to convey a suspicion of reproach!

Many Jews are ashamed to be called by this honorable name, which is derived from "Judah," "This time will I praise Jehovah." (Gen. 29: 35, R. V.)

Every true Hebrew Christian ought to be proud of being a Jew for his Master's sake, who, according to the flesh, was also a Jew, and he may also be proud of being called "Sheeny," for the latter term is, as we have shown above, no less honorable than the former.

HOW TO DEAL WITH A JEWISH INQUIRER

By Rev. William Wallace Ketchum

SOME time ago there came to The Moody Bible Institute from a young settlement worker a request for advice as to how best to deal with a young Jewish girl who had been reached with the gospel, but who said, "I cannot tell mother."

In making the request the worker wrote: "The question in my mind has been, should I tell her to take an open stand with the likelihood that she would be sent out from home when I have no place to which she could go?

"I have visited the mother, who was cordial, though I feel reasonably sure she does not know we are teaching her daughter the gospel.

"To show how Satan works, in our last conversation with the girl, she had just reached the point where she was about to surrender, and we were beginning to tell God about it, when another child cried out that her mother was down stairs and was angry because she was alone with one of the teachers. This was untrue, but it frightened her dreadfully and she ran downstairs, and I have not had an opportunity of talking with her since, but I hope to soon.

"What should I advise her to do?"

This inquiry was sent by the Institute to a Christian worker among the Jews who has had years of experience, and upon whose labors the blessing of God unmistakably rests. The reply sent by her is filled with such good, wholesome, Christian advice that others who are interested in work among God's chosen people Israel, should have the benefit of it. She wrote:

"I have found that it is always best to let the parents know just what we are teaching, and to gain their consent to let the children come rather than to urge them to come without the knowledge of their superiors. At first it was not easy, but as we have gained the confidence of the people of our community we have little trouble from parents whose children come to us. It is known all around here that this is a 'Jesus House,' as the children call it. A number of our children have taken a stand for Christ and some of them are truly saved, we know.

"The children are taught about Jesus in the classes and they learn verses from the Bible so that all who come in here may know what they must do to be saved. It becomes a blessed privilege and a great responsibility when we realize that they are God's own chosen people and that they need the gospel as well as the Gentiles.

"Some of our children have been forbidden to come here to the religious services. In such instances we have made it a point to see the parents, and invite them to come and see for themselves what we are teaching.

"As to the young girl in question, you must remember that as yet she is not established, and if you have no home to offer her in case she is put out of her own home when making open confession of her faith, I would suggest that you be cautious in this matter. You might by having her come out, gain her but lose your influence over hundreds of others who in future will look upon you as one who proselytes.

"In our years of labor among these people we have found that it always pays to be above board. When a new child has come to our Sunday-school and we have found that the parents object, we have gone to them and talked with them, and often we have heard them say that they were surprised to find the missionaries so honest.

"I believe that the Master will give you grace to be 'as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves' in this matter so vital to the young girl, to you and the community you work in."

THE CALL FOR A PROPHETIC CONFERENCE ON BEHALF OF ISRAEL IN JUNE

WE ARE nearer the end of the present age, nearer the time of "Jacob's trouble" and the great tribulation, nearer the restoration of Palestine to the Jews as a nation, and nearer the coming Kingdom of our God and His Christ, than we were one year ago when we sent forth the last "Call" for a Jewish Prophetic Conference.

The strife and strain among the nations still continue in spite of the cry of "Peace." But according to the Scriptures there can be no permanent peace and no outpouring of millennial blessings upon the nations, apart from Israel.

It is highly important, therefore, at this time of the world's greatest need, that God's people should meet to consider the "sure word of prophecy," and pray for the peace of Jerusalem, the city of the great King, for her peace involves the peace of the whole world. God has declared: "I the Lord will hasten it in its time." Is it not a time for God to work speedily, according to His promises?

We therefore call upon all Christians who love our Lord Jesus Christ, the King of the Jews, to gather in a conference on behalf of Israel, to be held, God willing, in the Auditorium of The Moody Bible Institute, North LaSalle St. and West Chicago Ave., Chicago, June 7-10, 1920, with three sessions daily.

A Day of Sunshine and Shadow

By J. Allen Spidell

IT WAS such a day in the natural world, but I refer not to that at this time. There was a strange, surprising blending of sunshine and shadow in the mental and moral concept of things. The writer had a day which gave him relief from constant strain, and he made use of it in such a way that it resulted in a varied religious experience.

The New Thought exponent was visited first. What a misnomer is found in this religious cult! This new thought is as old as pagan philosophical guessing and much more dangerous.

The New Thought man began by pulling God from His throne and ruling all true religious principles out of order. "I want to talk about you," he began. "I want to show you how great you really are." Right through his little program he glorified the deity of man.

This cult is sometimes called the Church of Silent Demand. Here again the majesty of misnomer is clearly seen. I would call it the Church of Boisterous Demand. In its relations to God's moral movements in His world, it is absolutely ridiculous if not immoral. It lays down before God a self-made program and then says to Him, "This is what you must do, and you must do it for we can do it for you." Thus God, the infinite object of worship, is over-ruled and the New Thought man exalts himself to God's place. Alas! where is the beginning, and what shall the ending be? This certainly is shadow. For if anything makes the heart of God weep, it is such folly which gambles with eternal truth.

The next speaker who was heard on this day of varying hue was the dean of a well-known school of religion connected with one of our largest universities.

There were glintings of sunshine in the spiritual horizon once in a while, but the atmosphere in general was hazy.

The speaker played the part of a skillful moral athlete. He began by knocking down the fundamental under-pinning of the Word of God, and then tried to straighten out this under-pinning by a method of his own. He first denounced the stately and serious things of the Bible, and then spent the rest of his thirty minutes in apologizing for what he formerly said.

Like a child, playing with his baby-blocks, first building his imaginary house and then knocking it down, repeating the trick until the little fellow is tired of the game, so the learned theologian, by the coverings of rhetorical phrases, and the charm of ethical epigrams, made his toy house look pretty to the initiated, but he knocked down a half dozen times what presumably he sought to build up. God, prayer, the Bible and Christian life, are all things to be ingeniously repaired by man's suggestions to his Maker.

There was through all this man's address a studied effort to eliminate the things above natural reasonings, as stated in the Bible, and substituting for them the beliefs, habits, reasons and aims of the natural man.

It was certainly a very skillful moral game played by a well-trained religious athlete, but how has the mighty Master impaired the game? Ah! that is the question. Does He not veil His face when He is so shamefully disowned? Yes, there were some glintings of moral sunshine in this part of the day, but much of it was cloud, hence God's face frowns with sorrow.

III

The latter part of the day was all sunshine, for Dr. I. M. Haldeman was at his best, rolling out from well-filled brain and heart the wonderful things of God concerning the things that shall come on the earth in the last days. There were no moral guesses or empty nostrums with him. But in the confidence of God's assured truth, he spoke like a prophet to appreciative men and women. The hearer could imagine seeing the beaming face of the Heavenly Father looking down upon the people, and His ear attentive to the Word honestly and fearlessly declared.

Spencer above, does not deny the statement just mentioned in the second verse of Genesis. However much of a disparity of opinion there might be in other things, there is certainly no agnosticism in his interpretation of the nebular hypothesis. Surely the dogmatic view of our sectarians, in spite of the love we have for them, is the farthest removed from the statement in Genesis.

Doubtless when the church loses her fear of science, and welcomes all investigation—which in the end can only confirm the Genesis account—that will be the longest step taken in the removal of that unbelief or agnosticism by many types of mind that fail to respond to the teaching of evangelical truth, because they see its votaries have made a vital blunder in their rejection of the hypothesis of evolution, that appears to so many of us as the absolute truth, and the correct interpretation of the Genesis account.

Catfish in de river,
  An' de blossom on de tree—
We's got some time to shiver
  Before dem friends we see.
But in spite of all de blowin',
An' de freezin' an' de snowin'
  De April day
  Is on her way
Same as she used to be.

Bullfrog gineter holler
  An' de robin gineter sing;

Some are inquiring, "What is this Near East Relief?" The American Committee answers in this way: "The Near East Relief is a body incorporated by act of Congress, the object of which is 'to provide relief and to assist in the repatriation, rehabilitation, and reestablishment of suffering and dependent people of the Near East and adjacent areas; to provide for the care of orphans and widows and to promote the social, economic, and industrial welfare of those who have been rendered destitute, or dependent directly or indirectly, by the vicissitudes of war, the cruelties of men, or other causes beyond their control."

How the Apostasy Grows

The following letter is not published because it contains anything particularly new, but because it comes from a New England reader who does not very often address us, but whose testimony is always true. Incidentally it furnishes another reason why the truth for which this magazine stands needs to be pressed continually on the attention of Christian laymen of this country who are being misled so disastrously by the false shepherds coming in among them.—Editors.

TO THE Editors of the Christian Workers Magazine:

Dear Brethren: I am writing to thank you for the invitation to attend the Mid-Week Winter Conference at The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, to be held February 2-6, 1920.

I am thankful that Bible conferences are being conducted throughout the country, as they are greatly needed to offset the growing unbelief in the pulpits in many churches.

Thank God for the faithful ministers of the Cross who preach the gospel of the grace of God; but O, how many of our ministers are shunning the Cross and preaching on all kinds of themes which have no relation to Christ's message!

Many pastors have been moved away from the hope of the gospel to moving pictures. Three churches here have the stereopticon or movies Sunday evenings, and I learn that other ministers are to join the "moving" procession. When a minister gets where he has so little spiritual life—or, in some instances, no life—that he cannot move the hearts of his congregation to Christ, he substitutes moving pictures.

An Examining Council

I wish to give you a brief account of the examination of a minister who has been recently installed as pastor of one of the old churches of our city.

The council met at 2:30, and after preliminaries the minister read a paper setting forth certain events in his experience, which was so nicely worded as not to bring out his views of Christian doctrine.

At its conclusion it was voted to ask questions as to his beliefs, which showed that he disbelieved the great fundamentals of the faith.

Asked as to Christ's pre-existence, he said he did not believe Jesus lived before he was born into this world. He did not believe in the Virgin birth, but held that Joseph was the father of Jesus and that He came into the world by ordinary generation. He never spoke of Christ's deity, but only of His divinity, which he said all men possess. He did not believe in the bodily resurrection of Jesus, and when questioned as to what became of Christ's body said he did not know. When asked if he believed in unity or trinity, he said trinity—no doubt forced to say so, as the church of which he is now pastor of is named "The Trinitarian Church."

After the examination, the council retired and voted to install, and the printed program was carried out at the evening service.

His salary is $3,000 and six weeks vacation. He is running a moving picture show Sunday evenings.

Sturdy Americanism

Editorial in the Washington Post

I

EVERY political platform adopted in this year's campaign should contain a plank of sturdy Americanism, and upon it all candidates for all offices, from township supervision to President of the United States, should be required to take their stand.

Not only would this assure the country of the election of local and national officials of stanch patriotism, but it would inculcate a lesson that is much needed and would impress upon the youth of the land the fact that love of country is the real basis for good citizenship. Any candidate who attempts to qualify, or evade, or equivocate with respect to this foundation plank in an attempt to cater to the so-called "liberal" element, should be marked for slaughter at the polls, whatever his party affiliations.

II

The Americanism plank might well be identical.

In fact, it would be an impressive testimonial to the unity of purpose and the patriotic impulses of the American people if the two great opposing political organizations should build their declarations of principles upon an identical cornerstone of loyalty to their country.

To that end the executive heads of the Republican and Democratic organizations could act jointly in the selection of a cornerstone to draft the resolution committees of their respective conventions.

III

It should be a confession of faith, simple in phraseology, easily understood and vitally strong in its meaning. It should pledge all who accept it to unwavering loyalty to the American government; a willingness and purpose to support and defend the Constitution of the United States and to faithfully observe its laws; and relentless warfare upon bolshevism, anarchism, socialism, communism and all other forms of radicalism which aim at the overthrow by force of the American government.

IV

Such a declaration could be made to serve a much wider and greater purpose than a mere plank in political platforms. It should be taught in the public schools, printed in the copy books of the rising generation and inscribed upon the walls of every place of assemblage throughout the country, until every citizen has been brought to a realization that here is the acid test of his worthiness to enjoy the privileges of citizenship.

A National Day of Prayer for Russia

Sunday, April 11, 1920

This prayer call is sent out by Russian Bible and Evangelization Society, New York City

NO COUNTRY needs more prayer and spiritual help at this time than Russia. Her agony is untold. She is prostrate, crying for help.

Therefore, we earnestly ask all God's people everywhere to set aside Sunday, April 11, 1920, as a day of special prayer for suffering Russia, both in private and in public gatherings.

In New York City, a special Prayer Service will be held in the Marble Collegiate Church, Fifth Avenue and 29th Street, April 11, at 3:30 P. M., led by Col. E. N. Sanctuary and Mr. G. P. Raud. Brief messages on prayer and Russia will be given by two speakers.

We ask all in and around New York, who are able, to make a special effort to come to this prayer service.

May this day of prayer be the beginning to many of daily intercession for Russia.

Let us all gather around the throne of grace and earnestly cry unto God to have mercy and give peace to Russia, and send the message of salvation and the Scriptures without delay to Russia's millions.

The object of this Society is to evangelize and to supply with Holy Scriptures without delay over 240,000,000 Russians and other related Slavonic people, including 9,000,000 Jews.

Russian Bible and Evangelization Society is entirely supported by the free will offering of Christian people.

Literature on Russia may be secured in quantities, for distribution, free of charge.

Address all communications to the Secretary-Director of the Society: G. Pertelevitch Raud, 156 Fifth Ave., Room 403, New York City, N. Y.

TRUE BROTHERHOOD

"The true brotherhood of men will be found in the supremacy of the spiritual. No other force is sufficiently and permanently cohesive. Pleasure is frequently divisive, splitting society up into its cliques and sets. Commerce with the jealous protection of interests often keeps the nations asunder. We have proof enough before our eyes that union is not secured by force of arms. It is even possible that a false spirituality will divide men and women who name the name of Christ. But the spiritual dominance that Christ will bring will draw us all closer together in an unbroken brotherhood. And if we are to be accounted as the true followers of Christ there must be an end of all our exclusiveness towards those who name the name of Christ, whatever tongue they speak and in whatsoever clime they live. We must learn to look on men through His eyes; to love those whom He loves, whether they be black or red or white or yellow; to obliterate national prejudices by the power of His divine love; to kill all hatred in our hearts, and to think of those sheep which are not of this fold, that bringing them to our hearts there may be one fold as there is one shepherd."—Rev. John MacNeill.

TYRANNY OF OPINION

It should be noted with concern that there has been for some time a growing tendency toward tyranny of opinion. It shows in sumptuary laws by which the habits and standards of one man are imposed by law upon another. It shows in the increasing disposition to legislate conceptions of morality, in the extension of censorship, and in a growing tendency to enforce by law standardized habits and invade the freedom of the individual's choice farther and farther beyond the point at which his action directly affects others.—Chicago Tribune.

Interchurch Conference for Illinois Pastors

By J. H. Ralston, D. D.

THIS Conference was held in Chicago March 8-10. In the call for it each pastor was assured of his railroad expenses, including Pullman. It was considered a success from the standpoint of attendance and the program rendered, and was but one of many similar conferences held throughout the country about the same time, the leaders of the national movement being distributed as convenience suggested. The women of Illinois held a conference at the same time which was well attended and considerable interest manifested.

The calendar of the Interchurch Movement, about which people have little knowledge, indicates that in December, 1918, in New York City there was a conference of 135 men called at the suggestion of the Foreign Missions Board of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. (South), and a smaller conference held in Atlantic City in the same month. Regional conferences were held in different parts of the country in January, February, and March, 1919. In December, 1919, sixty-seven training conferences were held in forty-eight states and a spectacular exhibition was given in Madison Square Garden, New York, which had a run of five weeks. In January, 1920, a World Survey conference was held at Atlantic City where more than 1,700 leaders from boards, societies, and evangelical churches prepared a program and budget for the Movement. February 29 was set apart as Life Enlistment Day and a day of prayer for students. April 4 (Easter) has been designated as "Join-the-Church Day." As set forth by the Movement itself its object is "To undertake a scientific survey of the world's needs from the standpoint of the responsibility of evangelical Christianity—united survey. To project a co-operative community and world program to meet the needs shown by the survey—united promotion. To discover and develop the resources of life, money and prayer required by the program fixed —united ingathering of life and money."

It is claimed that the denominations co-operating with the Movement enrolled 71.6 per cent of the total Protestant membership of the United States. Thirty-four denominations are included in the total budget statement, comprising some of the largest denominational agencies, the majority of the working missionary forces and the bulk of the total askings of all the denominations. One hundred and forty boards, representing thirty-four denominations, are already enlisted in surveying fields and determining what can be done by co-operative effort. The tentative figure of $1,320,214,551 for five years' work for the world is subject to revision by the denominational boards which officially co-operate in the Movement. A great simultaneous financial campaign is to be put on throughout the country April 25-May 2.

"The basis of the Interchurch Movement organization is the constituency of co-operating denominations and denominational boards that forms the groundwork of the entire plan. Their representative controlling body is the General Committee, of which Hon. Robert Lansing is chairman and the members of which are nominated by the various communions. This committee outlines the policies, while the Executive Committee, headed by Dr. John R. Mott, works out the policies in more detail. The direction of the execution of policies is in the hands of Dr. S. Earl Taylor, general secretary, and a Cabinet of nine associate general secretaries who are chosen for their executive ability, their experience in similar organizations and their relationships to their denominations."

The Movement is criticized very severely on the part of a number of religious newspapers of the country, including several influential denominational periodicals. Several religious bodies have failed to endorse the Movement, and some have disapproved of it officially. Many individual Christians of influence believe that the Movement presents evidence of the final Laodicean or apostate state of the church. The gist of the opposition to the Movement is that there is evidence of trusting to material strength now belonging to the church to accomplish spiritual results, "might" and "power" being depended upon, rather than the Spirit of God. The Movement is so comprehensive that it embraces most of the modernists in the church with many of its most conservative and evangelical members. The Movement is being watched by many godly men and women with great concern, and prayers are ascending that very soon they may be able to see whether the Movement is of God or not.

WONDERFUL LOVE

What wonderful love—this love of Christ. Many waters cannot quench it. Time cannot impair it. Eternity will be too short to measure it. Happy they who have come under its constraining power; who have heard, with the ear of faith, these blessed words, "I have loved thee with an everlasting love."—The Believer's Pathway.

The Power of an Endless Life

"There ariseth another priest . . . after the power of an endless life. Wherefore, he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them." Such is the plain declaration of Scripture, and what a wonderful declaration it is! Man must have a priest of some kind. If he fails to find the God-appointed Priest, even Jesus, he will turn to a man-appointed priest. This man-appointed priest must himself have a priest, for he too is compassed with infirmity, and so the whole priestly hierarchy is built up. Why not go directly to the only Priest who is "able to save to the uttermost all who come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them?"

Protestant Christianity is established on the priesthood of Jesus Christ. This matter of His priesthood is fully presented in the Epistle to the Hebrews. In 2: 17 He is seen as the "merciful and faithful high priest," merciful to man in his need and faithful to God in making propitiation for the sins of the people. Propitiation is that offering for sin which righteousness requires. Every righteous requirement was met in the offering of Christ at Calvary. As another has well said, "The eternal issue of sin was called into question at Calvary's cross and a sufficient substitute stood in the sinner's place until all grounds of condemnation were forever passed and every righteous judgment of God was fully met." He was delivered over to death for our offenses and raised again for our justification. Those who put faith in His blood may now rejoice and sing:

"He ever lives above, for me to intercede,
His all-redeeming love, His precious blood to plead;
His blood atones for all our race
And sprinkles now the throne of grace."

He is a perfect Priest who has offered a perfect sacrifice, entered a perfect sanctuary to perform for his people a perfect service in "the power of an endless life." "Let us, therefore, come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need" (Heb. 4: 16).

In reading Hebrews 4: 14 and 8: 1, emphasize the two words "we have." "We have a great high priest, Jesus, the Son of God," who appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself (9: 26), who now appears in the presence of God for us (9: 24), and who shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation, that is, He shall return to consummate His priestly work and with judgment and justice establish the Kingdom of God.

Whoever and whatever is united to Christ shares the power of His endless life. "Because I live, ye shall live also." It is this that constitutes the real joy of the Eastertime. Through faith we are the recipients of His resurrection, life, partakers of the divine nature, members of the body of which He is the risen head. Having died with Him by union with Him in His death, we are also one with Him in His resurrection.

"One when He died, one when He arose,
One when He triumphed o'er His foes,
One when in heaven He took His seat,
And heaven rejoices o'er hell's defeat."

The remaining part of our Scripture lesson fits in at this point—"Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is." Conversion to Christ is followed by a growing conformity to Christ. "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren" (Rom. 8: 29). This process continues until completion at the time of the return of our Lord when we shall be like Him for we shall see Him as He is. According to Philippians 3: 21, He shall then fashion anew the body of our humuliation that it may be conformed to the body of His glory. Glorious, indeed, is the prospect of the Christian believer and this prospect is guaranteed by the resurrection of Him who now lives in the power of an endless life. "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord."

What Shall We Do with Our Sundays?

Nehemiah 13: 15-22

Sunday, the first day of the week, is the resurrection day. It is the day on which our Lord was raised from the dead and became the first fruits of them that slept. The resurrection marks the beginning of God's new creation. It is the pivotal point in the history of redemption, when old things passed away and all things became new (2 Cor. 5: 17). To this new creation the Christian believer belongs. He observes not the old Jewish Sabbath, but the new resurrection day. He is not under Moses but "in Christ."

Although the day is naturally and necessarily changed from the seventh to the first, yet the spirit and purpose of the day is to be preserved. Like Nehemiah we must stand against the encroachment of selfish pleasure and worldly gain on the Lord's day. Nehemiah had the good of his people at heart. He realized that the Sabbath had been made for man and that failure in body and soul was the inescapable consequence of toil seven days a week.

The divine purpose in the institution of the Sabbath was our rest and renewing. Even iron constantly used will break at last under the strain. How then can we stand the tests of life without rest and renewing?

Sabbath rest can never be obtained apart from Sabbath worship. More than mere cessation from toil is necessary, for man is more than body. There is a spirit in man (Job 32:8), "and spirit with spirit may meet," the human and the divine, so that the whole being is quickened and strengthened in every part. It is written, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength."

What then shall we do with our Sundays? First, wait and worship. Go to church, the church where you can get spiritual renewing. "Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together," is a piece of advice we do well to heed. The place of Christian fellowship is the place of blessing. Beware of the false talk of worshiping God in nature, which is repeated parrot-like by "joy-riders" and those who seek to hide from God by a "refuge of lies." Seek rather the joy of heaven, the fellowship of the people of God, and spiritual culture. Where these are disregarded, life becomes like a piece of waste land rather than a cultivated garden.

Public worship should be supplemented by private worship and the reading of good books, especially the Bible. Call this puritanical if you will, but better call it purifying. The news sheet and the week's gossip will bid for a place in your reading, but wisdom will not accept the price offered. Home life, Sabbath joys, talks with the children, together with worship and good works, will exclude from the mind the transaction of every-day affairs of the business world.

"To teach the soul its noble worth
This rest from mortal toil is given;
Go, snatch the brief reprieve from earth,
And pass, a guest, to heaven."

When Is Courage Needed?
Luke 12:4; Deuteronomy 20:1-4; Esther 4:13-17

When our Lord spoke the words of Luke 12:4 He was but a few weeks removed from the cross. This gives added significance and weight to the words, "Be not afraid of them that kill the body." It takes courage to face death. Not only the act of death but all that is involved in it.

Courage is especially needed in the great crises of life. Every enlisted man is a soldier until the hour of battle, then he becomes a hero or a coward. Courage is the stuff out of which heroes are made. Concerning our heroic Redeemer, it is written, "He steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem" (Luke 9:51). This involved conflict, agony, and death, but the courage born of eternal love upheld Him until the sacrifice was complete, the battle won, and the words of triumph, "It is finished," were uttered. In His substitutionary and atoning work we have no share, save that of beneficiaries. Through faith the value and virtue of His atoning work become ours. We rejoice in God through our Lord Jesus Christ through whom we have received the reconciliation (Rom. 5:11). We are the recipients of all the reconciling work of God in Christ, with all of its blessed results. But the courage and love of Christ are imitable qualities which have in greater or less degree been manifested in human hearts and lives.

In 1872 seven boys in a small fishing boat, off the coast of Scotland, were upset. Alexander Sutherland, a lad not quite thirteen years old, was the only one who could swim. One after another, he saved five, and in saving the sixth was drowned. Of him these words were written by a neighboring pastor:

"He dares, and sinks, and dies alone
With all the saved in view,
A Christ among the fisher lads,
The ransom of the crew.
Oh! great young heart, all goodness fence
Thy grave by yon rough sea,
Who says the race is dwindling down
That owns a lad like thee!"

Courage is needed in these days. Politically, the world is unsteady; economically and industrially, it is greatly disturbed; religiously, the world is all at sea. Great movements, imposing drives, and vast campaigns are either in motion or about to be launched. The steady insistent demand for "repentance towards God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ" is lacking, and the world is now to be saved by men's wisdom and human engineering. Courage is needed at such a time. The courage of convictions founded on the truth of God. "Not by might nor by power but my Spirit saith the Lord." Idealism is not regeneration and will not produce "The fruit of the Spirit."

Courage is needed all over our country in the fight for law and order. The liquor traffic, for example, though out-lawed, is gathering its lawless forces together in order to remove or overcome the restraints of the law that prohibit its activities. Editors and publishers of some of our leading dailies are ready to give the greatest publicity to the "wet" element and scant notice to the "dry" forces. Christian young people will have to fight this foe persistently in faith and with courage.

Again courage is needed in the lesser things

Practical and Perplexing Questions

Answered by the Editors

IS HELL-FIRE LITERAL?

S. F., Stottville, N. Y. Opposite views are held as to whether or not the fires of future punishment are literal. The language portraying them is realistic. If this fire is only symbolical, bear in mind—"The thing symbolized is always greater than the symbol." This is to say, they who deny the literalness of the fires of the future and the place of the after-death punishment of the wicked, do not thereby eliminate future punishment. This is the essential thing to believe, though it would be well also to remember that spiritual bodies are not immaterial, though not of the same substance as our present bodies. The story of Dives in Hades (Luke 16), is the story of a lost soul in conscious torment. We shall be wise not to endeavor to explain away the literalness, although the flames may not be material.

COLLEGES AND THE BIBLE

A. B. C., Chicago. In reply to your inquiry as to the attitude towards the Bible of our larger colleges and universities, we quote a paragraph from a circular letter put out by President Charles A. Blanchard, D. D. of Wheaton College, in which he alludes to a statement of the Sunday School Times that our colleges and universities are largely pagan, and adds:

"I mean that the religious position of the schools is like that of the schools in Greece, or Rome, or India, or Egypt when Christian faith was unknown.

"One of the most powerful factors in the case is that now the Bible has become popular and to discredit it has become unpopular. Many of our schools are putting in Bible courses which are more distinctly atheistic than they would be if they were simply treatises on some secular subject. That is to say, they profess to be teaching the Bible, and the sum of the teaching is that the Bible is not true; that it is human, imperfect, unreliable, unauthoritative. Such Bible teaching as that is far and away worse than none."

THE GENEALOGIES OF MATTHEW AND LUKE

D. J. G., Ashland, Ore. The differences between the genealogies present difficulties, but they are not inexplicable, and both are necessary in order to trace on the one hand the royal and legal descent, and on the other hand the natural and literal. Matthew's genealogy is that of Joseph, the reputed father of Jesus in the eyes of the law. The genealogy of Luke is that of Mary and is the actual or natural genealogy of Jesus.

Joseph's line is the strictly royal line from David to Joseph, while Luke gives the descent through Nathan, a descendant of David, but not of the royal line. Joseph, although of the royal line, was not the father of Jesus according to the flesh, but only in the eyes of the law.

According to Luke, Joseph was the son of Heli. This is because Mary, who was the daughter of Heli, being a woman is not mentioned in this list of genealogy of sons, but her husband's name is introduced instead, and so Joseph is called the son of Heli, while in reality he was only a son-in-law, and in actual fact the son of Jacob.

Another fact is interesting. Joseph was a descendant of Jeconiah and according to Jeremiah 22:30, Joseph's son could not occupy the throne of David. Hence, if Jesus had been the son of Joseph in reality, he could not have come to the throne; but He is Mary's Son through Nathan, and can come to the throne legally by her marrying Joseph and so clearing His way to it. Thus these two genealogies instead of affording ground for doubt, confirm the accuracy of the Bible. (See Difficulties of the Bible, by R. A. Torrey).

SHOULD A CHRISTIAN TITHE? IS TITHING ALWAYS PRACTICABLE?

O. A. B., Winthrop, Minn. These are questions which are troubling many in this day of the H. C. L. Tithing is not compulsory for the Christian. In the Old Testament it was a Jewish law. The first mention is in connection with Abraham. Jacob also voluntarily assumed the obligation when he had his first real vision of the living God. Tithing seems to have been a patriarchal practice and later Moses introduced it at God's command in the laws of the nation. Other nations besides the Israelites practiced tithing. The custom was not abolished by Christ. Indeed He commended it.

The Christian is not under law, but under grace. Tithing was compulsory in Old Testament times, but in New Testament times it is a privilege. The Christian owes not his tenth to the Lord, but His all. The New Testament rule is to give statedly, proportionately, and cheerfully. But what "proportion"? The answer is, "according as the Lord has prospered." Again, the query arises, "But what better proportion than the tenth?" Can we start upon a lower basis under grace than under law?

The practicability of tithing is often perplexing. Unexpected expenses occur. Debt comes. What then? No law can be laid down. Each must determine his course through prayer for the revelation of God's will and the guidance of His Spirit.

Voluntary tithing tends to keep us close to God, is frequently a means of strengthening faith, and is the most satisfactory plan of giving that has been devised. Even its difficulties may be transformed into blessings for the soul. The pastor who does not tithe cannot preach tithing to others. The whole matter is however, a personal one; but if one has known the joy of tithing, he would not be content to give it up.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

E. L. Marion, Wis. As to the address on Christian Science which you sent, it is a good sample of the things taught by "readers" or lecturers of this apostasy. It mingles much error with little truth. Some fallacies in the article are the following:

(1) That omnipotent mind expresses itself only mentally, i. e., the product of mind is only thoughts.

According to this everything is mental and nothing material. When an architect plans a palace, he thinks some thoughts, but he does not stop there. He transforms the thoughts into the material palace. Shall we not grant that God has the same power?

(2) That fear is the arch-enemy of humanity.

We had supposed the arch-enemy of humanity, subjectively speaking, was sin. But sin, and salvation from sin, are not tenets of Christian Science. After discoursing about fear and its effect upon the body in producing sickness and trouble, which is generally admitted, the lecturer performs a mental contortion by saying that "fear is without hope and without God, and anything without God has no real existence." If fear has no real existence, is not the lecturer wasting time in discussing it?

(3) That Christ was not God, and that He did not possess deity, "teaching as He did that He was not God." And yet the lecturer claims that Christian Scientists are students of the Bible! Christ certainly made himself equal with God. When under oath He affirmed that He was the Son of God, He was charged with blasphemy and sentenced to death by the Sanhedrin. This claim made even His enemies testify to His deity.

(4) That Christ did not teach His followers to pray to Him, nor instruct them to pray to any other personality.

The prayer the Lord taught His disciples refutes this. His own example is also a denial. But well-informed Christian Scientists do not pray, they merely "demonstrate." Having denied the personality of God, to whom can they pray?

(5) That by constantly thinking the truth, we fulfil Jesus' command to pray constantly.

Is thinking the truth about a toothache or a vacuum a prayer? Is it praying to think the truth about a hog or a hole in the ground?

Strange as it may seem, notwithstanding the delusions, absurdities, and falsities of Christian Science, people who do not know their Bibles continue to believe it. Is not the explanation found in 2 Corinthians 4:4—"In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of the unbeliever that the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ who is the image of God, should not dawn upon them"? (R. V.)

PREDICTIVE PROPHECY

N. W., Oliphant, Pa. The newspaper account of Dr. Eckman's third lecture on "Prophecy" is a mixture of truth and error. It is true that the prophet's chief message was moral, and that also it took its form from the social, political, and spiritual conditions of his age and nation. But when the lecturer implies that the modern preacher is as much a prophet when he foretells what will happen to men and nations if they follow certain policies, he fails to grasp the entire message and power of the prophet. Again, when he belittles the prophet's predictions by claiming that they were untrue, he assumes too much, for many Old Testament prophecies still await the time of their fulfilment. He makes one admission which, if he believes, nullifies his disbelief in so-called "predictive prophecy," namely, "He [the prophet] did not base his predictions, however, on his own cleverness, but upon the inspiration of God." If he believes that the prophet was inspired of god, he should have no difficulty in believing that the prophet could predict specific events which belong to the distant future.

The main issues between those who believe the prophets and those who disbelieve them is contained in the closing words of the article you sent—"The prophet's predictions of historical events, aside from the coming of the Messiah to save the world, had nothing to do with modern times. As to the second coming of Christ, no old prophet ever dreamed of such an event."

To which we reply, if the prophets could predict historical events which were fulfilled by the coming of the Messiah to save the world, why could they not predict historical events in connection with the coming of the Messiah to judge the world?

There is, however, some truth in the statement that the Old Testament prophets never dreamed of a second coming of Christ. They saw the future in a plane and not in perspective. To them two or more events were not always separated as to succession or time. For example, their prophecies concerning Christ were twofold. They predicted a suffering Messiah and also a reigning Messiah. They foresaw the same person, but were unable to perceive that the predicted events belonged, not to a single period of His life, but to two periods. That is, they foresaw a single coming instead of two comings. In this they were confused, as Peter has informed us (1 Pet. 1:10,11). But Peter declares that what the Old Testament prophets prophesied was what was revealed to them by the "Spirit of Christ which was in them." There was no vague guessing upon their part, and no failure of prediction. They indeed "testified beforehand the suffering of Christ," but also, and chiefly, "the glories that should follow." The Old Testament predictions concerning the glorious reign of Christ far outnumber those in connection with the period of His suffering. Christ Himself, towards the close of His life, took up and passed on to the future those Old Testament predictions concerning His coming in glory to reign over all peoples, and tongues and nations.

BRIEF MENTION

Is It Necessary To Be Baptized?

Salvation is not secured by baptism, but if a person is saved he will want to be baptized. We are saved by grace through faith in Jesus Christ. Obedience to Christ is proof of our salvation, and since He commanded baptism we naturally will want to comply with His wishes.

A Spirit Story

E. L., Marion, Wis.

With reference to the woman who clasped the spirit of a girl who had just died and escorted the spirit to heaven, and floated back into the room where the dead body lay, we have nothing to say except that it is too absurd even for spiritists to believe.

Evolution or Creation?

Just why many ministers teach evolution and say that the first chapter in Genesis is only a story, is difficult to account for, except upon the supposition that they do not believe the Bible. Creation is not dependent upon Genesis, but creation is taught in all the Bible. If ministers would study their Bibles, and so-called scientists less, they would not throw aside the Bible for the unsubstantiated, but generally accepted, theory of evolution.

"Present Truth" and "Signs of the Times"

L. R. H., Oconto, Wis.

These are two propagandist publications being scattered over the country, but which conceal their sectarian origin. They are organs of "The Seventh Day Adventists." Well edited and containing articles of present-day interest, they put forth much Bible truth, but along side of it are serious errors. Soul-sleeping after death and the final annihilation of the wicked are cardinal points in their beliefs.

Did God Create Satan?

Yes; all inferior beings are created. But God did not create Satan the being he now is, or as the character we know him to be. He was created perfect (Ezek. 28:12-15). For Satan's fall and its cause, see Isaiah 14:12-14.

To think of Satan or the Devil as only a general term for sin is to misunderstand the language of the Bible which deals with him. All through the Bible, from Genesis 3 to Revelation 20 he is referred to as a personality.

Worldly Amusements

Mrs. F. N. S., Malden, Mass.:

You are clearly right in your view as to Christians and worldly amusements; and Christians who do not sense the inconsistency of them are lacking in appreciation of what really is the new life in Christ. We would not scold or berate them, but simply and graciously testify against them by word and deed, and at the same time continue teaching the Bible to them as opportunity offers, because it is the means through the Holy Spirit by which they will come to a better mind.

Unclean Spirits

S. G. R., Milford, Ill.

According to "The Standard Bible Class" Quarterly of February 1, 1920, the unclean spirits (Acts 8:7) are "the spirits of dead men come back to take possession of weak living characters." There is nothing in the Bible to support such teaching and we marvel that any Christian publication should make so unfounded an assertion. The unclean spirits of the New Testament are evil spirits, or demons. Christ was accustomed to cast them out of people and He gave the same power to His disciples. (See Mark 5:2; 6:7).

Are the Wicked Annihilated?

W. F. M., Houston, Tex.

Matthew 10:28 says that God is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. The word "destroy" however, does not mean annihilation. Peter uses the same Greek word when, referring to the judgment of the flood, he says the world "perished"; but it was not blotted out of existence. It still remains. In like manner we believe that they who trample under foot the Son of God shall suffer conscious and eternal punishment. The rich man in Hades suffered conscious torment (Luke 12:19-31; Mark 9: 43-48: Matthew 25:41, 46).

Prince of the Kingdom of Persia

S. H. B., Griggsville, Ill.

In Daniel 10:13, we have a glimpse of the spirit-world concerning which we know so little. Satan is called in the New Testament the prince of the powers of the air and also the prince of this world. Upon this basis we would naturally infer that this "prince of the Kingdom of Persia," who resisted the angel sent to Daniel, was one of Satan's subordinates. In the twentieth verse "the prince of Greece" also is mentioned; while Michael, who came to the assistance of God's messenger is called in the last clause of the twenty-first verse, the guardian prince of the Jewish nation. In the final world struggle against Satan and his angels, Michael will head the hosts of good angels (Revelation 12:7).

The use of this title, or self-designation, of Jesus, is especially frequent and striking in passages referring to His future coming and judgment. In this there is a resemblance to the use of the title in the prophecy by Ezekiel, and to the apocalyptic scene as presented to us in Daniel. In such utterances, the Messianic consciousness of Jesus is most emphatically expressed. There is no doubt but that the title includes the ideas of His sufferings and death, but it is certain that the primary, and full idea, is that of His Messianic office and work.

The first sower in this parable, then, is none other than Christ, the anointed of the Father. He entered the field of the world to sow the gospel, when he took upon Himself human nature. He has been sowing the seeds of the gospel now for two thousand years, either Himself, personally, or by His Church instrumentally.

Satan a Person

But there is another sower mentioned here. He is the one who sowed the bad seed, the tares. In the explanation of him, the Saviour said: "The enemy that sowed them" (the tares) "is the devil."

As to the reality and personality of the Devil in the earth, the Scriptures bear ample testimony. Here he is spoken of as the Devil, which means slanderer, accuser, calumniator, a malignant liar. This has been one of the chief characteristics of the Devil from the very beginning. He is called the "dragon." This is his designation with particular reference to his connection with earthly governments and political powers. Further, he is known as the "old serpent," this being an allusion to the fact that he has been in existence since the beginning of human history. This title of the Devil refers to his subtlety, his crooked and deceiving ways, his subtle poisons, and his deadly malignity.

Further, he is called Satan, which means an adversary. This title is used of him about forty times in the New Testament. It denotes one who lies in wait to entrap, to oppose, to disable, to bring under condemnation, or into disaster, and such, the evil one has ever shown himself, for he so accused and opposed God at the very beginning. He so accused Job, and sought to destroy his peace. He so assailed Christ in the wilderness, questioning his divine sonship and power, if not proven as he chose to dictate. And so he is the adversary of all the children of God, and still stands as their accuser before God.

Satan's History

He is the second sower in this parable. His history is briefly, but clearly, outlined in the Scriptures. Apparently he was created one of the cherubim, designated and appointed to a position of great authority. He fell from his high position by reason of his pride, rebelling against the Lord of heaven, and that rebellion marks the introduction of sin into the universe. After the creation of man, he entered into the serpent, and, deceiving Eve by his subtlety, secured the downfall of Adam, and through him, of the race. Then began his long warfare against the work of God in behalf of humanity, which still continues, and will continue until the end.

The world of which we have spoken, organized upon the principles of force, greed, selfishness, ambition and sinful pleasure, is his work, and was that by which he tempted Christ in the wilderness. Of that world system, he is the chief executive head, spoken of as the prince, or the god (John 14:30; 16:11; 2 Cor. 4:4).

He is also the head of a vast host of demons. To him, under God, was committed the power of death (Heb. 2:14). He can, and does, by the permission of God, administer death to human beings. He is also the author of all disease, to which the human race is heir. He is permitted to sift, or to test, the self-confident and carnal among believers (Job 1:6-11; Luke 22:31,32; 1 Cor. 5:5; 1 Tim. 1:20).

This power, of course, given to him by God, is limited, and the believing one is made safe through the advocacy of Christ.

Satan's Doom

At the present time, and now for two thousand years, he has been going about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. At the return of Christ in glory, Satan will be bound for one thousand years (Rev. 20:2), after which he will be loosed for a little season (Rev. 20:3, 7, 8), and will become the head of the last attempt to overthrow the kingdom of God. Defeated in this, he will be finally cast into the lake of fire, which will be his eternal doom. He is the second sower brought before us in this wonderful kingdom picture.

The World Potentially Redeemed

It will now be of interest to notice the workings of these two sowers, as presented to us here. The first one is the rightful sower. The field in which the grain is sown rightfully belongs to Him. He bought it, and holds the title deed

Deborah and Barak Deliver Israel

Judges 4:4-5:31

Golden Text:—"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."—Psalm 46:1.

The book of Judges covers the period from the conquest of Canaan and death of Joshua to the judgeship of Samuel. While Joshua and the elders of his generation lived the people in some measure remained faithful to God in obedience to His Word, but the very next generation went into apostasy. Their declension may be accounted for as follows:

1. Failure to Drive out the Canaanites from Their Midst. They had gained the Victory over them, but failing to exterminate them, their presence became a constant source of temptation. Their mistaken tolerance became their undoing. Compromise with the enemy will always result in ruin of the child of God.

2. Their Amalgamation with the Canaanites. Their close proximity to the people had its leavening effect, for they soon intermarried with the heathen. Tolerance with the enemy is closely followed by union therewith, and quick disaster comes in the wake of such union.

3. Idolatry. Intermarriage with the heathen was soon followed by the worship of the heathen gods. Thus their power was gradually weakened, so that instead of being conquerors they became the conquered. God's people lose power over the world as soon as they make alliance with it. God's call is to separation.

In chapter 2:6-9 is given a synopsis of the book of Judges.

1. The sin of the people (vv. 6-13).
2. God's judgment for their sin (vv. 14,15).
3. Repentance of the people (3:9).
4. God's deliverance at the hands of the judges (vv. 16-19).

A repetition of sin, oppression by the enemy, repentance on the part of the people, and God's deliverance, are the story of the book of Judges.

I. The Judgeship of Deborah (4:4,5).

Her name means "Bee," suggesting orderly instincts. As suggested by another, "She answered her name by her industry, sagacity, and great use to the public." The period was marked by awful oppression. The Israelites were helpless, for the enemy had 900 chariots of iron. The appearance of a woman at such a time is most remarkable. Deborah was an unique character. God raised her up for such a time as this. Under a palm tree she held an open-air court for the administration of justice.

II. Deborah Summons Barak (4:6-10).

Barak means "lightning." Deborah, being a prophetess, was able to select the man whose gifts would enable him to rally the forces needed to gain the victory over the formidable foe. Judging from his accomplishments, Barak was true to his name, for with lightning dispatch he wrought deliverance.

1. Deborah's Call (vv. 6, 7). It was God's call through her. She gave definite instruction as to the number of men and the strategy to be employed, assuring Barak that God would deliver Sisera, the captain of Jabin's army, into his hand. She made it clear unto him that her summons was the command of God.

2. Barak's Reply (v. 8). Expression of unwillingness to go unless Deborah would go with him should hardly be considered as cowardice or weakness, as it is a well recognized fact that the presence of a woman, especially the prophetess, would inspire courage on the part of warriors. However, he should have believed God's ability to give the victory without the aid of a woman.

3. Barak's Rebuke (vv. 9, 10). Deborah yielded to his request, but made it plain to him that it would detract from his honor as a conqueror, "For the Lord shall sell Sisera into the hand of a woman."

III. The Defeat of Jabin's Army (vv. 11-16).

Sisera, the captain, gathered a mighty army and went forth with a full assurance of victory over the handful of the ill-equipped and undisciplined army of Barak, but he made one sad mistake, he did not consider that it was the Lord's battle (v. 15). All who disregard Him shall surely go down in defeat and shameful ruin. At the psychological moment Deborah gave the signal to charge, assuring Barak that the Lord had gone before and would give the victory (v. 14). Perhaps Deborah was viewing the movements of the enemy and gave the command when she saw them taking the position indicated unto her by the Lord. Through supernatural interposition the enemy became panic stricken. (See 5:20).

IV. Sisera Killed by a Woman (vv. 17-24).

In his flight he took refuge in Jael's tent. Under the guise of friendship she committed the most heinous murder after having invited him into her dwelling. She fastened his head to the ground by means of a tent pin. This action was most reprehensible.

V. Deborah and Barak's Song of Victory (Chap. 5).

This was composed and sung in celebration of the marvelous victory which God had wrought. The spirit of enthusiasm manifested is characteristic of Deborah. She sets forth in the most definite way that the secret of the victory was the help of God. Praise is given to those who responded to the cry and contemptible scorn is heaped upon those who remained behind. She had absolutely no regard for the neutral and the pacifist. So complete was the victory that Israel had rest forty years.

The Victory of Gideon's Band
Judges 7

Golden Text:—There is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few."—1 Samuel 14:6.

After forty years of freedom Israel again passes under the cruel yoke of bondage at the hands of the Midianites. This affliction was permitted because of their sins. So grievous was it that they hid in dens, caves, and strongholds (Judg. 6:2). It is a sad picture, indeed, of God's people thus being obliged to hide. In their distress they cried unto the Lord, and again He heard them and sent deliverance. This deliverance was effected through Gideon. The angel of the Lord appeared to him while at the post of duty. God always calls men who are doing something; the unemployed never hear the call to higher and more important duty. Gideon's hesitancy when called was not due to unbelief, but to modesty and cautiousness. He came from an obscure and uninfluential family (Judg. 6:15). Before going forward he wished to be doubly sure (Judg. 6:36-40). When once he was convinced of duty he was courageous and enthusiastic. This is characteristic of all truly great men, outstanding examples of which are Luther, Knox and Calvin. When they were convinced that God had called them, they, with unflinching courage, went forward. Gideon began his reformatory work at once (Judg. 6:25-27). Those who would accomplish any great work must begin at home, or in the place where they serve when receiving the call.

1. The Opposing Army (v. 1).

Gideon and his army arose early on that eventful day and encamped by the spring of Harod. Over against them was the host of the Midianites in battle array. His army was insignificant in comparison with the Midianites.

II. The Depleting of Gideon's Army (vv. 2-8).

At Gideon's call 32,000 men responded, ready for the struggle. This seemed a small army to go against the Midianite army, 135,000 strong, but God said this was too many lest they be led to boasting and self-confidence. Their real danger was not in their small army, but in their pride. All that were faint-hearted were allowed to go back, leaving only 10,000. There were 22,000 cowards in that group of men, and worst of all, they were not ashamed to confess it. Still this was too many. When God was through with His sifting process only 3 0 remained. The 10,000 were brave men, but not of proper quality and fitness. Those who lapped the water showed alertness and watchfulness. If the same test were made today in our churches and Sunday-schools, would the percentage stand any higher? This depleting process, no doubt, was trying to Gideon's faith, but he needed to be taught that success in the Lord's work does not depend so much upon numbers as upon quality.

III. God Gives Encouragement to Gideon (vv. 9-15).

God bade Gideon go down to the Midianite camp where he would hear something which would cheer his heart and strengthen his hands. God always comes to cheer us when our hearts are faint. When he came near he heard a man tell a dream, which was that of a barley cake tumbling into the camp and smiting it. He also heard the interpretation given to that dream, which made Gideon to be that cake. This greatly cheered his heart and strengthened him for his work, and caused his heart to burst forth in praise to God. A barley cake is a very insignificant thing, a very cheap affair in itself, but with the hand of God upon it, it would be sufficient to spread consternation upon the Midianites and bring destruction upon their armies. No matter how weak and insignificant a man may be, if God is with him he shall not fail.

IV. God Gives to Gideon Victory (vv. 16-23).

His army was very insignificant and his weapons most worthless. His attack was unique. The whole matter was of faith (Heb. 11: 32). The ground of his faith was God's Word and the token which He had given him. God does not ask us to go forward without good ground upon which to rest our faith. Gideon with his 300 men formed into three companies, each man being provided with a trumpet and with a lamp concealed within a pitcher; thus armed they surrounded the camps of the Midianites. They were all instructed to keep their eyes upon their leader and imitate him. We, too, are to keep our eyes on our leader, Christ, and to ever do as He does. At the proper moment they blew their trumpets and broke their pitchers, giving opportunity for their lights to shine out. This awful crash of breaking pitchers, following the sound of trumpets, accompanied by the shout, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon," threw the Midianites into a panic, causing them to fight among themselves. One hundred twenty thousand were thus slain, leaving but 15,000 of that mighty army (Judg. 8: 10).

In making the application to ourselves in this age, we can think of the sounding of the trumpets as representing prayer, or calling to God; the torches, as the light of the gospel; the pitchers, our human nature; and the whole, as this treasure in earthen vessels. Only as the pitchers were broken to allow the light to shine forth, and as we sound loud and long the trumpet of prayer can we expect victory.

Ruth's Wise Choice

Ruth 1

Golden Text:—"Thy people shall be my people and thy God my God."—Ruth 1: 16.

The teacher who would successfully impress this lesson of Ruth's choice must grasp the entire story from its inception to its issue, as contained in the entire book of Ruth.

I. The Occasion of Ruth's Choice (1: 1-15).

On account of famine in Bethlehem-Judea, Naomi with her husband and two sons sojourned in the land of Moab. After the death of her husband, her two sons married Moabitish women. After a time her sons died also. This is a dreary picture—three widows in the same family. After the death of her sons she resolved to return to her homeland, having heard that the Lord had visited His people in giving them bread. They went to Moab to escape trouble, but they only got into more trouble. This is always the case; when God's people go into the world to escape apparent difficulty, they are sure to suffer in consequence. It was not till Naomi was thus chastised that she resolved to return. One purpose of God's chastisements is to cause His children to return. Namoi had the good sense to recognize that the hand of the Lord was upon her for good. Happy is the one who profits by correction! She saw that her affliction was for good, therefore was not bitter against the Lord. When the time came for her to go, Ruth and Orpah accompanied her. This she permitted, but determined to place before them frankly the difficulties which would necessarily confront them. Having laid the matter squarely before them she urged them repeatedly to turn back. It was this frank presentation of the difficulties and her repeated urging them to go back that furnished the occasion for Ruth's wise choice.

II. The Trials of Ruth's Choice (vv. 16-18).

Much as Naomi loved her daughters-in-law, she would not have them go into this matter blindly. She wished them to know the cost of their undertaking. She told them the worst that could come upon them; then if hardships came they could only blame themselves. This principle ought to be carried out by us in all our relations in life. In business the spirit of frankness should be manifest; at home we should deal with each other in the most straightforward way; the same should characterize our behavior in the church and in society. In this respect our supreme example is Jesus Christ; He held before the people the great good of casting their lot with Him, but always frankly told them what it would cost: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." "No man having put his hand to the plow and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God."

Note the difficulties which confronted Ruth:

1. No Chance to Marry Again. Naomi told her that she had no more sons for which she could wait. In that day to be unmarried was the greatest disgrace. Society differed then from now. No avenues were left open by which a woman could earn her living and be independent. Furthermore, it was against God's law for the Jews to marry outside of their own people.

2. She Must Renounce her Gods. Her idolatrous worship could not be carried on in the land where God's people dwelt. This was delicately touched upon when Orpah went back (v. 15). Orpah went back when it was plain that there was no chance to get a husband. Now Naomi puts an additional test upon Ruth, that of giving up her religion. Ruth was equal to the occasion; her mind was fully made up. No doubt she had seen in Naomi's life during the years that they had lived together, something more than was seen in the lives of the Moabites. She no doubt ascribed her bearings in all circumstances in life to her religion. The testimony of our lives for Christ is most important. She was willing to accept as her God the one who was able to produce in his subjects such nobility of character. Naomi's very frankness in dealing with her caused Ruth to be more and more determined to cast her lot with her. No doubt she learned to love the true God through the life of this true woman. Ruth's decision was so definite and unfaltering that her very expressions have come down to us in words which, "No poetry has outrivaled and no pathos has exceeded, and which have gone down through centuries with a music that will not let them be forgotten." She was determined to share Naomi's journey, her home, her lodging, her lot in life and her grave in death, whatever that would be. To crown it all she would renounce her heathen gods and worship Jehovah. When Naomi saw that Ruth's mind was fully made up she quit urging her. This shows us the value of decision. When people see that our minds are fully made up they will no longer urge us to do that which is wrong.

III. The Glorious Issue of Ruth's Choice.

Ruth was never sorry of her choice, for:

1. She Found the True God (v. 16). Instead of her heathen god who was unable to help her, she now had the living God, the God of Israel, as her God.

2. She Found Human Friends (chap. 2). As she went to glean in the field she was led to the field of Boaz—a man of wealth and grace. The servants of Boaz treated her with consideration; even Boaz gave instruction for special consideration to be given her.

3. A Good Husband and a Happy Home (chaps. 3 and 4). She not only secured a husband, but a man of God who had abundance of this world's goods.

4. An Honored Place in the Israelitish Nation (4: 13-17). Though she had to forsake her own people, she became one of a nobler people.

5. She Became a Link in the Chain of Christ's Ancestry (4: 18-22; cf. Matt. 1: 5). The one who fully decides for Christ and gives up all for Him shall get a hundred fold in this life and in the world to come eternal life.

This story is a fine exhibition of dispensational truth:

(1) The famine in the land indicates the testing of the Jews; (2) the going into Moab indicates the sojourn of the Israelites among the nations; (3) the sickness and death in Moab indicate the chastisement of the Jews in this present age; (4) the return to the land indicates the gathering of Israel to their own land; (5) Ruth following indicates the gathering of the Gentiles through the influence of the Jews; (6) the marriage between Boaz and Ruth indicates the union of the Church with Christ.

The Boy Samuel

1 Samuel 1: 24-28; 3: 1-21.

Golden Text:—"My son, give me thine heart, and let thine eyes observe my ways."—Proverbs 23: 26.

I. Samuel Given to the Lord (1: 24-28).

Samuel was given to Hannah in answer to prayer. His name means "asked of God." For a time he was cared for by his mother in the home. The best nurse and teacher for a child is its mother. In asking God for a son she vowed to dedicate him to the Lord. Accordingly at an early age she took him to the sanctuary and gave him over to the charge of Eli. Thus in his tender years he ministered to the Lord. Samuel is a beautiful picture of a life engaged in the service of the Lord.

II. Features of Israel's History in This Period.

1. A Demoralized Priesthood. (1) The priests were actuated by greed (2: 12-17). It was God's will that those who ministered at the altar should live of the things of the altar, but they broke through the divine regulations touching this matter and were securing their selfish ends by force; (2) the priests polluted the courts of God's house with the grossest immorality (2: 22). We thus see that the condition of the nation was appalling. When God's ministers are actuated by greed and practice uncleanness we see that degradation and ruin follow rapidly. The people will be like their leader, and leader and people shall be judged together.

2. An Alienated People. The only thing which separates people from God is sin. There is an active principle in God's holiness which will not allow fellowship with sin. The people who choose sin are alienated from God.

3. A Cessation of Divine Revelation (3: 1). God was silent, "The word of God was precious in those days; there was no open vision." The message from the Lord was more a matter of memory than an active experience. The same thing and principle is true of the individual life today; some who once enjoyed fellowship with God no longer hear His voice speaking to them; they remember once having experienced the blessed experience, but it is no longer an actuality with them.

III. God Calls Samuel (3: 2-10).

In striking contrast with the degeneracy of the nation we have brought before us the beautiful life of Samuel. On the one hand we witness the degeneration of the nation, while on the other we see God getting ready for its regeneration. Dwelling within the sacred courts and ministering before the Lord with Eli is the innocent Samuel, who is to become the saviour of his people. In Samuel we have a striking pattern of child religion. The Lord gave him in answer to Hannah's prayer. From his birth he was dedicated to the Lord. While quite young his mother took him to the sanctuary of the Lord where he served and slept. In the Scriptures we have set forth two types of experience; the one who experiences the saving grace of God after having lived in sin; the other of one brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord from his infancy. It is a good thing to have much sin forgiven, but it is better far to grow up without sin. Two traits in Samuel's character stand out in this call, namely, his cheerful obedience to the Lord's call and his surrendered will. It was no easy thing to cheerfully respond to the thrice repeated call. It may have seemed to him to be unreasonable, but each time he obeyed in simplicity. He expressed his willingness before he knew what was required; he did not inquire what was wanted and then let his obedience depend upon its suiting him. We should believe that the Lord knows what is best, and be willing to yield glad obedience to His commands.

IV. Samuel's First Prophetic Message (3: 11-18).

Up to this time Samuel obeyed the one who was over him, but the time had now come when he must directly hear and obey the Lord. The first message entrusted to him is a most terrible one. To deliver it is a most trying task. He hesitated to tell it to Eli, but when pressed by him he manifested the true courage which was lying back of his fear. It must have been a bitter sting to Eli to see Samuel recognized and himself passed by, but he was submissive. He knew that the slight was just; he could not fail to interpret it thus in view of the appearance of the man of God to him (2: 27-36). This fearful visitation upon Eli's house was due to the sins of his sons. He was held accountable for not restraining them. Eli was no doubt a good man, but was lax in the discipline of his children. Parental laxity is most cruel. There is an age in which children may be restrained, but when passed over the power to restrain goes with it. Furthermore, to tolerate evil when one has power to restrain it is to become an accomplice in it.

V. Samuel Established in the Prophetic Office (3: 19-21).

"And Samuel grew, and the Lord was with him, and did let none of his words fall to the ground. And all Israel, from Dan even to Beersheba knew that Samuel was established to be a prophet of the Lord." This is a verification of the saying, "Him that honours me I will honour." Little did Hannah know that the boy who had been given in answer to her prayer would one day become the head of the nation. This new position brought great danger to the boy, but the God who raised him up was able to sustain him.

INVESTMENTS IN HUMAN LIFE

In these days when opportunities for investments with large dividends promised are on every hand, those having means to invest are sometimes bewildered. This world and all it contains except human life will come to an end and all its investments collapse. But to live our lives over again in the lives of others in this world and the next, and see them multiply time and again, makes life worth living.

An old history of Northampton, Mass., published over thirty years ago, contains these facts recorded before 1885. Two hundred and forty years before Northampton was considered "away out west," it was settled by a people who considered their children their most priceless possession. Their first concern was their relation to God, and so the church was erected, which stamped a religious impress upon the community it could never shake off. Then next to the church they built their school to train their children aright. This all cost sacrificing effort, as well as money. But look at the dividends declared on that investment up to that date!

Northampton had given to the state and nation, up to 1885, as the returns from this investment, 354 college graduates, besides 56 graduates of other institutions; 114 ministers; 84 ministers' wives; 10 foreign missionaries; 25 judges; 102 lawyers; 95 physicians; 101 educators, including 7 college presidents and 30 professors; 24 writers, among whom are George Bancroft, John Lathrop Motley, Professor W. D. Whitney, J. G. Holland; 38 officers of the state, among them 2 governors, 2 secretaries of the commonwealth, 7 senators, 18 representatives; 21 army officers, including 2 generals and 6 colonels; 28 officers of the Unites States, among them a secretary of the navy, 2 foreign ministers, a treasurer of the United States, 5 senators, 8 members of Congress and 1 president.

Another community, not so far away, was purposely established as an irreligious place. Little attention was given to education in general, and none to Christian education. Although within a few miles of one of the best colleges in the state, yet the record is that not one young man has taken a college course, and none of those who entered the business world has gained distinction.

"JESUS, LOVER OF MY SOUL"

The author of this hymn was Charles Wesley, one of the famous brothers who founded Methodism. It is said that one day he was standing at his window, when a terrible storm was approaching. He noticed a bird being driven helplessly by the wind. As it came against his window-pane, he lifted the window-sash and rescued it from its impending danger. As he held the frightened bird to his bosom, the inspiration which prompted this great hymn came to him and he sat down and wrote,

"Jesus lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly."

At a Christian workers' convention, held a few years ago, the value of church hymns was being discussed. A Civil War veteran from the North arose and told of a night in the "60's" down on a southern battlefield, when he was on picket duty. He knew from the occasional shots being fired the enemy was not far away. A lonely feeling crept over him which compelled him "to look unto the hills from whence cometh our help." To give him more courage in this hour of danger he said, "I began to sing softly, 'Jesus, Lover of My Soul,' and all fear and loneliness left me." As he sat down a Southern delegate arose and said "I, too, was on picket duty on that same night on that same battlefield, but in the opposing army. I saw this northern soldier pacing his beat, part of which was across an open space where the moon revealed his full figure. I had determined to kill him the next time he crossed this open space, and with my gun raised, the trigger cocked and the aim sighted, he entered the open, singing softly, but, oh! how sweetly and clearly with his tenor voice,

'Other refuge have I none,
Hangs my helpless soul on thee.'

"I lowered my gun and softly joined him as he sang on,

'Plenteous grace with Thee is found,
Grace to cover all my sin,' and thanked God for the power, even in war, for the old church hymns."

"ABIDE WITH ME"

This favorite hymn, especially with older people, was written by Rev. Henry Frances Lyte, an Episcopal rector in the town of Brixham, England, situated on the English Channel. It was in this town where William of Orange first set foot on English soil in 1688. One hundred fifty years later, in 1842, William IV also landed here, and was welcomed by Rev. Mr. Lyte with his church choir. For this special courtesy, William IV presented the rector with a beautiful home which became very dear to him. After twenty-five years of very happy service in this parish, that dread disease, tuberculosis, attacked him and it was soon evident that he was not to be in this world long. His physician ordered him to take a trip on the continent, but he felt he must preach to his people once more. This last sermon was delivered through tears. That afternoon, after a few hours rest, he mustered every bit of strength he had and took an hour's walk down by the sea, alone, where he so loved to go. It was then and there this great prayer hymn was born as his spirit yearned,

"The darkness deepens,
Lord, with me abide."

Out of the pain of body and the anguish of soul, he exclaims,

"When other helpers fail and comforts flee,
Help of the helpless, O abide with me."

If any of our friends are planning to attend the World's Sunday-school Convention at Tokio, Japan, next October, please communicate with this office. Maybe we can be of assistance to you, and you to us.

It may be of interest for our readers to know that more than five hundred of the Institute students are now taking the Sunday-school studies of Sunday-school organization and management, child study and pedagogy. We are using as the basis of these studies three teacher-training books published by the Methodist Book Concern—The Organization and Administration of the Sunday-school, Life in the Making, and Learning and Teaching.

Besides nearly one hundred fifty students who are doing regular house-to-house visitation in the territory surrounding the Institute, we have six hundred seventeen students who teach Sunday-school classes in the Sunday-schools of Chicago and vicinity. These come from the day students only.

The Institute's Missionary Director, Rev. E. J. Pace, is the religious cartoonist of the Sunday School Times, Philadelphia. His weekly cartoon in the Times has become a very helpful feature of its lesson exposition. Sunday-school readers will be glad to learn that Mr. Pace has put all his cartoons on lantern slides, some of them in colors, and they can now be rented in sets from George W. Bond & Co., 14 West Washington Street, Chicago. Ill.

We now have nearly ninety former soldiers and sailors enrolled as students at the Institute. So many of our men wanted to organize a post of the American Legion that permission was voted by the Faculty. It is a non-secret, non-military, and non-political organization. Its purpose is stated in its preamble as follows:

"For God and Country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes:

"To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

ORIGIN AND STORIES OF CHURCH HYMNS

Since we have told the stories of a few church hymns requests have come in for information as to where these stories are found. We give below what are probably the best authorities.

Story of the Hymns and Tunes, by Brown and Butterworth.

CHILDREN READING THE BIBLE IN CAIRO STREETS

Dr. S. M. Zwemer in returning from his office was passing the Bank of Rome in the modern business section of Cairo. He noticed a group of ragged boys, including several gamins, with newspapers for sale under their arms. They were crouched on the side-walk, and one was reading while the rest listened attentively. Dr. Zwemer stepped up to them to learn what they might be reading. To his surprise it was the Bible. The one boy in the group who knew how to read, gathered the others every morning to listen to stories from the book of Genesis. All these lads were Mohammedans. Rev. Stephen Trowbridge, field secretary of the World's Sunday-school Association for Egypt, in commenting on the incident said, "There is certainly an open door before us to the hearts of these boys of the streets." All the Sunday-school superintendents throughout Egypt have just been written to, encouraging them to bring in children from the streets to Sunday-school.

ON TO TOKYO—OCTOBER, 1920

The "Monteagle," "Siberia Maru" and "Suwa Maru" are the three ships that have been engaged for the exclusive use of delegates who will attend the Convention of the World's Sunday-school Association which meets in Tokyo, Japan, next October. Then there are a goodly number of reservations on at least nine other great trans-Pacific steamers. A revised edition of the tour bulletin has just been issued. This was necessary because the dates of the steamer sailings indicated in "Bulletin 1" which was issued by the World's Association have been changed. The "Monteagle" will take the place of the "Empress of Japan." At least half of the reservations have been taken by those who have applied for credentials, and other applications are arriving daily at the office of the World's Association, 216 Metropolitan Tower, New York City. There are still good reservations on each of the twelve ships but applications should be made soon. Full information will be found in the "Revised Bulletin," which will be sent to any one upon request. Information concerning the Around the World tour in connection with the Sunday-school convention will be ready early in March.

Pennsylvania has the largest number of registered delegates. Through the special activity of their State Secretary, William G. Landes, over one hundred have asked for credentials from the Keystone State. These have paid their initial deposit of $25 and will make the second payment of $50 on April 1. The first convention sailing will be on the "Fushima Maru," from Seattle, July 30. The last ship to leave will be the "Empress of Russia," from Vancouver, September 23. This boat will reach Yokohama October 4. The Convention will convene on the evening of October 5. Frequent bulletins of information will be issued from the office of the World's Association, and will be sent to all who have applied for a delegate's credential.

"SIDE-LIGHT" SUGGESTIONS

Teachers of the International (Uniform) lessons for May, 1920, will appreciate the aid given by the following named books on the dates stated:

May 2. "Samuel," in Children of the Bible (for children) (20 cents). "Thy Servant," in Sunday Talks to the Young, by Mee (20 cents).

May 9. Sowing and Reaping, by D. L. Moody. 20 cents.

May 16. Prevailing Prayer, by D. L. Moody (20 cents); How to Pray, by R. A. Torrey (20 cents); "I Cried, He Answered" (testimonies to answered prayer), 20 cents.

May 30. Life, Warfare and Victory, by D. W. Whittle (20 cents); The Overcoming Life, by D. L. Moody (20 cents).

As a general help on First Samuel, consult First Samuel, by W. G. Blaikie ($1.00, plus 10 cents postage).

LORD ROBERTS ON FAMILY PRAYER

A noteworthy movement is on foot in England to restore family prayers in the homes of the people. This is in a way to be a memorial to the late Lord Roberts. A letter of his to Lord Curzon, former Viceroy of India, was read in the House of Lords when the great warrior died. It is to be made the starting point and inspiration of this new movement. The distinguished soldier wrote as follows: "We have had family prayers for fifty-five years. Our chief reason is that they bring the household together in a way that nothing else can. Then it insures the servants and others who may be in the house joining in prayers which for one reason or another they may have omitted saying by themselves. Since the war began we usually read prayers, and when anything important has occurred, I tell those present about it. In this way I have found that the servants are taking a great interest in what is going on in France. We have never given an order about prayers; attendance is quite optional, but as a rule all the servants, men and women, come regularly on hearing the bell ring." The veneration in which Lord Roberts was held as a man of action gives peculiar weight to this utterance.

Missionary Department

BIBLE STUDY BY CORRESPONDENCE IN GUATEMALA

"Wherever the mission Spanish paper and tracts go the people are asking for some systematic Bible study. These publications go all over Central America and on down into South America. In many districts the people are without any instruction except that of an occasional itinerating missionary. A Bible correspondence course has been in the hearts and prayers of the missionaries for a long time. After translating a few lessons of a simple little Bible course, we gave them to the native Bible women to prove their clearness to the Latin American mind. We confided in them our hopes and plan for these notes as soon as the language is not such a problem and more translations are ready. They were to pray about this and not to mention it until we should be able to begin. In less than a week fourteen papers were brought me to correct on the first lesson. One of the Bible women had told! There was no turning back, so go ahead we must in some way.

"No further announcement has been given but each week new papers are sent in and the original ones are faithful and show marked improvement. Often the work is on any paper that can be picked up. One lesson was on a theatrical handbill that had evidently done some traveling in the streets before it served this purpose. A little servant girl in the home of a brewer in this city is sending in her lessons, and her Spanish is such that my poor overworked dictionary can scarcely decipher it; there are some clean, beautifully written papers, and several send in typewritten lessons which are a joy to receive. I discovered a "Nicodemus" writing out these lessons and later correcting his work by others that had been graded. He is a scholar and has studied various branches of the arts and sciences as well as many languages. He was being educated for a priest but became thoroughly disgusted and left the church many years ago.

"One of the most recent to begin the work is a man who was once a native pastor but fell into terrible sin and since has not been identified with anything good. When his first lesson came in it was a surprise and caused much joy and thanksgiving. His work is painstaking, neat and thorough. God is drawing him back and will make him a clean channel of blessing by the "washing of the Word." These are a few of those who are so faithfully taking up the study to show themselves approved unto God. With only one to handle the papers and no help except the translator one hour each day it looks hopeless, but our expectation is from the God of the impossible. We are suffering from the tower of Babel until at times we are tempted to forget the stronger tower—the name of the Lord. The work is His and 'He knoweth how.'"—Madeleine Bushman in The Guatemala News.

RACE DIMINUTION IN THE NEW HEBRIDES

The hope of the New Hebrides lies largely with the children of native Christian parents. All kinds of reasons have been adduced for the decline of population in the group. Camouflage is the proper description for most of them—for they are intended to deceive. Mr. Fred Paton is perhaps as well entitled as anyone to express an opinion on the matter, in view of his long residence in the group and his intimate knowledge of native life. Briefly his opinion is set forth as follows:

1. Epidemics which have swept through the Pacific and wiped out two-thirds of the population, leaving the rest weak.
2. The Kanaka Labour Traffic, including the present inter-island system. Family ties broken; immorality condoned; and a lower standard helped.
3. Disease, drink, and firearms introduced by whites—drink especially.
4. Want of stamina due to the above causes, and now the smaller population causing more inbreeding.
5. Deaths of mothers in childbirth, and also great mortality of infants due to malaria, and white men's epidemics and diseases. No one realizes how many young mothers die.

The greater proportion of men to women is startling.

The remedy—if not too late—is Christianity. Healthy children born of Christian parents may even yet re-people the group.

The old pagan beliefs of the native race die hard. These beliefs belong to the animistic type of religion, and it is rather bewildering to find that many of the beliefs and practices of the New Hebrides natives are virtually identical with the pagan races of Africa. The South Sea Islander has a vague idea of a supreme God who made all things, but they do not worship Him. He is an absentee Creator, and He is too far away to concern Himself about them or take any interest in the world He has made. The spirits take the place of God and they become objects of worship. Every calamity and every misfortune is due to the malign intervention of the spirits. One can readily conceive what terrible power must have been wielded by the old witch doctors, who interpreted the mind of the spirits and explained the cause of their wrath. The people have reason to thank God for the disappearance of these witch doctors.

CONDITIONS IN BIBLE LANDS TODAY

Hundreds of thousands of Christians are still in exile. The war is not yet over in the Near East. Peace is not concluded with Turkey.

Armenian loyalty to Christ is the marvel of the centuries. They have been offered every inducement of favor and preferment to forsake their faith. They have been oppressed by harsh restrictions and unjust discriminations. They have been tortured and murdered—not by hundreds, but by hundreds of thousands—in the ever recurrent orgies of religious and racial hatred. The wonder is not that a few have become Moslem but that any have remained Christian. The loyalty of the Armenians to the faith of their fathers is a modern miracle of the power of God.

"The heathen and Mohammedan population of the world is more by 200,000,000 than it was a hundred years ago; while the converts and their families do not amount to 3,000,000. The increase of the heathen is, numerically, more than seventy times greater than that of the converts during the century of Christian missions."

—James Johnston.

The one thing Christians have most to dread, and against which we must jealously guard, is any mass movement toward Christianity on the part of either pagan or heathen people. Christendom is not Christianity! The so-called Christian nations of the earth are poor exponents of the Christianity of God. Hence we should pray for the conversion of individuals rather than the reformation of nations.—Selected.

of the daily life, courage to confess our faults, to admit our mistakes, to ask the pardon of those we have hurt or wronged by neglect and thoughtlessness.

"Be strong and of a good courage." Why? See the remaining Scripture references in Deuteronomy 20:1-4 and Esther 4:13-17. Notice the three elements in Esther's courage—dependence on God, devotion to duty, determination to suffer if necessary. Cultivate this attitude of mind and heart and you, too, will live courageously.

Christian Principles in Personal and Public Health

1 Corinthians 6:19, 20

The two verses of our Scripture lesson are so rich in spiritual truth that it is difficult to confine them to the topic of personal and public health. Our topic has in view the health of the body, while the Scripture reference applies to the health of the whole man, spirit, soul and body. Health is wholeness; it is akin to holiness. It is the result of the harmonious working of each separate part with every other part. This produces wholeness, holiness, health. A physical giant with a dwarfed soul and a deadened spirit is no true picture of health. The all-round man is the healthful man.

Calvary and Pentecost stand out conspicuously in the Scripture lesson. "Ye are bought with a price." Where and when? At the place called Calvary where Christ died for our sins. The price having been paid, it follows that "Ye are not your own." This must be recognized and realized by faith. Not till then does the Holy Spirit dwell within, making the body His temple, "for if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his" (Rom. 8:9). The indwelling of the Holy Spirit is the greatest factor in the preservation of bodily health. The constructive forces of the body are quickened and strengthened by the divine indwelling.

From this center, the essential center of Christian faith, we may move out in ever-widening circles to the blessings and benefits of sanitary science, and all the activities of a Christian civilization for the furtherance of personal and public health. Christian principles call for an aggressive and progressive campaign for the preservation of health and life. On the principle of love and sympathy, we have hospitals and homes for the needy. On the principle of wisdom and for the general good, we demand supervision of the milk supply in order that the lives of the little ones shall not be endangered. Legislation against child labor and the enforcement of the weekly rest day, all proceed on the plane of Christian principles. The prevention of disease rather than the application of cures for disease is an outgrowth of Christian education. Millions of dollars are being spent by our cities in the creation of play-grounds and the provision of parks, all of which is an indirect result of a civilization built on Christian principles.

THE DEATH PENALTY

The death penalty has been abused in almost all the countries of the world; but this does not justify its abolition in cases of premeditated homicide; and neglect to apply to the criminal the pain of death, ordained by God Himself, always tends to the increase of crime, and gives loose rein to personal vengeance. The lauded "inviolability of human life" means that the life of a human being is so sacred that he who takes it without just cause, must pay for it with his own, in amends to justice, both human and divine.—Pratt, Studies in Genesis.

A TRINITY OF TRUTH

2 Samuel 22: 31

1. A Perfect Path. "His way is perfect." Amid the confusion and contradiction in the world there is "one sure way." "I am the way, etc." (John 14: 6).

2. A Tested Truth. "The Word of the Lord is tried." His promises are not untried bridges on which no foot has trod, but arches that have borne thousands on their way to heaven.

3. A Present Protection. "He is a shield," e. g., Abraham, Job, etc.

FUTURE GLORY

1. The Intermediate or Disembodied State.
    1. Is one of conscious existence (2 Cor. 5: 6-8; Phil. 1: 21-24).
    2. A blessed one (2 Cor. 5: 8; Phil. 1: 21; Rev. 7: 15).
    3. One of expectation (2 Cor. 5: 1-4; Acts 2: 34).
    4. Is where Christ is (2 Cor. 5: 8; Phil. 1: 23).
2. The Resurrection of the Body.
    1. Not a creation (1 Cor. 15: 42-54; 35-38).
    2. A thorough change (1 Cor. 15: 37; Matt. 22: 30).
    3. Like Christ's glorified body (1 Cor. 15: 49; 1 John 3: 2).
    4. Effected by the power of the Lord (John 5: 25; Phil. 3: 21; Col. 3: 4).
3. The Final State.
    1. A glorious home (2 Pet. 2: 13; John 14: 2).
    2. Full communion with God (John 17: 24; 1 Cor. 13: 12).
    3. Happy employment (Rev. 22: 3; 4: 8; 7: 15).
    4. Increased knowledge (1 Cor. 13: 9-12).
    5. Exalted companionships (Matt. 8: 11; Heb. 12: 22).
    6. Eternal glory and bliss (1 John 2: 17, 25; 2 Cor. 4: 17).

THE IMPORTANT QUESTION

"Dost thou believe on the Son of God?"—John 9: 35.

Introduction. Miraculous cure of man born blind. Chief priests and rulers envious. Parents fear and duplicity. The man's honesty. His expulsion from the synagogue, found of Christ and question proposed.

I. The Question Urged.

1. Its reference to Christ as Son of God. Appellation to both angels and men in Scripture. To angels, by creation; to believers, by adoption. To Christ, in sense alone applicable to Himself, as possessing God's nature, equal with God, having His names and perfections.

2. Its reference to Faith in Son of God. "Dost thou believe?" Faith apprehends Christ as He is revealed in the Word. It is the act by which we welcome Him into our souls; of our will, whereby we cordially submit to Him. It is beholding, looking to, fleeing unto, walking in, laying hold of, receiving and resting on Christ.

3. It relates to Personal Faith. "Thou." Not pertaining to mere information or opinion, but to faith. No relation to past or future, but to the present.

II. A Scriptural Solution. If we truly believe on Him we shall:

1. Remember the means bringing us to this state.

2. Experience the influence of His Spirit on our souls, (Rom. 8: 9, 16).

3. Highly esteem and value Christ, (1 Pet. 2: 7; Song of Sol. 5: 10; 1: 3).

4. Enjoy peace and comfort of mind. He is the Author; His gospel the message; His gift the enjoyment of peace.

5. Have souls aflame with love to God and man, (John 3: 14, 24; 7: 11, 19).

6. Be subject to His authority, (Matt. 16: 24; 2 Cor. 6: 17; Heb. 13: 13; John 15: 14).

Application.

1. To those in Christian country; without living faith in God's Son,—this of no avail. To professors and those zealous of gospel doctrines without personal faith,—zeal nothing.

2. Christian to keep signs of faith bright before his eyes.

3. To growing in faith, and prayer for increase.

4. He that will not believe will perish (John 3: 18).

5. Christ offered to all. Invite, exhort all to come unto Him and have life.

—J. Burns.

KINGS AND PRIESTS

A Sermonette

"He hath made us kings and priests unto God."—Rev. 1: 6.

He makes kings out of slaves; He transforms outcasts into priests. He takes life in which there is no noble sovereignty and control, and He gives the soul a scepter and a throne. He takes a soul which has lived in the streets, in the mere passages and outer things of life, and He leads it into the holy of holies, and gives it a place in the sanctuary of the innermost, and a ministry at the divine altar of sacrifice. It is the most marvelous change in a world which is full of changes. He gives the imperial purple to the beggar, the miter to him who has gone far astray. Yes, the God of grace takes His kings from servitude and His priests from the mire.

How, then, shall His kings be known? What shall be the sign of their sovereignty? They shall be known by the royalty of their bearing, by the loftiness of their carriage, by their royal way of doing ordinary things, by the manner in which they crown the commonplace with distinction. They perform unattractive duties with grace, thus converting dull opportunities into state occasions. They stamp the kingly superscription upon the meanest coin. They prove their kingliness by an elevation which touches everything into dignity. They live "in the heavenlies in Christ Jesus." They sit with Him on His throne.

And how shall the priests be known? By their power of intercession, and therefore by their self-forgetfulness and self-sacrifice. They minister at the altar in no selfish quest, but in the service of their brethren. They may therefore be known by the keenness of their sympathies, by their wide-open hearts, by their wakeful readiness to take another's need to the mercy-seat, and to bring to him the rich bounties of grace. A priest is one who has a well-trodden way to God, and who treads it in the interest of his brother.—J. H. Jowett, in British Weekly.

OUR PART—GOD'S PART

"My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."—Phil. 4: 19.

Now here is God's remedy to meet the need within. You may pray about it, you may make earnest resolutions, you may try to bring in some improvement of your own, you may struggle, you may strive, and you may put forth earnest efforts, but it is of no use. There is only one answer to that need, and that is the Lord Himself. He comes seeking faith. He says: "I cannot work, if you have not simple, childlike faith towards me." You receive Him. We talk here about definite blessing. That is the definite blessing, or the secret of it. You let the Lord have His right place in you and His own way with you, and He will put all things right within.—Evan H. Hopkins.

SPIRITUAL BLINDNESS

The great difficulty in preaching the gospel to the world is convincing men of their lost estate. "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which is lost"; unless a man believes he is lost, there is little chance of his accepting a Saviour. It is a well known fact that an Indian prides himself on his being able to find his way and never being lost. On one occasion, however, an Indian lost the trail and wandered for days without finding his "wigwam." At last some white men met him and asked him if he was lost. "No," he replied, "Indian not lost. Wigwam lost." This is just the attitude of many a man who believes that "luck is against him," "society is all to blame," "the church is a failure," etc. Everything is wrong; but of course he is right. —Record of Christian Work.

NOT ALWAYS VISIBLE TO HUMAN EYES

The story is told of a woman who had a rare rosebush. She watched and worked over it for weeks, but saw no results of her labor. One day she found a crevice in the wall, near the bush, and, running through the crevice, was a tiny shoot of her rosebush. She went to the other side of the wall, and there she found her roses blooming in all their splendid beauty.

Some of us have to work on, year after year, seeing no results of our labor. To such comes this message: "Work on. Do not be discouraged. Your work is blooming on the other side of the wall." There is no such thing as wasted time or labor if we are truly serving Jesus Christ. —Selected.

THE GREATEST OF ALL

My greatest loss—To lose my soul.
My greatest gain—Christ my Saviour.
My greatest object—To glorify God.
My greatest pride—A crown of glory.
My greatest work—To win souls for Christ.
My greatest joy—The joy of God's salvation.
My greatest inheritance—Heaven and its glories.
My greatest victory—Over death through Christ.
My greatest neglect—To neglect so great salvation.
My greatest crime—To reject Christ, the only Saviour.
My greatest privilege—Power to become a Son of God.
My greatest bargain—The loss of all things to win Christ.
My greatest profit—Godliness in this life and that to come.
My greatest peace—That peace that passeth understanding.
My greatest knowledge—To know God and Jesus Christ whom He hath sent.—Selected.

THE PASTOR AS A LABORER

"We then as workers together with God" (2 Cor. 5:1). "In all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God; in patience, in necessities * * * in labors * * * by honor and dishonor, * * * by evil report and good report; as deceivers and yet true." (2 Cor. 6:1-10).

"The laborer is worthy of his reward" (1 Tim. 5:18).

A non-church-going gentleman (?) recently remarked that the average pastor belongs to a class of "respectable idlers, who have nothing to do but to stand up and talk for thirty minutes twice on Sabbaths." He certainly did not know the pastor's burden, nor does he understand that it is not necessary to carry a lunch pail and daily go to a place of manual work to become a laborer.

1. As to Talking. Consider that the pastor has to prepare, by diligent study and thought, and deliver, say, from 100 to 150 sermons and addresses every year to the same audiences and on the same subject, and yet keep them fresh and interesting. This does not take account of many outside addresses. Do you know any class of public speakers who have to do that?

2. As to Administration. Every church is an institution that has to be managed as carefully as any business concern; and the pastor is the manager.

3. As to Finance. The pastor is the chief financier of the church, and has to raise from $5,000 to $50,000 every year for current expenses and benevolent enterprises. As this money has to be raised by voluntary offerings, it requires a good deal of education, training and tact to accomplish the "painless extraction" of this money from a congregation, a large part of whom does not know the joy (only the pain) of giving.

4. As to Visitation and Pastoral Work. In a church where there are many families, scattered all over the city, to visit all these homes, made up of all sorts and conditions of people; and do it so as to make them "glad to see the pastor," means untold labor. This means about thirty pastoral visits every week during the year; besides special visits to the sick and those in trouble, not to speak of several visits to the hospitals during the week, and hardly a week without a funeral.

5. As to Correspondence. The pastor's desk is loaded every morning with from five to twenty letters from individuals, societies, board secretaries, college presidents, etc., all to be answered. Not to speak of letters to absent members and "wandering sheep."

I would willingly give the gentleman who thinks the average pastor is a "genteel idler" an opportunity to do my work for just one year, and then hear what he would have to say.

Pray for and help your pastor, for he needs both your prayers and your help.—George F. Pentecost, D. D., in The Presbyterian.

The Evangelistic Field

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 2d of the month preceding date of issue.

"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns, and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work, nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

The Joliet (Ill.) Sunday Herald-News published a commendatory editorial concerning the Morning Star Mission and its founder, Peter McCarthy.

Charles H. Gray has again entered the evangelistic field, holding a meeting at Elvaston, Ill., during February, and at Hemingford, Neb., during March.

Rev. S. D. Goodale reports a splendid meeting at Protection, Kan. He has been given a call to return there in October with the hope that it may be to a union meeting.

S. E. Lewis reports a successful meeting held at Otego, N. Y., despite heavy snowstorms and blocked roads. From there he and his party went to Oneonta, and then to Scio, N. Y.

J. Roy Weakland writes: "All my work this season has been in New York state, Elmira, Marathon, Carthage, Black River, Brocton and Forestville. My March campaign will be at Dunkirk, N. J."

Dr. H. Wyse Jones and Ralph E. Stewart closed a successful campaign in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., February 18. Seventy-five accepted Jesus Christ as their Saviour, and 250 signified their desire to serve their Master.

John L. McKinsey of Joplin, Mo., held a campaign at Monett, Mo., in the Presbyterian church during February. At the time the meeting was reported, thirty had united with the church. During the meeting the pastor, L. C. Stumpf, was installed.

Evangelist Paris E. Wells and C. B. Brooks conducted a union meeting at Kenmore, N. Dak. with 120 reconsecrations and 231 converts. One party of twenty business men travelled 126 miles and remained up all night to attend one service.

The Minges Evangelistic Company closed a very successful meeting at the South Side Church of Christ of Lima, O., February 16, where 350 confessed Christ and over 200 reconsecrated their lives. Their next meeting was held at Danbury, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray G. Swartzbaugh write that their meeting with the East-Minster Presbyterian Church of Kansas City, Mo. closed with many blessings. There were numerous reconsecrations and seventy-three additions to the membership of the church.

H. P. Dunlop and wife report successful meetings at Upper Sandusky, O., Detroit, Mich. and Nevada, Mo. The second named meeting was a union campaign held in the Olivet Presbyterian Church, and in the last named they report ninety-eight professions of faith.

McMinn and Wieand report a most satisfactory meeting at the Butler Memorial Reformed Church of Indianapolis, Ind. They state that one of the most gratifying features of the meeting was the interest in Bible study. Their next meeting was held at Farmington, Minn.

Fife Brothers conducted a union campaign in Hooversville, Pa., during February. Clyde Lee Fife is the evangelist and his brother Robert S. Fife has charge of the music. During the first few days of invitation 268 people responded, signing cards for the churches of their choice.

John W. Erskine writes "I am now in Rome, N. Y. conducting meetings with the Salvation Army. We began Sunday, February 29, and will close March 14. There is a great work to be done here and the Army is in the forefront of the battle. When I gave the invitation Sunday night four came forward."

The Vom Bruch Party closed a two weeks meeting in the Siloam M. E. Church, Philadelphia, Pa., with good results. They then went to Knoxville and Burkettsville, Md., holding meetings for a week in each place. Their next meeting was held at Sunbury, Pa., in the First Baptist Church.

Rev. Joseph W. F. Hakes writes as follows: "I am very happy to report that I have just closed another campaign at Maybrook, N. Y. The Lord saved about fifty, established a dozen family altars, and enabled us, on the last day, to raise enough money to pay off the mortgage on the church and leave a nice balance on hand."

J. B. Kendall and Lon D. Parker are using a unique advertising poster to advertise the meetings held at Emporia, Kan. This advertising drew large crowds every night. A reproduction of the poster is shown above in which the revival meetings are competing with the movies for patronage.

Frank E. Lindgren writes: "Mrs. Horace F. Erwin, wife of my associate, passed away after a week's illness, Friday morning, February 27. Just nine hours before that their little daughter, aged four, died of the same malady (pneumonia). Their bodies were taken to Marceline, Mo., where the burial took place, Monday, March 1."

A very interesting series of meetings was recently held at Beacon, Ia., F. A. Geisenheiner, of Chicago, doing the preaching. From Beacon Mr. Geisenheiner went to Darlington, Mo., to assist the pastor of the Methodist church, Rev. J. F. Clark. The power of God was manifest from the beginning as people came to the altar the second night of the services.

The Oliver E. Williams Party conducted a successful campaign at Frederick, Md. the first part of February. From there the party went to Johnstown, Pa., and then to Newark, O., where fifty came to the altar at the first call; and sixty at the second call when the evangelist preached on the second coming of our Lord. On March 14 the evangelist began a meeting at his home, Warren, Pa.

Richard Low writes: "Our four weeks meeting at Webster, Kan. closed March 5, with eighty-one converts, thirty-one accessions to the church, twenty-one baptisms and thirty-one consecrations for life service. The pastor Rev. Mr. Arend, did his own preaching. My next meeting was at Prairie View, Kan., assisting Dr. Harmon, and from there I go to Mentor, Kan. to assist Rev. Verne Daniels."

The Franklin Evangelistic Party closed a very successful meeting at Herrick, S. Dak., on February 29, which resulted in more than doubling the membership of the Methodist church, in which the meeting was held, as well as in greatly reviving, strengthening, and building-up God's people.

The party began a meeting in their home town, Eldora, Ia., on March 14.

L. J. Miller of Nashville, Tenn., reports a successful meeting in the Methodist church at Lisbon, N. Dak. There were about 200 definite seekers for reclamation and on the last night 41 responded to the invitation, and 15 young people dedicated their lives for special service. The next meeting was held at Valley City and from there the evangelist went to Jamestown and Bismarck, N. Dak

Mr. and Mrs. John Imrie report a successful meeting at Advance, Mo., with sixty-two conversions in ten days. The preaching was done by Evangelist Rayburn of Ellington, Mo. From Advance Mr. and Mrs. Imrie went to Trent S. Dak., where the meeting will be held in the First Baptist Church. From there they will go to Pierre, S. Dak., where the preaching will be done by Evangelist Morris, state evangelist for South Dakota.

The Steve Burke Party held a union campaign at Breckenridge, Mo., five churches co-operating. The services were held in a commodious new garage. Steve Burke, the evangelist, was prevented from preaching by serious illness, and Evangelist Carl E. Kircher of Emporia, Kan., was engaged to fill the vacancy. Mrs. Kircher also came to take charge of the women's work and the prayer meetings. The personnel of the party is as follows: Rev. Steve Burke, evangelist; Rev. N. M. Tatum, Manager; Harry Dixon Loes, director of music; Miss Birdie C. Loes, pianist.

The following report is taken from a local paper: "On February 11 there closed in Maxville, Ont., one of the most successful series of special meetings that this community has ever gone through. The week of prayer, the first week in January, was of a union nature, with the Baptist, Congregational and Presbyterian churches. A fine interest was shown in these services, and God's presence was much felt. The services were held in the Presbyterian church. On January 18, Rev. Frank McKeegan and Mrs. McKeegan came to assist us for three weeks. From the outset the weather was very severe, but, despite this, the attendance was good. Brother McKeegan preached soul-stirring gospel sermons, and Mrs. McKeegan both spoke and sang the eternal truths of Scripture. For some two weeks not a move was made by any one toward yielding to the pleadings of the Holy Spirit. Extra prayer meetings were arranged, and God's people seemed to be much concerned over the condition of the unsaved, and of some of the church members. Finally the change came, and many professed in tears to long for a heart washed in the blood of the Lamb. Several adults came out solidly for Christ, and a great many young people—some seventy in all. So intense was the interest that the meetings were prolonged three nights and some twenty took their stand the last night."

Book Notices

Any book favorably mentioned below may be secured at price named from the Bible Institute Colportage Association, 822 North La Salle Street, Chicago.

Ephesians, the Three-fold Epistle, by Rev. Wm. B. Riley, D. D.

In this book the writer claims to have discovered the three-fold nature of Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians. He claims to have arrived at this conclusion after careful study, and that viewed in this light its interest and value are greatly increased. Regardless as to whether all will agree with him he furnishes us with seven interesting studies in this treasure-house of spiritual truth.

The Drama of the Face, by Rev. Elwin Lincoln House, D. D.

In some respects this series of studies in applied psychology is unique, as there is unquestionably a story in every face. To those who possess the discernment, the face of the young is a prophecy and the face of the old is a history. It is most important that parents and teachers should recognize this in their dealing with the young. While not every statement in the book can be unqualifiedly endorsed, yet it is a book of vital interest and should have a wide circulation.

The Starting Place of Bible Study, by Rev. James Dinwoodie.

This is No. 3 of "The Starting Place Series." Like the others, it is a sample of condensation and comprehensiveness. The author argues well for starting our Bible study with Christ, which would necessitate an introductory study of the Gospels. The Old Testament should be studied in the light of the New Testament. "The Primary Lesson" is to learn Christ, and to learn of Christ. But the book is more than a defense of an opinion. It is full of practical suggestions about getting started in the study of the Bible, and how to carry the study forward intelligently and helpfully. All of the book is extremely good. The chapter on "Prophecy" clearly defines the meaning of the term, the varied work of the prophet, and the different kinds and forms of the prophetic message.

A Working Plan for the Church School, by Rev. A. E. Henry.

Around the four-fold objective of an efficient Sunday-school to reach, teach, win for Christ and train for service, the author, out of years of experience, has outlined "a working plan" which is workable in a small or large Sunday-school, where the leadership has an ordinary amount of initiative, coupled with a willingness to work and a passion for souls, without which no person should be asked to direct. This book is intended to keep Sunday-schools in the four-fold path of efficiency, rather than help to show them how to organize the details of their movements. It is intended as a steering guide and can be used to advantage with books on detailed organization. It pays much attention to evangelism and training for Christian service and will be found of great help.

The Humanity of the Christ, by Rev. Gerritt Huyser.

Written by a man "eighty years young," who draws upon his wide experience, broad reading, and thorough study. In a time when so many books are written which deal with trivial topics or deal trivially with profound topics, it is refreshing to read a book that is thorough in its treatment of serious subjects which are of present-day interest.

The book contains twelve expository sermons, the first of which appears as the title of the book. All are interestingly and forcefully presented and written in popular style. Among them are several unusual ones, such as, "Was There Only One Ascension?," "Satan's Masterpiece," "The Approaching Day," "The Fall of Man; or Paradise Bestowed, Lost, and Regained." We can heartily recommend all of them.

God's First Words, by Rev. George D. Watson, D. D.

The first chapter of the book is selected for the title. The book is really a study of the first things of creation and history as recorded in the book of Genesis. The treatment is very suggestive and scriptural, full of practical and spiritual teachings. The reader who has not thoroughly studied Genesis will be surprised how much the remainder of the Bible is indebted to Genesis and dependent upon Genesis. With such a book for a guide, the remainder of the Bible unfolds God's purposes for man in a wonderful way. Genesis truly in a large way is the keynote to what follows. The author's expositions are sound, but one must be on his guard against accepting what sometimes may seem to be fanciful applications of the truth. It is possible to over-interpret as well as misinterpret the Scripture.

The Gospel and the New World, by Mr. Robert E. Speer, D. D.

Here is a book whose author recognizes that the world war has brought new problems to the world and accentuated the old ones, but with an intelligent and sympathetic grasp of these problems shows that they only can be solved by an unflinching loyalty to the spiritual ideals as expressed in the Christian missionary propaganda. The political, economical, and racial problems, he shows, can only be settled by making Jesus Christ the head of mankind. He does well in insisting that there is need of a constructive interpretation of Christian principles, but the missing note in the book is the failure to show that the world should hear the gospel because it is lost. There is danger at this critical moment of making utilitarianism the obligation of the missionary enterprise instead of the passion for lost souls. The love of God for the world as expressed in the sacrificial work of Christ should be the dynamic of all missionary effort.

I Cried, He Answered, compiled and edited by Henry W. Adams, Norman H. Camp, William Norton, F. A. Stevens. Introduction by Charles G. Trumbull.

This inspiring volume is a recent collection of authentic testimonies to answered prayer, granted under many and widely varied conditions. We have here no "rehash" of old anecdotes. It strengthens our faith to know that the prayers of fellow-Christians in our own day are being answered. Nothing is more greatly needed just now than a firm reliance upon prayer to accomplish things. The call to service is louder than ever before, but preceding and accompanying service must be prayer. Unless God works, our own poor efforts will not avail for much. Any book that will help to stir up the Church to lay hold upon the omnipotence of God is a book highly to be commended.

Mr. Trumbull's introduction is a practical and helpful study of the real meaning of prayer. This book is properly classified and carefully indexed.

Several small books have recently appeared upon the Epistle to the Romans. Is there any special significance in this? Are people demanding the "meat" of the gospel? Are they getting weary of so much topical preaching upon superficial themes? Certain it is that when thoroughly prepared Bible teachers and preachers give a course of studies upon Romans a deep interest is awakened.

These studies by Mr. Page were recently given in many cities where community Bible classes have been established by the Extension Department of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. They were admirably adapted to such classes. Any pastor who wants something concise, accurate and presentable to use in his prayermeeting or with a special class, will find in this volume something that will exactly meet his need. The Epistle is thoroughly analyzed, and the comments, though brief, are to the point. The treatment is most comprehensive and satisfactory.

Songs of the Kingdom, by Arthur W. Spaulding.

Here we have something new. The singers of Israel loved to sing songs of the Kingdom, but few other poets have been granted either vision or song. This southern author employs the term "Kingdom" in a broad sense, referring both to the present and the future. Originality of theme, striking treatment, and poetical insight delight the reader as he turns from page to page. The book in the main is a message of faith and cheer. The first two poems are among the best: "Almost Home," and "A Song of the Setting Sun," which ends with these lines:

"And, when the lowlands fail you,
  Look where the headland leaps;
For the sunlight touches the hilltops,
  Though lost in night are the deeps."

Other themes are "The Furnace," "A Vision of the Day," "God's Warriors," "A Song of the King's Highway," "The Hills of God," "Land of My Love." All are poems with a strong Christian message.

Plans for Sunday-school Evangelism, by Frank L. Brown.

While from eighty to ninety per cent of those who are brought into the church on confesions of faith come from the Sunday-school it is also a fact that more than seventy-five per cent of the Sunday-school never unite with the church, and it takes four teachers and officers a whole year to win each one of those who are won to church membership. Since there are four classes of people—pastors, superintendents, teachers, and parents—upon whom falls the responsibility of soul winning in the Sunday-school, help for them is greatly needed. Among those who might render this help there is no one better qualified than Frank L. Brown, general secretary of the World's Sunday-school Association and for thirty-four years superintendent of a Sunday-school which has added over five thousand scholars to church membership. Parents, as well as Sunday-school workers will find much in this book that will help them lead their children to the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world.

Christ and Woman's Power, by Edith Picton-Turbervill, O. B. E.

This is a very interesting book, and viewed from the standpoint of a review of the history of woman's emancipation is very profitable. The severe criticism which is to be made of it is the wrong interpretation placed upon Scripture in making application of divine truth to the problem. This is due to the lack of a comprehensive grasp of Scripture truth. If the author had been as conversant with Scripture as with the development of the woman's movement, and made use accordingly, it would be a book one could unqualifiedly recommend. Then, too, her censures upon the organized church in its relationship to reformatory movements are unfortunate. No one for a moment would try to justify the actions and attitude of the organized church, but the author should have made it clear that this was the degenerate church and not the Church as set forth in the New Testament, for to the true Church woman is indebted for all her freedom.

The author commits a colossal blunder in pitting Christ against Paul, for the teachings of Christ and Paul most perfectly harmonize.

Does God Care? by Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, D. D.

Probably at no other period in the world's history have so many sad hearts needed a reassuring message about God. Does God care? Is He genuinely concerned about men and women and little children? Does He really love them? But even more vital is the question, Does God take care of them? One may care and yet be powerless to help. Does God sympathize with us, and can God really do for us? Such are some of the practical questions with which the author most satisfactorily deals in Part I, under the general question, "Is there a personal providence superintending human lives?"

Part II deals with the subject, "Modern Doubt and Christian Belief Concerning Prayer." This topic also is most admirably handled. The chapter upon "Erroneous Views of Prayer" is particularly good, as is also the one upon "A More Positive and Constructive Statement of the Christian Doctrine Concerning Prayer."

The volume as a whole is most opportune and helpful, written in a style that is concise, yet not so condensed as to lack clarity.

The Meaning of the War for Religious Education, by Rev. Robert Wells Veach, D. D.

Lloyd George recently said, "The most formidable foe we had to fight in Germany was not the arsenals of Krupp or the submarine yards, but the schools of Germany. They were our most formidable competitors in business and our most terrible opponents in war." Dr. Veach in this most interestingly written volume, born out of many months of experience on the battlefields of France, at the front and behind the lines, presents very clearly the problems which this world war has forced upon the church for solution, and then after picturing "the Christ which men need and want," with biblical foundations, outlines a system of religious education with fourteen educational laws to govern its teaching to the 25,000,000 boys and girls of the United States between nine and eighteen years of age who in fifteen years will be the real world conquerors.

It is refreshing to find a book like this giving the Word of God, the crucified Christ, and the fundamentals of the church their proper place. It reads like a story-book, as it outlines the moral equivalent of war to be taught the rising generation.

The Unwelcome Angel and Other Sermons, by Rev. Charles F. Wishart, D. D., LL. D.

This is a collection of most charming sermons preached while the author was pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Chicago, within the last four years. Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus, D. D., writes an unusual foreword especially complimentary to the author's gift as a great poet-preacher.

Although the author was a professor of systematic theology before going to the Chicago church, the sermons do not carry the aroma of the proverbial dry-as-dust theology of the schools, and yet the sermons are not untheological. Theology runs strongly through all of them, and the aptitude and poetic style of the preacher hold the interest of the reader. The topical method obsesses the preacher and the expositional method suffers on that account.

The homiletic value of the collection is very great, the unhackneyed illustrations being most skillfully used, and pertinent quotation of poetry is copious and is always apropos.

The appearance of the book is much against it, being decidedly cheap, both as to the quality of the paper and the binding. The proof reading is not good, and altogether it is a pity that subject matter of such high quality should not have a more becoming dress.

Tracts for New Times.

These are six in number. Tracts have come to have a religious sound, and as such have widely spread their silent but pervasive influence for good. In "Tracts for New Times" we have a new departure. They were written not by theologians, but by British scientists. Originally read before the Victoria Institute, they appear here in abbreviated form. Needless to say, they are the latest word of Christian men who are true scientists, and who can speak with authority upon the subjects with which they deal. These subjects are both scientific and biblical. They are not technical in their treatment, but popular, just as tracts should be.

A Lawyer's Study of the Bible, by Everett P. Wheeler, A. M.

If this lawyer's knowledge of law is as superficial as his knowledge of the Bible seems to be one would hesitate to employ him as his advocate. Two examples will suffice to show the unreliableness of his study: first, his first rule for the study of the Bible is that it must have a spiritual and not a literal interpretation. This position he attempts to substantiate by Paul's statement "the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life" (2 Cor. 3: 6). By the "letter" and "spirit" here is meant not the outer and inner meaning of the Scripture, but as the context clearly shows, the Mosaic law and the gospel. The author is disposed to follow the allegorical system of interpretation founded by Origen. This system is inexcusable, as it enables men to read words away from their contextual meaning and causes them to read into them their own notions. The man who follows this rule will become an adept at eisegesis instead of exegesis.

Secondly, he makes the triumph of modern medicine and surgery to be a fulfilment of Christ's words, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do" (John 14: 12), and makes the wonders of steam and electricity to be as really miracles as the marvelous works wrought by Christ.

Furthermore, his application of the principles of Scripture betrays his utilitarian philosophy and ethics.

The Starting Place of Truth, by Rev. A. H. Finn.

This book is No. 5 in "The Starting Place Series." In the opinion of the author the quest for the origin of truth must be along religious lines, so that this work has narrowed his field to the texts of the Penteteuch. Only an ardent student and also an accomplished linguist would consider it worth his while to write down in parallel columns the Hebrew, Samaritan, and Greek texts, and then painstakingly compare every minute variation. This little volume gives in condensed form the important discoveries of the author and also his conclusions.

Among these conclusions it is interesting to note that the Hebrew text has been exposed to fewer changes than either of the others. The Samaritan text first had to be rewritten in a different script and has since been copied by scribes who were ignorant of Hebrew. The Septuagint first had to be translated into a totally different language, and later translated by men not always at home with the Hebrew, sometimes inconsistent in their methods of translating and sometimes influenced by Greek thought.

The Hebrew text underlies both the Samaritan and Septuagint. But since the Samaritan text points to a Hebrew text in use in the northern kingdom before the Assyrian captivity in Hezekiah's time, the text of the Pentateuch was substantially the same as the present Hebrew text some centuries before Ezra, all of which has an important bearing upon a present day theory. In the opinion of the author the so-called theory that the Priestly Code was not introduced before Ezra's time would be wholly indefensible.

Since we have practically the original text of the first five books of the Bible, we have a "secure starting place for ascertaining the truth as displayed to us in God's revelation of Himself and His will in His holy Word."

The Two-Version Bible. What is the best working Bible for the Bible teacher or student? The Bible here presented seems to meet practically every requirement. This edition is in Brevier type, and is printed on Oxford India paper, and is seven-eighths of an inch thick.

The text face presents the Authorized Version. On the outer margins there are references made to the changes as found in the Revision of 1881, so that both texts can be read from the same page. The center column is devoted to references usually found in reference Bibles. This two version Bible appeared in 1900, and has been extensively used by Bible teachers throughout the world, especially in Great Britain.

By presenting the Authorized Version, the precious heritage of the good old English Bible, used for centuries, is preserved. Professor Phelps of Yale University in his lecture at Princeton University on "The Literary Aspects of the Bible" said: "The Authorized Version is incomparably the best both for the pulpit and for educated readers. Many believed that the Revised Version would supplant the old; but after a few years, the people returned to the familiar book. There are some positive errors which were corrected in the Revised Version; but the nineteenth century scholars lost in beauty what they gained in accuracy. There is no English in the world equal to that found in the 1611 Bible."

In the back of the volume there is a list of readings and renderings preferred by the American Committee and recorded, at their request, so that this edition presents to Bible teachers all the changes in the English Revision and most of the important changes of the American Committee.

The page thus presented is exceedingly pleasant and the paper on which it is printed, while very thin, is very opaque. The reviewer has used one of these Bibles for years by preference, and the same thing might be said of Rev. James M. Gray, D. D., Dean of The Moody Bible Institute, and by thousands of others.

to it. It is His prerogative to cultivate that field even as He will. This world is potentially a redeemed world, for Christ bought it at the price of His own precious blood.

The other sower, the enemy of the first sower, is an intruder. The field is not his. He has absolutely no business in that field. He is spoken of as an enemy, but he has gotten into the field of the Master, and oversowed what the Master had already sown with golden grain. It has been true in history that wherever Christ has gone forth by His Spirit, through His people, to sow the gospel seed, the Devil has appeared, through his people, and oversown the Master's field with bad seed, or tares.

The good sower here was the first in his sowing; the other, Satan, is second in his sowing. The enemy would not have sowed the tares at all, had it not been that Christ had sowed the wheat. When a real work of the gospel is begun in any place, and souls are being converted to Christ, that is always an invitation to the Devil to appear and sow his tares. He is generally second in his evil work.

How and What the Devil Sows

Then, we notice that the first sower does his work openly, in the day time; the second sower does his work secretly, and under the cover of night. It was sometime between sunset and sunrise that he intruded himself, uninvited into the Master's field. It was while men slept that he came and sowed his tares. This is precisely how the Devil has worked throughout the age in sowing the tares of error in the Master's kingdom. We do not learn of the evil that has been accomplished many times, until the subjects of it have gotten so far into it that they are beyond redemption.

Christian Science, Russelism, Seventh-Dayism, Mormonism, and many other false cults, carry on their work in this sly and subtle way. People wake up in the morning to find the literature of these cults beneath their doors, or in the seats of churches, that the unwary may be caught by it. We would that the eyes of Christian men and women everywhere knew the method of Satan, and would remain away and keep on guard against him.

DR. GRAY IN FLORIDA

The Miami (Fla.) Herald of February 14, had a first page report of an address by Dr. Gray at a Bible conference in Miami, in part as follows: "A great audience heard Dr. Gray discuss 'Spiritualism' at the evening service. His discussion was a brilliant presentation of this subject which is attracting so many people in these days.

"He said it was a grave mistake to suppose that Spiritualism was all fraud. The Bible taught differently, but even scientists like Sir Oliver Lodge and some who had preceded him like Sir William Crookes and Alfred Russel Wallace had testified to something in it beyond human ken. They had come very near saying what that something was, and yet they had fallen short at a vital point which the Bible only could throw light upon. They said it was the spirits of the dead communicating with the living, but the Bible warned against such a supposition and taught clearly that it was evil spirits or demons personating the dead against whom they who desired to serve God were warned and inhibited.

"With this as his thesis, Dr. Gray proceeded to show from the Bible that Satan is a person, not merely an evil principle, but a person of great power also, who is at the head of a kingdom of great power composed of evil spirits or demons. These demons were, and are, objects of human worship, and possess and use human beings according to the same biblical authority."

THE BEREAN BAND MOVEMENT

The communication reproduced in large part herewith is being mailed in booklet form to a large number of Christian workers. Copies will be furnished free of charge on receipt of request. Please state the number desired and enclose a two cent stamp.

To Clergymen, Evangelists, Mission Workers, Sunday-school Superintendents and Teachers, Officers of Young People's Organizations, and Christian Workers generally.

Dear Friends:

The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago is now the American representative of the Berean Band, "an international and interdenominational movement to encourage the life-long habit of storing the memory with the Word of God."

This movement was founded in 1905 by Mr. Charles J. G. Hensman of London, England, who is its general secretary.

Two presidents are selected each year, one for Great Britain and one for America. This year the respective presidents are Rev. J. Russell Howden, B. D., and Rev. James M. Gray, D. D., Dean of The Moody Bible Institute. The vice-presidents include fifty-nine eminent Christian leaders of both continents.

The Plan

To learn one verse of the Bible every week is the sole obligation of membership in the Berean Band.

Every member is furnished a list of verses for the current year. These verses are carefully chosen, a definite subject being taken for each month, and representative verses selected, with the object of obtaining a cohesion of thought and as far as possible a completeness of subjects in each year.

The plan suggested is to learn each weekly verse on the Lord's Day; (also the brief context indicated, if desired), and to recall the verse to mind at least once every day until the first Lord's Day of the month following.

The annual subscription for membership is five cents, which, it should be understood, is not a payment for the list of verses supplied, but a minimum contribution to the general expenses of the movement at home and abroad.

The organization of branch bands is encouraged. A branch band may be formed by six or more members in a church, a young people's society, a mission, a school, an orphanage, a family or a group of families.

Interested pastors, Sunday-school teachers, and other Christian workers are forming Branch Bands and sending in the names of the members. In Great Britain the branch bands are very numerous, and some have a large membership, that of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, London, numbering 800.

The Berean verses, printed in full in Braille type are supplied gratuitously, as far as funds permit, to all blind people, who are willing to memorize them.

Its Benefits

It cultivates the memory in the most profitable way.

It fills the mind with holy thoughts and thus keeps out unholy ones.

It supplies the best safeguard against the errors that abound today.

It provides a mental Scripture concordance invaluable in Christian service.

It unites in happy fellowship both adults and young people of every section of the Christian Church.

Never, it would seem, did our own land and others need the light and knowledge of the Bible so sorely as they do today, and surely every Christian should exalt the Word of God "which liveth and abideth forever" in every possible way within his power. "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." (Matt. 24:35).

One verse of Scripture a week, fifty-two verses a year, fastened firmly in the memory, with understanding of their context, and grouped by important topics—how inestimable the blessing in return for the small weekly effort; how valuable the plan in connection with family worship!

When Jesus had fasted forty days and nights and Satan made his three-fold attack upon Him, each temptation was answered and overcome by a verse of Scripture.

In the Gospels Jesus confounded His enemies, the Pharisees, by quoting Scripture. Christian workers experienced in soul winning, and indeed every earnest Christian will bear witness to the tremendous truth of Hebrews 4:12, "For the word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart."

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT NOTES

Dr. Henry Ostrom was the leader in a two weeks evangelistic meeting under the auspices of the Moravian congregation at Lititz, Pa. The Lititz Express in its issue of February 6, gives a column on two addresses—"The Sure Word of God," and "The Jew—His Origin, Destiny and History," and describes Dr. Ostrom as eloquent, fluent, forceful, simple and direct in his manner. With Dr. W. P. White, Regional Director of the Northwest and Pacific coast, and Rev. George E. Guille he also assisted Dr. W. B. Riley in conducting conferences on Christian fundamentals at Charlotte, N. C., Houston, Ft. Worth, and Dallas, Tex. and Minneapolis, Minn.

A correspondent from St. Petersburg, Fla., writes: "Mr. George E. Guille has just given throngs of people the most uplifting week of their lives." The Independent of that city said: "Rev. George E. Guille spoke to a crowded house last night at the First Baptist Church, where many were turned away unable to get seats. He is not only a gifted Bible scholar, but like most strong men, is simple in style and forceful in speech."

From St. Petersburg he went to Crescent City where he was one of the teachers at the Southfield Bible Conference.

A week prior to the close of her evangelistic addresses in the First U. B. Church of Canton, O., Miss Elinor Stafford Millar reported sixty-five confessions of faith, twenty of whom have united with the church. Forty-five of them were from the intermediate, junior and primary departments of the Bible school. March 10 she began a series of inspirational addresses at Gospel Center, Rochester, N. Y., and sixteen days later she conducted evangelistic meetings at the First Baptist Church of Eau Claire, Wis.

Mrs. Margaret T. Russell conducted a return engagement at City Rescue Mission, New Castle, Pa., the last two weeks of February. Illness and adverse weather conditions were encountered, but the superintendent said she was "very much better this year than last." During March she filled engagements at the Presbyterian church of Carmichaels, Pa., the Y. W. C. A. of Savannah, Ga., and the Idlewild Presbyterian Church of Memphis, Tenn.

Rev. Rollin T. Chafer, who is the secretary of the Southfield Bible Conference at Crescent City, Fla., was also one of the teachers.

The Lakeland Star of February 16, says: "The Lakeland Presbyterians had an unusual experience yesterday. At the morning hour of worship the largest audience ever assembled in their new church filled the beautiful auditorium, filled the Sunday-school room, and then occupied all the available seats in the gallery. . . . These splendid audiences are the best possible testimony to the deep impression being made by C. E. Putnam, the banker Bible-teacher who is conducting a series of Bible studies in this church." The Groveland and Claremont (Fla.) conferences on Christian fundamentals included Mr. Putnam as one of the teachers. From Florida he went to Belton, Tex., for further Bible teaching.

Rev. Merwin A. Stone, formerly pastor of Corona Presbyterian Church, Denver, and the Presbyterian church of McPherson, Kan., but more recently overseas as a Y. M. C. A. worker, taught with much blessing the union Bible class which meets in the Smithfield Street M. E. Church of Pittsburgh, and also the newly organized Bible class at Hope Gospel Mission, Detroit. On a Sunday afternoon he addressed a meeting of railroad men under Y. M. C. A. auspices at Pitcairn, Pa.

Rev. B. B. Sutcliffe's illness has caused a postponement of his spring engagements.

Homer Stanley Morgan, '12, is pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church, Cambridge, Mass. A successful Bible Conference on Christian fundamentals was held January 11-18.

Rev. K. C. Kondo of Punnene Mani, Hawaii, writes that his work there is progressing well; and that there was an attendance of 400 at their Christmas entertainment.

Rev. Merton Smith, who was one of Mr. Moody's workers in Chicago about thirty years ago, visited the Institute recently. Since his return from the war in which he served as chaplain, he has been in evangelistic work.

Milton W. Dressel, '16, is attending Shurtleff

College, at Alton, Ill., and supplies the pulpits of two Baptist churches.

C. G. and Mrs. Gowman, '11, stationed at TaKu Yunnan, China, had 252 baptisms during the past year and an increase in membership in their church of 716 in the last two years. In referring to a recent number of the magazine Mr. Gowman says, "How thankful we are for this blessed monthly messenger from the dear old M. B. I."

Arthur W. Littrell, '12, held evangelistic meetings in Ohio and Indiana in February and March following his resignation from the pastorate of the Baptist church, Piqua, O. During the two years and a half he served there, two hundred and fifty members were received and $14,000 raised toward a church debt. He expects to remain in the evangelistic field. Address, 168 Fallis Road, Station B, Columbus, O.

Julia Laughlin, '15, is working in West Virginia, under the Home Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., with headquarters at Cabell.

Martha C. Benedict, '17, is religious worker in Chelsea Methodist Church, New York City, of which Fanny Crosby was at one time an active member. Her address is 570 W. 183rd Street.

David Rees-Jones, '16, has preached at New Ferry, and addressed Bible classes at Port Sunlight, England, since reaching home from Mesopotamia. He expects to be in Chicago in May, with his bride, who graduated in June, '19, from the Glasgow Bible Training Institute.

Harry Dudley Clark, '14, conducted the singing at evangelistic services held in Harris Street Church, Harrisburgh, Pa., during January. He is considering a call as chorister of the First Baptist Church, Minneapolis, Minn.

News has been received that Owen F. Pugh, '98 died at Redlands, Calif., February 12, following a stroke of apoplexy. "Mr. Pugh," says Dr. Gray, "was a Welshman of fine presence, an exceptional singer, leader and composer." He was with Dr. Wilbur Chapman for seven years and then for four years with Dr. Munhall. Mrs. Pugh and daughter, Miss Gladys Pugh, survive him.

Mrs. William Waide (nee Allie Fairchild), '12, Riviki, U. P. India, writes of an evangelistic campaign held in December in which a special effort was made to reach the class of people known as "Banjaras," rope makers, whose work is done by hand, everyone from the six-year-old child to the grandparent sharing in it. Mr. and Mrs. Waide expect to be in America by May.

Charles H. Larson, '18, San Pedro, Charcas, Bolivia, S. A., writes: "I am getting the magazine every month and enjoying it very much. It comes as sort of a family letter from home, and when it is late I have a feeling of lonesomeness. We arrived August 3, and are busy with the language. Catholicism has had full sway in this land for so many years that even here, where they have a liberal government, there is still fear of the priest, and the superstition they live under is terrible. At present we are occupying three stations outside of San Pedro."

H. L. Weber, '11, medical missionary from Efulan, Cameroun, West Africa, is on furlough, with address at 153 Institute Place. He has worked in Efulan since '92, and has been used of God in the development of one of the most successful missions in the world—the Presbyterian Mission in the Cameroun.

Mary McLeod Bethune, '95, in 1904 founded the Daytona Normal and Industrial Institute for Negro Girls, the only school of its kind on the east coast of Florida south of Jacksonville. During the last fifteen years hundreds of girls have received training in grammer and normal school courses, in gardening, domestic science, domestic art and home crafts; and notable improvements have been made by them in the communities in which they live.

In 1912 it was thought advisable to extend the work, making the school something of a community center. The first effort toward this end was the erection of the McLeod Hospital and Training School for Nurses, which is meeting a great need among the colored people. During the recent influenza epidemic the hospital rendered the city of Daytona an incalculable service by promptly caring for and isolating a large number of patients, thus preventing the spread of the disease.

The Gospel in Print

"YOUR FELLOWSHIP IN THE GOSPEL"

The believers at Philippi had taken part with the Apostle Paul in the ministry of the gospel; and their "fellowship" was remembered by him "with joy." We who are saved owe our salvation under God to the efforts of those who labor in the gospel.

Possibly the reader has never realized that it is easy to have part in the glorious work of spreading the gospel through the printed ministry. This is a very important service; since the printed word can reach many needy ones—saints and sinners—in places where, and at times when the spoken word is not to be had. We therefore invite the Lord's people to take a definite and sustained interest in this method of "holding forth the word of life." They can do so effectually by, first, devoting some of their time to the reading of profitable literature, thus building themselves up, and also becoming acquainted with what is being ministered in this way by the Lord's servants; and, second, by recommending to others, and by passing on to others, such writings as they have themselves found to be "good to the use of edifying."—Selected.

WHAT A TRACT CAN DO

How many are there who would have never heard the gospel but for tracts?

Sermons, addresses, personal dealing, the reading of books, all, of course, are means of grace and greatly blessed, but they leave room for the tract. How often a man who would neither listen to preaching, nor open a religious book, has received a message from God through the agency of a tract.

A tract has this advantage, that it may be both written and read without distraction. A calm, well-thought-out, and well-arranged statement, calculated to arrest, impress, and convince the careless, does not repel by its length, and is willing to accommodate itself to the reader's convenience. At his leisure, when his mind is free; when circumstances are favorable; it may be in the silent watches of the night, on the mighty deep, upon the hillside, or the quiet country road, where no human voice disturbs, he reads his tract, and the Spirit makes it to him as the voice of God, calling to repentance and newness of life.

Many a time has the truth contained in a tract proved as the "still small voice" which aroused the conscience, or the finely-pointed and divinely-guided arrow which has found its way between the joints of the harness, and produced conviction and conversion in the hitherto hard and unbelieving heart.—Selected.

AN OPEN LETTER

By the Ways and Means Committee of the Hebrew-Christian Publication Society, Inc.
(Non Sectarian)

Dear Friends:—

The Ways and Means Committee of the Hebrew-Christian Publication Society seeks the privilege of addressing you this open letter:

The times have ripened into a great possibility for the accomplishment of the work to which this Society is pledged. The great War has disclosed to Christianity the immense importance of the Jewish problem. Many of the ancient race are eagerly looking forward to the establishment of a Jewish state in the land of Palestine. Many Jews, otherwise, are more ready for the Gospel of our Lord and theirs, than ever since the tragedy of Calvary. They are reading our New Testament with open minds; they are asking sober questions as to the Messiahship of our Christ.

This Society possesses in the person of Mr. Benjamin A. M. Schapiro, one eminently qualified to prepare the kind of literature of which they stand in need. His scholarship in the original tongue; his keen perception of the divine plan of redemption; his acumen for presenting truth directly and forcibly; his intensity of conviction carry his message into the hearts of all who hear Him or read His writings.

Our Society occupies the unique position of issuing literature adapted to the Judaic mind, without cost to those who wish to use it. The means for the accomplishment of this work are voluntarily offered by those "whose hearts God has touched" with a sympathy for Israel.

We are very anxious to extend the work in every possible manner. To this end the Society has been incorporated.

Any contribution will be gratefully acknowledged by the Treasurer of the Society and also will be reported in the next issue of "The People, the Land, and the Book."

Yours very truly,

KENNETH MACKENZIE.

"Mr. William Norton,
"Bible Institute Colportage Association.

"Dear Sir:

"We believe that one of the faculty of the Bible Institute has recently endorsed the Oxford Two-Version Bible. As a result we have been receving many inquiries for the same.

"We would consider it a favor if you would advise us as to where this endorsement appears, if it was in printed form.

"Yours very truly,
"Oxford University Press."

"Dr. Gray: Did you recommend the Two-Version Bible recently in print?
"L. W. G."

"I am always recommending it, but did so recently very particularly in Lesson 1 of the Christian Herald Course.

"After you respond to the University Press, please let Woodruff see this correspondence and he may secure an ad from them. "J. M. G."

Dr. Ralston, our associate editor, reviews the Two-Version Bible in the Book Notices in this issue. Read it. We secured one copy of No. 0964X at $13.00, and nine copies of No. O965X at $14.65 per copy. The Publishing Agent has used one of these Bibles for about eighteen years. When the above copies are sold it will be some days before a new edition is ready, so order at once.

A Serious Mistake

In February a serious mistake was made by inserting an old advertisement of Oxford University Press, giving the old prices of Scofield Bibles—our printers had received new copy with new prices, but the corrections were not made. The correct prices were printed in March number, page 505. We and our printers take the blame for the error. No orders can be filled at the old prices.

Club Offers Are More Popular

"Dear Mr. Woodruff:

"In the splendid spirit of the material under 'Publishers Stuff' I would open this letter in this fashion.

" 'Lest after I have preached to others I myself become a life-insurance agent,' however in my case the word 'Book' could be better used.

"This does not seem to be an impending danger and nevertheless I am glad for the privilege of talking on such a worthy subject.

"We have been distributing the sample copies of the C. W. M. in our various fields and emphasizing its importance but I have never met with the success that I have had the privilege of seeing here. In our preliminaries last evening I took two copies of the Magazine (December and March) and gave an exposition of their contents to the congregation. I brought to their attention the writer, theme, and in a general way covered all of its contents. I made the club offer that recently came to bless and as a result organized this club in this field.

"One lady, already a subscriber to three other magazines (among them the Christian Herald), said she felt that she could not be without this one and gave me her order.

"We are standing by the impartation of the 'Truth' to the people of today and I sincerely hope to be used to assist you more.

"Ever in His Service,
Arnold H. Kehrl,
"Assistant P. H. Kadey Evangelistic Party.
"Plymouth, Mich.

"P. S. Enclosed please find blanks of 20 subscribers."

E. G. Zorn also brought in a club of subscribers from Kalamazoo, Mich., and Harry Vom Bruch his third club of 48 subscribers from Pennsylvania. Also a lady in Chicago called at the office with a club of seven, besides many others during the past month. A recent count shows a net gain of over 4,500 new subscribers and we want to praise God for this continued blessing on all our efforts.

From an Advertiser

"Gentlemen—

"Please continue my advertisement at the increased price t. f.

"The adv. brings more replies than the ——— Magazine which has always charged twice your new rate.

"Very truly,
"G. B. Wrenn."

"Thank you." Our subscribers are helping to make this a more profitable advertising medium, and we appreciate this co-operation.

A Testimonial

"Dear Mr. Woodruff:

"The following is taken from a private letter, and without mentioning name I thought you might like to use it in the magazine. You might entitle it 'A Family Friend,' or something like that.

" 'I want to tell you what a help The Christian Workers Magazine is to me. I have charge of the Christian Endeavor topic each week, and get a great deal for that to help me.

" 'Father uses it for preparing his Sunday-school lesson, as he has a large class of men; and mother uses it for her missionary topics, and sometimes in the Bible study meetings.

" 'Best of all, my best friend here is a graduate of Moody Bible Institute, and takes the magazine; so we find it lots of fun to use it together, as she is also active in the church.'

"This letter comes from N. Y.
"J. M. G."

How to Memorize Again

"Dear Mr. Woodruff:

"Apropos your letter of some days ago and my reply to it the following extract from a letter received by me from a minister's daughter who is a high school student will be of interest in connection with 'How to Memorize.'

" 'Your plan of memorizing is wonderful. One would be surprised at the many wrinkles it smoothes. Latin is no longer a burden. Time is saved by the knowledge of telephone numbers, addresses and names, while the old saying, "Oh, I forgot!" is seldom used.'

"That's a pretty good item for you to use, isn't it?

" With best wishes,
"William Evans."

"Dear Mr. Woodruff:

"What a wonderful number the January Christian Workers Magazine is! Of course this ought to be said to the editors, but I am sure they get so many commendatory letters they must get tired reading them.

"I read that 'Publishers Stuff' with great interest; and was greatly surprised to learn that Mr. Stroh's book, 'When God Comes Down to Earth,' does not go well. For the life of me I do not understand why it does not. Certainly it is worthy of a very wide distribution. Nor do I see anything the matter with the title. It seems to me a very striking one.

"But I hope when you exhaust 200 copies you will in the interest of gospel truth publish another edition and push that out also.

"I am still recalling with joy that visit to The Moody Bible Institute.

"With kind remembrances and best wishes,
"Cordially yours,
"J. D. Eggleston."

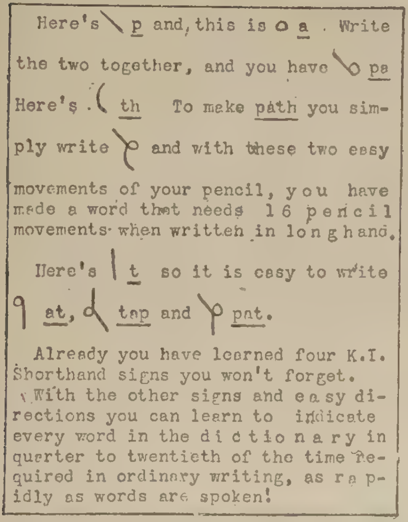
REV. PAUL E. WINGER says

"I didn't even have to study K. I. Shorthand—I absorbed it"

How Quickly Can YOU Learn This?



Here's p and, this is a. Write the two together, and you have pa

Here's th To make path you simply write and with these two easy movements of your pencil, you have made a word that needs 16 pencil movements when written in longhand.

Here's t so it is easy to write at, tap and pat.

Already you have learned four K.I. Shorthand signs you won't forget. With the other signs and easy directions you can learn to indicate every word in the dictionary in quarter to twentieth of the time required in ordinary writing, as rapidly as words are spoken!

If YOU can learn the specimen lesson here within ten minutes, you should learn the whole of K. I. Shorthand in five hours—then acquire speed by pleasant practice at your convenience. K. I. SHORTHAND is so practical that professional stenographers use it—and what more could YOU desire?

K·I· Shorthand

Simplified Stenography

K. I. SHORTHAND is for MEN AND WOMEN of all ages and occupations. Constantly it is depended upon for making important memoranda, taking messages verbatim, jotting down business-getting ideas, etc.—by clergymen, business executives, industrial engineers, salesmen, advertising men, writers, lawyers, teachers, farmers and numerous others.

It gives stenographers a great advantage over those using other systems, since K. I. Shorthand is written without strain and read as easily as long-hand. It is so legible that employers prefer K. I. Shorthand writers because their notes can be transcribed with absolute reliability. It dispenses with all rules of light and heavy shadings, special positions on, above or below the line, and eliminates thousands of memory-burdening word signs—all of which makes old-fashioned stenography hard to learn.

Many who could not grasp the old systems are today expert practical writers of K. I. Shorthand—which proves its simplicity and learnability.

It is used in Government Civil Service positions, in church work, in courts, in Army and Navy, and in public and private business institutions—which proves its capacity to meet every demand of every-day service.

"Talk as fast as you like. I am taking it down in K. I. Shorthand."

Costs a Trifle

Why not acquire this valuable accomplishment? Learn at home at convenient odd moments. The lessons are quickly absorbed, easily remembered. You will receive all the help needed to make you proficient, without taking an hour more than necessary. Cost cannot stand in the way. You can learn K. I. Shorthand at the merest fraction of the usual charge for a course in stenography. When your proficiency is established, we give you a certificate attesting that fact. You will consider this the biggest little investment you ever made, regardless whether you learn K. I. Shorthand in order to earn money by stenography, or to increase your personal efficiency or to help you in your church endeavors.

30 Days' Approval

K. I. Shorthand is a complete correspondence course of tuition. We award you a Certificate of Proficiency when merited.

Send at once for the free lessons. You assume no obligation. Then, should you wish to master the full course, we will send it to you on thirty days' approval. Learn at our risk. We give you a positive guarantee that if you do not learn you won't be out a penny. Mail the coupon or write to the nearer office, mentioning "Christian Workers Magazine." Address:

I Teach Piano a Funny Way

So people said when I first started in 1891. But now, after twenty-five years of steady growth, I have far more students than were ever before taught by one man. I make them skilled players of the piano or organ in quarter the usual time at quarter the usual cost.

To persons who have not previously heard of my method, this may seem a pretty bold statement. But I will gladly convince you of its accuracy by referring you to any number of my graduates in any part of the world. There isn't a state in the Union that doesn't contain a score or more skilled players of the piano or organ who obtained their entire training from me by mail.

Investigate by writing for my 64-page free booklet, "How to Learn Piano or Organ."

DR. QUINN AT HIS PIANO—From the famous sketch by Schneider, exhibited at the St. Louis Exposition

My way of teaching piano or organ is entirely different from all others. Out of every four hours of study, one hour is spent entirely away from the keyboard—learning something about Harmony and The Laws of Music. This is an awful shock to most teachers of the "old school," who still think that learning piano is solely a problem of "finger gymnastics." When you do go to the keyboard, you accomplish twice as much, because you understand what you are doing. Within four lessons I enable you to play an interesting piece not only in the original key, but in all other keys as well.

I make use of every possible scientific help—many of which are entirely unknown to the average teacher. My patented invention, the COLOROTONE, sweeps away playing difficulties that have troubled students for generations. By its use, Transposition—usually a "night-mare" to students—becomes easy and fascinating. With my fifth lesson I introduce another important and exclusive invention, QUINN-DEX. Quinn-Dex is a simple, hand-operated moving-picture device, which enables you to see, right before your eyes, every movement of my hands at the keyboard. You actually see the fingers move. Instead of having to reproduce your teacher's finger movements from MEMORY—which cannot be always accurate—you have the correct models before you during every minute of practice. The COLOROTONE and QUINN-DEX save you months and years of wasted effort. They can be obtained only from me and there is nothing else, anywhere, even remotely like them.

Men and women who have failed by all other methods have quickly and easily attained success when studying with me. In all essential ways you are in closer touch with me than if you were studying by the oral method—yet my lessons cost you only 43 cents each—and they include all the many recent developments in scientific teaching. For the student of moderate means, this method of studying is far superior to all others, and even for the wealthiest student, there is nothing better at any price.

You may be certain that your progress is at all times in accord with the best musical thought of the present day, and this makes all the difference in the world.

My Course is endorsed by distinguished musicians, who would not recommend any Course but the best. It is for beginners or experienced players, old or young. You advance as rapidly or as slowly as you wish. All necessary music is supplied without extra charge. A diploma is granted. Write today, without cost or obligation, for 64-page free booklet, "How to Learn Piano or Organ."

Divine Ownership vs. Individual Ownership

The Rev. J. C. Massee, D. D., in a recent sermon on the above-named subject said, in part:

> "In the Christian body Divine ownership supersedes individual ownership. * * *
>
> "God has but one means of financing His work in the world. He gives money to men whom He binds to Himself * * * and waits for them to give back to Him that which He has committed to them in trust.
> "Let this burn into your souls today: When one comes to Jesus Christ, it is an absolute and final surrender, not alone of himself but of his substance. A child of God can own nothing. We can only hold in trust. The last ounce of your strength, the last penny of your possessions—all are His. And when the Church consented to this and acted upon it, two things fell out: they were filled with the Holy Spirit, they spake the Word of God with boldness, and with great power gave the Apostles their witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, and great grace was upon them all."

Are we not safe in saying that the Lord's people who earnestly believe in the work of The Moody Bible Institute, and acknowledge God as the owner of all, have money enough, after meeting other obligations, to abundantly supply all that is needed for the Institute?

We beg of you, therefore, dear friends, to think and pray and act concerning the following:

The Moody Bible Institute is now in the most critical time of its history. It has virtually no endowment. It is wholly dependent on the gifts of God's people.

On the one hand, it is crowded with students, all its facilities heavily overtaxed, with costs of every kind greatly increased, and on the other hand the churches of the country are being solicited for money for their various denominational activities to an extent never before known.

The causes named have resulted in an alarming decrease in the gifts for its support for many months past, at the very time when largely increased receipts have been required to meet the current expenses; and with the result that a heavy deficit has been rapidly piling up.

If the Institute is to continue to receive all the qualified students asking for admission, and to house them economically, three new dormitory buildings must soon be provided—one for married students, one for men, and one for women.

An administration building, and additions to the teaching force, are also badly needed.

Furthermore, it has become unavoidable to install a new dynamo in our Heating and Lighting Plant, at an expenditure of from $15,000 to $18,000. This must be done before the opening of the Fall Term.

"Who is sufficient for these things?" Now, as never before, The Moody Bible Institute needs your earnest prayers and your generous financial support.

At Sleep-Time
Bubble Grains

Millions of happy children, at bedtime, get Puffed Wheat in milk. And think what a dish it is.

Whole wheat with no element omitted. Every food cell blasted, so digestion is easy and complete.

Wheat puffed to bubbles, eight times normal size—thin, flimsy, flaky morsels, like fairy foods.

Never was a whole grain made so enticing, never so fitted to digest. What good-night dish compares with this?

The supreme delights

Puffed Grains hold first place among all cereal dainties. Each is a food confection. The grains are so nut-like that people use them in home candy making—as garnish on ice cream.

Yet two are whole grains, and all are scientific foods invented by Prof. Anderson.

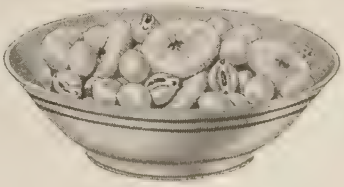
Every food cell is blasted by a steam explosion. Every atom is fitted to digest.

When you have foods so delightful, so hygienic, serve in every way you can. Children revel in them.

Puffed Wheat Puffed Rice Corn Puffs
Also Puffed Rice Pancake Flour

At Breakfast

Serve with cream and sugar. The airy grains taste then like toasted nut meats puffed.



Mix With Fruit

The blend is delicious. And these crisp flimsy morsels, add what crust adds to a shortcake.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

The World's Greatest Characters Were Moulded by the World's Greatest Book

THIS is true, it may reverently be said, even of Jesus, on the side of His humanity. He quoted constantly from the Old Testament Scriptures, and testified to them as God-given.

Moses, the world's greatest law-giver, was moulded by his faith in God's promises to the patriarchs, of whom he was the historian.

Isaiah, spiritual and intellectual giant among prophets and statesmen, was nourished on the Scriptures extant in his day.

Time would fail to merely name the illustrious procession through the centuries of earth's noblest and best whose springs were ever in God's Holy Word.

Coming to modern times, some of the greatest presidents of the United States were Bible-nourished men, especially he whose deeds and memory are loved and honored in every land, the martyred Abraham Lincoln, who once said:

"I Am Profitably Engaged in reading the Bible. Take all of this book upon reason that you can and the balance by faith, and you will live and die a better man. In regard to the Great Book, I have only to say that it is the best book which God has given to men."

Alas for America that so many of her educational leaders are men of science "falsely so-called," so many of her religious leaders "false shepherds" who are destitute of Lincoln's faith in the Bible as God's Word.

Great is the need—greater by far than our power to express—for men and women true of heart, sound in the faith, trained in the knowledge of the Bible, and able to teach others, that "Thy way may be known upon earth, Thy saving health among all nations."

Don't Hold Back

from enrolling for one of The Moody Bible Institute's Correspondence Courses because of little time, or lack of much education. Dr. Robert E. Speer well says:

"Methods of Bible study are not mysterious and difficult, beyond the power of common folk with little time and no great scholarship. The Bible is deeper than the deepest, but it is open to the simplest."

Prices Will Soon Advance

Announcement of this will probably be made in the June Magazine. The Institute's Correspondence Courses have never been sold on a commercial basis, but always below cost, that it might be very easy for anyone to take advantage of the invaluable opportunity offered. The prices are still the same as before the war, but considerable advances must soon be made.

Vita-Flora
(THE LIFE OF FLOWERS)

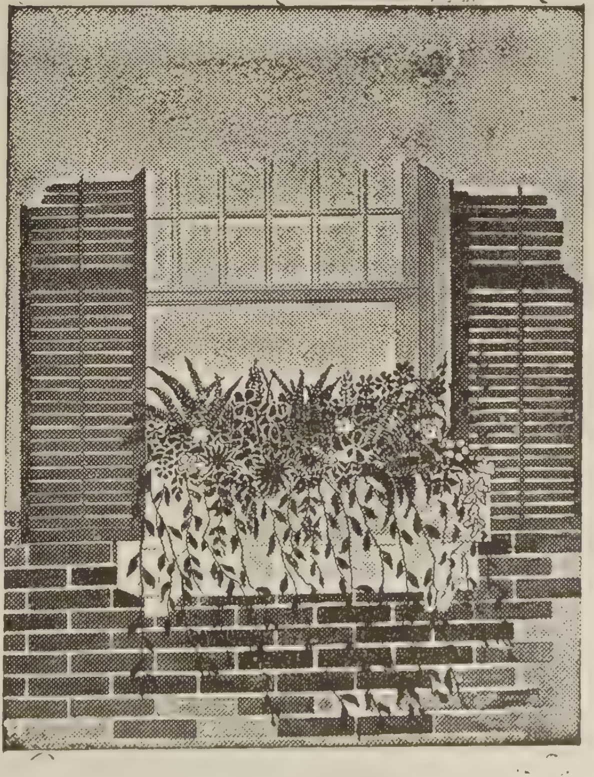
Plant Food Tablets

giving Beauty, Strength, Growth and liberal flowering to Flowers and Plants

Your home's attractiveness and beauty depend in great measure upon the liberal flowering and the richness and brilliancy in color of your plants and flowers. Vita-Flora, a properly balanced plant food, gives these desired results.

¶ Vita-Flora comes in tablet form and is easily applied without soiling the hands or plant surroundings. It is compounded by America's foremost botanical chemist, registered with the Agricultural Experiment Station of the College of Agriculture, University of Missouri, and is guaranteed. Vita-Flora will be found very effective in repotting plants.

The wonderful results of Vita-Flora on Ferns, Azaleas, Camellias, Palms, Cacti, etc., make it a necessity to these plants which require a peaty soil. The effect will be seen in a week or ten days on the tender and succulent plants and only several weeks on hardy plants such as roses. The first effect will be a greener and more healthy growth; after that, more generous flowering.



DIRECTIONS.

Vita-Flora furnishes three essential elements of plant life: nitrogen, potassium and phosphorus in their most available forms.

Dissolve one tablet in each quart of water used. Water the soil around the plant but never the foliage.

Apply once or twice a week for three weeks; only once every two weeks thereafter.

Order today! Send stamps or money order. Send postpaid in 25, 50 cent or $1.00 boxes. We recommend the dollar box as the most economical.

The Charm of "Little Old New York"

DO YOU know that charm and how it affects people? Some years ago a Southern editor wrote: "We confess to a sneaking fondness for little old New York." What makes this charm?

It is the appeal of LIFE, of CHANGE, of VARIETY, of MANIFOLD PERSONALITIES and NATIONALITIES gathered from all over the earth. It is the attraction of great streets, enormous buildings, concentered activities. It is the power of radiating influence, reaching into every land and touching men and women in every nook and corner of the earth. All the world looks towards New York. It is the only city on earth reached by letters from anywhere with just the name of the city added to the name of person and street. There are other Londons, other Chicagos, other Constantinoples, even other Jerusalems.

But there is only One New York

Nearly everybody comes to New York, or wants to. Even Satan comes here. The angels visit it. God is at work here. Christians everywhere think of it, and pray for it, and seek to bless its inhabitants. It is full of business, of commerce, of politics, of SIN. Life's deepest tragedies are enacted here. Many find in it the sweetest joys of true living. All these deepen and heighten and color the charm of little old New York.

The Charm of Two Million Jews

What a crowd, nearly two million Jews in one center! About them is the spell of antiquity and the memory of past dealings with God. The smell of persecuting fires has swept over them, and the lure of gold is in their eyes. They are keen, eager, intense, but not for God. These two million Jews are New York's charm for Jesus Christ. JEHOVAH LOVES THEM. DO YOU LOVE THEM? If not, why not? If you do, what are you doing for them? Would you learn about them? Are you concerned for their future?

See it all in "PRAYER AND WORK FOR ISRAEL," the world's finest Jewish missionary magazine. A monthly, 24 pages, vibrating with news of these Jews and of what God is doing for them. YOU NEED THIS MAGAZINE. Sign the coupon below and read of the Jewish charm of little old New York.

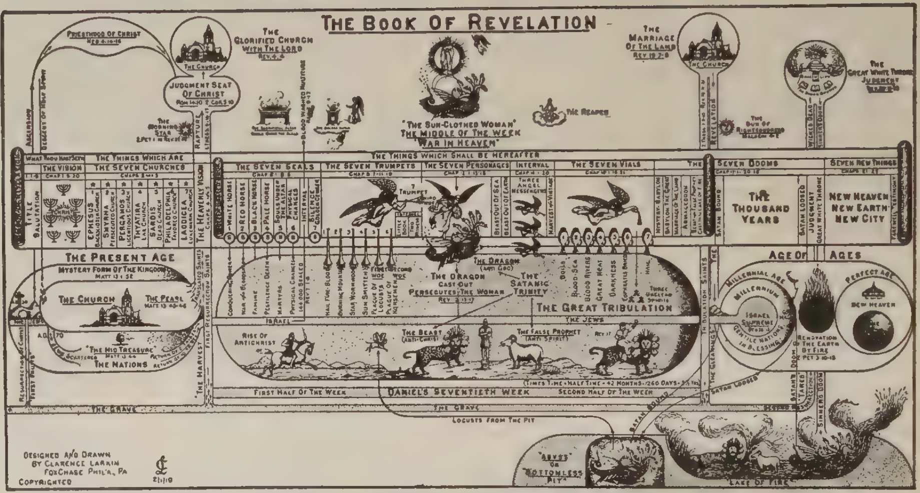
ANOTHER GREAT BOOK

By the Author of the Great Book "DISPENSATIONAL TRUTH"

THE BOOK OF REVELATION



THE BOOK IS ILLUSTRATED WITH 30 FULL PAGED CHARTS AND MAPS AND NUMEROUS CUTS OF THE BEAST AND SYMBOLS MENTIONED IN THE BOOK. THE SCRIPTURE TEXT OF THE OLD VERSION IS EMPHASIZED IN BLACK TYPE AND PRINTED OVER EACH SUBJECT. THE DESCRIPTIVE MATTER IS ALSO EMPHASIZED IN BLACK TYPE.

The Writer's aim has been to prepare a standard work on the Book of Revelation from the Futurist standpoint, and to show that it is to be taken literally, and that it is written in chronological order. The size of the type and the page (6 x 9 inches) makes it equivalent to an ordinary book of 400 pages.

At the Cross Roads in Chinatown

Up in Sing Sing Prison, there is a building known as the Death House. Confined here are the tragedies of life, awaiting the moment they step into the gruesome procession that files through the little white door into Eternity. Sad to relate, I have known some who have made that journey. I have also known others who ———. A few weeks ago, at the conclusion of a wonderful service in our Building, a boy with several others, knelt at the penitent form. Just as we were ready to dismiss, he rose from his knees, his head bowed as if in shame. I observed a tear roll down his pale face, which he brushed away as if embarrassed by it. Looking up at me for an instant, he slipped his hand to his hip pocket and drew forth a revolver. "I don't think I'll have any use for this now" he said quietly, as he handed the gun to me. When the crowd had gone and before placing it away with the rest of our weird collection, I gave a look. IT WAS LOADED.

Jewish Prophetic Conference

THE ANNUAL PROPHETIC CONFERENCE on behalf of ISRAEL conducted under the auspices of THE CHICAGO HEBREW MISSION, will be held in the Auditorium of The Moody Bible Institute from Monday night, June 7, to Thursday night, June 10. The Call for this Conference was published in the April number of The Christian Workers Magazine, to which we again call attention.

The following speakers are expected to take part on the program: Dr. A. C. Dixon of Los Angeles, Calif., formerly Pastor of the Metropolitan Tabernacle of London, Rev. Henry L. Hellyer of New York, Rev. R. E. Neighbor of Elyria, Ohio, Rev. S. B. Rohold of Toronto, Ont., Dr. James M. Gray, Dean of the Moody Institute, Rev. Joseph S. Flacks, Bible Teacher and Trustee, Rev. R. A. Belsham, of Augusta, Ga., Rev. Chas. G. Sterling of Lansing, Mich., Rev. Paul Rader, pastor of the Moody Church, and others.

The Prayer hours during the Conference will be in charge of Mr. Thomas E. Stephens, Director of the Great Commission Prayer League.

Jewish Christians will give their testimonies, and there will be class exercises by Jewish Children.

Friends from a distance can take advantage of the special rates on the Railroads made on account of the National Republican Convention. Entertainment for a goodly number can be secured at The Moody Bible Institute at reasonable rates. Others can find rooms and meals near by. For details concerning the program, entertainment, etc., write promptly to

A $10,000 INVESTMENT

We have worked out a unique and, what we believe to be, a God-given plan for evangelizing the 2,000,000 Jews of New York City. By this plan we can reach eventually every Jewish family in this great city with the Gospel message, systematically, aggressively, comprehensively. It is the first time, to our knowledge, that such a plan has ever been tried or proposed, in the history of Jewish Mission Work in America. To try out the plan will require an outlay of approximately $10,000 for the first year.

Are there ten readers of this paper who are ready to venture an investment of $1,000 each for God? Or twenty who will give $500 each? The dividends will be Jewish souls that have been evangelized, and perhaps saved to eternal life; the dividends will be the hastening of the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ.

To any interested friend, we will gladly send full details, as we do not want you to give unless the plan appeals to your own Christian judgment as a steward of God.

May we hear from you?

Editorial Notes

"Now I beseech you, brethren, by our Lord Jesus Christ, and by the love of the Spirit." Romans 15:30 (R. V.).

Cut from the Loaf

In the ecclesiastical calendar May 23 is Whitsunday and we would take occasion to urge all the pastors among our readers to avail themselves of that fact, and not let that day pass without earnestly and affectionately pressing upon the attention of their people some truth related to the personality and office work of the Holy Spirit.

More than anything else that finally satisfied the soul of the writer of the Holy Spirit's personality was the utterance of Paul in the verse taken as our "Cut from the Loaf" for this issue.

The thought there may be not so much the love which the Spirit has for us, as the love which He inspires in us, yet the former is implied in the latter, as it is also in that earlier passage in the same epistle: "The love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which has been given unto us" (5:5). As an old divine once said, "When the Holy Spirit comes into this world and into these souls of ours, it is not merely because He is sent by the Father and the Son, but because He loves to come." Every declaration and promise that proves the love of God for us proves the love of the Spirit for us, because the Spirit Himself is God.

His love is peculiarly shown in many of the names ascribed to Him in the Holy Scriptures. It is shown in the writing of those Scriptures also, on every page of which love to sinners breathes like sweet fragrance. It is shown in His work in our hearts, as He speaks to us, draws us, quickens us, fills us with joy, and takes of the things of Christ and shows them unto us.

"O Spirit, beautiful and dread!
My heart is fit to break
With love of all thy tenderness
For us poor sinners' sake."

Hibernating Christians

A young woman was found apparently dead in one of the city parks of Berlin. She was removed to a morgue, and while being searched for identity it was found that her heart was beating slowly. She was transferred to a hospital and after a few days was as well as ever. It seems that she had taken a deadly dose of morphine which had remained in her stomach but because of bodily inactivity had not taken effect.

The physician explained that a condition had been brought about in her body that characterized animals when they hibernate and remain without signs of life for months at a time. The cold and the rain in which she had been lying in the park had reduced her breathing and blood circulation, which in turn had resulted in practical suspension of all bodily functions.

It is known that in many animals the process of breathing and bodily function is entirely suspended during the hibernating period. A hedgehog when in normal condition will drown in about three minutes, but when hibernating it may be kept under water for a long period without any apparent harm, and when brought near a fire will soon show signs of life, returning to its dormant condition when removed from the fire.

These facts illustrate certain spiritual conditions and experiences. Some people in times of a revival show signs of life, but soon lapse into the old dead condition. Away from the fire they show no life. Others are active in service for part of the year but dormant during the remainder. They may be faithful for a period of years, then they go to sleep, and fail to breathe and to function spiritually.

Unlike the hibernating animals, however, the condition of these professing Christians is exceedingly dangerous, a condition from which they may never be awakened because it is a condition of which they are unconscious.

The case is urgent. To what fire may they be brought at which they can be revived? Artificial heat will not do it. It must be fire generated by the Holy Spirit. This may be found in some prayer meeting or carried by some Spirit-filled Christian; but above all, the body must become a temple of the Holy Spirit and the entire being permeated by Him.

Churches, as well as individuals may hibernate. This seems to be a special danger of the materially prosperous churches, which in their prosperity become self-satisfied and lull themselves to sleep. The real test of a church is a thorough examination of its respiratory room. If a pastor feels loathe to pray, and if he discovers his people do not love the prayer-room, he may be certain that they are hibernating. Their spirits have become chilled by the congealing atmosphere of the world, and they need to talk more with Jesus along the way, when they would testify, "Did not our hearts burn within us?" There can be no hibernating so long as the presence of Christ is a real experience.

Romish Alienism

A correspondent from abroad writes that it seems to him an extraordinary thing that our predominantly Protestant country should be "bullied" with impunity by the alien elements in our republic.

"Why does not Protestantism in the United States," he asks, "organize itself so thoroughly that the press and the politicians of the country, instead of always catering to alienism, will find it not only advisable but necessary to be cautious in another direction? As long as newspapers can keep their circulation and politicians their position by playing to the alien gallery they will be inclined to continue the performance.

"I do not think anything else, political or social, is quite so urgent in America now as is the rousing of the Protestant spirit, and the organization of this spirit, not to persecute any minor element, but to compel proper respect for itself and to enforce fair play."

We have been moved to print the above because of the receipt of a communication from the Church Federation of Sacramento on the same general subject, which will be found in full on another page, under the caption, "The Associated Press and the Sinn Fein Movement."

Christian Soldiers Since the War

It has been a disappointment as well as a puzzle, to many to find that a large number of active Christian young men who, before entering the army, were teachers in the Sunday-school, leaders in the young people's society, and sometimes officers in the church, but who when discharged from the service either refused or were loathe to take their former place in Christian leadership. We were told that the war would give an added impetus to Christian zeal, but it seems to have put a damper upon Christian earnestness with many.

How is this? Investigation does not indicate that these young men have turned their backs upon the church and entirely lost faith in Christ. They still want to be considered Christians and have their names on the church roll, but they have lost the glow of spiritual fervor. They originally came into the church because their associates did, or their parents had and desired them to, or because they felt it was their duty. Their church activites stirred up an interest which furnished their motive powers for Christian work, all of which died down when not used in army life.

The real trouble was they had come into the church and into Christian leadership without being grounded in the Christian fundamentals. In neither home nor church had they been taught the whole doctrine of God, of Jesus Christ, the Holy Spirit, man, sin, redemption, new birth, faith, assurance, prayer, etc. Therefore, without these solid foundations, the building of years gave way.

The time has come to prepare a simple and yet thorough course in the Christian fundamentals for parents in the home, teachers in the Sunday-school, the pastor in his catechetical class of new converts, the daily vacation Bible school, and the weekly public school hour that is turned over to the churches. With such a course of instruction carefully given, the winds of war might blow, and the storms of infidelity beat upon that house, and it would not fall because founded on the Rock.

Do You Memorize Scripture?

Fifteen years ago Mr. Charles J. G. Hensman, of London, England, founded an international and interdenominational movement to encourage the habit of memorizing Scripture and named it The Berean Band Movement. Gradually the movement spread over England and in America. Berean Bands are numerous in Great Britain with membership running from six or more to many hundreds. That of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, London, has 800 members. The sole obligation of membership is to learn one Bible verse every week, with the suggestion that this be called to mind at least once every day until the first Lord's day of the month following. The membership fee is only five cents annually, and a list of verses for the year is furnished without charge. These are carefully chosen, with a definite subject each month and, as far as possible, a completeness of subjects in each year. The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago is now the American representative of the movement and supplies literature without charge except for postage.

The Movies

Shall pictures and dramatic exhibits be exploited for money as against the safety and character of our youth, or shall they be maintained for education, morals and domestic ideals? This is the question asked by the Illinois Vigilance Association in the advance pages of its forthcoming report.

This report contains an exposè of the debauched theater and moving picture show whose revolting facts must be made known in order to get a wedge under the system to transform it, the report says.

There are nearly as many moving picture shows in the United States as there are public schools, and if the number of hours per week are compared, the "movies" far outrank the schools and churches combined.

Millions of dollars of capital are invested in the project, and that such a vast commercial interest should be permitted to sow poisonous filth of immoral suggestion and antagonize the work of the church and the school, is not only an economic waste and folly, as the report says further, "but a crime against patriotism, a war against domestic virtue, and a sin against God."

Parents, guard your children! The natural love of amusement is strong, and the moving picture show is now one of the most powerful and attractive forms of entertainment that art and science combined have ever invented. It might be a great factor in educating and elevating the people, but alas!

The New Century Bible

Through an error this Bible was advertised in our last issue. Had the editors been aware of it the mistake would not have occurred, and we beg to apologize to our readers. There are features of the edition which are attractive and much of the comment is good, but the false teaching mingled with it renders it unsuitable to be recommended to our readers.

A Woman's View of the Interchurch Movement

Editorial

I

THE newspapers announced her as the convenor of the conference of the women, two hundred and fifty of them, "representing nearly every Protestant denomination," which was held in connection with the pastors' conference of the Interchurch World Movement in Chicago.

As reported in the Daily News, of March 8, she said:

"The spirit of today should be compromise, compromise,—and then union. There must be compromise among denominations for the sake of the one big principle.

"The only way to combat bolshevism and the destructive force of economic unrest is by adherence to the principles of brotherhood which have been held up in every world crisis to stay humanity on the path to destruction.

"This is a time not for church creeds as expounded in various Sunday-schools, but for a liberal Christianity that will appeal to every Christian and every non-Christian.

"We are ready through our clubs, our church circles, and every other means to follow the lead set by our pastors in the Interchurch Conference."

Did this woman speak the truth? Did she weigh or measure her utterances, and did she represent the Interchurch World Movement whose convenor of the women she was? At least we doubt if she did this last. We know that there are some in that movement who would repudiate her statements with pity and indignation. But it illustrates what many regard as its fundamental weakness that it attracts such persons as she, and gives them a place of prominence and influence in its affairs.

In other words, is not her being there an evidence that the compromise of which she speaks and the union it effects is the spirit of the organization? And if so, no matter how it commends itself to the natural man, can it do anything but repel the true believer in Christ, who knows that "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God," and that light can have no communion with darkness?

The "one big principle" she has in mind is probably union, but the denominational compromise necessary to secure it must be destructive of every evangelical principle for which the Son of God died, and for which the faithful Church has contended, even unto blood, in all the centuries.

II

She tells us that "the only way to combat bolshevism and the destructive force of economic unrest, is by adherence to the principles of brotherhood which have been held up in every world crisis to stay humanity on the path to destruction."

When was humanity stayed on the path to destruction, may we ask, and just what were the principles of brotherhood that accomplished it? To put it in another way, is bolshevism very different, in essence, from any other iniquity, and can anything successfully combat it except the gospel of Christ? And may not the same be asked about the "economic unrest" and the "destructive force" it awakens? Of course, we are not now thinking of statecraft, and government and politics, but of Christian witnesses, and of those who are supposed to speak for an interchurch, not an international movement.

Suppose that for the last year or so the intelligence, energy and money of that movement had been focussed directly on the teaching of the Bible and the preaching of Christ in the centers of "economic unrest". What an impressive exhibit it would have been of the real meaning, and the real life and power of the Church! What an example it would have set, and what aid and encouragement it would have communicated to our legislators, state and national, our executives, our courts and juries, and our arbitration boards which have been in the titanic struggle with conditions that the world has never known before!

It has been making a "world survey," but was the survey needed? That is to say, was it needed to acquaint the church with her obligation and move her to fulfill it? One of the men speakers at the conference said: "This movement is being handled as a business man would handle his affairs. No hard-headed business man would go into a new field without making just such a survey as this."

Granted. But was this a new field, and had no survey of it ever been made? Are not all God's works known to Him from the beginning of the world (Acts 15:18)? Did He not tell us long ago that "the whole world lieth in the wicked one" (1 John 5:19, R. V.)? Did He not say that whosoever believes on His only begotten Son should not perish but have everlasting life (John 3:16)? And did He not command His servants to go therefore, into all the world and make disciples of all nations (Matt. 28:19)?

The state requires surveys, and is able to make them. She has her own remedies for current ills and knows how to apply them. She appreciates her obligation and is struggling to perform it. O, if the church would only attend to her own business, and permit the state to do the same! When we say this, we mean the church considered as a spiritual organism. Of course, individual Christians are also citizens and have responsibilities as such; but when church movements and federations begin, in that capacity, to deal with social and political conditions they arouse resentments that intensify the very unrest it is desired to allay. A Protestant hierarchy is no pleasanter to have around than a Roman Catholic one. Moreover, the two are able to play into the hands of one another, and when each comes into a place of power compromise is easy, "compromise—and then union," as this woman puts it, a union which has been described for us very clearly in the book of Revelation, and of which some of us are very much afraid.

III

"This is a time not for church creeds as expounded in various Sunday-schools," we are told, "but for a liberal Christianity that will appeal to every Christian and every non-Christian."

Does the Interchurch Movement stand for this? One or two of its critics have been condemned for charging "that the Adventists, Unitarians, Universalists, Christian Scientists, etc. are in the Movement," and we have been inclined to join in the condemnation believing the utterances to be unwarranted by the facts. But when we listen to this woman's words, considering the position she occupied, we hesitate.

We hesitate also because the movement has no doctrinal bulwark to save it against such an invasion of error. Its general committee at Cleveland, so we are told, decided that "for the present non-evangelical bodies shall not be related to it in an organic way"; but that very phrase, "for the present," causes an uneasy feeling.

And it is a feeling deep and widespread if one may judge by the sentiments expressed in an increasing number of Christian papers and periodicals, or even by the daily correspondence received in this office. Here is a sample of the latter, a little more fearful and intense than some perhaps, and yet not different in general terms. It also is the voice of a woman:

"Will you, for the sake of helping those to see who are being blinded by Satan (especially our ministers), write some word of help and warning at this awful testing time, so they may be guided to do what is God's will and lead their flocks aright?

"Do you believe the Interchurch World Movement to be the beginning of the fearful apostasy in the professing Christian body prophesied in God's Word?

"Do you believe that any true church or minister joining it is in danger of being leavened with the apostasy already working in the mass?

"Do you believe that to separate, regardless of what the sacrifice or suffering might be, is what our Father wishes and will have His approval and blessing?

"Do you believe that joining with it surely means compromise and the loss of the power of the Holy Spirit?

"Do you believe that when our blessed Lord comes for His true Church He will take those who are in such fellowship?

"Oh, for Christ's sake, for the sake of helping to save His body, I beseech you, and pray that the Holy Spirit may speak through you to reveal His will to us here, and especially to the ministers."

We would not be alarmists. We do not know when the end of the age will come, but we believe that the professing church is in an awful condition of apostasy, and that such movements as this are more likely to promote than to postpone its development. About the chances of such fellowship when Christ comes, however, we dare not speak, but if our correspondent is in doubt about it would not she be wise to choose separation rather than to cloud her hope?

IV

The convenor of the women says that those she represents "are ready through our clubs and church circles and every other means to follow the lead set by our pastors in the Interchurch conference."

Because of this what a solemn responsibility rests upon those pastors! And they are feeling it too, many of them, if we may judge by what we hear and the inquiries that come to us. A few of these inquiries as well as one or two personal opinions, are grouped together on another page, and it will be found that both sides of the question are represented.

Angels and Demons, or, Spiritism's Personnel

Editorial

I

ONE can not be very intelligent in Spiritism without knowing something about angels of which the Bible says so much.

The Old Testament or Hebrew word for angel is "malak," and the New Testament or Greek word, "aggelos," both of them meaning "messenger" or "agent." The words are sometimes used of men and even of God Himself, but in the latter case always in the form of "The Angel of the Lord," an expression signifying the presence of the Deity in angelic form. The words are used impersonally in some instances also, but for our present purpose these need not be enumerated.

Angels are spirits, superior to men and inferior to God (Ps. 8:4, 5; Heb. 1:7, 8). They would seem to have bodies of some kind (Luke 20:36), and they have appeared in human form (always as men, not women), and have eaten food and lodged in houses (Gen. 18:8; 19:3).

The number of angels is very great (Dan. 7:10; Ps. 68:17; Matt. 26:53), and their power likewise, whether exercised in the material or spiritual world (Ps. 103:20; 2 Kings 19:35; 2 Thess. 1:7). And yet their power and knowledge are both limited (Dan. 10:13; Matt. 24:36; Eph. 3:9, 10).

Angels are employed both in heaven and on earth. In heaven they are worshipers (Matt. 18:10; Rev. 5:11), but on earth they are associated with the affairs of providence, doing good to God's people and executing judgment on God's enemies, the latter ministry to be intensified at the end of the age (Ps. 90:10-12; 2 Kings 19:35; 1 Thess. 4:17).

There appear to be graded positions and authority among them, judging by the allusions to thrones, dominions, principalities and powers (Eph. 1:21), and by the mention of Michael as the archangel (Dan. 10:13), and Gabriel as one who stands "in the presence of God" (Luke 1:19).

There is a tendency towards speculation in considering these beings against which we are earnestly warned in Paul's letter to the Colossians; speculation that in the case of the Roman Catholic church especially, leads to superstition and their voluntary worship. On the other hand however, Protestantism may have thought too little about them, and have thereby greatly impoverished her experience of divine providence and her sense of succor and comfort in times of peril and sorrow, that succor and comfort which it is their office under God to freely and graciously supply.

II

But up until this point we have been dealing entirely with good or holy angels, while, alas! there is another class of them, evil as well as good.

And the evil angels are again divided into two classes. One consists of those that are in chains of darkness reserved unto judgment (2 Pet. 2:4) and the other those that are actively engaged in evil, with Satan at their head. The latter are those of which Paul speaks in Eph. 6:11, 12, where believers are exhorted to "put on the whole armour of God" that they "may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil," because they wrestle "against principalities, against powers, against the world-rulers of this darkness, and spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places." (See also Matt. 25:41; Rev. 12:9).

It is these that are in evidence, it is believed, in the present spiritist invasion. Of their origin we know nothing more than we do of the good angels, which is simply that they were created by God (Col. 1:16).

It is assumed also that all were created good, but that some fell as did Satan himself, though just when, or why they fell, God is not pleased to reveal. The following Scriptures tell us about all we can know of the matter, John 8:44; 1 Tim. 3:6, 7; 2 Pet. 2:4; Jude 6, 7. From these we surmise that they abode not in the knowledge and worship of God, but fell into condemnation through pride. They kept not their first estate or principality, so to speak, but left their proper habitation.

They are described sometimes as evil spirits (Judg. 9:23; Luke 7:21), unclean spirits (Matt. 10:1), and demons (Deut. 32:17; Matt. 7:22). This last word is erroneously rendered "devils" in the King James Version, as there is but one Devil, who is identical with Satan, but there are many demons. So many, indeed, as to compose a kingdom with a leader, or prince (Luke 8:30; Matt. 12:24-26; Eph. 6:12).

These demons are called Satan's agents in Matt. 12:26, 27 and 25:41, and as such they seem able to inflict physical maladies on men (Matt. 12:22; 17:15-18; Luke 13:16); and even enter and control their bodies and those of beasts also (Mark 5:13; Acts 16:16); while from the moral point of view they are able to seduce men from the truth and lead them into all uncleanness (1 Kings 22:22; 1 Tim. 4:1; 2 Pet. 2:10-12).

It is especially important to note that these demons maintain a conflict with Christian believers (Eph. 6:12), and that God Himself sometimes uses them in judgment upon unbelievers and wicked men (Judg. 9:23; 1 Sam. 16:14). They are to be used in the awful judgments upon the earth in the Tribulation period (Rev. 9:1-11; 16:13, 14); but their own eternal fate, like that of their mighty but unholy leader, is one of torment (Matt. 8:29; Luke 8:31).

A deeply interesting question, and a very practical one also, is that of the present abode of these evil spirits or demons. Keep in mind in the reply, that there are two classes of them, the one reserved in chains of darkness of which we shall learn more by and by, and whose abode is hell or "Tartarus" (Greek), and the other occupying the air considered as one of the "heavenly places" so frequently mentioned in the New Testament. From this place, however, they will be cast down to earth prior to the millennium, and then at length go into the lake of fire and brimstone "prepared for the devil and his angels" (Rev. 12:7-9; Matt. 25:41).

III

In our last we discussed generally the topic of demon worship and demon possession and only allude to it again as leading up to an earnest warning and appeal.

Remember that which was previously stated, (1) that demon possession is distinct from physical disease; (2) that it was and is not limited to the time of Christ; and (3) that it is in evidence today and is predicted as one of the awful features of the Tribulation at the end of this age.

Quoting from Rev. F. B. Meyer, D. D. of London, in his booklet just from the press:

"They (i. e. these demons) hate to be unclothed and would rather inhabit swine than have no covering (Matt. 8:31). The nakedness of an evil spirit is torment before the time (Matt. 8:29; Mark 5:7).

"Their one object is to reduce the human race and drag it to their own degraded condition. Just as the divine spirit can only achieve His end by and through our instrumentality—and therefore, we are called to present our bodies to Him—so the great adversary can only achieve his end by and through human instruments, and, therefore, steals gradually over the consciousness of his victims until they are taken captive by the Devil at his will (2 Tim. 2:26).

"Apparently the Almighty has locked and bolted our human nature against the intrusion of the demon-world, and it is at our peril that we open the door from within or allow it to be broken in from without. The angels will not attempt to help us unless at the express command of the Almighty; but demon-spirits are disobedient and recalcitrant. They defy the divine prohibition; and if they fail to break in by force, they can at least induce the human soul to connive at their entrance by opening the door from within; and when the door has been opened once it can be opened repeatedly, and each time more easily, until the power of resistance is gone, and the demon can go and come at will, or introduce seven companions worse than himself.

"A man of high repute told me recently that a lady had come to him complaining that her life was made a perfect torment by the suggestion of unclean spirits, of which she could not rid herself. She had been an habitué of seances, and now was held by a kind of obsession. He entreated her to promise to tear herself from their fatal spell, and she promised to go to but one more, on the following day. But that day she became raving mad, rushed in an almost nude condition into the public thoroughfare, and has been for the last two years in an asylum.

"If there has been any tampering with the demon-world, the urgency for immediate arrest is imperative, lest the current become too swift to be arrested by the oarsman, though he pull against it with the agony of despair."—The Modern Craze of Spiritualism, pages 10, 11.

NEW YORK CITY EVANGELISM

The Evangelistic Committee of New York City, Rev. Arthur J. Smith, general secretary, held 3194 meetings last summer in tent, shop and open air with about a half million attendance which could be counted, working in 205 centers, with nine languages employed. There were 79 paid workers and 212 volunteers, the latter chiefly young folk from the churches bringing many associates with them, and it cost about $32,000. This year a campaign for $61,000 culminated in the annual Spring rally at Carnegie Hall on the night of April 22, when Dr. A. C. Dixon was the chief speaker.

The Heavenly Paraclete

By Rev. T. F. Glenn, D. D., Clyde, N. C.

THERE is a measure of truth in the assertion of an able writer that the doctrine of the Holy Spirit is a forgotten truth. Nothing would contribute so much to the kindling of revival fires in the church as the quickening and revitalization of our faith in the personality, the divinity and presence of the Holy Spirit. We live in the Spirit's dispensation and all that God does for us and in us, He does through the direct agency of the third person in the adorable Trinity. Let us seek to magnify the office and ministry of the Spirit, in our private and public devotions, in our meditations, and in our thoughts and aspirations. How it would quicken our faith to think of Him as the sole agent in the reproduction of Christian character in the heirs salvation!

The Teaching of Pentecost

This is the beautiful and sublime teaching of Pentecost. The Holy Spirit is the "Inbreather," He is the "breath of life." The pentecostal disciples were filled with the Spirit of power. There is absolutely no limit to the Spirit's sanctifying and consecrating graces. Paul's command was, "Be filled with the Spirit."

The late Rev. John McNeil says of the deep things of God's deep book, there is surely not a deeper than this, that a cleansed and consecrated believer may by simple faith here and now, claim and receive the fulness of the Spirit, the greatest gift that the exalted Christ has in His power to bestow upon His people. You will note that the command "Be filled" is in the passive voice—let yourself be filled—suggesting the thought that the divine fulness is pressing in upon you. Just open the door of your heart and let it flood your spiritual being.

Do you know, my brother, that to be filled with the fulness of God is consummate holiness? O, what a blessed thing it is to know the fellowship, the companionship, and partnership of the heavenly Paraclete! Are not the holy annointing and the blessed unction from Him? It is only through the inspiration of the divine Spirit that saints are enabled to lead a life of full consecration and lofty spirituality.

Paul's Teaching in Galatians

In the fifth chapter of Galatians St. Paul gives us a striking and comprehensive description of the Christian's relation to the Holy Spirit as the administrator of human redemption,—"Walk in the Spirit," "Live in the Spirit," and "Fruit of the Spirit." Could the pen of inspiration set forth more fully and vividly the truth that the consecrated Christian's being is under the guidance of the Spirit?

As ministers of Jesus Christ let us press home this glorious truth in our public ministrations. Without the presence and unction of the Holy One in our worshiping assemblies the pulpit will cease to be a throne of power, prayer will be a bootless litany, devotion will die and our hosannas will be as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal.

How true to life is Bunyan's graphic picture of the Christian pilgrim! If the oil of the Spirit is not poured daily into the heart from above, the hallowed fires of vital religion will expire. Preachers should not fail to place in the foreground the subject which the Lord Jesus Christ and His apostles made so prominent in their teaching—the indwelling of the heavenly Paraclete in heart and life, taking the place of Jesus as counselor, teacher, companion, friend and guide. The dwelling of the Spirit in believers is the one infallible proof or evidence of sonship—"As many as are led by the Spirit of God they are the sons of God."

Many professedly Christian people fail to secure the fulness of the gospel blessing because they are not willing that the infinite and eternal Spirit should use them according to His own omniscient will. Let us not forget that He holds in His own almighty power the issues of life and death. Let us not grieve Him and thereby invite temptation and defeat.

Personality of the Spirit

We dishonor the Spirit if we think of Him as an emanation, or an effluence, or an illumination from the Father. The inspired writers teach us that He is one with the Father and the Son in the unsearchable counsels of human redemption. Knowledge, feeling, will, the three distinctive attributes of personality, are ascribed by Holy Writ to the third person in the Trinity. His knowledge is infinite. The Spirit is said to search all things, yea, the deep things of God. The Scriptures ascribe creative and legislative acts to the Holy Spirit. "By his Spirit he hath garnished the heavens." "The Spirit of the Lord hath made me."

"Parakletos," the Greek word which is translated Comforter, means one who walks by your side, arm in arm as it were, as your counselor, helper, defender, and guide during your earthly pilgrimage. During His earthly ministry Christ Jesus was the Paraclete to His disciples, a friend ever ready to give aid and comfort in their sorrows and perplexities. When the impetuous Peter was sinking in the waves of stormy Galilee, he cried out saying: "Lord, save me," and immediately Jesus stretched forth His hand and rescued him. Now that He has ascended on high and sits at the right hand of the Father we have another Comforter who has taken His place, and is just as tender, and loving, and strong, and sympathetic, as our Advocate who is before the throne.

The sacred writers of both the Old and the New Testaments were inspired by the Holy Spirit. "For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men spake of God, spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost" (2 Pet. 1:21). The Holy Spirit governs and guides as Lord and Master in the whole Church universal. He calls, commissions, and ordains men to preach the gospel of the kingdom. He quickens, animates and regulates all worship in the Church. He raises the fallen, restores the backslider, comforts the sorrowing, refreshes the dry and parched ground with the blessed dews of His mercy and grace.

One of the Greatest Texts

One of the greatest texts in the New Testament touching the doctrine of the Holy Spirit is hid away in the epistle of St. James where one would least expect to find it. The profound teaching of the text is not brought out in the Authorized Version. The marginal reading is the true rendering: "The Spirit which he made to dwell in us yearneth for us even unto jealous envy, but he giveth greater grace" (James 4: 5, 6. R. V.).

Note these points, (1) The indwelling of the Spirit; (2) the jealous yearnings of the Spirit; (3) the assurance of final victory in the promise of greater grace. Here is a rich and exhaustless mine of precious gospel truth. The deep yearning of a mother over an erring son or daughter is but a faint suggestion of the infinite yearning of The Holy Spirit over the poor backslider whom He would rescue from his wanderings, restore his soul, and prepare him afore unto glory everlasting.

The original Greek word is a very strong one for yearning. Simon Peter's fall was sudden and grievous, but greater grace wrought in him profound repentance and prepared him to receive the three-fold commission to feed the lambs and sheep of the Redeemers flock. The Corinthian church had fallen into unspeakable and lamentable sins; but the Spirit yearned over them with jealous envy and incited Paul to write that loving, tender, touching and pleading epistle. Repentance and reformation swiftly followed, so that where sin abounded, grace much more abounded.

Let us give attention to Hebrews 13:5, where the writer brings out in a strong, vivid light the earnest purpose of the Spirit to save to the uttermost every newborn soul. There are five negatives in the original Greek, and the verse is rendered thus by Dr. Philip Doddridge: "I will not, I will not leave thee; I will never, never, never forsake thee. Let us endeavor to live in conscious fellowship and partnership with the Spirit, as our loving, tender, wise, powerful, and ever present Counselor."

The Holy Spirit's Witness to the Second Coming of Christ

By Rev. Edwin Whittier Caswell, of the New York East Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church

CHRIST said of the Holy Comforter, "He will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself. * * * He will show you things to come. He shall glorify me, for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you" (John 16:13). What a wonderful dispensation is that of the third person in the Trinity, the omnipresent Spirit!

A lady who had been educated from childhood to believe that Jesus was only a perfect example of manhood, and that His divinity was a delusion, heard Mrs. Mary Sparks Wheeler address a Bible class upon the subject of the crucifixion. At a certain part of her remarks, the doubting woman exclaimed, "Ohoo!" The Holy Spirit had suddenly applied the truth of the deity of Jesus to her awakened soul. The next day, in an interview with Mrs. Wheeler, she entered the life of faith in Jesus as her divine Lord and Saviour. Is not this the great mission of the Spirit, to awaken, convict, to convert and sanctify, and to guide those willing to yield, to the truth flashed upon the heart?

Rev. Dr. Daniel Steele, once a college president and always a distinguished scholar and writer, says, "How thick the veil before my eyes must have been, that I should live forty-six years with the New Testament in my hands, before I made the discovery of the reality of entire sanctification which lies open upon every page! But my vision was not touched with the annointing which abideth in you and teacheth you all things." He continues, "I then wrote my own name in the promises and, claiming the pentecostal Comforter for me, I was filled with the overwhelming pulsations of love. My joy was unspeakable and the impulse was irresistible to speak of it to everybody, in public and in private." Dr. Steele further says, "Beside logical certainty, absolute assurance shall be yours, which is better proof than miracles. It is an experience, an intuitive conviction of the truth, an unction from the Holy One, so ye can know all things—all revealed truth, all the soul's relation to God's law and love."

Do all scholars and all Christians in the humbler walks of life accept Dr. Steele's testimony to the truth of his being sanctified wholly? No, they do not. Many convinced and convicted of the truth are unwilling to yield their wills, their passions and their property to the control of the Holy Spirit of God. They spend their lives trying to disprove the possibility in this life of perfect love and perfect cleansing through the blood of Jesus.

Wesley and Moody

It is well known that John Wesley preached the gospel for ten long years before he entered into this pentecostal baptism. He said at that time, "I felt my heart strangely warmed, and believe that we are made free from sin wholly by faith." Alfred Cookman once said, "The evidence of the fulness of the Spirit was as direct as the witness of sonship at the time of my adoption into the family of heaven." Dwight L. Moody in telling his experience, said, "One day in the city of New York, God revealed himself to me. I had such an experience of His love that I had to ask Him to stay His hand. When I went to preaching again, hundreds were converted; the sermons were not different; I did not present new truths, but, O the power of the Holy Spirit manifested in my heart and in the awakening of sinners!" You who accept Mr. Moody's testimony in this matter, will you believe him about another revelation of the Spirit to his soul?

He once said to a friend, "When you find that which is sweetest to you in the Word of God, when you find what most inspires you to do His work, if I do not mistake, you will find it to center in the doctrine of the premillennial coming of our Lord." Would that all Christians would equally accept his testimony of the Spirit's revelation to him regarding Christ's second coming, as they do all the other truths which he proclaimed, and which still are spreading through the earth with evangelistic power.

Dr. John Hall once remarked to Mr. Moody, "I do not believe Christ is coming in the way you think He is, but if He does, I shall be as glad to see Him as you are." This is a good position to take for those who cannot yet accept the fact of Christ's literal and personal coming.

Paul said to the Philippians that it was his desire to depart and to be with Christ, to be absent from the body and present with the Lord. But after he had been caught up into Paradise and heard words impossible or unlawful to utter, he never said much about dying. His mind was taken up with loving His appearing, looking for His glorious coming, while he was working as the mightiest missionary apostle the world has ever seen.

The Writer's Awakening

The writer of this article confesses that during a ministry of a half a century, he never preached a sermon or carefully studied the subject of the second coming of Christ. On the contrary, he was strongly prejudiced against the idea, for two reasons: He feared the fanaticism of Millerism, Russellism and Seventh Day Adventism, and at the same time, accepted the argument of many scholarly writers, that the coming was a spiritual one, that Christ and the millennium were already here.

On January 2, 1918, my son, Rev. Lincoln H. Caswell, of Brooklyn, N. Y., requested me to send him some clippings from an envelope upon the second coming. In making the selection my attention was called to some statements which deeply impressed me, when suddenly the power of the Holy Spirit was so manifested to my soul that I exclaimed, with fulness of joy, "It is true—Jesus is coming! I shall see Him! Hallelujah!" I then began to read some of the three hundred verses in the New Testament upon the return of our Lord. I was astonished that I had never been drawn to this portion of the Scripture before. I made a few notes as I read.

On the following Sunday morning, January 6, I received a note from my pastor, Rev. J. W. Jones, of Middletown, Del., saying that he could not preach that morning, owing to a severe hoarseness, and wished that I would occupy the pulpit in his place. I preached from James 5:7,8, and, as I read the text, I said, "If the pastor does not recover his voice, I will take the last clause for my evening sermon. 'For the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.' " I had little opportunity for preparation during the afternoon, and went to church in doubt as to whether I would be needed. Finding the pastor still unable to be present, I officiated, and certainly never experienced more of the presence of the Spirit in the heart of the speaker and in the audience than during the delivery of that first sermon upon the second coming. How, then, can I do otherwise than enjoy thinking about my Lord's return, after making such a revelation to my soul? I feel that I would rather make Miller's mistake of seeking to fix the time of my Lord's coming than to be a doubter, saying, "Where is the promise of His coming?" denying what the angel attendant said at the ascension, "This same Jesus shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

I am not troubled about the divine program of the millennium, or of the one or more judgments or of the first and second resurrections. At present, it is Jesus only I am looking for, coming in His glory, coming to reign, to complete His triumph on Calvary, to finish His work of creation and redemption, when He will be crowned King of kings and Lord of lords. My favorite hymns at present are,

"Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord"

The Kingdom in Mystery

Or, The Parable of the Tares Amidst Wheat

By Rev. J. J. Ross, D. D., Pastor, Second Baptist Church, Chicago, Ill., and Lecturer on Homiletics and the New Testament in the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary

The first instalment appeared in the April issue of the Christian Workers Magazine

II

IN the second place, we notice, that this kingdom picture speaks of two growing, intermixed harvests. The "man" sowed good seed in his field. But "while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares, and went his way. But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also. So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, "Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence, then, hath it tares?" He said unto them, "An enemy hath done this." Here are two harvests both growing together, in the same field, one of wheat, and the other of tares, or darnel.

What are these two harvests? In the interpretation, the Master explained these two harvests and said that they represented two distinct classes of persons, both in the field of the world, and included within the government of the kingdom of heaven on earth.

Who Are Children of the Kingdom?

He said (v. 38), "The good seed are the children of the kingdom." In the first parable, "the seed is the word of God" (Luke 8:11), or "The word of the kingdom."

There is no real disagreement between these two parables, but only progress from the first parable to the second. In the first picture the Word of God, which may be defined as the full gospel message, is the instrument used in the hand of the Holy Spirit, by which men are born from above. This statement is confirmed: "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first-fruits of his creatures" (James 1:18), "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever" (1 Pet. 1:23). In this parable we have the self-same Word of God, when it has done its work in the hearts of men, making them children of the kingdom of heaven.

There are two words for children freely used in the New Testament: the first meaning "one's born," of any age; and the second "sons," or those men and women who have reached their majority. The word for children here sets before us those who have been born from above, into the kingdom, and who have entered upon the possession and administration of their full inheritance in Christ.

What Is the New Birth?

To be a child of the kingdom, is to be a son of God. To be born from above is not the evolution of the good from the bad, and not the elimination of the bad from the good, but rather to have imparted to the soul the divine nature, through the Holy Spirit as the only agent and by the Word of God as the instrument. The experience of the new birth is altogether an act on the part of God the Spirit, the sinner, consenting to that act by an appropriating faith in Christ.

The new birth from above is not, therefore, the result of natural descent, self-effort, nor the will of man—"which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God" (John 1:13). "Of his own will (or by his own power) begat he us by the word of truth" (James 1:18). Regeneration is not a reformation of the old nature but a resurrection, a creative act of the Holy Spirit within that sinful soul who believes upon Christ. However gifted, moral, refined, or even religious a man may be, by natural birth, he is absolutely blind to spiritual truth, and powerless to enter the kingdom of God until the new birth takes place. Prior to the new birth he can neither obey, understand, nor be well pleasing unto God. It is the new birth alone that makes people the children of the kingdom. The born ones, the sons, are those, and those only, boys and girls, men and women, of any race or clime, who have been created anew in Christ Jesus. They are the saved, the true children of God.

How May One Be Born Anew?

Upon what ground may a person become a "son," a "born-one?" There is only one way, and that is faith, directed to, and unconditionally reposed in Jesus Christ, as the One who shed His blood and thereby fully and finally atoned for sin.

"But as many as received him (not IT, but HIM—that is, as Saviour and Lord) "to them" (and to them alone) "gave he the power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name" (John 1:12). Here is that faith that fully receives Christ, and with abandonment commits itself to Christ.

The Galatians were children of God, but upon what condition did they become such? The Holy Spirit said to them, "For ye are all the children of God, by faith in Christ Jesus" (Gal. 3:26). John said, "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is" (not shall be some time in the future) "born of God" (1 John 5:1).

When the Lord spoke to Nicodemus about the imperative necessity of the new birth, for every one, in order to admission into the kingdom of God, he was amazed and bewildered, then asked: "How can these things be?" Jesus answered, "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him, should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:14, 15). The only condition, then, of the new birth, on the human side, is unconditional reliance on the crucified, risen, and exalted Saviour.

The children of the kingdom in this parable are all of those throughout the period between the advents, who rely upon Christ as their personal Saviour. They constitute the good (growing) harvest, scattered throughout the world, and comprehended within the sphere of the dominion of God on earth. . . .

Cowardly and Malicious Work

But there is another harvest growing in the field of the world: "But while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way."

The Lord did not imagine here, a form of injury, without example, but produced one which doubtless was familiar to His hearers. This was an expression of malice that was easy of execution, involving little risk, and yet resulting in great and lasting mischief.

Oversowing another man's field with tares was considered both cowardly and malicious. In Roman law, the possibility of this form of injury was contemplated and punished severely. Even to the present, this form of showing hate and malice is practiced in the East. Has a man purchased a field out of the possession of another? Then, the offended person says, "I will plant the perum-pirandi in his ground." And he does it, exactly as we have it described in the parable, secretly, and under the cover of night.

But who are represented by the tares, or darnel? Again the Master explained: "The tares are the children of the wicked one. The enemy that sowed the tares is the devil"; and so they are the children of the devil.

In the first parable, we saw the Devil swooping down like evil birds of prey, and stealing away the Word from hard, calloused hearts. In this parable, by the sowing of the darnel, we see Satan, not as he works beyond the bounds of the kingdom, deceiving the world, but in his far deeper malignity, within the kingdom itself, counterfeiting and counterworking the work of Christ.

Satan is here presented to us as "his enemy," the enemy of the Son of Man. Such Satan has ever been. He is also spoken of here as "the wicked one," pointing him out as the absolutely evil one, the very ground of whose being is evil. "God is light and in him is no darkness at all" (1 John 1:5, 1:17). Satan is darkness, and in him is no light at all (see John 8:44).

Who Are Children of the Devil?

But who are these children of the Devil? They are not unregenerate men in general, for we find that they are within the kingdom (v.41). They are the "things," or persons, who cause stumbling in the kingdom of God, and who, at the reaping time, will be gathered out of the kingdom of God.

That they represent spurious, or counterfeit Christians, is plain from the fact that the plant here named, in the early stages of its growth, can scarcely be distinguished from the wheat. When wheat and tares are growing intermixed, or side by side in the same field, before the heads of ripe grain appear, it requires the eye of the expert to distinguish the one from the other. In fact, the people in our Lord's time believed that the tares were simply degenerate wheat, putting the responsibility for such degeneracy on the soil in which the grains of wheat had been sown. But the parable represents the tares as springing from a separate kind of grain.

In the church to which John sent his letter, there were two families,—those born of God, and "the children of the devil" (1 John 1:10). These two families were set forth at the very beginning of human history by Cain and Abel. Cain, the first-born, though religious, was of the evil one, while Abel, the second-born, representing those born of the Spirit, was of God. The children of the Devil are not out and out blasphemers, and wicked persons generally; they are those who profess to be Christians, having been baptized, have their names enrolled upon the church register, and perhaps are even engaged in some form of Christian service, but have never been born from above. Like Cain, they are religious without the blood, having their offerings rejected because they, themselves, have not been accepted.

The Master Counterfeiter

The Devil is a great counterfeiter. He has been counterfeiting the work of God from the very beginning. After the prophets, false prophets; after apostles, false apostles; after Christ, Anti-christ; after the true ministers of the gospel, false ministers of the gospel; after true Christians, false Christians. Among the apostles there was a Judas, and it was difficult to distinguish him from the real and genuine. In the church of Jerusalem, there were Ananias and Sapphira. In the church of Samaria, there was a Simon Magus, who, though he had professed Christianity, and had been baptized, and became a member of the church, yet, "was in the gall of bitterness, and in the bonds of iniquity." From the very midst of the church of Ephesus, there arose wolves in sheep's clothing, who imitated the true, and sought to fleece the genuine sheep. In the church of Pergamos there were the Balaamites, and the Nicolaitanes. Underneath the same roof, in the same building, there was the true church of God, and the synagogue of Satan.

Right down through this age there have been spurious or counterfeit Christians produced by the Devil. It is estimated that there are today about four hundred million true and nominal Christians in the world. These would include the Greek, Roman, and Protestant peoples of the earth. They comprehend the vast mass of professed discipleship in the earth.

A False Christendom

In fact, it may be that all the governments of the world that have adopted the Christian religion as their governmental religion, are also included within the kingdom sphere. But how many of these have been truly born again? We do not know, and we cannot tell. But, "the Lord knoweth them that are his." All of those who have been born again are the wheat, and all of those among them who have not been born again are the tares.

There are some things about these two growing harvests that we must emphasize, even at the risk of repetition. The first is that the two harvests are mixed together in the same field. This is the mystery uncovered in this kingdom picture. In reality this is what we have had in the kingdom for two thousand years, and will have to the end. The true and false Christians have always been together, in business, in social life, and in the churches on the globe.

These two classes of kingdom subjects, are difficult to distinguish. The difference can be seen only at a definite point in the history of each. It was when the blade sprung up and brought forth fruit, that the wheat was seen to be wheat, and the tares were seen to be tares. They thus fulfilled literally the words of our Lord, "By their fruits ye shall know them." The counterfeit Christians do not bring forth fruit according to the genuine kind.

Furthermore, both of these harvests are to grow together until the reaping time. The servants would destroy the tares from the wheat, but the Master, in prohibiting them from doing this, said: "Let both grow together until the harvest."

Is the World Growing Better?

There are those who think that the tares have been growing comparatively less and less in the process of history, and that they will continue to grow less and less, and that the wheat will grow more and more until the tares are all rooted out and only wheat remain. But this is not the teaching of our Lord, for He said, let both grow together until the harvest.

The sowing began at the first advent, and has been going on ever since, and the harvest, or reaping, will take place at the second coming of our Lord.

During these two millenniums, both true and false Christians have been increasing in number and strength. There are thousands upon thousands of more real Christians in the world today than there were at the beginning of this dispensation. In fact, there are more today in the world than there were yesterday, and tomorrow will be as today, only more abundant.

But side by side with these genuine Christians, whom the Lord Himself is making, there are springing up more and more spurious Christians. For every true child of God made, the Devil makes a spurious one. If the Devil can get one to profess to be a Christian, to be baptized, to join the church, to engage in benevolent or Christian service of any kind, without that person being born from above, he has accomplished his purpose in making a spurious child of God. They have been increasing in number since the beginning, just as Jesus predicted and prefigured here, and they will continue to increase and grow together to the very end.

This does not look as if the world will be converted when Jesus comes. There will be many tares in the field, as well as much wheat, when the reaping time begins.

III

This leads us to the third thought presented to us in this parable. Not only have we here two sowers and two growing intermixed harvests, but we also have two diametrically opposed lines of conduct, the one suggested by the servants, and the other commanded by the householder.

Neglectful Pastors and the Damage They Do

It is important that we should notice these lines of conduct carefully. The first one was that suggested by the servants, when they discovered that the tares were growing in the field. They came to the owner of the field and asked: "Didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares?"

These servants are not the angels who at the end will be the reapers (vv. 30, 41), but men who, to a degree, are zealous of the Lord's honor and work. While the enemy was sowing the tares, they were asleep. They doubtless represent the pastors and teachers in the kingdom who have been, and are, negligent and careless, while ungodly men, heretics, creep into the kingdom sphere unawares, introducing errors of morals, doctrine and practice. (See Acts 20:29, 30; Jude 4; 2 Pet. 2:1, 2, 19).

There are many of these servants today. They slept and they certainly could have done otherwise. If any should have remained on guard, they should have done so. While they slept, the enemy seized his opportunity, and wrought the secret mischief upon which he had set his heart, and having accomplished it undetected, withdrew. Because they were asleep, they were not sensible of the harm that was being perpetrated in the field of their master.

Many pastors and teachers are not sensible today of the secret working of errors in the field of the world, and in their churches. The call comes, "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ will shine upon thee." When those servants woke up and discovered the tares in the field they were surprised and perplexed, and expressed great inward questioning. Well might they question their own spirits and ask with surprise, "Didst thou not sow good seed in thy field?" Certainly their master had sowed good seed in His field and He is sowing good seed in that field today. At the beginning Christ constituted His kingdom upon earth a pure kingdom, but the enemy, undetected of men, intruded himself into that field and introduced errors of morals, teaching and practice, and as a result of his work, there are many spurious children of the kingdom.

A Wrong Line of Conduct

In their bewilderment and perplexity, those servants, anxious for their master's glory, suggest a line of conduct toward the tares in the field. They go to him with the question: "Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up?" The tares in the field were a riddle to them. They did not know how they got there, and now they are concerned about getting them out of the field. They would advise digging them up and casting them forth violently.

Their question suggests the use of violent means for the suppression of error, and heretics, a temptation which the professed church of God, itself, in history failed to resist. When we take a glance back over church history in this dispensation, we see how many were banished, whipped, imprisoned, thrown to the wild beasts, committed to the stocks, and burned at the stake, and that by the authority of the kingdom of heaven in mystery. This was gathering up the tares and burning them as these servants had suggested.

But those who suggest such a line of conduct with error and false Christians, are generally not competent to undertake such a task. In every case they do not know tares from wheat, error from truth, the genuine from the false. The master, therefore, prohibited them from pursuing this line of conduct in relation to the tares, and gave as the reason: "Lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them."

Appearances Are Deceiving

"There are many children of the kingdom who look and act like children of the Evil One, and there are many children of the Evil One who look and act like children of the kingdom. The servants may have good intentions, and much intelligence, but there was a danger of them not being able to distinguish between the true and the false wheat, and they would involve both bad and good, therefore, in a common doom; or perhaps, leaving tares, they might pluck up and destroy wheat. It is only the Lord Himself, the true Searcher of hearts, who hath fulness of knowledge and absolute certainty, who "knoweth them that are his."

The line of conduct in relation to the tares, as proposed by the once sleeping, and now perplexed but zealous servants, is prohibited by the Lord, the reason being that they are unfit for the task, and this is not the time for doing it. Would that the professed church, or kingdom of heaven, had always taken heed to the advice of the Master in his respect!

But their suggestion was natural, because when they awoke and looked on the field, and saw its condition, they felt hopeless before the task of separating the false from the true, and hence they rose to a feeling of violent destruction. This is precisely how many of the servants of God feel today, in view of the many errors in the kingdom of heaven. They would that they had power to completely and forever annihilate them from the earth!

Error is Not Diminishing

But the line of conduct commanded by the householder, who represents Christ, is much the wiser one. In prohibiting the servants from digging up the tares, he said: "Let both grow together until the harvest." These words are heavily weighted with meaning. They tell us plainly that the evil of error is not, as so many falsely think, gradually to disappear before the triumphs of the truth, but that each is to unfold itself more and more fully, out of its own root and life, and that after its kind. Both are to grow together until the reaping time, till they are ripe, the one for glory, the other for destruction.

Consequently, the kingdom in this age is to have its intermixture of true and false disciples, of truth and error, of good and bad, until the Lord comes. In the meantime, the condition of the kingdom may not be encouraging, or as good as it should be; but let us be patient, for in the end, when "the things that offend" shall be gathered out it will be supremely better. Let us take earnest heed to the command of the Lord: "Let both grow together until the harvest."

IV

This brings us to the conclusion of our study of this parable, where we have two reapings. So it comes to pass that we have in this wonderful kingdom photograph, two sowers, two growing intermingled harvests, two opposing lines of conduct, and two final reapings at the end.

When the Lord gave the explanation of these two reapings, He said: "The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all the things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear" (vv. 41, 42). The time of the two reapings is "the end of the world."

Christ's Second Advent

Trench says that this phrase signifies the extremities of two eras, the one the end of the first, and the other the commencement of the second. "The end of the world" marks the consummation of this age, and the commencement of that age which is to come. It is, then, the junction of the two worlds, or ages.

When Christ comes a second time, He will close this dispensation by that event, and will bring, or introduce, the next dispensation, which will be the period of the reign of righteousness over the earth.

Not only are we told when these reapings will take place, but we are also informed who the harvesters will be. In the interpretation, the Master said: "The reapers are the angels." Angels are frequently represented as accompanying the Lord in the event of His coming judgment (Mat. 16:27; 24:31 2 Thess. 1:7; Rev. 19:14), and fulfilling His will in respect to those who served, and those who served Him not (13:47).

Angels, being skillful in knowledge, know the difference between tares and wheat. We may thank the Lord that the reaping will not be in the hands of men.

The tares are reaped first. "Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn." "The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all the things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth."

Retribution of the Wicked

Three things are done with these tares. They are first gathered out from among the wheat. This is separation, and in many respects what a terrible separation that will be in the future! The line of separation, then, will run between husbands and wives, parents and children, masters and servants, lovers and sweethearts, and friends and friends.

After they are thus dealt with, then they are bound together in bundles; that is association according to kind. That "kind" may be moral, religious, political, ceremonial, social, commercial, or even ecclesiastical.

Further they are cast into the fire. That is destruction. Our Lord explained everything in this parable but the fire. Are we to conclude from this that the fire is literal. If the fire be not literal, but figurative, like the wheat and the tares, let us remember that the reality is always more intense than the figure. If it be not literal, it is something very much worse than literal fire.

Is the Fire Literal?

Would that it were literal fire! The setting forth of the terrible doom of the ungodly generally under the image of the burning with fire of thorns, briars, weeds, chaff, barren branches, dead trees, is frequent in Scripture. We dare not speak of it as symbolical merely. There is a tremendous reality behind this terrible figure. Whatever the furnace of fire may mean here, or the lake of fire spoken of elsewhere, or the fire that is not quenched, the everlasting fire, referred to in several passages, this, at all events is certain, that they point to some doom so intolerable that the Son of God came down from Heaven and tasted all the bitterness of death, that He might deliver the race from ever knowing the secrets of that anguish represented in those terrible words, and in this terrible figure.

The tares, false disciples, hypocrites, counterfeit Christians, will, with the ungodly generally, be committed to this terrible doom by angelic ministry at the end of this age.

Redemption's Glory

But what is to become of the wheat? In the parable itself, the words are: "Gather the wheat into my barn." The wheat is gathered and that into the barn. In explaining this gathering and the barn, the Saviour said, "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." The righteous are the ones represented by the wheat, elsewhere spoken of as the children of the kingdom. When the tares are gathered out and consigned to their doom, then the wheat, the truly saved, will shine forth in the kingdom of their Father.

The barn is always a place of safety and protection. The kingdom of heaven is not the kingdom of the Father yet, but will become such when Christ, having put down all enemies, has delivered up the kingdom of heaven even to the Father. (See 1 Cor. 15:24-28.)

As fire will be the element of the dark and cruel kingdom of Satan by and by, so light will be the element of the absolutely pure kingdom of the Father, when all things are subjected unto Him. In the kingdom of the Father, there will be blessed association, according to kind, congenial companionship and friendship, with blissful satisfaction for all.

Here the true disciples of Christ are obscure and hidden, their beauty being eclipsed by their poverty, and the meanness of their outward condition. But there they shall shine forth as the sun, as when he breaks from behind a dark cloud.

Their bodies then will be like Christ's glorious body. When Christ appears in glory, they will appear together in glory, along with Him. They shall shine by reflection with a light borrowed from the fountain of light. Then their sanctification will be perfected, and their justification before God published. God will own them as His children, and will produce the record of their services and sufferings for His name. They shall shine as the sun, the most glorious of all visible beings.

It is no wonder that the Saviour concludes this matchless parable by the demand for attention to its teaching, when He said, "Who hath ears to hear, let him hear."

Letters and Opinions, Pro and Con, on the Interchurch Movement

I

Berkeley, Cal.

TO THE Christian Workers Magazine:

"Perhaps facts from different localities concerning the working of the Interchurch World Movement will be the best answer to the letters in your last issue, therefore, I would like to give you some facts about the work in this section.

"A careful survey (mostly by voluntary workers of the different churches) has been made block by block, of San Francisco and other Bay cities to ascertain the needs in order to plan how best to supply those needs and avoid overlapping of the work of different denominations, —a work which could not, or would not, be done by any one church, or by all churches independently. Afterward each denomination supervises and carries on its own share of the task.

As I understand the Interchurch World Movement this is practically the same program to be carried, on a larger scale, into heathen lands, where, from the nature of the case, it cannot be done by voluntary workers, and will involve expense. But will it not be economy in the long run? Whether really spiritual results will be attained depends, of course, upon the spirit of the denomination, and the individual workers in the local fields at home or abroad.

Is it not time the churches were waking up to the need of larger work for the foreigners in our own land, and to the great world need? The events of recent years have taught us that we have only been playing at missions, and also that the seemingly impossible can be done.

As to the loss of members mentioned in connection with the large increase in giving of some denominations (surely not a result of the giving!), may it not be true in the church at large, as we know it to be in local churches, that increased giving usually leads to spiritual revival and consequent increase of membership? "Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts" (Mal. 3:10).

Is "fifty millions in five years for 600,000 Congregationalists" so "wildly excessive"? It means an average of less than $1.50 a month for each member. In view of the promise in Malachi 3:10 is a tithe too much to expect of Christ's redeemed ones to carry on His work in the world? Surely a tenth of the income of those 600,000 members would more than cover the "fifty millions in five years," and all their local church expenses. Would that "be a calamity to the business stability and efficiency" of the givers? (Mal. 3:10 again.)

No doubt mistakes have been, and will be, made. There may be grave dangers ahead but there are certainly splendid possibilities in this movement which we dare not stop, if we could, lest we be found hindering the progress of the kingdom of God on earth. Shall we not rather pray that this great movement may be controlled by the Holy Spirit, and that the whole church "may be loyal to Jesus Christ in this her hour of greatest opportunity and greatest responsibility?"

Rangeley, Me.

Editors of The Christian Workers Magazine:

I am in hearty accord with your position on the great fundamentals of our Christian faith and one of those who stand for the defense of the gospel once delivered. I have read your recent editorial on the Interchurch Movement. I know there has been much criticism of this movement, much of which has seemed to me not well founded. I have been identified with the work since its inception in our state, and thus far, while I have watched it with much care, being strongly conservative and prepared to abandon it at any time, I have failed to discover anything that would lead me to regard it as of anything but the Lord. Its literature and program have been most helpful to our church work. While standing true to the faith and battling against ancient devils that are here and much alive, I feel we should be slow to oppose anything because it is new, and be very sure, before we greatly criticize, of our facts.

Really, dear editor, I was a little sorry for your article at this time. If ministers are "not acquainted with the scheme" it is their fault. It is their business to be acquainted, and without the most thorough investigation not to condemn, lest we appear to condemn a thing because it is not "of us." We will not compromise, we will be broad, we will co-operate with every force that will unite the severed body of our Lord, and hasten His coming in power and glory.

Yours in fellowship,

H. A. O.

Editors Christian Workers Magazine:

I have only recently returned from a meeting of the pastors of our state under the auspices of the Interchurch World Movement and am unable to find myself as a result.

Our denominational leaders are (in the greater part) fully lined up with this movement, and say that it is the great panacea for the ailments of the church. Personally I am uncertain as to the outcome, and for this reason write you for your opinion.

Do you believe that it means the strengthening of our forces, or the weakening of the same owing to the fact that many compromises are to be made, and "social reform," "Americanization," "Woman in Industry," and in fact anything and everything but God, Christ, the Bible and the Holy Spirit, are to be preached and emphasized?

To me this movement seems to be an effort on the part of "men and movements" apart from the atonement to revolutionize the world. I may be wrong, and if I am, I am ready to be righted. Well I know that if one is not "up to snuff" on all these modern ideas, they are "marked" among their brethren. I can not believe, much less preach, some of the things that these leaders are advocating, as I do not find them authorized in the Bible. I want to please Christ rather than court the popularity of the world as it seems to me the church is doing today.

Will you please excuse me for thus bothering you with these remarks, but they are on my heart, and I ask you to assist me if it pleases you so to do..

Hoping to remain true to Him who "cometh from above" I am, in the blessed hope,

Editors The Christian Workers Magazine:

I have read the editorial in the last issue on the Interchurch World Movement. I am thankful for such information. The spiritual people of God are in awful perplexity in these times. The questions are asked on every side, Shall we go with all these movements that seem to be so human and material?

It seems to me that we are entering into Luke 21:26. There is danger that God's elect will be lost in the confusion.

I pray God that we may keep step with Jesus our Saviour, and the Holy Spirit our guide. God bless you in your work.

Yours in His name, N. L. B.

Waterford, Mich

Editors Christian Workers Magazine:

I would like to know what you think of The Interchurch World Movement?

I have been unable to persuade myself that it is scriptural, or a part of the plan of God. Perhaps I am wrong. If so, surely I must know it quickly.

Thanking you in the name of the Master whose will we are trying to do, I am,

Very truly yours, J. W. J.

(We have been asked to publish the following from a sermon of Pastor Paul Rader, of Chicago.—Editors.)

God did not say to Joshua, "Send a few thousand more of your good men against Ai." He didn't say, "Get your forces better organized." Victory was not to come through organization and numbers but by God Himself, when sin had been put away. When Achan, had been judged, the victory was given.

We do not find the Interchurch World Movement concerned about judging Achan. The church is notoriously cursed with Achans of destructive criticism, but nothing is heard about casting them out of the councils of this movement.

Money is the last thing God needs in the doing of His work. The early church had mighty little of it and none for making surveys. They evangelized by the power of God and the conditions which surveys would have revealed were changed topsy-turvy.

The Interchurch World Movement is an attempt to secure spiritual results on the world's plan of getting results. This is not to say anything against the methods in themselves, but the church of God has never been revived along those lines. Nothing is heard from the leaders of this movement about the coming of the King, nor of the fact that God's Word so plainly reveals that the world is not to be won for Christ until He comes.

Are You Giving or Receiving?

By Rev. J. D. Kempster

"It is more blessed to give than to receive." Jesus.

There are very few people who truly believe
It's more blessed to give than it is to receive,
But since I've endeavored to follow the plan
I surely am feeling a happier man.

This "get all you can," and "keep all you get"
Is the motto of worldlings and bringeth regret;
For the man who is happy and filled with delight,
Is the fellow that's giving from morning till night.

Since nothing is proven until it is tried,
Just give it a test, and it won't be denied,
This scriptural maxim, is evermore right,
'Tis giving not getting, that bringeth delight.

Missionary Work Amongst the Jews in the Holy Land

By Rev. S. B. Rohold, F. R. G. S., Toronto, Canada

I. Personal Note

IN ORDER to be clear, the following are the bases for my statements, convictions and conclusions: (a) Personal knowledge of the country, peoples and languages; having been born in Jerusalem, having studied and lived there till my conversion; speaking Arabic (its different dialects), Hebrew, Yiddish, and Judeo-Spanish. (b) Personal contact with the different missions and missionaries (Hebrew Christians and Gentile Christians), and Christian friends, in Egypt, Palestine and Syria. Since my conversion, twenty-two years ago, I have had the privilege of making four missionary tours in Palestine, my last visit being during the months of June, July and August, 1919. (c) Personal intercourse with the military and civil officials in Egypt, Palestine and Syria (a good deal of a private and personal character). (d) Personal contact with the different classes, communities, sects and environments of the Jewish people during my personal missionary journeys.

Palestine—The ancient city of Tiberias, on the Sea of Galilee, which was captured from the Turks by General Allenby's forces during the war.

It was my constant endeavor to come into a living relationship with the realities of the present prevailing conditions and possibilities, not allowing any of my previous knowledge, information and conclusions to have any influence over me, as the whole condition of the life of the peoples has materially changed. Not only by the Balfourian declaration of November, 1917, the deliverance of Jerusalem by General Allenby, and by the signing of the armistice, but also since the armistice. Many true friends of Israel who visited the Holy Land before and after the signing of the armistice, came away with wrong impressions about the power of the Jews and the attitude of the military and civil officials. They were thus greatly alarmed, and alarmed everyone about the future missionary work in Palestine. In reality, there was no cause for alarm, for, soon after they left, the transition state brought a new, great and material change in the attitude of the Jews, the Christians, the Moslems and military officials. I want to be quite clear, that, even this present favorable state of affairs may also undergo a change if we continue to remain passive and inactive.

II. The Military and Civil Officials

Personally, I have nothing but praise, and I owe a debt of gratitude to many of them. I have found practically all the Government officials very cordial, considerate and ready to aid. Yes, I have found them to be Christian gentlemen, ever ready to assist the Christian missionary. It is true that I have come across one or two over zealous officials, but it does not amount to anything. And it could easily be accounted for; the unprecedented situation, the exacting, long and strenuous services, bodily weaknesses, and being worried by anybody and everybody — the wonder is the good nature of some of these officials. The earnest, humble, considerate and consecrated missionary could always get all the aid and encouragement he desired; yes, even help and assistance from all these Government officials. This was my actual experience; and my gratitude abounds.

III. Attitude of the Jews

The change is so remarkable that its true significance cannot be adequately described. It can only be realized and fully appreciated by personal experience, particularly so by consecrated Hebrew Christians. The whole life of the Jew seems to have undergone a radical change. There seems very little bitterness, very little arrogance, and a spirit of inquiry and readiness to listen now prevails.

The discord and schism that prevails between the orthodox Reformed and Radical Jews, the Zionists and Anti-Zionists, give the missionary an unprecedented opportunity. Their national aspirations and desires and longings make them unconscious readers of the Bible; yes, strange as it may seem, of the whole Bible, including the New Testament. You will hear them often say, "We must study the Bible and the history of our nation from all angles." So they use the Old and New Testaments, as we have often heard them say, "We put no more value on the Old Testament than we put on the New. They are to us mere historical books." But we know that the Word of God is life, and Jesus is the Life of men, and to some of these very Jews He has granted the new life.

And it is right here that we feel so keenly anxious. This favorable attitude of the Jews today towards the claims of our Lord Jesus and towards the missionaries is exactly the same as the Rev. J. I. Landsman and Mr. P. Levertoff of the Hebrew Christian Testimony to Israel, found the Jews in Russia to have after the first revolution. The spirit of liberty and tolerance swayed Russian Jewry then, but the Christian missions to Israel, helplessly struggling, could not then carry out their desires and meet the situation, and the Christian church did not take advantage of that unprecedented opportunity. Now the same spirit has swayed Palestine. Mr. Payne and I saw it, experienced and lived it, and the cry comes from our very hearts, will these unprecedented opportunities in the Holy Land be allowed to pass away as those in Russia? Oh, no! We must not allow it. Our cry must go up to heaven in longing prayer for the people in the Holy Land.

IV. Hebrew Christian Witness

from all sectarianism is absolutely demanded in the Holy Land. God forbid that we should be guilty of disparaging or even underestimating the labors of the different societies, or of undervaluing the testimony of a saved child of God. We know that God has used the saintly lives of Gentile Christians to the salvation of many a son and daughter of Abraham. Furthermore, we have long ago declared, that, in the ordinary church work, amongst the Jews, or that of a society, as regards leadership, both Jew and Gentile should be equally considered. God is no respector of persons. In the work of God, it is the consecrated, holy Christ-like life that counts most. No Hebrew Christian who has had any experience of what it means for a soul to be saved by grace, will ever attribute priority to one over the other. Actual conversion is an act of grace, operated by the Holy Spirit. We deprecate the apathy of allocating converts and giving credit to this or that person. It should not exist in the Christian church. "I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase."

Palestine—A Street Scene in Bethlehem

Bethlehem, the birthplace of our Lord, stands in the midst of a fertile district producing an abundance of wheat, barley, olives, vegetables and grapes—in consequence its market is always well supplied. Since 1834, when the entire Moslem colony was destroyed by Ibrahim Pasha, after an insurrection there have been comparatively few Moslems among its inhabitants.

We are living in days when one has to deal with facts, and it is demanded of us to be "faithful unto death." We must be frank at all times and at all costs where the advancement of the kingdom of our blessed Lord and Master, the Christ of God, is concerned. It has been acknowledged and admitted by all foreign missionary leaders, such as Drs. J. R. Mott, A. T. Pierson, George Smith, Duff and MacKay, that whatever the position of the Christian European missionary may be in the foreign field, it is the native that will win the native—the Chinese Christian must reach China; the Japanese, Japan, and the Korean, Korea. This is undoubtedly more so in regard to Israel. It goes without saying that no human agent can regenerate a soul. Actual regeneration is an act of the Holy Spirit. But it must be remembered, with heathen there is only ignorance, superstition and love for their idols. With the Jews, there is the additional feeling of superiority, a firm conviction that he only has a knowledge of the true God and all others are idolaters. He has centuries of prejudices against a superstitious church, and bitterness accumulated through centuries of vile persecutions from the hands of so-called Christendom. It is no wonder that the Jews mistrust the Gentile and attribute all kinds of motives to them. To be sure, there is also bitter opposition to the Hebrew Christian missionary, but it is for totally different reasons, and these can best be overcome by the Hebrew Christian himself, by his devotion, sympathy and love to his people.

V. Concerning Gentile Workers

Some Gentile Christians have flattered themselves that they are more acceptable to the Jew than the Hebrew Christian is, because the Jews do not exhibit to them the open bitterness which they shew on the first approach of the Hebrew Christian. This is a fallacy. Those who have labored amongst Israel and know something of the Jew, will not repeat it, for they know that the Jew does not love the Gentile missionary any better than the Hebrew Christian, but the Jew considers the Gentile missionary harmless and not worth troubling, but he knows what the zeal and value of a consecrated Hebrew Christian is. If the Gentile Christian missionary knew of all the epithets and pitiable expressions conferred upon him, he would not at all be flattered. They can read descriptions about themselves in the Jewish Chronicle and the Jewish World occasionally. All truly great and successful Gentile Christian leaders among the missionaries to the Jews, have gratefully acknowledged their indebtedness to their faithful Hebrew Christian fellow laborers. We have only to read this in the fascinating histories of the Scottish Jewish Missions, the London Jewish Society, the British Jewish Society and the Irish Presbyterian Jewish Missions.

There is something radically wrong here. It has been recognized that those appointed to the foreign mission fields must be the best trained, equipped, qualified and consecrated men and women; the learning of the native language and literature is obligatory, time and opportunity are given them, and if the applicants fail in acquiring these, they are returned home. We deeply regret to say that this has not been the case with the appointment of the missionary to the Jews. At the best, many of the present day Gentile Christian missionaries have to rely upon second-hand information (of course, there are, thank God, notable exceptions). They do not mix with the daily life of the people, not being acquainted with their literature, laws, traditions and customs; and being strange to their environments, they cannot be a welcome guest in their inner social life. Many of them have not even reached the stage of appreciating the Jewish train of mind. Very few have mastered Yiddish and Hebrew, far less their literature in its vernacular. Therefore, they must depend upon some Hebrew Christian for their information and assistance, and often they rely upon a broken reed.

We know that many of God's dear people are laboring there whom God has honored and blessed, whom we love and pray for, yea, will continue to give toward their support, the Lord helping us. To meet the present unprecedented opportunity, its momentous needs and impending crisis, an unmistakable Hebrew Christian Testimony must be established in the Holy Land (not establishing missions). Such a witness will serve a three-fold purpose: calling on the Jew to repentance, to be reconciled with their long rejected Messiah and Saviour; to the Gentile, to give up their idolatries and to be washed in the blood of the Lamb; and to awaken the church of God from her passiveness, and come into her own. Who but the Hebrew Christian is called to be such a triune witness?

VI. United Missions

There are some missions, while they are under the name of Jewish missions, yet their work is carried on for both. This is a matter that causes grave concern. We realize how careful one ought to be in making any statement, for the ground is dangerous to tread, and many are the sensitive and the little ones whom we must not offend, yet one must speak. If a society advertises work amongst Jews and Gentiles or vice versa, and carries on work among both to the best of their ability, we can say very little against such. We may differ in our methods but that is all. But when a society or an individual advertises work amongst the Jews or calls himself a missionary to Israel and yet spends all its income and energies on the Gentiles because it is often an easier access and a larger field, we feel that it is not quite right. And my experience has been (with notable exceptions, and that due to consecrated individual missionaries) that it usually was a mission to the Gentiles in word and deed, and nominally to the Jew. There is no need of saying too much on the subject. In the nature of things, it does not work well for the Jewish cause.

VII. Occupied Fields

This is rather a difficult heading, for I believe a field may have a dozen missions, and yet not be adequately occupied. But we will have to take it in its ordinary sense which means that missionaries are laboring there.

1. Jerusalem. The most attractive and most important field on account of its inheritance, world position, variety of peoples, and varieties of religions.

(a). The London Jews' Society has a church, a hospital, a boys' school, a girls' school, and a House of Industry (printing, book-binding, and olive-wood work), and an inquirers' home. This is the best equipped Mission in the whole of Palestine. During the war everything was closed up. A few faithful, consecrated Hebrew Christians remained all through the terrible years of the war, bearing faithful testimony, and some gave their lives. Amongst those whom God has spared to us are: beloved Mr. Charles Hornstein; Mr. and Mrs. Datzie, and our aged Brother Wiseman. When I was there the church services, free dispensary, and olive-wood work was re-opened, and I suppose the whole of its work will be opened before long. The society has now sent out a splendid band of missionaries, and we are grateful to say that notably amongst them are Rev. Dr. Charles and Mrs. Neill and Dr. P. d'Erf Wheeler and Rev. Mr. Keith.

Jerusalem German Orphanage now taken over by American Red Cross which cares for orphans.

(b). The Christian and Missionary Alliance has a mission to the natives, yet all its missionaries in their regular work seek to reach the Jews, and before the war they had a reading room on the Jaffa Road for the Jews in charge of a Hebrew Christian, and now the Rev. Arthur Payne is doing exceptionally good and efficient work. Since I left our brother has admitted into the visible church of Christ, ten Jews, baptizing them in the name of our Lord Jesus.

(c). Dr. and Mrs. Wilkinson have settled there and are busy in doing good work; by this time they have, in all probability, established some definite work.

(d). The Egypt General Mission under Miss Annie Van Somer has opened a book store in charge of a Hebrew Christian, and is endeavoring to send out colporteurs.

(e). The Bible Society has a fine book depot on the Jaffa Road, in charge of Mr. Cooper.

(f). The Rt. Rev. R. MacInnes, Bishop of Jerusalem, has decided to employ a missionary to the Jews in connection with St. George's Collegiate Cathedral. A specially trained man is to go out soon.

(g). There are quite a number of individual, consecrated Christian workers who have the cause of Israel at heart. Among these is Miss Brown who brought with her two assistants, Miss Stone and Miss Cooper. Miss Dunn has also returned. There are others who are not missionaries in the ordinary sense, yet are doing good work for the Master, such as Mr. and Mrs. Shelley, always abiding in good works.

It should be borne in mind that with all these, the situation is not fully met. We must remember what Jerusalem stands for, the homogeneous mixture of its population; the ever prevailing awful religious strife amongst the Christian, Latin, Armenian, Coptic and Abyssinian Churches. The varieties of an idolatrous Christianity and the many varied phases of evangelical Christianity are misunderstood and misapprehended by the Jews and Moslems. The many currents and cross currents are continually working untold mischief. To meet its immediate needs, two hundred per cent of missionary efforts are demanded at once. A Hebrew Christian testimony is the ideal witness that is most essential here.

2. Hebron. The Jewish community is not very large here, but it is one of the ancient.

solidly orthodox Jewish communities. Owing to the Turkish misrule and Mohammedan fanaticism, the community has not fared so well, but now a new life is in process, as the city is very sacred to the Jewish heart and mind, and, therefore, one of the important fields. The United Free Church of Scotland has a well equipped hospital there. A new one is being built. The work is under the care of Dr. Patterson, an able and consecrated missionary. This work, though under the Jewish Committee, is carried on for both Mohammedans and Jews. Miss Butterfield, under the Christian and Missionary Alliance, carried on an active work of grace up till the war broke out, and it is hoped that this work will soon be reorganized.

3. Jaffa. Up to the present, one of the most important ports for Palestine. A junction for many of the Jewish colonies, and besides, the modern model city of the Zionists, Tell-Avive, has been built here with great success. In the center stands the modern Jewish seminary, high school and teachers' training college, exerting great influence over the younger Jewry in Palestine. (a) The London Jews' Society mission is in charge of a Hebrew Christian, Mr. D. Gold. (b) The United Free and Established Churches of Scotland have unitedly taken over a work. It, too, is for both Jews and Gentiles.

Jerusalem—door of a church showing how carefully the British carried out their promise to preserve the Holy Shrines. Note the sealed door to preserve the interior from Moslem desecration, or other vandalism.

4. Tiberias. In this ancient city, stronghold of orthodoxy, the United Free Church of Scotland has a well equipped hospital and mission under the care of that venerated missionary, Dr. D. W. Torrance, and a well equipped staff of nurses. Associated with him in the work is the Rev. Mr. Semple. Our beloved brother, Rev. Mr. Cohen, who bravely remained at his post, was arrested and falsely accused of being a spy, harshly treated, made to march to Constantinople, but died on the way from exhaustion.

5. Safed, "The city set on a hill," has two well equipped missions, schools, and a hospital under the London Jews' Society and the United Free Church of Scotland. Dr. W. H. Anderson has now returned to his work, and the Rev. P. and Mrs. Nyland have also returned.

6. Damascus and Beiruth. Though these two cities are outside of Palestine proper, yet they are in Syria and they ought to be taken into account when considering Palestine missions. In Damascus there are two missions. (a) The Irish Presbyterian Church under the care of Dr. MacFarland, two lady missionaries, and a staff of native teachers who are doing splendid work. This, too, is a united work of Gentiles and Jews. (b) The London Jews' Society's work is under the charge of the able and venerable missionary, Rev. Canon Hanover. At Beiruth, the Established Church has a mission. From Damascus and Beiruth itinerane missionaries ought to be sent out to distribute literature and witness to the Jews all around Lebanon. Particular attention should be given to Sidon, as in it there is an old Jewish community, which will undoubtedly increase.

VIII. Unoccupied Fields

In giving the unoccupied fields, naturally we will have to leave out a number of the small cities, and be obliged to take in two or three cities that do not come within the borders of Palestine, but yet are very vital to the carrying on of aggressive evangelistic work in the Holy Land.

1. Haifa. I purposely put Haifa first because at the present we cannot call it unoccupied in the ordinary sense, because our aged and beloved brother, Mr. D. C. Joseph, returned to his old sphere of labors early last June, and he is busily engaged doing good work and bearing faithful testimony. He owns a magnificent property and has been preaching the gospel in Palestine for over thirty years. I have put Haifa in the "unoccupied fields" because our aged and honored brother feels that he cannot possibly continue bearing the strain of this important field, and it is a very important field indeed.

Since preparing this statement, we have received word that our aged brother fell asleep in Jesus at 11 a. m. on Monday, September 22, in his eighty-third year. It is much gratification to the writer that he had the privilege of taking care of this brother and aiding him on his way back to Palestine. It has also been our privilege to arrange that the property be taken over by the British Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Jews, and we trust that a Bible school will be established there.

Haifa we could call a strategic point. It is a very important junction, and is going to be a very strategetic center for the whole of Palestine, especially for aggressive missionary propaganda. (a) It is already a great railway junction; the Beiruth and Damascus railway, the Hadjas, the Kantara and Jerusalem railways, all have their terminal there. All must change there. (b) Haifa has a natural bay, it makes landing safe in winter, which is impossible at Jaffa. (c) If Beiruth is to become a French Port, then Damascus, Arabia and Galilee will undoubtedly make Haifa its port, and it will even become the port of Mesopotamia, as we have good reason to believe. (d) It is the market place and center for many of the Jewish colonies. (e) It is already a central place for Zionistic activities. The Technicum, that wonderful Jewish technical college, is already built. Taking everything into consideration, Haifa should be considered a very important center for missionary propaganda. The magnificent property of Mr. D. C. Joseph would form a nucleus and give a housing for a splendid missionary center.

2. Acre or Akka, as it is called, is a very important center, but its Jewish community is very small and as it is only a short distance from Haifa, the missionaries could visit it very often.

3. Neblous or Shechem, one of the ancient cities, is a very strong Mohammedan center. The Jewish community is very small there, but it may increase ere long, so in the meantime, missionaries should visit it from different centers. Attention should be given to the remnant of Samaritans whose headquarters are there.

4. Jewish Colonies. The forty-two Jewish colonies have no missions. These make a very fertile field, but, of course, we cannot expect that Jewish colonies which are managed by their own municipal boards should allow a missionary to build up a mission there, so the establishment of missions is out of the question; but the missionary is welcome. We had personal experience in distributing literature, and in conversation with Jews, and found that it is a very favorable field. Therefore, these Jewish colonies present a great opportunity for a Hebrew Christian witness, but this work is far too large for one or even a couple of missionaries. A regular staff ought to be engaged whose business it would be to visit these places, and they can easily put up in the well equipped hotels there, and may carry on a real aggressive missionary work without the least hindrance. With the exception of a few missionaries who have occasionally visited these colonies, this is entirely an "unoccupied field," and a very attractive field, too. There are a number of other little cities which we hardly need to mention and where Jews live, which ought to be visited by a Hebrew Christian witness.

5. Egypt. Egypt has two Jewish mission stations occupied—Alexandria, by the Church of Scotland, and Cairo, by the London Jews' Society. Port Said, though it is outside of Palestine, is a very important field, and should be taken into serious consideration, because Port Said is the gateway to Palestine as well as to Africa, Australia and India, and there is no Hebrew Christian witness there. It should be taken to heart that a city of such strategic importance should be left without a witness. Of course, there are Christian people who bear testimony, but I mean that there is no Jewish mission.

IX. Bible School for the Holy Land

If a Bible school means the establishment of a missionary training school for Jewish missionaries, then, of course, Jerusalem is the chief place, and from my experience in intercourse with the different missionaries, all of them, Jews and Gentiles, would welcome such an institution. Of course, a school of such a character must be well equipped and well established. At the present time, in whatever way the different colleges and existing Bible schools may be able to prepare a missionary for work among the Jews, they are absolutely inadequate. A smattering of Hebrew, and a few essays on the Jewish Prayer Book and Jewish customs, do not equip a man for work amongst Israel. Such a curriculum would not equip a missionary for work among the Gentiles, and it should not be considered to equip one for work amongst the Jews. It goes without saying, that a high standard of education will not equip a man for soul-winning. The primary needs are, a Christian experience, a definite call of God, a true appreciation of the value, meaning and power of prayer. Always depending on the Lord, to be taught of Him and be used by Him for His glory. If Jerusalem is not found suitable or accessible for the establishment of such an institution, then Haifa is the next best place. Of course, if a school means an ordinary place where a missionary should give all his time to teach the Bible and call it a school of the prophets for Jews or anybody who desires to come, then Haifa is the best place.

Nortons' Work in Belgium

RUE DU GOUVERNEMENT PROVISOIRE,
17
BRUXELLES (BELGIQUE)

TO THE Editors of the Christian Workers Magazine:

You will rejoice to hear that God is continuing to pour out His blessing upon us in the work here. Some two weeks ago last Sunday I spoke in our hall at Antwerp which was crowded, and when I gave the invitation to accept Christ some sixty per cent of the people declared definitely that they would put their trust in Him as their Saviour.

Of course, one never knows exactly how much these people mean by this as they have so little Bible knowledge. However, you will see how remarkable this is when I tell you that a faithful English missionary who has been laboring in Belgium for thirty years was compelled to leave Antwerp broken hearted some years ago because the people would not attend a gospel service nor listen individually to the message of salvation, except in very few instances. Likewise our hall in Brussels, that we thought would be large enough for two or three years is crowded to overflowing Sunday night after Sunday night, and almost every time the invitation is given there are professed conversions.

We are receiving calls from many places to come and hold services. The Bible school too is blessed, and we are having additions to the student body frequently.

Our uncompromising stand for the eternal verities is creating severe and outspoken opposition; but from a source that we had not expected, that is, the two small Protestant churches of this land. They are not only, in a large measure, rationalistic, but surpass Germany in their infidelity. There are few pastors in the land who stand for the truth.

This week the Belgian missionary church made a written attack upon us in their church paper for our narrowness, and because we stand for the literal inspiration of the Bible, the trinity, eternal punishment and other fundamentals. In this article they said they did not believe in any of these, although they call themselves evangelical.

Camouflaging False Doctrine

The leading pastor of this church in Belgium has lately strongly opposed us, and the other day Mr. Barnhouse went to see him, and then later a committee of three of us waited upon him to see whether we clearly understood his position. I cannot tell you how pained we were when he reiterated what he had said to Mr. Barnhouse and even went further. He called salvation by blood a savage doctrine, denied justification by faith, denied that the Bible was the Word of God, and when we asked if Jesus Christ was God manifested in the flesh he said "No, but he was a manifestation of God." "I do not have three Gods, but one," he said; and when we asked him if he was a Unitarian, he replied, "I presume you could say that I was."

When we asked him if Jesus Christ was miraculously conceived, he said "No," and then he said something that not only chilled me then, but has chilled me since. Mr. Barnhouse asked him the very blunt question "Then you would consider Him a bastard?" He replied, "Bastard or not it makes no difference to me, and that has nothing to do with my relationship to Him."

As much as we regret to do so, we have been compelled in the face of these facts to write a brochure which will be issued today in which we show up this man's position and that of many others of this land. We know this will bring great criticism, and yet we feel led of God. These men have camouflaged their position, and are deceiving the people by using the evangelical phrases of the church, leading the people to believe that they stand for the old truth when they do not.

You can see the difficulties of our field and yet we rejoice to be privileged to contend for the faith, "once for all delivered unto the saints." Mr. Hoffmann, a Swiss business man, who has had a little assembly of Christians here for some twenty years, and who assisted in the editing of the Tregelles Greek New Testament, said to us that we are taking the correct stand in this land, and he has been with us all the way through as have other faithful pastors and laymen.

Call for More Workers

Mr. Hoffmann further said that he believed this expose marked the beginning of a revival for this land. The fields are white unto the harvest and we are needing laborers. If you have any students, preferably college men or women, we would be glad to consider them for this field.

We need a score of workers. We need some one to organize the children in Sunday-schools, a teacher for the Bible school, another person who could organize Bible classes throughout the land and other workers. Of course, French or Flemish speaking students would be preferable, but if these are not available, then they would have to take time to learn the languages. However, in the meantime they could be speaking through interpreters which we have.

Yours in His great love,
RALPH C. NORTON.

Bible Institutes vs. Theological Seminaries

By Rev. Albert P. Haupert, in The Moravian

IT IS every day becoming more apparent that in our churches two irreconcilable theological drifts are forcing themselves on our attention. The one we might call the conservative or positive or evangelical position. The other we might call the liberal or speculative or higher-critical position. In the final analysis of these two positions, the former insists on a supernatural basis for the Christian religion, while the latter denies a supernatural and substitutes a purely natural basis.

The former position has in our day found its clearest expression through the Bible Institutes and training schools, through evangelistic and foreign missionary activity; the latter through Unitarianism, and so-called "higher criticism" in many of our theological seminaries and liberal pulpits.

We are slowly finding out that most of our seminaries have become hot-beds of destructive Bible criticism, based on a purely rationalistic and naturalistic view of the Bible and the Christian faith. Sensible people are also discovering, even if rather slowly, that these two positions can never be reconciled. They have been, are and will always be, fundamentally at war with each other, and we might just as well save our precious breath, crying "Peace! Peace!" when there can be no peace.

It is true, that I do not agree with the teachings of the Bible schools at every point. Nevertheless it is also true, that most of the criticism and opposition to the Bible Institute comes from sources inspired by higher and destructive criticism. We can most naturally expect this very thing. I would just as soon expect these people to say something good about Bible Institutes, as to expect the owner of a brewery to say something good about prohibition. To men who profess to be ambassadors of Christ, interpreters and ministers of Christ and His gospel, eating the bread of the church, often in the best remunerated positions in the gift of the church, and yet argue away the supernatural origin and power of the gospel in the lives of men, who deny the necessity and the fact of regeneration in the heart of the individual, substituting for the real gospel of Christ a man-devised cultural veneer, which more than anything else has brought upon us the appallingly destructive world war,—to such men the Bible Institute must be a thorn in the flesh, as well as in the spirit.

Whatever criticism may come from this source, you can safely consign to the pigeon hole labeled: "Should God have said?" (Gen. 3:1).

Do not forget that already in Old Testament times the priest was the man who was most tempted to turn away from God, to say and do what pleased the people. To bring back straying Israel, God raised up the prophet.

The same is true today. When the highly cultured teacher and preacher in some of our seminaries and pulpits so signally betray their trust from God to mankind, it is then that God raises up in His own wonderful way his Spurgeons, Moodys and Billy Sundays. God calls into existence our Bible Institutes, with all of their human limitations, to confound the wise of our generation, when the "priest" of the pulpit and the "Levite" in the seminary chair, "pass by on the other side" of fallen and dying humanity, failing to touch it with the divine dynamic of the real gospel of Christ. Why should not the words of Jesus find application to the situation of our day: "He that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me"?

This is a time when we should appreciate more than ever the many men in our pulpits and seminary chairs, who have remained faithful to the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Saviour. But this is also a time when we must more than ever insist that our seminaries must give our future ministers a more practical training for their future work, a better working knowledge of the Bible and, above all other things, help them to experience in their own hearts the saving and regenerating power of the gospel.

It is well also to remember, that in the preparation it offers to its students, The Moody Bible Institute has so far laid the main stress on evangelistic work. Without laying less stress on evangelism, I have often felt that the Institute might do more specifically in preparing students for pastoral work in settled congregations. It is true that a man may be successful as an evangelist and fail as the settled pastor of a church."

(The last paragraph of the above indicates that the writer is not familiar with the progress and development of The Moody Bible Institute during the last few years. For example, a recent census of about 3,500 former students revealed that 1,447 of them were engaged as pastors and assistant pastors in thirteen different evangelical denominations, while only 256 were devoting their entire time to evangelism; 208 were employed as home missionaries under the direction of the different denominational boards; 818 had gone to foreign mission fields; 271 were engaged as teachers in colleges, public and denominational schools and Bible institutes; and 66 were holding positions in the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. in college and city associations as secretaries, directors of religious work, etc.

It is not generally known either, that the Faculty and instructors of the Institute now number about thirty, and that on the advice of denominational leaders the curriculum has been greatly broadened along the line of "preparing students for pastoral work in settled congregations." The catalogue announces the following as included in its curriculum:

English Bible: Synthesis, Analysis, Exegesis.

New Testament Greek.

Bible Doctrine, or what the theological seminary calls Systematic Theology.

Biblical Introduction, Biblical Geography, Biblical Criticism, Christian Evidences.

Homiletics, Pastoral Theology, Personal Evangelism, Teacher Training.

Church History, History and Science of Missions, Comparative Religions, Phonetics.

Pedagogy, Religious Pedagogy, Psychology, Ethics.

Sunday-school organization and Management.

Public Speaking.

This says nothing about the work in music, nor in English and other modern languages such as Italian and Russian. Neither does it mention what is taught in elemental medicine, first aid, nursing, manual arts, simple mechanics, etc., in the preparation of both men and women for work in heathen lands.—Editors.)

Recollections of College Days

By One Who Was Lost But Is Now Saved

IT HAS been about five years since I was graduated from one of the largest Universities in this country. I entered, as thousands do every year, from a Christian home and the background of thought that it gives.

It is generally a child's trustful attitude with which the high school graduate steps up hopefully for the first registration in the new University world. He has not learned how evil men's motives frequently are, what a diversity of ideas and beliefs the human race is burdened with, nor has he had experience enough to test his own incipient beliefs through hardships and reverses. Most children of the high school graduate age are weak and flabby spiritually. The training of the church has been so meager or superficial that the youth does not even know the great teachings of the Bible, except in a most hazy way.

It was with this attitude toward my future teachers that I plunged into a life which it was impossible for me to understand. I kept it until at least my junior year, when I began to feel puzzled. I could not make the serious teaching of my former days agree with what I was now being told. I was gradually being impregnated with ideas that slowly and subtly were changing my beliefs, my purposes, my life.

The University taught me that there was no God. Of course, there were some teachers who claimed there was a great force which they called God. Others said that the race in its upward trend was divine. But for a personal God who actually took thought for our lives, where was any one who would say that?

"Philosophy and Vain Deceit"

First, there was the study of science. In that I learned from a professed Christian instructor that Aggasiz was the last scientist that opposed the evolution theory. (Of course, if all these scientific thinkers had found evolution to be a fact, there was nothing for us to do but believe it!)

With all these wonderful (?) discoveries in mind the next step in the line of my atheistic path was sociology. Here was a comparatively new science and one with a promising future! Here I was compelled to read a book—called by the instructor one of the greatest of this generation, in which it was stated that as the race develops one after another of the illusions of life fade away, including religion. Religion had one function—that of holding society in check and giving it some order. Naturally, my young and imaginative mind wondered what was going to fade away next? And I am not ashamed to say that this bothered me, and I lost sleep worrying about it. No one need feel mortified at the fact that his mind still contains some of those fancies and fears that make childhood memories so magical and full of charm. The adult mind is exceedingly childish in the sight of God, and the things men doubt, and question and quibble about, are easy and clear in his mind.

I was fast losing my hold upon former ideas, when I ventured upon a course in philosophy. Here the disorder of my brain became total chaos. What youngster can stand up and argue against the well-ordered premises of a veteran educator? What faith is so strong in youth as to stand against what seem to be unanswerable conclusions? It is this course that defied faith in a God, made conscience only race knowledge, made spirit a myth, and denied that there was anything we might experience except through the senses. No, the instructor did not arise and declare in so many words, "There is no such thing," or "I do not believe this or that," but gave such arguments that all listening knew, and came to the conclusions themselves.

I did not realize at the time that I was an atheist, but one night, in the middle of the night, it came to me suddenly, "I am actually an unbeliever!" I was frightened to realize it, and at that moment there began in my soul a battle. I was miserable for many long, dark months.

The Tragedy of Losing the Sense of God

I believed differently from all my friends and relatives, who had not gone through a similar experience. I lived in an isolated atmosphere, for now I had graduated and was among other people. I had no object in attending church except for appearances, and to cover the fact of my disbelief from my family. I knew they would be terribly grief-stricken to know my attitude, and a sensitive person will tell a falsehood rather than wound another, unless the sensitive person is very strong. But a person who has lost his faith is the weakest of creatures. Whenever people sang hymns I kept still. I thought my position and knowledge were far in advance of that of most people, and looked down with an air of patronage on anybody that entertained religious beliefs.

But by far outshadowing all these things was the fact that I had lost God. That was tragedy indeed, for I have always possessed a strong emotional nature. I was heartbroken, I was fearful, and I was very weak. This is a weakness undescribable, and unlike anything else—when one loses God. My spirit was broken, and I flitted from one duty to another without mind and without caring whether there were any more days for me. Shadowy promptings of suicide and what not, roam through a soul in that condition. These thoughts and this suffering piling up day by day, week by week, month by month, rendered both my mental and physical condition very unsure. I became ill, but tried to appear otherwise. I had received a nervous shock, the effects of which I suppose I shall never outlive.

This is compressing into a few words this terrible experience. There is no sorrow or tragedy comparable to the losing of one's faith. They who cause such a thing are of the same status as murderers. Would you not rather be murdered in body than be robbed of your soul? I would lose a few years here in preference to an eternity beyond.

This is a crime of the most wicked and treacherous kind, permitted—yes, paid for, by the State. This is the work that is going on every year, and thousands of young people are receiving the curse of it. I am asking why the State permits such crimes to be perpetrated upon the young, and why parents will continue to be misled?

Open Letter to the Associated Press on the Sinn Fein Movement

Sacramento, Calif.,
February 21, 1920.

THE Associated Press,
New York City, N. Y.
Gentlemen:

Some months ago there escaped from Ireland to America, a representative of Sinn Fein. There followed a campaign of addresses by him in practically every large American city. These meetings were prominently reported by the Associated Press.

The effect of Sinn Fein propaganda, of which this use of the Associated Press may have been a part, has been to create an American public sentiment favoring Sinn Fein. The United States Senate, yielding to the recognized political strength of certain influences in America, actually passed resolutions favoring Home Rule in Ireland.

Americans with vision, recognizing that such propaganda was a continuation of the infamous German propaganda, and was aimed to create friction between America and one of its allies in the world struggle against Hohenzollernism, invited prominent Ulstermen to tell the real story of Sinn Fein.

These gentlemen arrived in New York early in December, 1919. They described Sinn Fein as succeeding in preventing the draft in Catholic Ireland, even when the Huns seemed victorious in March, 1918. They told how the great body of Irish who fought came only from Protestant Ulster.

The Ireland chapter of this conspiracy was told by the Ulster delegation to record-breaking audiences during their tour of this country. In some places, where Billy Sunday meetings had been held, the attendance at the Ulster meetings, we are told, exceeded the attendance at the Billy Sunday meetings. In Sacramento our largest church was packed to the doors, with a large overflow meeting in a nearby church.

Yet, as far as our observation goes, not one word of the nationwide Ulster meetings has been reported in the Associated Press.

The reports of Sinn Fein meetings as above noted on the contrary filled the columns of all American papers. More than this, there was opposition to Sinn Fein meetings. Reports of this were apparently given no space in the Associated Press until the intense opposition in Pacific coast cities, like Portland and Los Angeles. Indeed, almost the only dispatch which has been noticed by members of this Federation that was at all unfavorable to Sinn Fein was the burning, under peculiar circumstances, of the Masonic Temple in Los Angeles, after its use for a Sinn Fein meeting had been refused.

We have heard ugly rumors to the effect that the Associated Press news is censored by influences that do not make for good citizenship, and that the newspapers dare not acknowledge this unseen government any more than those senators who voted for resolutions favoring Home Rule.

The Ulster delegation at their meeting stated that the real trouble in Ireland was not due so much to a desire to be free from England, as it was due to the machinations and intrigue of the Roman hierarchy.

The Church Federation of Sacramento, realizing that America has no right to criticize the methods of the Wolff Agency of Germany if the above be true that American news is similarly censored, and recognizing the danger to American liberties, when one class, whether religious, financial, or otherwise, obtains control of the main news disseminating agency of the country, and feeling that it would not be doing its duty as an aggregation of churchmen if it did not make inquiry as to the possibility of such apparent class control, makes bold to ask the Associated Press whether such censorship of its news dispatches does exist, and if not, why there was the prolonged and continuous reports of the Sinn Fein meetings when equally large gatherings of the Ulster meetings were entirely ignored.

Very respectfully,
The Sacramento Church Federation.

THE SPURGEON TABERNACLE

This tabernacle, more accurately designated as the Metropolitan Tabernacle of London, was filled March 7, last, when the new pastor, Rev. H. Tydeman Chilvers, began his labors. The British Weekly has a three column account of the services during the day. The texts chosen, Acts 20:24 and 1 John 2:1, gave the new pastor the opportunity of outlining the message of his ministry. The Weekly says:

"Religion for the new pastor is not something brought to church with the Sunday clothes and put away with them in the wardrobe at night, but something also to be put on with the old, shiny everyday suit, limp and askew with wear, and soiled with the contact of the work-a-day world."

Dr. A. C. Dixon, one time pastor of the Moody Church in Chicago, was pastor of this famous church for some seven years, covering the terrible period of the world war.

How Show Sympathy?

Matthew 25:34-40

The Scripture reading suggests the feeding of the hungry, the clothing of the needy, the visitation of the sick and prisoners, as an answer to the question in our topic.

In general the question may be answered by saying that we are to show sympathy whenever we see a real need that we can meet. It is probably a question of heart rather than "how," for out of the abundance of the heart come the sympathetic word and deed. When the love of God fills a human heart, it flows out in love to others. Kind speech, courteous acts, patient dealings, and the persistent pursuit of good are most natural to such a heart. Selfishness, the great enemy of sympathy, is overcome. This first definite answer then to our question would be found in the words, "Keep yourselves in the love of God" (Jude 21).

A second answer is found in the example of our Lord, when the leper approached Him with the words, "Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." Jesus put forth His hand and touched him saying, "I will: be thou clean." The sympathy of Christ was shown by the touch as well as by the words. There is a growing tendency to show our sympathy by contract, while shrinking from that which is worth infinitely more, namely contact. In these days of large money contributions and of great organizations, there is a growing tendency to hold oneself aloof from human need and suffering, and to satisfy the conscience by a money contribution. It is not God's way to save the world by contract but by contact. "Himself took our infirmities and bore our sicknesses." "Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows." It was through contact that Christ brought to human need the healing and uplift which met the need. Matthew 8:15, 16; 9:29 are examples of this, and the following lines emphasize it:

"And Him evermore I behold
  Walking through Galilee,
Through the cornfields waving gold,
In hamlet and wood and in wold.
He toucheth the sightless eyes;
  Before Him the demons flee;
To the dead He sayeth, 'Arise,'
  To the living, 'Follow Me.'
And that voice still soundeth on
Through the centuries that are gone
  To the centuries that shall be."

Sympathy is not mere feeling; it is feeling in action. "Not long ago," said Dr. Jackson, "I looked upon a great picture in a distant city. Grouped in some public place were the sinful, the sick, the poor, the sorrowing. The blind were there, the paralytic, the oppressed African, the mourners, the woman who was a sinner. In the midst, with a countenance of Godlike pity, stood the Christ, His hands outstretched in healing, His lips uttering words of divine sympathy. Underneath was the simple and sufficient title, 'Christ, the Consoler.' "

This picture goes to the very heart of our question—"How show sympathy?"

Cultivating High Ideals

Colossians 3:1-4

Notice the first word of our Scripture lesson—"If." Everything turns on this—"If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things that are above." Unless you have been raised with Christ, you cannot seek the things that are above. You may cultivate high ideals so-called, but not those in this Scripture lesson. They belong to another realm, into which none are admitted save by way of death and resurrection.

In His death Christ became our substitute and our representative. As our substitute, He died for our sins and thereby put them away. As our representative, He died unto sin (Rom. 6:10), that is, He died out to it, to separate us from it and to make an end of its power in our lives. As Christ passed through death into a new resurrection life, so we, united to Him in the union of faith, rise to newness of life. (See Rom. 6:3,4.)

This life has its own ideals, its affections are set on things above, not on things of the earth. It is a hidden life, a life hidden with Christ in God, and it will not be fully manifested until Christ shall be manifested in glory. This is the clear teaching of our Scripture lesson. Many so-called idealists would smile or scoff at this, for the natural man, even though an idealist, receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God. They are foolishness unto him, neither can he know them because they are spiritually discerned. (See I Cor. 2:14.) Nevertheless it remains true that this type of life, this new life in Christ is next to the direct power of God, the mightiest force in the moral and spiritual world.

The recognition of the great facts of our Christian faith and yieldedness to them (Rom. 6:13), is worth vastly more to the church and the world than all the restless chasing after man-made ideals, which is now so fashionable in religious circles. The surge of idealism engendered by the world war has receded, having failed utterly to fulfill the predictions made by its advocates. Mr. Taft recently declared that humanity had returned to the gross and selfish things that occupied it prior to the war. This is perfectly natural. Humanity could not do otherwise for it is essentially selfish and self-centered. To accept God's estimate of humanity as fallen and corrupt is apparently as hard for man to do as it is for a camel to go through the eye of a needle. The divine estimate of humanity is not at all flattering. Howbeit, it is true. God knows what we are, He knows what we might have been, and on the difference between the two, He bases His testimony concerning us. This testimony is not believed, so instead of humiliation and confession of sin, there is a spirit of boastfulness which loves to talk about ideals and reconstruction.

The true child of God does not hear the Master's voice in all this boastful talk. His ideals lie in another direction. He abides in the vine and brings forth fruit in which God is glorified.

Religion Pays
I Corinthians 3:18-23

A proviso needs to be added to this topic. Religion pays—on certain conditions.

First, it must be the true religion—the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ, a divinely revealed religion, not a system of philosophy or thought, even though it be called "new thought." If a false religion grips the life, it does not pay. It impoverishes, defiles and destroys. This is not only true of the gross forms of religion, such as prevail in the lands where Christ is not known, but in the more refined forms of religion, such as exist in evangelized or so-called Christian lands. It is a very serious thing to be misled in religious matters. Only the truth sets free. Error and falsity bind and hinder, dwarf and destroy. Christ Himself is the Truth, He alone sets free. Ideas do not save, God saves and He saves those only who accept His Son to be their personal Saviour from sin.

Again religion pays if we go in for it wholeheartedly. Mr. Moody once said that many people had just enough religion to make them miserable. Observation and experience verify this. Of all the people that came out of Egypt, only two entered the promised land—Joshua and Caleb. They entered because they had "another spirit" and "wholly followed the Lord their God."

A certain man had a wife who was very fond of painting. For a long time the husband could never see any beauty in her paintings; they all looked like a daub to him. One day his eyes troubled him and he went to see an oculist. The man looked in amazement at him and said, "You have what we call a short eye and a long eye, and that makes everything blur." He gave him some glasses that just fitted him and enabled him to see clearly. Then the man understood why it was that his wife was so carried away with art, and he went and built an art gallery and filled it full of beautiful things because everything looked so different after he had his eyes straightened. There are lots of people who have a long eye and a short eye, and they make miserable work of their Christian life. They keep one eye on the eternal city and the other eye on the plains of Sodom, and like Lot of old-time, they have a miserable experience and lose out in the end.

A truly religious life lived in the spirit of devotion and wholeheartedness is of the utmost profit, having promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come.

Will a Man Rob God?
Malachi 3:7-12

The answer to this question as given in the Bible is, "Yes, a man will rob God, sometimes consciously, sometimes unknowingly." The results are always disastrous. "There is that withholdeth more than is meet and it tendeth to poverty"—poverty of soul and spirit as well as material things.

The cultivation of generous giving opens the life to heaven's blessing and enlarges the capacity to receive, while stinginess closes the avenues of our being to the divine blessing and lowers the tone and quality of the life.

In a tract recently issued by The Bible Institute Colportage Association, 822 No. LaSalle Street, Chicago, entitled, "Do you Steal God's Basket?" the matter of giving is presented in this way:

"In the first lesson in giving, the Old Testament emphasizes the tithe. The New Testament does not abrogate or repeal the law of the tithe. Neither does it emphasize nor insist upon it. It treats it as a teacher treats a lesson which has been learned; namely, makes it the basis of the next lesson. The tithe is a foundation stone in the temple of benevolence, but it is only a foundation stone. It is the first great lesson in giving, and contains truth essential to the learning of the others which follow, but it is not an ultimate principle nor one in which the church may rest permanently.

"What you may call the second lesson is given in 1 Corinthians 16:2, where the apostle enjoins the Corinthians to lay by them in store upon the first day of the week, according as God hath prospered them. Let your gifts to the Kingdom be commensurate with God's gifts to you. This is a larger principle than the tithe; also, it is more equitable, for the gift of the tithe may mean very little to a rich man, and demand great self-denial from a poor one.

"It would yield a larger return than the tithe, for the gifts of God to the church of today are most abundant. The church is rich, and to give to God's work in keeping with His gifts to us would be to fill His treasury at once.

"The third lesson is made in 2 Corinthians 8:1-11, where the apostle Paul exhorts the Corinthians to abound in the grace of liberality, urging them by the example of the poor Macedonians who out of their deep poverty gave 'to their power and beyond their power,' all they were able to give, yea, more than they were able. All that was involved in the two previous lessons is enclosed in this, and the doctrine of heroic giving is introduced."

Leaders of this meeting would do well to get a good supply of the above tract and distribute them wisely among the members of the society and the church. (3 cents each; dozen 30 cents.)

Being a Good Comrade
Proverbs 27:9, 10, 17-19

Two boys were running along the sidewalk, one a sturdy lad of about twelve years, the other younger, smaller, and weaker. The stronger boy easily kept ahead of the other. Turning around to see if the other was following, he shouted in a tone of contempt, "Why don't you come faster, why don't you keep up?" "Why don't you help me a bit?" the other replied. This is a picture of life as it is, the actual rather than the ideal. Good comradeship provides the antidote and the remedy.

A good comrade must be considerate, courageous, and Christlike. He must be considerate of others, their limitations and needs, also of their abilities, and possibilities. Nothing in the way of condescension will mark and mar the good comrade. The spirit of companionship and fellowship, a sort of sharing together, will dominate in all his dealings. He must be considerate of the likes and dislikes of others and not assert his own will and way, except when the principle of moral right is involved. Considerateness is a moral quality of great worth and must enter into this matter of good comradeship.

The good comrade must be courageous as well as considerate. He should have convictions concerning moral issues for which he will stand at all costs. To waver here is to lose the opportunity of a good example which is an imperative requisite in a good comrade. He should have religious convictions concerning Christ and the church, from which he will not swerve. Observance of the Lord's Day and reverence for the name of the Lord and the house of prayer should be pronounced qualities in his religious life and faith. The maintenance of these characteristics demands courage.

In order to be considerate and courageous, he must be Christlike, and that involves knowledge of and fellowship with Christ; the almighty Saviour and companion of all that trust in Him. We become like those with whom we associate, therefore the necessity of Bible study and prayer in order to an ever-growing knowledge of, and association with, Christ. This is the fundamental thing if we would fulfill the obligations of a good comrade.

The "Big Brother Movement" and all other efforts to develop interest in young lives are of estimable value in our present-day life when dominated by considerateness, courage, and Christlikeness.

THE HOLY SPIRIT'S WITNESS TO THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST

"There will be no dark valley when Jesus comes"

"Face to face shall I behold Him"

"Will Jesus find us watching?"

"We'll work till Jesus comes."

Is not the return of Christ one of the truths of the Bible as surely prophesied as the first advent? If the pulpits of Christendom should flame with this truth, would not the fire spread as it did after Pentecost?

Should not all join in prayer with Paul, saying, "May the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ"? How sad that many Christian people deny both blessings in the above prayer; fulness of grace now and fulness of glory coming. They do not believe the Almighty Father, of whom Paul says, "Faithful is he that calleth you who also will do it."

O that the church of the living God might awaken to her need of embracing both these great truths! Paul did not say, "Love the coming of death, or be preserved blameless unto the coming of death, your enemy," "but unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Practical and Perplexing Questions

Answered by the Editors

CHRIST'S RETURN

Question: How can you hold the imminency of Christ's return when so many things appear to be predicted as occurring prior to His return, such as the regathering of Israel and the formation of the ten kingdoms?

Answer: This perplexity concerning the imminency of Christ's return and the rapture of the Church would be largely solved by remembering that there are two stages in that return. First, Chirst is to come for His Church at any moment. Some would prefer to say, in any generation (1 Thess. 4:13-18). This is what is meant by the imminency of Christ's return. The second stage is the descent of Christ to the earth with His Church and with the holy angels to execute judgment and establish His millennial kingdom. Nobody knows how long a time will elapse between these two stages, but it will be sufficiently long for the culmination of all of the conditions and movements even now taking place which will make possible the events ascribed to the period which will precede the coming of Christ to the earth in judgment.

THE INTERCHURCH MOVEMENT

Question: What is your attitude toward this movement?

Answer: This movement is disturbing the minds of many, but no concerted opinion has been obtained from the associated editors of this Magazine. So many men of the various denominations are enthusiastically pushing the movement that one is loathe to criticise it. Yet this human effort of "pushing" may point to a lack of divine power back of it. At present undue reliance seems to be placed upon finances and upon worldly methods, and too little reliance upon prayer and God. We cannot but contrast these methods with those employed by the Church in the days of the apostles. Whether one should hold aloof from the movement on account of disapproval of methods is a matter for each individual to decide. We are assured, however, that apart from any strength or weakness of the movement, and whether allied with it or not, the present is an opportune time for every pastor and every church to pray and to work for the evangelization of the world as never before.

THE MARRIAGE RELATION

Question: What is the meaning of "Unequally yoked together" (2 Cor. 6:14)?

Answer: The unequal yoking of domestic animals was forbidden in Old Testament times (Deut. 22:10). The figures suggests the inequality of close or intimate alliances which believers sometimes form with unbelievers. The unbelievers mentioned in the text might be either heathen or unbelieving Jews—any non-Christians. Perhaps the marriage relation comes first to mind. What a burden this so frequently has proved to be! None of the deepest fellowships between husband and wife can exist if one is a devout Christian and the other is not a Christian. There may be affection, even love, but a non-Christian cannot enter into and sympathize with the Christian for he is wanting the basic experience which makes such sympathy possible.

The prohibition is broader than the marriage relationship. It may include business or politics or society. It may be a partner or fellow-worker or friend or mere companion. Such relationships may be turned into opportunities, but more often they have proved hurtful to the Christian and not helpful to the non-Christian. It is best for the Christian to avoid them so far as possible. Indeed, how can one who loves Christ also love one who is an enemy of Christ?

DIVINE HEALING

Question: What does the Bible teach about divine healing?

Answer: Any discussion of this subject, however brief, must recognize the near or remote connection between sickness and sin, either in ourselves or in others. Often we are able to trace sickness to harmful habits of eating or drinking, or to ignorant or foolish habits of dress. In such cases nobody has any right to expect God to work a miracle of healing. Let sin be first put away, whatever it may be, before asking God to heal the body.

Can God heal? We have only to read the New Testament to answer in the affirmative. Does God now heal? Again our answer must be in the affirmative. God's power is unlimited. Many people today are healed in answer to prayer. But should we ask, "Is it God's present method to always heal and to heal without the use of means?" We must answer in the negative. The facts in the case are that many saints of God become sick, and suffer and die although prayer is earnestly made for them. Our conclusion is that in this matter of healing God is sovereign. He has the power to heal, either by the use of means or without their use, and often to the praise of His glory He does so. But in this world of sin, suffering often plays a sanctifying part, and we must often in faith leave our case in the hands of the loving Father, rather than insist, through unbelief, upon divine recovery. It should be said, however, that perhaps too often we have recourse to drugs, rather than to God.

PREDESTINATION

Question: What is the Meaning of predestination, foreordination and election? What is the history of these doctrines?

Answer: Predestination and foreordination are practically the same. "Predestination is that effective exercise of the will of God by which things before determined by Him are brought to pass." "Election is the sovereign act of God in grace whereby certain are chosen from among mankind for Himself."

It would be impossible to enter into any detailed discussion or to give the history of these doctrines. Augustine and Calvin were responsible for developing the doctrine of predestination in its fullest form. As held by many it would be difficult to distinguish it from pure fatalism and so relieve man from all responsibility for his actions. This the Bible itself does not do. Nowhere does it fail to hold man accountable to God for every act and word. In holding the doctrines of predestination and election we should do as Paul does—hold them in relation to God's foreknowledge (Rom. 8:29,30). We all must admit that God's foreknowledge extends to His knowing those who would believe on Jesus Christ. All such are "foreordained to be conformed to the image of his Son." These, when they believed on Christ, proved that they are called, or elected. They are now justified and are to be glorified by God. No doctrine of predestination or election which fails to recognize man's free agency in the matter of salvation can be scriptural. For other references see Ephesians 1:2, 5, 11, 13; 1 Peter 1:2, 20; John 15:9.

THE PRIMACY OF PETER

Question: In what sense are we to understand Matthew 16:18,19; John 20:22,23?

Answer: Matthew 16:18, 19 is a key passage with the Roman Catholics. Peter had just confessed that Jesus was the Christ, the Son of the living God. In response to such an exalted confession Christ gave to Simon a new name: "Thou art Petros; and on this petra will I build my church." The original clearly shows that Peter was not the rock upon whom Christ was to build His Church, but that the rock was the truth contained in Peter's confession, namely the supremacy of Jesus as the long expected Christ, the Messiah, the Son of the living God.

Our second consideration is "the keys" which were given to Peter. These are called "the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven," which phrase is practically synonymous with the professing church. It was Peter's part, in the historical development of the church, to open the doors of the church, first to the Jews and Gentiles (Acts 2), later to the Samaritans (Acts 8), and finally to the Gentiles, Cornelius and his friends (Acts 10).

Question: What about the power to bind and to loose?

Answer: Certainly in no absolute sense could Peter forgive or retain sins, for such power belongs only to God. But the right of "declarative absolution" was granted to Peter—the authority to extend forgiveness to all who would repent and believe on the name of Christ. In the use of this power, however, Peter had no primacy over the other apostles, or over any authorized follower of Christ. After His resurrection Christ said to His disciples, "Receive ye the Holy Spirit: whose sins ye forgive, they are forgiven unto them; and whose power sins ye retain, they are retained." Whatever power of absolution Peter possessed was shared by all who proclaimed salvation in the name of Jesus Christ.

THE QUESTION OF CELIBACY

Question: Is bachelorship permissible?

Answer: This question has been raised by a Chinese student of the Bible in connection with the meaning of Matthew 19:12. The question is important for the time is coming when men shall be forbidden to marry (1 Tim. 4:3). Marriage was instituted by God. The family is the unit of society. The question of not marrying grew out of the discussion of divorce which Christ narrowed to the single sin of fornication. When the Jews objected, "It is not expedient [then] to marry," Christ made three exceptions to the law of marriage: (1) Constitutional unfitness for marriage; (2) unfitness because emasculated; (3) voluntary refraining from wedlock for the sake of the kingdom of Heaven. While it is permissible not to marry, there is no law in the Bible requiring celibacy. "Free love" is a growing curse of our day. Such teaching and practice, together with the growing divorce evil, are doing much towards destroying the home and undermining the morals of society.

Y. K., Iloilo, P. I.

Question: Did Paul forbid to marry?

Answer: Paul did not forbid to marry, and for church officials he may even have seemed to require it (1 Tim. 3:2, 12). Paul refers to others (1 Tim. 4:3) who toward the end of the age will forbid to marry—a sign of degenerate days, or days of apostasy, but Paul does not belong to this class.

In First Corinthians, chapter seven, there is some warrant for the encouragement of celibacy (vv. 8,35). To remain unmarried seemed to Paul expedient on account of "the present distress" (v. 26), the unsettled and uncertain conditions in society, and possibly to the persecutions. The general principle was to abide in one's station in all things, for the time was short

(vv. 28-35). While married life has often proved temporarily distracting, yet what would society be without the example and influence of the Christian home? And what would the Church be? For what place equals the Christian home for training children for the service of God?

ELOHIM AND JEHOVAH

Question: How do you explain the different names of God used in the account of creation in Genesis 1 and 2? Are we to distinguish between man as the offspring of God and Adam our supposed first parent?

Answer: These questions grow out of certain unfounded assertions and false interpretations in a booklet on Christian Science. This booklet teaches Genesis 1 and 2 are two separate and contradictory accounts of creation, and that the historian wilfully "changed the name of the Supreme Being from God to that of Lord God." The further statement is made that God created man, and He should not be confused with the Lord God, who was "the supposed Creator of Adam."

With reference to the names of God in the Old Testament, some are primary names and some are compounded. The name Jehovah (Lord) is also used singly and in seven compound names, the first of these being Jehovah-Elohim, or the Lord God of Genesis 2:4, which identifies Jehovah, God of the covenant, with God the Creator. These various names of God, with their varying shades of meaning, all refer to the one triune God. In passing it is well to note that many Old Testament passages which contain the name of Jehovah are quoted and applied to Jesus in the New Testament. For example, Hebrews 1:10: "Thou, Jehovah, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth." This One John tells us is the Son of God.

Returning now to the account of the creation in the first two chapters of Genesis, the differences are best explained by "The law of recurrence," whereby a matter is first mentioned and later taken up in greater detail: for example, in the first chapter of Genesis we have a summary of the account of creation which culminates in the creation of man by Elohim. But in second chapter, going more into details, Jehovah-Elohim is said to have created man (2:8): that is, the second person of the Trinity is here kept in the foreground as having the prominent part in all that pertained to creation, and especially to the creation of man.

The contention that "Man" was created by Elohim and Adam by Jehovah-Elohim seems too absured to discuss. A comparison of 1:27 and 2:8 shows them to be identical.

THE EPWORTH ERA AND THE SECOND COMING

Question: Is the teaching of the Epworth Era on the second coming of Christ correct?

Answer: In the March number of The Epworth Era, in the lesson comments for March 14, upon "Waiting for the Manifestation of the Lord," we have a sample of the plausible but false teaching that is being promulgated by the editors of many of our church papers. The misconceptions of the doctrine of our Lord's personal return seems to be based largely upon the perverted teachings of "Adventists, Russellites, and Dowieites," which teachings have been exposed in the Christian Workers Magazine again and again. Would it not be well for those who attack the doctrine of the second coming of Christ to do so wholly from the biblical point of view?

For the sake of our readers and others who are interested, we shall indicate some of the errors contained in the article sent to us for review. After admitting that the background of the life of the church in New Testament times was the expectation of the speedy coming again of Christ, the editor proceeds to explain this expectation by three causes: The first was the persistence of Jewish views in the early church. The second was the horrible wickedness and political degeneracy of the age. The third was the expected destruction of Jerusalem which the disciples associated with the promise of Jesus' manifestation.

Concerning the Jewish expectation of a coming deliverer, was it not warranted by the announcement of the angel Gabriel to Mary? "And the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end" (Luke 1:32,33). This was certainly Jewish but also Christian. According to the editor of the Epworth Era, the millennial Kingdom was an invention of writers between the Old Testament prophets and the birth of Jesus. But does the editor not know that the earthly Kingdom of Christ is fully portrayed by all the Old Testament prophets and repeatedly referred to by Jesus himself?

As to the expectation of the manifestation of Christ being based upon the moral and political degeneracy of those early times, the truth is that it is connected with the moral conditions of the world at the end of the age rather than at its beginning. It is likened by Christ to the days of Noah and the days of Lot (Luke 17:22-35).

Concerning the connection of the manifestation of Christ with the destruction of Jerusalem in A. D. 70, the coming of Christ in judgment was there typified, but Christ did not then come personally and in visible glory as He promised. It is not true, however, that from that time the views of the church began slowly to change, for the book of Revelation was written long afterwards, and the return of Christ was the dominant hope of the church during the first three centuries.

Eli and His Sons

(May be used with Temperance Applications)

1 Samuel 2:12-17, 27-36; 4:1-18

Golden Text: "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."—Romans 6:23.

I. The Wickedness of Eli and His Sons (2:12-17, 27-36).

1. Eli's Sons (vv. 12-17, 22). The behavior of these sons is in strange contrast to that of the boy Samuel. It must have seemed a hopeless task for him to stem the tide of wickedness. Eli's sons were priests and ministered in the things of the sanctuary, but "knew not the Lord" (v. 12).

(1) Graft (vv. 12-17). This greed was practiced upon the worshipers who brought their sacrifices to the sanctuary according to God's law. God ordained that the priests should have the breasts and shoulders of the animals which were brought to the altar (Ex. 29:27; Lev. 7:31,32). The degenerate sons of Eli were not content with this, but demanded more and even sought to obtain it by force (v. 16). Moreover, they lifted out with a fork certain choice portions while raw and had them roasted. Such behavior on the part of the priests was revolting to the worshipers and resulted in the abhorrence of the Lord's offerings.

(2) Gross licentiousness (v. 22). These wicked priests seduced the women who were employed about the sanctuary. They were so shameless in their practices that they did not even make an effort to conceal them. Ministers who indulge in such shameless practices would not be able to influence men and women to worship God. How often the shameless lives of professing Christian ministers turn people away from the faith! When men corrupt in heart and life minister in holy things all kind of corruption follows. Men serving as pastors who know not the Lord is the secret of the growing apostasy in this age.

2. Eli (vv. 27-36). Eli was seemingly a good man, but he seriously erred before God in that he failed to discipline his sons (vv. 22-24). He knew of their sins and was conscious of his obligation, but his fatherly heart led him into a sentimental indulgence. This must have been a hard duty to perform, but sentiment must not allow justice to miscarry. Eli was content with a weak remonstrance. He was under obligation not merely to speak against it, but should have acted against it. When the wickedness of the sons was resulting in contempt with the service of God's house, the father's love should have been lost in the light and justice of the high priest. These priests should have been driven out even though they were his own sons.

II. Eli and His Sons Punished (4:1-18).

They seemed to think that they could go on in sin without fatal consequences, but they at last came to reap what they had sown. God has appointed a day of judgment (Acts 17:31). There is a harvest time for the sinner as well as for the righteous (Joel 3:13). If one has sown to the wind he shall reap the whirlwind. The Philistines made war upon Israel and defeated them with great slaughter. This judgment had been made known to Eli by a "man of God" (2:27) and Samuel (3:11-18). The Philistines were instruments in the hands of God for this judgment.

1. The Battle with the Philistines (vv. 1-9). The Israelites made an unsuccessful attempt to free themselves from the oppression of the Philistines. Israel was smitten and some 4,000 were slain. This aroused them to inquire as to why the Lord had smitten them and to suggest that the ark be brought from Shiloh as a defense against the enemy. In this they committed two blunders: (1) The elders had no right to handle the ark; that belonged to the priests. Before taking such a step they should have sought the mind of God, and if it were His will that the ark be brought it should have been done by the priests; (2) it was a superstitious use of the ark, which was a symbol of God's presence. They ignorantly assumed that the presence of God inhered in the symbol, forgetting that He is the living God who has a will and purpose of His own, and therefore will not give countenance to that which disagrees with His holy purpose and will. Professing Christians in this age commit a similar error when they substitute the sacraments of the church for the presence of God in the soul. The earth rang out with a great shout when the ark was brought into the camp and the enemy was struck with fear, for they knew what wonders God had wrought in times past. In their desperation they made a stand, calling upon their men to do their best.

2. Israel's Disastrous Defeat (vv. 10-18).

(1) The army was routed and a great slaughter occurred (v. 10); (2) the ark of God, the symbol of the divine presence with its sacred memories, was taken (v. 10); (3) Eli's sons slain (v. 10), the very priests who were the custodians of the ark were slain; (4) death of Eli, the high priest (v. 18). The news of the defeat of the army and the death of his sons was awful, but when he heard that the ark of God was taken he died instantly.

Victory Under Samuel

1 Samuel 7:2-14

Golden Text: "Prepare your hearts unto the Lord and serve him."—1 Samuel 7:3.

In our last lesson we saw Israel's overwhelming defeat and the capture of the ark by the Philistines. While they triumphed over Israel, they did not triumph over Israel's God. Through the presence of the ark God was working among the Philistines. Though God must punish His people He will make known His power among the nations.

1. The Ark at Ashdod (5:1-6). It was placed in the heathen temple alongside of Dagon, with the expectation that the ark would be destroyed, showing that Dagon was mightier than God, but Dagon was humiliated and broken. Besides this the people were afflicted with emerods, or hemorrhoids, showing the hand of the living God upon them in judgment.

2. The Ark at Gath (5:7-9). Here immediately the same dreadful disease broke out that had afflicted the Ashdodites, accompanied with great mortality. These people did not wait for counsel as to what to do, but carried the ark to Ekron.

3. The Ark at Ekron (5:10-12). At Ekron the destruction was still more awful. Many were slain and the rest were smitten with emerods so that their cry went up to heaven. The contest was decisively in favor of God. Upon the advice of the lords of the Philistines the ark was returned to Israel. This was done in such a way as to show conclusively that the hand of God was upon them in judgment. In order that they might know the facts five lords of the Philistines followed the ark on its journey to see the outcome.

I. Samuel Calls Israel to Repentance (7:2-4).

Some twenty years have now elapsed since Israel was humiliated by the Philistines, during which time Israel "lamented after the Lord." We know not why Samuel has not been heard from through all these years, although he continued to exercise the prophetic office during this time, but is now appointed to the office of judge, also. He asked the people to turn to the Lord with all their hearts, the proof of which would be:

1. To Put Away Their Idolatrous Worship. This was really gross licentiousness under the guise of religion. It is thought by some that Baal and Ashtaroth symbolized the male and female powers of reproduction.

2. To Direct Their Hearts unto the Lord and Serve Him Only. He assures them that deliverance would come as soon as this was sincerely complied with.

II. Israel Assembled at Mizpeh (vv. 5, 6).

This was for the purpose of confessing their sins.

1. They Poured Water before the Lord. This symbolized their need of cleansing and the pouring out of their hearts in penitence before the Lord.

2. They Fasted and Publicly Confessed their Sins. It is not enough that one feel sorry for sin; public confession must be made, for "with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; but with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."

III. The Philistines Attack Israel (v. 7).

The assembly of Israel at Mizpeh alarmed the Philistines. They interpreted the gathering as a preparation to attack them, so they thought to frustrate Israel's attack upon them by attacking them first; or perhaps they recognized that the return of the people to the Lord meant a return to power and decided to attack them while unprepared.

IV. The Intercession of Samuel (vv. 8, 9).

The Israelites urged Samuel to pray to God for them. Instead of trusting to the ark for deliverance they now looked to God. Samuel accompanied his intercession with a burnt offering, showing that he looked for acceptance in the sacrifice of another, even Christ, through whose offering a way of access was opened unto God.

V. The Victory Over the Philistines (vv. 10, 11).

This was the result of God's interposition. "The Lord thundered with a great thunder on that day and discomfited them." The men of Israel followed up this advantage to such complete victory that the Philistines did not come back to power during the days of Samuel. The Lord will fight our battles if we put our trust in Him; no enemy can stand before the Almighty.

VI. A Memorial of Deliverance (vv. 12-14).

Samuel set up a stone between Mizpeh and Shen and called it Ebenezer, which means "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." Since God has interposed in our behalf and wrought deliverance for us, it is proper that a memorial be set up which will commemorate it. The perpetual memorial of Christ's victory over our enemy, the devil, is the bread and the cup—"For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come" (1 Cor. 11:26).

Israel's First King

1 Samuel 9:15-10:24

Golden Text: "Only fear the Lord, and serve him in truth with all your heart."—1 Samuel 12:24.

The period of Judges ended with Samuel's administration. This lesson shows us the transition from the rule by the Judges to the monarchy. In order for a comprehensive view of the transition it will be well to make a survey of chapters eight to eleven.

I. The People Demand a King (8:1-9).

1. Their Reasons for This Demand. (1) Samuel was incapacitated by old age; (2) the unfaithfulness of his sons whom he had appointed as his successors. In this Samuel committed a great blunder, for the office of Judge was not hereditary. It was but a very short step from hereditary judgeship to that of a king. (3) The desire to be like other nations. The surrounding nations had a king as leader. They wanted a king who would go out and fight their battles. (See v. 20). The desire to be like others causes many to depart from the Lord. Instead of doing as the nations did Israel should have induced the nations to look directly to God for help and guidance. God's call is unto separation (2 Cor. 6:14-18).

2. Samuel's Behavior Under This Trial (vv. 6-9). He took the matter to the Lord in prayer. Even though Samuel's blunders in part brought on this trouble he did the wise thing in taking it to the Lord in prayer. The Lord comforted him by assuring him that this rejection was not merely his rejection, but the rejection of the kingship of God.

God granted them their foolish request. Though displeased with their action He granted their request, knowing that the best way to deal with them was to allow them to be filled with their own devices. Experience is the only school in which fools will learn, but it is a very expensive school.

II. Samuel Tells of the Manner of the Kings (vv. 10-18).

He shows them that the king will be very exacting and arbitrary in his dealing with them.

1. He will take their sons and make them to serve in the army and do all kinds of hard work on his farm and in his house. He will make slaves of their daughters, also.

2. He will take their lands, even those inherited from their fathers, and give them to his favorite officers and servants. Not content with that he will take the tenth part of the produce that remains and give to them. Any servant or animal particularly attractive would appeal to his fancy and would be appropriated by him. The history of Israel and Judah shows how completely this was fulfilled.

III. Samuel's Protest Disregarded by the People (vv. 19-22).

Having made up their minds they deliberately shut their eyes to the truth and rushed madly into the experiment. Men today just as deliberately are turning from God's King, going after the lusts of their own hearts, but God makes the wrath of men to praise Him. Though they acted freely and from a wrong motive God turned it to good.

IV. The King Providentially Pointed Out (9:1-10:16).

Saul was sent by his father to search for the asses that had wandered away. This was quite natural. While Saul and his father were acting freely in this matter, at the same time God's sovereign purpose was being carried out. Although difficult to understand, God carries forth His sovereign purpose without interfering with man's freedom. History furnishes us with many examples by which the destinies of men and nations have been changed. The flight of birds directed Columbus to the southwest, resulting in the peopling of the south by the Latin race, leaving North America to be peopled by a liberty loving people whose influence changed the history of the world. The storm at sea which destroyed the Spanish Armada has changed the destiny of England. Saul's pursuit of his father's asses secured for him a kingdom.

V. The King Chosen at Mizpeh (10:17-27).

The Lord had already pointed out to Samuel who should be king and Saul had been anointed. Let us observe:

1. Why Saul Was Chosen. If they would have a king the Lord would give them the one best suited to fill the place. He was from Benjamin, a small tribe, which would prevent undue rivalry between Ephraim and Judah, the leading tribes of Israel. He was also chosen because of his personal fitness (v. 24). He had the natural qualifications for his work, namely, self-control, modesty, and a military instinct.

2. How Saul Was Chosen. The method was by lot. Samuel called them together before the Lord, and before the lot was cast he again remonstrated with them against such action. He showed them the base ingratitude of their rejection of such a God and King who had done so much for them, and gave them a chance to forego their rash demand. He pointed out to them God's goodness, (1) God brought them out of Egypt, the land of darkness and death, out of the hands of those who had most cruelly treated them; (2) "out of the kingdoms that oppress you"; (3) "saveth you out of all your calamities and your distresses."

3. How the King Was Received by the People. Saul knew that the Lord had chosen him, but through modesty and fear he shrank from the responsibility. By inquiry of the Lord his hiding place was made known. When he was brought forth Samuel presented him to the people, assuring them that Saul was the Lord's choice. Some were enthusiastic in their reception and shouted "God save the king!"; others mocked and refused him allegiance.

VI. The King Confirmed at Gilgal (Chap. 11).

Soon after the election at Mizpeh the Ammonites made a desperate demand upon the men of Jabesh-gilead. Saul hearing of it hastily summoned the tribes together for war and won a remarkable victory. As he thus proved his ability the people wished to punish the sons of Belial, but Saul forbade them. Samuel took advantage of this auspicious situation and called all people together at Gilgal where they formally crowned him their king.

Jonathan and His Armorbearer

1 Samuel 14:1-46

Golden Text: "Be strong and of a good courage."—Joshua 1:6.

(Those who prefer may use the Whitsunday lesson—Acts 2:1-12, 37-41.)

Golden Text: "For the promise is unto you and your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."—Acts 2:39.

I. Israel's Reduced Condition (vv. 1-3).

The Philistine oppression had become so terrible that the king had only about 600 men, and they were completely disarmed, except that Saul and Jonathan had each a sword and spear. Lest the Israelites should make unto themselves swords and spears the Philistines took from them their smiths; they only left them a file to sharpen their instruments of husbandry. This left them under the necessity of going to the Philistines to have their tools sharpened. Saul himself was in hiding. Because he had presumptuously intruded into the priest's office, God rejected him. Had he been a man of faith and obedience he would have waited for Samuel. While in this desperate condition God moved Jonathan to go against the Philistines. He evidently knew that God had deserted his father and that if Israel would be free some one would have to make the adventure in the name of God.

II. Description of the Passageway Between Israel and the Philistines (vv. 4, 5).

Over against the way which Jonathan and his armorbearer had to traverse, on either side lay sharp rocks called Bozez and Seneh. The opposing camps were probably three miles apart. It required great effort to scale the cliff. The feat of Jonathan and his armorbearer was one of the most daring ever attempted. It can only be accounted for by the fact that the Spirit of God moved him.

III. Jonathan's Resolution to Go Against the Philistines (vv. 6-10).

1. Jonathan Summons to the Young Man (v. 6). Here the thought of verse one is resumed, verses two to five being parenthetical.

Jonathan did not doubt but that the Lord was leading him. He recognized his covenant relationship with God, and therefore his claim upon Him as against the uncircumcised Philistines, asserting that "there is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few." The claim upon God and the testimony concerning God is for all believers in all times. God is all-powerful, so with Him numbers cut no figure. Whatever He wills for us He can do. One with God is a majority. One going out in the energy of the living God shall chase a thousand and two shall put ten thousand to flight (Deut. 32:30).

2. The Noble Response of His Armorbearer (v. 7). He was actuated by the same faith and courage as Jonathan and entered heartily into the undertaking. When two agree together as touching anything in the name of Christ it shall be done (Matt. 18:19, 20).

3. Watching for the Will of God (vv. 8-10). Doubtless the same Spirit who had moved Jonathan to go had instructed him to watch for the divine leading. The sign that God would deliver the Philistines into their hands was the invitation for Jonathan and his companion to come up to the Philistines. They did not go forward until the sign of divine leading was given. The walk by faith means that we stand still at times to ascertain the will of God, but it also means that we take the steps as indicated. The children of Israel came up to the Red Sea before the waters parted, and the feet of the priests bearing the ark of God struck the waters of Jordan before they gave way.

IV. Jonathan's Marvelous Victory (vv. 11-16).

Being assured of the divine leading, Jonathan with his armorbearer sprang forward saying that the Lord had delivered the enemy into the hands of Israel. He did not say "into our hands," but "into the hands of Israel." This is a fine touch of humility; it shows that it was zeal for God, not selfish ambition that impelled him to go forth. God interposed by a great earthquake, causing consternation among the Philistines, moving them to destroy each other. The Philistines were defeated in such a way as to show both them and Israel that God had wrought among them in a wonderful way. May Jonathan's example show us that the need and the opportunity of the hour is God's call, and may we with his faith and enthusiasm go forth in God's name to victory!

V. Saul's Foolish Behavior (vv. 17-46).

1. His Carnal Zeal (vv. 17-23). After the Lord had given the victory at the hands of Jonathan, Saul called for the ark of God to be brought, after which he went forth in pursuit of the enemy who had already been routed.

2. His Foolish Obligation Imposed (vv. 24-30). It was that a curse would be upon anyone of his soldiers who should stop to eat on that day. Fasting is proper at times, but it was the height of folly to demand strenuous service of his soldiers without the necessary nourishment.

3. His Determination to Kill Jonathan.

Jonathan, not having heard this rash oath, partook of the honey as he passed through the woods and was greatly refreshed. When this was reported to Saul he was about to take the life of his own son, who had so gloriously wrought in the deliverance of his people.

Saul's Failure

1 Samuel 15

Golden Text: "For thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, and the Lord hath rejected thee."—1 Samuel 15:26.

This is one of the saddest pictures in Bible history. No one has had a brighter prospect before him than Saul, yet no one has made a greater failure. He possessed strong natural gifts, the qualities of a great king. He had a fine physique, which greatly favors one's success in life, other things being equal. He had the benefit of Samuel's advice and godly life which was of inestimable value. We owe much to the advice and influence of godly parents, teachers, and friends; our responsibilities are measured by them.

I. The Command to Saul (vv. 1-3).

He is commanded to utterly exterminate the Amalekites, leaving neither people nor booty. The reason assigned is their evil treatment of Israel as they came up out of Egypt (Ex. 17:8; Deut. 25:17). This command may seem cruel, but we must remember that it was given by the Lord who has the right to kill or to make alive. The wickedness of this people was very great. Their judgment was only such as their sin deserved. It was not Israel's act, but God's, Israel only being the sword in His hand. God is just as well as love. His love should not be emphasized at the expense of His justice. Those who sin shall suffer the just punishment which shall sooner or later fall upon the wicked. All acts of injustice done to God's people He receives as done to Himself.

II. The Disobedience of Saul (vv. 4-9).

He renders a partial obedience; the commandment is carried out only in part. Agag, the king, is spared and the best of the goods is appropriated. The purpose of God's thoroughgoing command was to show that it was a warfare of judgment for wickedness, not for greed. Saul only obeyed as far as his inclinations led him. The obedience to God which is limited by the heart's inclination is the worst kind of disobedience. Half-hearted obedience God will not accept.

III. Saul Rebuked by Samuel (vv. 10-25).

1. Samuel Cried to God (v. 11). The news of this disgraceful evil greatly disturbed Samuel, causing him to cry to the Lord all night. In the morning he met Saul at Gilgal.

2. Saul's Hypocritical Pretense (vv. 15, 16). Saul met Samuel with the pretense of having executed the Lord's commandment. This pretense carried a lie upon its face. Those who are the most willing to speak of their obedience are the ones who are conscious of disobedience, and their consciences trouble them over it. Though disturbed by a guilty conscience he tried to conciliate Samuel the prophet, but the very bleating of the sheep and the lowing of the herds betrayed him. Thus betrayed he tried to shift the blame upon the people (v. 15). This is always the way. It matters not what the crime may be, some excuse can be made for it. He then played the hypocrite by trying to make it pass as an act of devotion to God (v. 15). He should have known that things gained by disobedience to God are an abomination to Him. Offerings to God of ill-gotten gains can never atone for sins of disobedience and neglect. This is a lesson which thousands of men in this generation need to learn. Let all who may be tempted this way know that it is hypocrisy and sacrilege. Such religion is unreal. Saul tried to justify himself by pleading that he was keeping the spirit of the commandment, while not literally carrying out its requirements. He has many successors today who do not believe in the literal interpretation and practice of God's Word.

3. Samuel Rehearses before Saul God's Dealing with Him (vv. 17-23).

Samuel met his hypocrisy by bringing him to squarely face his sin. The best way to deal with sinners is to bring them face to face with God and their sins. God is more concerned in having His subjects render obedience unto His commandments than He is for them to offer unto Him sacrifices. This was not Saul's first act of disobedience. Between his presumptuous act of offering sacrifices (Chaps. 13:14) and this one, most likely there were many acts of rebellion. Such acts when the heart is in rebellion are as hateful to God as witchcraft and idolatry.

IV. The Judgment upon Saul (vv. 26-35).

For the presumptuous offering of sacrifice the dynasty passed from Saul's house, and for this act of flagrant disobedience the kingdom is rent from him. It is taken from Saul and given to his neighbor who is better than he. He confessed his sin and begged Samuel to still honor him before the elders of the people. This further shows his self-centered life. His honor was more to him than the glory of God. Samuel forsook him and left him alone to suffer in disgrace. He refused to punish the Amalekites and was finally shamefully treated by an Amalekite (2 Sam. 1:10). Unless we slay our enemies they will slay us. Judgment shall come sooner or later upon those who sin, for the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord (Rom. 6:23).

Sunday-school News, Methods, Appliances and Questions

By Hugh Cork

SUNDAY-SCHOOL NOTES AND NEWS

The latest reports indicate there are over 300,000 Sunday-schools in the world, with nearly 2,800,000 teachers and officers, and over 28,000,000 pupils.

The importance of the teaching ministry in the work of the church is indicated by the fact that "to teach" or its equivalent, is used over three hundred times in the Scriptures, while important as preaching is, it is named in only one hundred fifty passages.

"Jesus Christ does not want to be our helper; He wants to be our life. He does not want us to work for Him; He wants us to let Him do His work through us, using us as we use a pencil to write with."

Either be loyal to the denomination of which your church is a part or get into a church, the denomination of which you can be loyal to. This does not mean you approve of everything attempted, but it does mean you will be loyal to your denomination's activities and will strive to measure up to her standards and use her literature, entering kindly but earnest protests in writing whenever anything comes up to which you cannot give your approval.

I once sat in a rich man's office in the absence of his man who received those who came to solicit contributions. In half a day I recorded enough requests which if they were granted would make a big hole in a half million dollars. I went back to my regular work from that experience with a new beautitude, "Blessed are the poor for they have escaped the heavy burdens of the rich."

"Remember that Christ Himself is better than any of His blessings; better than the power, or the victory, or the service that He grants. God creates electricity that drives cars and carries messages and lights our houses; but God is better than electricity. Christ creates spiritual power; but Christ is better than that power."

Here is a suggestion to enable the church to assist the public school in training the young. In one locality where a church is near a large public school, several pastors in the neighborhood united to hold a twenty-minute devotional service the five school days a week at 8:05 to 8:25 A. M. in that church, for the school children, attendance, of course, being voluntary, but announced in each room of the school. The pastors took turns in leading the service, which comprised two hymns, two short prayers, and a few verses of Scripture with brief comments. The teachers were unanimous in testifying of the good influence felt from it throughout the day.

THE SCHOOL OF PRACTICE

Pedagogy informs us that the learning process to be complete must include in the learner two actions—impression and expression. "Each impression must be followed by a corresponding expression or the lesson is a failure." To make the former clear and abiding the latter is necessary. This is not only true as to mental development, but also as to moral and spiritual development and practical living. A truth will never be clearly understood and deeply embedded in the soul until it is translated into a living deed. James had this in mind when he said, "Faith without works is dead." How few teachers understand this important fact!

The teacher's hour in the Sunday-school is the "School of Theory" where proper impressions and right impulses are started, but to make them effective in right living the six days between the Sundays should be regarded as the "School of Practice" where the truth taught becomes more clear and takes its place in self-consciousness for guidance in conduct, as these abstract truths are interpreted in concrete deeds.

Therefore whatever the age of the class or the truths presented, the lesson should always close with definite assignment of applications of the truths to be used in the "School of Practice" during the next seven days, and reported upon at the beginning of the lesson the following Sunday. "We learn by doing, and by doing knowledge grows." "He that doeth my will shall know of the doctrine."

TEACHING'S FIRST LAW AND SEVEN OF ITS RULES

"Truth must be taught by one who knows it."

To enforce this law the following seven rules are made:

1. Each lesson must be prepared by fresh study.
2. Study the lesson till you get it and then keep on studying it till it gets you.
3. Study the lesson till the thoughts take shape in familiar language, keeping in mind that the language is simply the vehicle of the thought.
4. Find the natural order and connection of the several facts and truths of the lesson.
5. Seek the relation of the lesson to the lives and duties of the learners.

6. Begin the study of the lesson a week in advance of its teaching, so you can live a little of it each day.

7. Use helps, but turn more often to the Holy Spirit who wrote it and is here to explain it.

If these seven rules are followed, the teacher who follows them will know the truth when he gets up to teach it, and so will obey the law.

"SAFE IN THE ARMS OF JESUS"

The author of this beautiful gospel hymn, Fanny Crosby, was made blind when she was six weeks old, by the carelessness of a physician who treated her for a slight inflammation of the eyes. She was converted very early in life and says that ever after she never had one regret that she could not use her eyes, for she said, "I am thus able to see things I never would have discovered if like most folks my time and attention was taken up with form, fashion and color." Even at eight years of age this idea was in her mind as she showed the poetry that was in her soul, when she wrote:

"O what a happy soul am I!
  Although I cannot see,
I am resolved that in this world
  Contented I will be:
How many blessings I enjoy
  That other people don't!
To weep and sigh because I'm blind,
  I cannot, and I won't."

In 1844, at twenty-four years of age, she was taken to congress to recite one of her poems in the interest of some pending legislation to benefit the blind. In her audience was John Quincy Adams, James Buchanan, Andrew Johnson, Hannibal Hamlin, Stephen A. Douglass, Rufus Choate, Hamilton Fish, Alexander Stephens, and Jefferson Davis.

It was in 1868 that William Howard Doane came rushing into her study one day saying, "Fanny, I have forty-five minutes before I have to take a train for Cincinnati, and I have just written a melody for which I want you to write some words. Give me fifteen minutes to catch the train, but let me have at least three verses." She was in one of her writing moods and going into her room alone after he had hummed the melody for which he wanted the words, she came out in fifteen minutes with the three verses, as we sing them.

When General Grant's funeral was being conducted in New York, and the bells of the city were tolling his requiem, the band played softly, as the body was sealed in the tomb, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus."

Missionary Department

HOW IT WAS DONE IN THE CAMEROONS

Reference has been made in these pages to the great work of the Presbyterian mission in what was formerly the German Cameroon, West Africa, where perhaps the largest congregation of Christians on the foreign field are assembled in one church, which church by reason of rapid growth has swarmed seven times and still has a membership of 5,000.

We have long desired to know the secret of this unusual success, hence took steps to inquire into the history of the mission and the methods employed which God seems to have blessed in so signal a manner. As a result of our inquiries we received from the treasurer of the mission, Mr. Albert G. Adams, the following narrative which we feel sure God will bless to others as He has to us.

"For many years after the work of the West Africa Mission was established there were very few converts and the motives of many of these were often open to serious question. Though the native helpers were paid very small wages these frequently proved a strong temptation. Very little money was in circulation and it was necessary for the mission to import goods for use in the purchase of local supplies and the payment of helpers. The natives seemed to gain the idea that the mission was there to make things cheap for them.

"In the course of time some of the younger members of the mission came to believe that the whole system was wrong; that they were building on a false foundation; and until such radical changes in policy could be brought about as would compel the native church to recognize its responsibility they could hope for no real success. When the interior of Cameroon was opened up in 1893, by Dr. A. C. Good and his associates, an opportunity was afforded to put this new theory into practice. There, from the very beginning, the natives were taught that there were to be no material benefits obtained in accepting Christianity, and that as the work developed they would be expected to support it. Progress at first was very slow, but in the next few years three stations were established, and the broad foundations of our present success were well laid.

"In 1901 the annual meeting of the mission was held in a time of great discouragement. The work had now been in progress for nearly two generations and during that time more than seventy-five missionaries had laid down their lives for results that were distressingly meager. The Board had never been able to furnish the mission with enough French, Spanish, and German speaking missionaries to conduct the school work as required by the different colonial governments, and it was thought that perhaps a more favorable location for the mission could be found in a British Colony, where English could be taught. The Board opened negotiations with the Basel Society which agreed to take over the work, but before the transfer could be made the next annual meeting of the mission, with a larger number of the missionaries present, reversed the action of the previous year. The Board then agreed to give the mission ten years in which to produce results justifying its existence. Dr. Halsey was sent out to investigate conditions and help the mission adopt plans for the future. He arrived late in 1904, visited all the stations and met the mission in another annual meeting early in 1905. There the new policy of self support was definitely adopted for the whole mission. The representatives of the native churches were called into consultation and told that it was up to them and to the mission to make good. They were asked to assume one-tenth of the cost of their churches during 1905, two-tenths in 1906, three-tenths in 1907, and so on, that by the end of the ten years' trial they might reach self-support. They cheerfully agreed to do their best, though doubtful of the result, since even one-tenth was so much more than they had ever given before, and they voluntarily agreed to a reduction of the scale of wages that would make self-support more nearly possible. The missionaries went with them to the various parts of the mission and helped them take a first every-member canvass. The results not only surprised the people but they astonished the missionaries, and humiliated them that they had so far underestimated the power of God to accomplish wonders. During the first year the majority of the churches became immediately self-supporting. Within three years practically every church was self-supporting and the ten years' trial was a dead issue, for the work had already turned from failure to success.

"The attendance at the services rapidly increased and gradually the missionaries began to realize that a revival had started up all over the mission, not deliberately planned, but seemingly generated by the increased interest that the people began to take in the work as soon as they began to invest their means in it.

"Outposts were opened up as rapidly as native evangelists could be trained to take care of them. The work was at first greatly handicapped by lack of these native helpers, for in 1904 there were barely twenty available. At the end of 1918 there were 576 at work. The average attendance at the Sabbath services in 1904 was less than 3,000. During 1918 the average was 69,000 every Sunday in the year. The baptized church membership in 1904 was 2,100 with 400 in the catechumen class. By the end of 1918 these figures had increased to 18,000 baptized Christians and 39,000 catechumens, a total of 57,000 enrolled believers, and this number would have been far larger but for the very high standard of Christianity held up before the people. All are kept on rigid trial for at least two years before they are baptized and admitted to the church, and after admission are kept under the same careful discipline. As a result the church rolls are kept clean, the percentage of failures is remarkably small, and there is the greatest reason to hope for the permanence of the work.

"In 1904 the people gave for every purpose in connection with the work of the mission $1,500. In 1918 they gave $36,000, thus having multiplied their gifts 24 times, while the money from the home church barely doubled. The policy of self-support is valued because it has made the enormous increase in the volume of the work possible, but this is the least part of the value, since the liberality of the churches is a very accurate thermometer of its spiritual life, and without exception the best giving churches are the most spiritual churches.

"There have been some other causes for the great success of the mission, besides this policy of self-support. In a very marked degree the personal work of many of the African Christians has aided in the rapid spread of the gospel among the villages. The work has not been subject to so many interruptions from the health failures of the missionaries. The houses were screened and there have been fewer cases of the malignant fever. The term of service was reduced to three years, and the death rate has been almost wiped out.

"The people are supporting their evangelists and teachers; they are paying all other church expenses and the great part of the cost of the school work; they are supporting the medical work, they are building their churches, chapels, school houses and all other buildings in their villages; they are financing the advance of the work in the regions beyond and they stand ready to push that advance just as fast as the home church will furnish missionaries to oversee it.

"The figures given here are already out of date as this is not a finished story—simply a report of progress. The work is going on just as steadily today as it was last year, or five years ago, or ten years ago."

The chief error of the article seems to be that there we are not to expect any future, literal, visible manifestation of Christ in power and glory (Matt. 26:64), but that Christ is now being gradually and constantly manifested in that His saving power is seen more and more in the educational, social, industrial, and political life of society. This sounds well, but even if it were true, it would not do away with a future coming and manifestation in judgment and glory.

THE ASCENSION

Acts 1:1-12

Introduction: Why Jesus did not ascend immediately after the resurrection:

1. That they might know beyond doubt that He was alive.
2. That He might teach them what formerly He could not.
3. To set before them the plan of campaign.

They were to begin at Jerusalem.

1. It is the metropolis of redemption (Micah 4:2).
2. They needed a season of prayer.
3. They were to wait for a special preparation.

He gave them with renewed emphasis the promise of the Spirit.

He disclosed the plan of their work.

1. Begin at Jerusalem. Salvation is of the Jews.
2. Wait for the coming of the Spirit, who would initiate a new order of things.
3. Their only power for work was from God.
4. Witness everywhere. They were responsible not for the conversion, but the evangelization of the world.

Then cometh the end.

1. When? The time is a state secret.
2. How? A real, personal advent.
3. What then? Watch! Work in an expectant spirit. —The Reaper.

THE GIFT OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

"Nevertheless I tell you the truth; it is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you."—John 16:7.

Our Lord here unmistakably teaches that the Holy Spirit would more than compensate for His own bodily absence. This demands careful study, that we may, if possible, see why it is so. A few considerations are noteworthy:

1. The Spirit of God is God's Crowning Gift to Man.

God's new gifts always include what precede, and add something beside. The gift of the Spirit makes the gift of the Word of God more precious by illumining its pages; and Christ more precious, by magnifying and glorifying Him in our eyes, and enabling us to behold and respond to His beauty.

2. The Spirit of God is Himself the Highest Revelation of God.

He comes to dwell within, and in the heart to reveal God. This form of revelation addresses the highest faculties of our spiritual nature, quickening them into exercise, and making us capable of new communion and fellowship with Him (1 Cor. 2:10; Heb. 5:14).

3. The Spirit of God Imparts to the Believer the Divine Nature.

To Him we owe actual sonship by the birth from above (John 3:1-10; 1 Cor. 5:17): "He that is joined to the Lord is one spirit." An indissoluble union is formed between the believer and God. We become His offspring, bearing His likeness.

5. The Spirit of God is the Special Revelation of God's Love.

Hence called the "Spirit of Grace." He comes particularly to woo and win and persuade the sinner to accept gracious offers and respond to divine appeals. Hence the Spirit is never represented as angry, or dealing with us in wrath.

6. The Spirit of God During This Dispensation is in Control in the Church.

This is, in fact, His peculiar dispensation, preparing for the era of the coming kingdom. John Owen suggests that the test of orthodoxy now is the relation of the believer or church to the Holy Spirit. As to "grieving" Him, it implies hindering His holy offices and operations. As Spirit of Life, He is to be received and imparted; as Spirit of Light, to be welcomed and reflected: and, as Spirit of Love, if not grieved, He both makes us responsive to God's love and able to love with a like spirit of love.

To hinder Him does not affect the seal He has put on us as God's own; but it does affect our clear consciousness and assurance of sonship.

—A. T. Pierson.

THREE SINS AGAINST THE HOLY SPIRIT

Resisting.	(Acts 7:51). The sinners who stoned Stephen did this.	Sinners.
Grieving.	(Eph. 4:17-30). The sins of commission. If we do, we grieve.	Saints.
Quenching.	(Eph. 5:18.) The sins of omission. If we neglect to do.	Servants.

We may quench the Spirit in another servant.

Be filled, then you will manifest the fruits. Your life then a joy to God, and refreshing to all around. Do not ask for more of the Spirit; let the Spirit have more of you. A broken vessel will always be full if kept under the fountain.

—W. R. Manders.

"ALL NIGHT IN PRAYER"

Luke 6:12

"All night in prayer"—whilst others slept,
Or, heedless, their wild revels kept,
In lonely spots, oppressed with care,
The Saviour spent His nights in prayer.

"All night in prayer"—'tis joy to know
I have such comfort in my woe;
And whilst I watch, His pity share,
Who often spent like hours in prayer.

"All night in prayer"—I love to think
His hand doth mix each cup I drink;
And for my blessing doth prepare
Each night of weariness and prayer.

"All night in prayer"—O Saviour, Christ,
My sins deprived Thy life of rest;
And love for me didst make Thee bear
The sorrows of those nights of prayer.

"All night in prayer"—Soon morn shall come.
A morn whose light shall guide us home;
Its dawn must scatter gloom and care,
And joy shall crown our nights of prayer.

—Elizabeth Annable Needham, in The Christian.

THE UNRETURNING SOLDIER

"Weep sore for him that goeth away: for he shall return no more, nor see his native land."—Jer. 22:10.

Shallum, who went away never to return, is the type, in this one respect, of the brave soldier-boy whose going away had no return.

1. His life was the toll of war. Widowed love and orphaned dependence wept in vain.
2. His eyes never saw again the land which his patriotism rescued or enriched. That is our privilege.
3. But his memory is garlanded with the weeds of sincere mourning and the bays of warm affection.

Marble and Memorial Day keep alive our patriot dead.

THE AARONIC BENEDICTION

"The Lord bless thee, and keep thee; the Lord make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace." Num. 6:24-26.

Rev. Joseph Parker says of this passage: "Here is a benediction that can go all the world over, and can give all the time without being impoverished. Every heart may utter it: it is the speech of God; every letter may conclude with it; every day may begin with it; every night may be sanctified by it. Here is blessing—keeping—shining—the uplifting upon our poor life of all heaven's glad morning. It is the Lord Himself who brings this bar of music from heaven's infinite anthems."—Selected.

EXTEMPORE PREACHING

A cold heart, and pride, and sloth are the only formidable impediments to extempore speaking where there is common sense and common powers of elocution cultivated by a liberal education. . . . If we felt less concern about our own reputation and more of the love of Christ and of souls, we should oftener, I am persuaded, speak with fluency and power. Let your knowledge be accurate and your ideas definite, so that you will know what you do know, and be able, at a moment's warning, to put in requisition your resources; accustom yourself, also, to a careful method; think methodically on all subjects; lay every idea in its place on the right shelf, and tie it up, and label it with others in the right bundle, so that you can go to it in the dark, and lay your hand on it. Every subject like a tree has a root. If you find the root and follow it up, you will find, by an easy and natural process, all the branches, and will be able to pursue a subject in all its ramifications; whereas, if you lay hold and pull by the branches first, it will be like pitching into the top of a tree and cutting your way through brush and thorns to the root.—Lyman Beecher.

THIS IS MY FRIEND

One of the heroes who fell in France had on his person an old English manuscript with the following:

Let me tell you how I made His acquaintance:

I had heard much of Him, but took no heed.

He sent daily gifts and presents, but I never thanked Him.

He often seemed to want my friendship, but I remained cold.

I was homeless and wretched and starving, and in peril every hour, and He offered me shelter and comfort and food and safety. But I was ungrateful still.

At last He crossed my path, and with tears in His eyes He besought me, saying, "Come, and abide with me."

Let me tell you how He treats me now:

He supplies all my needs.

He gives me more than I dare ask.

He anticipates my every need.

He begs me to ask for more.

He never reminds of my past ingratitude.

He never rebukes me for my past follies.

Let me tell you further what I think of Him:

He is as good as He is great.

His love is as ardent as it is true.

He is as lavish of His promises as He is faithful in keeping them.

He is as jealous of my love as He is deserving of it.

I am in all things His debtor, but He bids me call Him Friend.

"A friend who sticketh closer than a brother."

—C. E. Cornell, in Herald of Holiness.

TREASURES IN SHOES

It is reported that a man from Iowa, while in a hotel in Los Angeles, gave his shoes to the porter to shine, and when they came back the wife told her husband that she had tucked $3,600 worth of jewelry in the toe of one shoe for safe-keeping. The porter and bootblack denied seeing the valuables and the police were unable to recover the property. Meanwhile the shine has worn off!

This was a costly shine. How infinitely better to have yielded their lives to Him who purchased them at a great price, and then to have "tucked" the jewelry or its value into those pierced hands "for safe-keeping," then as faithful stewards they would "shine as the stars forever and ever."
—F. H. Senft.

MURDOCH, MOREHOUSE AND MOODY —A GREAT FIRM

A writer in The Life of Faith (London), says it was Harry Morehouse who taught Moody what the love of God is, and this is how he learned it himself:

"A blind man named Murdoch had heard him, and missed the note of tenderness in his address. He asked Morehouse if he would call on him and read the Bible to him, and when he came he got him to read passage after passage about the love of God, until both his eyes and his heart were opened to it.

"We have all heard of Moody and many have heard of Morehouse, but who heard before of Murdoch? There are great surprises awaiting us all at the revelation of Christ."

GETTING THE GOOD WILL OF THE PRISONERS

The sheriff of a Maine town hands to each new prisoner coming under his care the "card" reproduced below:

> MY FRIEND
> For a little while you and I are compelled to live under the same roof, and, in a way, to be in each other's company. You came without an invitation from me. Probably you had no intention that we should meet in this way. During your stay your treatment will depend largely on your behaviour. Probably you have made a mistake, perhaps done wrong. I have done both, most all have. Let us both, the little while we are together, try and do as we would be done by. Should we both do this I am sure we can part with respect for each other. My earnest wish is, that I may be a better man for having known you, and that you may be none the worse for having met me.

The Evangelistic Field

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS

Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 2d of the month preceding date of issue.

"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns, and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work, nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

Emma Paige reports a good meeting in the Federated Church at Newbern, Ia.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray G. Swartzbaugh report a great victory for the Lord at the Third Presbyterian Church, Kansas City, Mo.

Evangelist Bodell has been holding a series of successful meetings in South Dakota, at Madison, Woolsey, Groton, Volga and Flandreau.

Copeland and Grenfell closed a gracious meeting at Ogden, Ia., March 14. One hundred or more were saved and 60 joined various churches.

H. D. Kennedy reports a successful meeting at Petoskey, Mich. He next held a meeting at Clarinda, Ia., all the churches uniting in the campaign.

Rev. Jack Cardiff has just completed a five months series of meetings and after resting a week or two at Anthony, Kan., will re-enter the evangelistic field.

G. A. De Flon reports 125 souls saved and seventy accessions to the church in his meeting at Scotia, Neb. On March 14 he opened a meeting at Grand Island, Neb.

F. J. Thomas closed a three weeks meeting at the Middletown, O., U. B. church. There were 121 professed conversions and about 80 accessions to the church.

After a most successful meeting at Detroit, Mich., with about 200 converts, Dr. H. P. Dunlop and wife report a strong meeting in the Presbyterian church at Moberly, Mo. They will close the season at Sioux City, Ia.

Evangelist R. O. Wine has just closed seven months of meetings throughout Illinois for the Salvation Army. Hundreds of souls were converted in these meetings. Mr. Wine began a summer campaign April 6, in northern Michigan.

The Vom Bruch Party closed a two weeks meeting in the First Baptist Church, Sunbury, Pa., Rev. Charles H. Harrington, pastor, with splendid results. There were eighty-six decisions for Christ. The next meeting was held at Cleveland, O.

The work of the Market Street Mission, Pittsburgh, Pa., during the past six years, has been wonderfully blessed. Gospel services have been held every night since the doors opened in 1914. This work, while it is under the control of the Presbytery of Pittsburgh, is non-sectarian.

Charles H. Gray writes: "Closed a great meeting at Elvaston, Ill., Feb. 22. Wonderful spiritual awakening." His next meeting was a community campaign in Hemingford, Neb., resulting in eighty professions and from there he went to Gordon, Neb.

The Lockett Adair and R. M. Hickman Party conducted union meetings during January and February at Cumby and Point, Tex., with good results. On March 7 they began a union meeting in Gainesville, Tex., and from there they go to Midland, Tex.

R. E. Lucas reports a successful union meeting of the Reformed and Methodist churches at Conesville, Ia. Mr. Lucas preached and also had charge of the singing. The meeting resulted in forty-two reconsecrations and conversions. His next meeting was held at Pana, Ill.

Ham and Ramsay closed a successful meeting in Harriman, Tenn., recently. Hundreds were converted and reclaimed. Mr. Ramsay left at once to prepare for their next meeting at Dayton, O., and Evangelist Ham went to Kingston, Ky., for a five days meeting.

The Annual Missionary Convention of the Christian and Missionary Alliance of the Western District was held in Chicago, Ill., March 28-April 4, ending in a Union Mass Meeting on Easter Sunday afternoon in Orchestra Hall, at which time Paul Rader delivered the annual missionary address.

Clyde Lee and Robert S. Fife report a successful union campaign held in Hooversville, Pa., where nearly 400 responded to the invitation in two weeks. Services were held in the Lutheran church. March 22-April 11 they held a union campaign in Central City, Pa.

The Franklin Evangelistic Party closed a successful meeting in the Baptist Church of Eldora, Ia., April 4, with a goodly number of conversions, and God's people greatly strengthened and revived. A number of family altars were started in homes where there never had been one before.

A three weeks meeting was recently closed at Belmont, Wis., the pastor, Rev. A. E. Edwards, preaching, and C. Alexander Jones in charge of the music. The church was blessed spiritually and souls were saved. Mr. Jones next assisted Dr. Johns of the First M. E. Church, Albion, Mich.

Richard Low writes: "The three weeks meeting at Almena, Kan., closed March 14 with thirty-eight converts, twenty-nine accessions to the church and twenty-seven baptisms. Dr. Harmon of Louisville, Ill., was the evangelist. The interest, attendance and response, were very encouraging."

Edward M. Young spent January at Needles, Calif., in a revival campaign, a union meeting of the Christian and Methodist churches. He reports the interest good from the start, and the results very satisfactory. His next meeting was held in the Tremont Baptist Church of Pasadena, Calif.

Mr. and Mrs. John Imrie report a successful meeting at St. Louis, Mo. The meetings were held in the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church, the pastor, Rev. Whiteside, doing the preaching. There were nearly forty conversions in ten days. Mr. and Mrs. Imrie were in South Dakota in meetings before going to St. Louis.

The Linden-Dixon Evangelistic Party will assist the Salvation Army in Canada, from March 15 to June 1, in their Jubilee Self-Denial Campaign, for which the Dominion quota is $1,000,000. Their headquarters during this period will be 83 King Street, West, Hamilton, Ontario, Canada.

G. E. Vinaroff assisted in a meeting at East Palestine, O., which closed March 7. The pastor of the U. B. church was the evangelist. There were forty-seven souls saved and many reconsecrations. The next meeting was held at Justus, O., which resulted in seventeen confessions and from there Mr. and Mrs. Vinaroff went to Atkinson, Neb., for their April meetings.

Miss Sara C. Palmer recently closed a two weeks campaign with the Y. W. C. A. in Louisville, Ky. Her meetings were well attended and greatly enjoyed in spite of the fact that that they were held during a "flu" epidemic. Many of the people, from the "select folks" who attended her drawing room meetings down to the industrial groups to whom she spoke daily, were blessed, and the prayers of her many friends in Louisville will follow her wherever she goes.

Harry Dixon Loes and Miss Birdie C. Loes, musicians with the Steve Burke Evangelistic Party, assisted in a pre-Easter revival, pending the recovery of their evangelist, who had been ill. The meeting was held in the First Baptist Church, Evansville, Ind. On the Monday night following the close of the revival, Mr. and Miss Loes gave a concert, which was followed by a reception to the new members. They left at once for Golden City, Mo., to rejoin the Steve Burke Party in a union tent meeting there.

Evangelist F. A. Enslow, of Kewanee, Ill., reports the opening of a very promising meeting in the First Methodist Church at Reynoldsville, Pa. One hundred fifty persons were received into the church on confession of faith the second Sunday, the fruit of the first week of the campaign. A successful meeting at Punxsutawney, a nearby city of 12,000 people, preceded this campaign. A meeting in the First Methodist Church at Sharon, Pa., followed the Reynoldsville meeting. Late in April a campaign was inaugurated in the city of Sheboygan Falls, Wis.

Dr. J. L. Campbell, formerly pastor of the First Baptist Church, Vancouver, B. C., landed in New York, March 1, thus completing a missionary and evangelistic tour around the world. He visited mission fields in Japan, Korea, China, Burma and India. He spoke at conferences and addressed student bodies in colleges, theological seminaries and schools. There were revivals in China and in the Judson College in Rangoon, Burma. In all he spoke over 260 times. Dr. Campbell is now making his home at Nyack, N. Y., although at present he is engaged in conducting an evangelistic campaign in Paterson, N. J.

The Rescue Society, located at Old Chinese Theater, 5-7 Doyers Street, New York City, has issued its twenty-sixth annual report for 1919. Thomas J. Noonan is secretary and superintendent. The report is an illustrated folder with many interesting pictures of Chinatown, the midnight mission and typical scenes in the district. The total receipts for the year were $21,092.17.

"It was early in the year 1890 that a band of consecrated men and women, now known as The Rescue Society, began to be engaged in personal work among unfortunate women and depraved men in three evilly-notorious

New York Districts—Five Points, Mulberry Bend and Chinatown. What is now known as Paradise Park was, in those days, one of the worst haunts of crime and vice in the entire city. Personal comfort was willingly sacrificed and personal danger, consequent on both criminal violence and the danger of contagious disease, willingly risked by those whose nocturnal hours were freely given for the cause of Christ and humanity. Devoted workers from the various evangelical churches rallied to the support of the cause and the work of rescue was marked by signal success."

In one year 114,953 persons attended the services; 20,293 requested prayers and 1,416 professed conversion; thousands received food, lodging and clothing. Full information about the work may be obtained by addressing the superintendent, as above.

Lancaster, Pa., March 29, 1920.

To Whom it May Concern:—

The pastors and committeemen of the co-operating churches of Lancaster in the recent Stough Evangelistic Campaign hereby wish to record their observations and express their judgment respecting the events which resulted in Dr. Stough's withdrawal from the city.

If there were no other reasons for taking this step beyond that of sheer justice to a fellow man, we could do nothing less and remain true to the common instincts of the human heart, much less to the principles of Christian brotherhood.

First, as to the events themselves: On the evening of February 7, Saturday, in a sermon intended to set before his hearers the varying moral qualities of mankind and the necessary caution that fact imposes upon Christians in general and upon parents in particular, Dr. Stough made use of a phrase, with absolutely no intention as a reflection on the army nor the service men. This phrase was detached from its setting when the article appeared in the daily paper, and this newspaper statement became the sole basis of attack upon Dr. Stough by the ex-service men. Neither at the time of its utterance nor since, have we discovered one person who attended the Saturday evening service, who found cause for objecting to what Dr. Stough said, or detected, in the least, any intent to cast reflection upon our service men. On the other hand, many who did attend the meeting and heard the sermon in question, have expressed themselves as surprised and shocked that such an interpretation could even have been thought of.

In view of these facts and by way of bearing personal witness to their truth, we stand ready to appear, by committee, before any interested church or group of people, to support the same in detail. In the event of being privileged to render such service to the church at large or to Dr. Stough in person, we wish it further to be known that in doing so our chief preference would be to have present at such a conference representatives from the local post of the American Legion.

Respectfully submitted,
The Stough Evangelistic Campaign,
Rev. Geo. F. Schaum, Chairman.

Attest:
Lloyd B. Hershey, Secretary.

A cure for argument and strife about questions not to edification, is to get hid in God's pavilion. "Thou shalt hide them in the secret of Thy presence from the pride of man; Thou shalt keep them secretly in a pavilion from the strife of tongues" (Ps. 31:20).—The Believer's Pathway.

MISSIONARY WORK AMONGST THE JEWS IN THE HOLY LAND

X. Industrial Missions

Industrial missions have proved their helpfulness to Jewish work, that is, if they are carried on, on the right basis. Naturally, the Orthodox as well as the Reformed, Radical and the Zionistic Jews, will not look kindly on a converted Jew, especially they will not be apt to keep him in employment. Palestine, above all countries, demands something of such a nature. Haifa would be the most suitable place because it is central, a junction and a port; a large center for immigration. Three kinds of work could be established and would pay for itself. (a) A soap factory. Olive-oil and refuse thereof give splendid opportunity for any one establishing a soap factory, and good results are almost secured. (b) Printing and book-binding at Haifa particularly are needed at the present time, and would be remunerative. (c) An olive-wood factory would pay for itself, and a dozen or two converted Jews could easily be employed.

XI. In Conclusion

This is by no means an exhaustive or retrospective view of Palestine and the Holy Land in its relation to missions to the Jews. Personally, I am not at all anxious about adding organized missions, hospitals, industries and large plants, etc., though I believe they are all essential, doing good work and very helpful. The organized church ought to look after all these. What is absolutely needed, is an undaunted Hebrew Christian witness with a clear message, its first business and primary object being to bear testimony to all kinds and classes of peoples, and to make the Jewish colonies the chief aim and object of its testimony. They should always go two by two, if possible. And the second thing which is on my heart is the establishment of a definite Bible school to train men and women for this special and peculiar vocation of being missionaries to the Jews in Palestine, Russia and other parts of the world. These witnesses will bear a "triune testimony" to the Jew, to the Gentile, and to the church of God.

Rev. Watkin R. Roberts has been appointed by the Scripture Gift Mission of London its Superintendent in India. In the Dominican Republic this work is having fine results. The work is needed among American soldiers in the occupied territory in Germany. Contributions may be sent to Robert B. Haines, Jr., 119 So. Fourth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Book Notices

Any book favorably mentioned below may be secured at price named from the Bible Institute Colportage Association, 822 North La Salle Street, Chicago.

The Greatest Thoughts About Jesus Christ, by J. Gilchrist Lawson.

This book purports to be a collection of the greatest thoughts of the greatest men of all ages concerning the deity, supremacy, influence, existence, ministry, atonement, resurrection, offices, symbols, saving power, mediatorship, character, love and second coming of Christ.

It is a valuable book for the Sunday-school teacher, preacher, lecturer, and all who would give recognition to the one real center of the world's best activity.

In Touch With the Throne, by Rev. James Little, D. D.

This is a timely book. If ever there was a time when the Christian needed to use prayer, his invincible weapon of offensive and defensive warfare, it is now. The last years have shown man's utter impotency.

The author not only sets forth the philosophy of prayer, but vitalizes it with the enthusiasm of one who has been in touch with the throne. It is one of the very best books on the subject which has yet appeared.

P. B. F.

The Laughter of God, by Rev. David J. Burrell, D. D.

This volume of sermons by the pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church, of New York, is fully up to his best, and we are able to understand how Dr. Burrell has been able to retain his hold upon his conspicuous congregation for so many years. It is interesting to note that the themes are "catchy," but not "clashy." They are sure to create interest, but not at the expense of principle. Vital things are dealt with rather than superficial. Dr. Burrell wastes no time upon the non-essentials. His themes and his style are popular in the best sense of the word.

The Jewish Title to Asia Minor, by Richard Hayes McCartney

As many of our readers know, the author is a business man as well as a profound student of the Bible. Happily his purse is able to co-operate with his pen in spreading the truth through the world. Copies of this book have been sent gratuitously to educational institutions in England and Scotland, as well as the United States and Canada.

Mr. McCartney is not seeking book notices in the way of endorsement for publication purposes, but we are glad to say, nevertheless, that this volume is a most interesting and useful one, which can be said without fully adopting his views on every question. He has rendered good service in exposing the ignorance of eminent archaeologists, who because of lack of confirmation outside of the Bible, have denied its statements concerning the mighty empire of the Hittites.

Keynote Studies in Keynote Books of the Bible, by C. Alphonso Smith, Ph. D., LL. D., L. H. D.

Written by the head of the department of English in the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md. His approach to the Bible is from a literary viewpoint. But unlike many literatures of our day, his conception of literature is not that of mere form, however perfect, but literature that is moulded by its content. His defense of "The Keynote Method," chapter one, is strong and luminous.

It is refreshing to have a qualified layman say "That the Bible surpasses in the value and potency of its thought-current all other literature does not need to be reaffirmed. I yield to no one in my admiration of the classical literature or of the modern literatures or of the more technical literature of scientific achievement. But in vividness and intensity, in elevating appeal, in the extent of her literary empire, and in the duration of her sovereignty, the Bible takes easy and secure precedence."

The author asserts that the first question to be asked in taking up any book of the Bible for study is, "What does this book say that no other of the sixty-six says or says so well?" This is the author's keynote method, and he applies it to "eight masterpieces of the world's literature:" Genesis, Esther, Job, Hosea, John, Romans, Philippians, and Revelation. The method itself is not new but it comes with new force from one who is evidently well versed in the world's best literature.

DEATH OF MR. JAMES MARTIN GRAY

The death of Dr. Gray's son, Mr. James Martin Gray, on March 26, of pneumonia, after a brief illness, came upon many hearts with the shock of tragedy. For the bereaved family, and especially for Dr. Gray, so sorely bereft the second time within little more than a year, and who, since the death of his wife, made his home with his son, the deepest sympathy is felt by the resident Institute family, and a host of other friends, far and wide, whose lives have been blessed and enriched through his ministry in the class room, the pulpit, or the printed page, and by his true and unflinching witness in these days of apostasy to the fundamentals of the faith. That the God of all comfort shall strengthen him "with might by His Spirit, in the inner man," and in mind and body, is the believing prayer, we doubt not, of a great company of those who love him.

Mr. Gray was born in Newburgh, N. Y., in 1879, where his father was then settled as rector of the Church of the Corner Stone, but the greater part of his life, until coming to Chicago, was spent in Boston, being a graduate of the Boston Latin School, Boston University, and Boston Law School. He was a member of the Illinois bar, and was also admitted to practice in the United States Supreme Court. He was the counsel of the Quaker Oats Company, and served as adviser of several other corporations. He was a member of the Admissions Committee of the University Club, and was well known to and highly respected as a man and a lawyer by a large part of the legal profession of Chicago.

"FOREIGN STUDENTS IN THE UNITED STATES"

Under this heading an editorial in the New York Evening Post of March 15 quotes figures from a recently issued "Directory of Foreign Students in the United States of America" on the distribution of the students in the country's educational institutions. New York State leads, and Illinois comes second with 725. "Of these," says the Evening Post, "forty-seven are Russians entered in the Chicago College of Dental Surgery, and 109, drawn from twenty-seven different countries, are members of The Moody Bible Institute."

Illinois has thirty-seven or more colleges and universities, including the theological institutions. That The Moody Bible Institute ranks so high in the number of foreign students enrolled, with more than fifteen per cent of the total for the state, and from so many different countries, is a testimony to God's blessing upon its world-wide work.

THE MOODY POST OF THE AMERICAN LEGION

Moody Post, No. 562, of the American Legion, has been organized with fifty-seven charter members, men of The Moody Bible Institute who were in service during the war. On receiving their charter, dated March 22, 1920, the following staff officers were elected: Post Commander—Bruce W. Bell, Altoona, Pa.; Vice Commander—J. Alban Berry, Cambridge, O.; Adjutant—Charles B. Pavey, St. Louis Park, Minn.; Finance Officer—Reuben Larson, Minneapolis, Minn.; Chaplain—E. A. Dillard, Columbia, S. C.; Asst. Chaplain—Harry P. Wootan, Forrest Park, Ga.; Post Historian—W. L. Rugg, Chicago, Ill.

The American Legion, a non-secret fraternity of ex-service men, is a national organization with the following purposes, as stated in the Preamble to its Constitution:

For God and Country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes:

To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness.

The Legion has no purposes, policies or activities which are not covered by this Preamble.

As the organization is non-military, non-political, and non-sectarian, it is expected from the standpoint of patriotism that all ex-service men will become identified with it.

Our students and Faculty, feeling that the spirit and work of the Institute is in line with the purposes of the Legion as stated above, and finding that each local post adopts its own constitution and by-laws; and furthermore, knowing there will be many local posts whose activities, particularly along social lines, they will not approve, decided to create an American Legion Post for Moody men, membership in which would make them a part of the national organization, even after they had finished their Institute course.

Doubtless many former students who were in the service would like to be counted in the legion provided they can be true to their conviction of the surrendered Christian life. This newly organized post makes a legion home for all such, who will express their desire in writing, addressing the Adjutant, at the Institute.

A committee of the Faculty helped the young men to frame their local constitution and by-laws.

The men feel that their connection in this way with the national body offers a point of contact with ex-service men that perhaps could not be gained in any other way, and thus will enable them to win many for Christ.

Already it is planned to do aggressive evangelistic work through teams which will be sent to the adjacent camps of Fort Sheridan and Great Lakes. The post officers request prayer that every member may be a good soldier for Jesus Christ.

THE MARIAN B. BRAYMER MEMORIAL FUND

The Institute has received a letter from Mr. W. L. Kimball, attorney and counselor at law, Bradentown, Fla., enclosing a copy of a resolution passed by the Bradentown Society of Christian Endeavor, of which Miss Braymer was for ten years a member.

The resolution reads in part:

"Whereas, Marian B. Braymer, our true friend and fellow endeavorer, born September 28, 1898, departed this life to be with Christ on February 9, 1920, after a short life unusually devoted to the glory of God, and culminating in a calm decision to definitely prepare, at The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, which she entered September 4, 1919, for such further Christian service as she might be called into, and

"Whereas, we desire to manifest our gratitude for the inspiration which her life has been to us, and our wish to perpetuate her seemingly unfinished life plans and purposes,

"Resolved, That this society pledge and devote itself to the creation of a fund of money, to be known as the Marian B. Braymer Memorial Fund, for the purpose of assisting worthy young Christians to attain a proper training for a life of service similar to that sought by our much loved friend, and in such a way as to perpetuate her life purposes and plans.

"That a board of trustees, consisting of three active members of this society, be constituted custodians of said fund, who shall arrange in detail for its creation and maintenance, encourage and receive applications from those desiring the benefits thereof, examine into the qualifications of such persons, and with the approval of the session of the Bradentown Presbyterian Church, make such recommendations to this society with reference to these applications, as said trustees shall seem advisable."

Mr. Kimball stated that several other young people were likely to come to the Institute from Bradentown.

A LETTER FROM COMMANDER MAYO, U. S. N.

Mr. B. F. Wyne, a student of the Day Classes in the Bible Course, teaches a Bible class at the Great Lakes Training Station. He has received a letter from Commander C. B. Mayo, U. S. N., who is chief in command of U. S Naval Stations, which reads as follows:

"My dear Mr. Wyne:—It has been my duty as well as my pleasure, to keep myself informed of the progress of the work of the Bible classes in the Great Lakes Training Station. On a recent visit to the station, I was informed that there were about 56 classes, with a membership of some 2060 men. I believe that this tremendous number of men and the great interest in this work on the station is due almost wholly to the efforts which you gentlemen of Chicago and the neighboring community have so unselfishly made. I know you realize that you are doing a great work, but I sometimes wonder if you know that you are starting a movement which I believe will undoubtedly spread throughout the whole naval service and have a great effect upon the character and morals of the young men of the navy.

"Good character and good morals mean high morale and an increase in the fighting efficiency of the United States navy. Such a condition might well guarantee victory for our forces at sea in some hard fought engagement where every force, both moral and mechanical, would be brought into play.

"As the head of the morale division of the navy, I am writing to express the deep appreciation of the service for the work which you are doing, and to say to you that I know of no more inportant work that can be done for the youth of the country than the inculcation, of proper moral principles during their first formative period upon their entrance to the navy, I have taken steps to guarantee the continuance of this work for the coming year in so far as finances are concerned.

"I am writing a similar letter to the other gentlemen associated with you in this work.

"With best wishes, I remain

"Sincerely yours."

SOUTHERNERS AND HOLLANDERS HOLD PARTIES

The students now in the Institute from the southern states held a party on Monday evening, March 29, to arouse interest in the Southern Prayer Band. A social time was enjoyed, also a program including readings by Miss Carrie Parber, solos by Mrs. Clara M. Yates, and a sermon in negro dialect by Hollis Peyton. A flashlight picture of the group is shown herewith.

With a few exceptions all in this group are students from the states south of Mason and Dixon's line, including Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Teaxs, Arkansas, Kentucky, Alabama, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Kansas and Missouri.

On the same evening the Hollanders of the Day and Evening Classes also held a party, with a program including a song service, a reading by Miss J. Fibma, song by a male quartet, Messrs. A. Van Puffelen, J. De Valois, B. Sprik and A. Schermer; a reading by Mr. Van Puffelen; instrumental duet by Professor and Mrs. Alfred Holzworth; reading by Jacob Blauw; reading, women's quartet, Misses Bertha DeJong, Marie Youngs, Marion DeVries, Henrietta Hofland; a talk by Miss DeVries, and a solo by Miss J. Van Koevering.

Games followed, then refreshments and a devotional talk by Professor Holzworth. A flashlight picture of those present is given herewith.

MRS. HARPER'S VISIT TO THE INSTITUTE

A pleasant event occurred on March 23 when a group of students of the early days of the Institute, living in and near the city, met at the Women's Building to greet Mrs. M. L. Harper, the first matron of the Women's Department, who was visiting the Institute after an absence of ten years. Dinner was served in the Faculty dining room and many interesting reminiscences were recalled of the days dating back to 1889 when this Department was opened. Among other things mentioned was the first dinner planned by Mrs. Harper, at which six were present: Mrs. S. B. Capron, the first superintendent of women; Miss Hurlbert, the principal; Mrs. Harper; Mr. Moody; and the two students who that day composed the entire class.

Reference was made to the report hours then held in the parlor of the Women's Building conducted by Mr. Moody, and by Dr. Torrey in Mr. Moody's absence. The teachers of those early days were discussed, the experiences in the house-to-house visitation upon which Mr. Moody placed such emphasis, the domestic work in the dish room, dining room and elsewhere, and the limited equipment as compared with the present, and other things which are now ancient history. Those present were Mrs. Harper, the guest of honor; Miss Cary, who presided; Mrs. A. F. Gaylord; Miss H. M. Strong, '08; Mrs. Julius Haavind, '01; Mrs. Mary Russell, the present matron; Miss Annie Rosie, '91; Mrs. Gertrude Taylor Ham, '05; the Misses Edith Metcalf, '93; Adah A. Collins, '02; Mary Moore, '93; Agnes Williams, '01; Ora Edmunds, '08; Nina P. Lincoln, '03; and Elizabeth Stalker, '01. Mrs. Harper resides at North East, Pa.

Mrs. M. L. Harper

This group of Day and Evening class students (excepting Prof. and Mrs. Alfred Holzworth) are all Hollanders or of Dutch descent

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT NOTES

During March Rev. George E. Guille taught the Bible at the Floyd Street Presbyterian Church of Lynchburg, Va., and at the Greene Street Presbyterian Church of Augusta, Ga., where he was a former pastor. In April he filled a return engagement with the City Mission, Buffalo, and covered the Harrisburg, Reading, Shippensburg and Lebanon circuit of monthly Bible conferences in Pennsylvania.

Dr. Henry Ostrom conducted a union meeting of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches of Bradentown, Fla., where an automobile accident caused painful though not serious injuries. It appears a racing car struck the automobile occupied by Dr. Ostrom and two others from the rear. The doctor was in the back seat and it is declared he was hurled over the top of an orange tree. This did not deter him from preaching every night, though it was a severe shock to his nervous system.

Dr. William P. White has returned to the Pacific Coast after assisting in a number of conferences on Christian fundamentals, principally in the East and South.

During April Miss Millar filled an engagement with the Macon, Ga., Y. W. C. A. The Rochester Times-Union in its issue of March 16, said of her: "Miss Millar has an international reputation, not as an orator, but as a speaker who has a wonderful power in coming close to her audiences and making them see and feel what she has seen and felt. She paints word pictures that are irresistibly moving, and through which a quaint humor constantly flashes. In the course of her work she has been received twice at the White House; once by President Taft and more recently by President Wilson."

The Rev. William Crowe, pastor of the Idlewild Presbyterian Church of Memphis, Tenn., has written: "Please let me thank you for sending Mrs. Russell. The results of her work have exceeded all expectations. At the final meeting last night 400 women were present." During April Mrs. Russell filled engagements at the Kalamazoo, Mich. Y. W. C. A., and at Baton Rouge, La.

The Rev. Merwin A. Stone conducted the Union Bible Class at the Smithfield Street M. E. Church of Pittsburgh, and gave Bible studies at two services each Sunday under the auspices of the Hope Gospel Mission of Detroit, which marks a change from Thursday night in the Mission premises, to a large hall on Sunday.

Mr. C. E. Putnam conducted a Bible Conference at Fruitland Park, Fla.

Mr. John R. Riebe addressed the morning devotional meeting at the Chicago Central Y. W. C. A. Sunday, March 21, and conducted services at the Madison Street Church of Oak Park, Ill., Sunday, March 28.

ALUMNI INTEREST IN SEATTLE

A letter dated February 24, issued by the officers of the Washington Alumni Association, is reproduced herewith:

"Dear Fellow Student, Greetings:

"You will be interested to know that on Dr. Gray's last visit to the coast there was organized what is known as the Alumni Association, of The Moody Bible Institute.

"As former students of the Institute there should be a way for us to have fellowship together, and this will supply that need by having occasional reunions, which will be a source of joy and strength to us, and we ask your cooperation.

"We are planning to have our first reunion on Tuesday, March 23, in the Y. W. C. A. in this city. We will lunch together, cafeteria style, at 6:00 p. m., followed by program.

"Will you kindly let us know if you are coming (wives and husbands of former students and correspondence students are included)?

"We are glad there are so many of us here in Washington, and look with joy to the coming gathering. Send us at least a post card assuring us of your interest.

"Yours in Christ."

PERSONALIA

H. F. Holbrook, '11, is now pastor of the Broadway Baptist Church, Bay City, Mich.

John Betlem, '17, pastor of Elmwood Avenue Baptist Church, Elmira Heights, N. Y., was ordained March 2, 1920.

Richard Low, '17, sang at the Northwest Kansas Annual Conference, held at Hays, Kan., in March. His address is Alton, Kan., c-o Rev. James Roberts.

J. C. Watt, '14, held evangelistic meetings at Fairfield, Ia., in February, which resulted in over sixty cards being signed.

G. F. Higginbotham, '15, and W. W. Shannon, '15, are holding evangelistic meetings in California. In a letter to Mr. Kirk, Mr. Higginbotham reports many decisions and accessions to the churches and that backsliders have been reclaimed. He asks for continued prayer for their work. The home address of Mr. Shannon is Berwick, Pa., and of Mr. Higginbotham, Red Bluff, Calif.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Linn, '15, report successful meetings at Armstrong, Ia., Englewood and St. John, Kan., Sheridan, Ind., and Oakwood, Okla. During these meetings a number of young people were called to Christian service. The prayers of the Institute are asked for.

George Avery, Jr., '15, conducted the singing at evangelistic services held in March at Katy, Tex. Twenty-five were brought into the church as the result.

G. C. Fisher, '17, is supplying the Presbyterian church of Aniwa, Wis. When he left the Institute he asked God for the hardest place He had, and the Presbytery of Winnebago told him his prayer was answered. Nevertheless, it has proven to be true in the sense that Christ has been with him and his ministry has been blessed in several conversions.

G. C. Cross, '19, is pastor of Franklin Park Baptist Church, East St. Louis, Ill., which was organized in August, 1919, in a rented tent with only twenty-seven members. Since then a church has been built costing $11,000 of which $4,000 has been paid. It was opened March 14 with a revival, which is continuing. There were five baptisms the first night and the membership is now seventy-five. He asks prayer for himself and the meetings.

C. R. Moser, '16, is pastor of an interdenominational church in a rural district near Portland, Ind., which was organized last December at the close of revival meetings which were largely attended and resulted in twenty-six conversions. He reports a marked change in the spirit of the community, and an encouraging attendance at both morning and evening services and the prayer meeting. He expresses his delight in the Magazine and asks for the prayers of the readers.

Word has come that ill health has compelled Mrs. Hulda Danielson Averill, '17, to leave her work at Mahagi Centre, Congo Belge, Africa, for a rest in the mountains. The prayers of Institute friends are requested for her. Address c-o Kacengu Mission Station.

John M. MacInnis, '97, pastor of the South Presbyterian Church, Syracuse, N. Y., was a caller at the Institute in March. Questioned concerning the Billy Sunday converts which united with his church four years ago, Dr. MacInnis replied that of the 346 taken in he had found, on checking over the entire list recently, that there were only nine of them he could not satisfactorily account for.

Mrs. W. J. Campbell writes from Tainingfu, Chihli, China, that her sister, May H. Taggart, '98, went to be with the Lord on March 4. The work there is very heavy, especially since the departure of this valued worker, and prayers are asked on behalf of the station.

On March 7, C. R. Scafe, '00, completed his first year as pastor of the First Church, Tyrone, the largest Presbyterian church in central Pennsylvania. During the year, eighty-nine members were received and progress made in all departments of the work. The date being also the twentieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Scafe, the congregation marked the occasion by a reception the following Tuesday, at which a dinner-set and table linen were presented them.

A sacred concert was given on Good Friday evening at Fullerton Avenue Presbyterian Church by the quartette and chorus choir, under the direction of Professor Foss L. Fellers, who has been for some time organist and director of music.

A reunion of six former students took place during the pre-Easter revival services held in the First Baptist Church, Evansville, Ind. Those present were J. F. Rake, '04, pastor; Mrs. R. S. Coulter, '15, pastor's assistant; Harry Dixon Loes, '15; Birdie Loes, '19; Ada E. DePuy, '15, Evansville Rescue Mission; and Beulah Doerr, '19, pianist, John S. Hamilton Party.

J. C. Williamson, '16, is at McMaster University, Toronto, Ont. and in addition to his studies, has charge of a country church. He writes: "It is an exceedingly difficult and needy community and for eleven months no one had preached in it. I have preached, souls have been saved and we are expecting to build a church this summer."

L. Jack Clark, '17, secretary, in charge of Y. M. C. A., Houston, Tex., sends the report for February of the Newsboys' Club, which shows a gain of 72 new members, an increase in attendance of 647, new Bible classes 4, and a splendid growth in other departments.

Miss Julia A. Astroth has been engaged by the Holliday's Cove (W. Va.) Presbyterian Church to do parish work. This work has started under very favorable auspices and on February 5 she was given a reception by the congregation. Her work will be in the poorer families of the congregation and among foreign-speaking people. The church will soon celebrate its 130th anniversary, being one of the oldest congregations n the upper Ohio River valley. The population has greatly changed, as factories have come into the community.

The student reunion at Berne, Ind., mentioned in the March Magazine, was held in the Mennonite Church shown herewith, in connection with a Bible conference at which Carl A. Montanus, '96, was one of the speakers. Mr. J. F. Lehman, manager of the Mennonite Book Concern, was a student in the first Bible Institute class held by Mr. Moody in the Chicago Avenue church prior to the formal opening of the Institute.

BOOK MISSIONARY WORK

Some "Observations"

The tactful approach of the gentlemanly "book missionary" does not invite rebuff at the door of the urban or village home, but rather guarantees the favorable attention of the resident who is impressed with the dignity and important character of his mission.

Women do well as colporteurs and find access to the homes more readily than men even. Then, too, their hold upon the children seems stronger.

The canvasser with horse and buggy—or auto, may travel fast and reach homes in the countryside not so accessible to one who must proceed on foot. Distances at which homes are located from public libraries also aid the worker in placing books.

Wide-awake lads, with or without bicycles, can readily place good, wholesome books. Boys make active and enthusiastic salesmen, who know the community. Their energies might well be directed in a plan to spread clean reading.

The farmer on the roadside is a good "prospect" for the "book missionary." The entree of the colporteur gives opportunity for a brief rest and personal work by the "agent," opening the way for a heart-to-heart talk on the great issues of life.

The midweek church service, or other meeting of special interest, affords excellent and appropriate opportunity for the sale of sound religious reading.

A book table at religious conventions, Bible conferences, missionary mass meetings, etc., offers a favorable occasion for the sale of the "gospel in print," Bible study aids, Christian biography, handbooks for Christian workers and church leaders.

Evangelistic meetings in tent or tabernacle, hall or church, offer an unusual opportunity for the sale and circulation of gospel literature. Books may by this means be placed in the hands of those who are to be directly benefited and without which might not obtain the needed help.

EFFECTIVE MESSENGERS

Tracts may be dropped into a letterbox, or in at an open door or window—may be left in the house, the shop, the waiting-room, the railway car, the cab, between the leaves of books, under a sheltering ledge, in a hole in the wall, on a garden seat, in a basket, a hat, a pocket—anywhere in fact, where they are likely to be found.

* * *

Two eminent missionaries of the Cross, Rev. J. Hudson Taylor and the noble Frenchman, M. Coillard, both entered into light and liberty through reading a gospel tract.

A Message for the Times

A twenty page monthly Christian magazine, entitled VIDERE, is devoted to the Live Issues of the present time. Premillennial truth presented. Interesting editorials on the times in which we are living. The signs of the return of Christ discussed. Articles in which Spiritualism and other errors are reviewed in the light of Holy Scripture.

A SPECIALIZED FIELD.—There are many good periodicals issued, but this magazine occupies a unique field. Its main theme is the second coming of our Lord and the coming conflict between Christ and Antichrist. In the belief of the editor, the present social conflict and unrest is preparing the way for the manifestation of the Man of Sin.

EVANGELICAL, NON-SECTARIAN.—This magazine is Christian in spirit and tone, non-sectarian. It is evangelical. Does not deal exclusively with the theme which is its special message, but discusses the great doctrines of the Christian faith.

Through the Bible Book by Book

By William Evans
Assoc. Dean of the Bible Inst., Los Angeles

"Each Biblical Book is carefully analyzed down to the minutiae, but apart from the analyses the treatment is popular. Perhaps its greatest value is just here to the ordinary student. It abounds in suggestive applications to present day conditions; even in the study of the legislative laws of Moses we find 'the practical lessons for us.' The diagrams and condensed analyses will be helpful to the teacher."

Says: "It fairly 'makes one's mouth water' at the thought of using this book in an adult Bible class.

"He has made a book of tremendous interest. It logically moves through the entire great field of prophecy, from Genesis on. It is exceedingly up to date, in its discussion of problems created by the World War. At the end of each chapter are 'Questions on the Lesson' given in that chapter, of stimulating value for class discussion or for use by the individual reader. Christian people everywhere who have been wanting to study Bible prophecy for themselves now have one of the best possible opportunities in this valuable book."

What 15 Cents Will bring You From the Nation's Capital

The little matter of 15 cts. in stamps or coin will bring you the Pathfinder 13 weeks on trial. The Pathfinder is an illustrated weekly, published at the Nation's center, for the Nation; a paper that prints all the news of the world and tells the truth and only the truth; now in its 27th year. This paper fills the bill without emptying the purse; it costs but $1 a year. If you want to keep posted on what is going on in the world, at least expense of time or money, this is your means. If you want a paper in your home which is sincere, reliable, entertaining, wholesome, the Pathfinder is yours. If you would appreciate a paper which puts everything clearly, briefly—here it is. Send 15c to show that you might like such a paper, and we will send you the Pathfinder on probation 13 weeks. The 15c does not repay us, but we are glad to invest in new friends.

Washington has become the World's Capital and reading the Pathfinder is like sitting in the inner council with those who mold the world's destiny.

Our Turn Has Come—Troubles

Many of the large periodicals have announced to their subscribers the troubles they have experienced in publishing for the past eight months. Our turn has now come. Last fall we authorized our printers to place an order for paper for The Christian Workers Magazine and they did so, covering several tons. Our subscription list increased rapidly and our editors were so encouraged, as well as our advertisers, that we were given more editorial copy and advertising to print each month, until we have printed 680 pages of the current volume, or 72 pages more than a year ago ending with April.

With the increased subscription list we used all our surplus stock of paper by February 1, and had no paper for the March number—the mill could not deliver paper fast enough and we could not buy any except at an exorbitant price from jobbers, and none our size. Thus we had to wait until near the end of the month for paper. The paper for the April number did not come until March 29, and copies will be ten days to two weeks late.

I am writing this copy April 7. We are all working hard to get the May number out early. There has been a congestion of mail in the postoffice; the parcel post overloaded on account of the express strike; the switchmen on strike on the railroads in Chicago, so we are not surprised at anything unusual happening. But God has enabled us to keep going and we ask your prayers on our behalf, and your patience, if your magazines, or books, may be delayed in reaching you. We hope conditions will be better. Keep right on sending in subscriptions, as we believe now is the time to increase our testimony.

How Our Hopes Rise and Fall

Two letters have just come before me, and I want to quote from both, not mentioning names, showing you how The Christian Workers Magazine appeals to different people:

Letter No. 1. "The magazine sent me does not please. So please me and send me two books—one for an old man and one a middle age. By so doing you will please,

"Yours truly,

"* * *"

Letter No. 2. "My dear Mr. ————: your packet of two recent copies of The Christian Workers Magazine was the best gift of literature I have received for years. It is finest production as a teaching faculty I have yet seen. It is first of all, for which thank God, free from error; it is scholarly but direct and simple in its teaching, it is more than helpful, and its presentation of the missionary work in all lands is a wonderful feature. I have learned much from the two copies you sent * * May I share the expense of the magazine with you. Remittances to America are now expensive, and I must now continue the magazine and you can have them back again each month.

"Yours very sincerely,

"* * *"

In The Sunday-school

Among the many clubs of subscribers was the following from a superintendent:

"March 29, 1920.

"Dear Mr. Woodruff:

"I consider The Christian Workers Magazine the best publication of its kind in this country, and I desire that it should go regularly to each of the officers and teachers in my Sunday-school.

"I am enclosing check for twenty-eight dollars for which please send same to the list of names with addresses enclosed.

Very truly yours,
"McKenzie Cleland."

"Dear Mr. Woodruff:

"It was only today that I discovered that you had practically committed me to the public for poetical recognition of the esteem in which I hold The Christian Workers Magazine. I found the attached lines in my waste-paper basket which I am happy to contribute to your 'stuff'.

Sincerely yours,
"(Miss) E. Stafford Millar."

AN ODE TO THE CHRISTIAN WORKERS MAGAZINE

O Magazine! My Magazine!
I have not read, I have not seen—
Thine Equal!

I read thee in my leisure hour,
I read again, digest, devour
Thy contents.

Thy full-orbed truths and fair deduction
Of Bible facts and sane production
Do me inspire!

Thy charge to scoffers rings most true,
Thy challenge to the "New Thought" too—
Do satisfy!

God's Majesty, The Prince, His Son,
The Holy Spirit, all are One
Thy declaration!

"That Reminds Me"

Rev. William Evans, who wrote "How to Memorize," was just passing my window and came in to shake hands. So I dug out a letter awaiting space in these columns, about his book. If you haven't a copy you may want one some day—75 cents a copy—or one free with a year's subscription to The Christian Workers Magazine.

"Dear Prof. Evans:

"Your little book on 'How to Memorize' came to me as a premium with The Christian Workers Magazine. I want to tell you the pleasure it has already given me. I picked it up for the first, at seven o'clock p. m. At half-past seven, I went to prayer-meeting saying the first fifty words, having read that far. This morning I again at 9:30 took up the book and in half hour had the other fifty words and then I took up my darning and my Hymnal. I opened to John Newton's 'Amazing Grace, How Sweet the Sound.' As I was darning, I learned the three double stanzas and as I got dinner I could sing it all! Oh! I am so glad, I'll tell you why—I live a rather solitary life with an aged parent, who is so deaf, conversation is difficult, I had in former years learned many hymns but I had 'let go' because I thought I was 'too old' to memorize and your book has given me new hope and keen delight.

"Now if I can arrange my home duties, I am going to go up to the Normal school here this coming semester and begin a course in typewriting and shorthand to concentrate and fix attention. I am fifty years old and things have happened to make me feel sad and isolated but, as I said, I feel as though I had received a fresh stimulus, to take hold again with new zest.

"I have not read on, for I have promised myself not to skip ahead but shall faithfully 'go on.'

"Thanking you, "Mrs. * *."

"It's never too late to mend;" if you feel discouraged try again.

Yours truly
The Publishing Agent.

The Victorious Life

This book contains the messages delivered at the Victorious Life summer conferences of 1918. They deal with some of the great Bible doctrines, but especially with the problem of sin in the individual life. Deliverance from sin and victory over sin is taught, but not complete eradication of sin. Sanctification is prominent, but no room is given to "sinless perfectionism." The messages are wholesone and victory is assured through Jesus Christ. In these days of almost utter worldliness and materialism upon the part of many Christians, this book points the way to victory through surrender.

A Thoughtful Pastor Writes

Rev. James M. Gray, D. D.
Dean Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Dr. Gray:

At your earnest solicitation, I purchased and carefully read Andrews' "Christianity and Anti-Christianity in Their Final Conflict." I have read many books on post- and pre-millennialism, but this book is the most satisfactory on the subject that I know of. It is a perfect answer to Dr. Snowden's "The Coming of the Lord." I have read Dr. Snowden's book carefully and, as far as the Scriptures are concerned, I think it is very weak.

Dr. Andrews' chapter on "The Falling Away: Its Origin and Nature," thrilled me, and the way he develops this chapter in what follows is fascinating. While in college I fought many philosophical and scientific battles. At times the struggle was intense, though the school itself was conservative.

You will probably be interested to know that for two years I was a Christian Scientist. That was previous to my college career. I have also studied nearly every other form of heretical teaching. But God has graciously led me to the simple Christianity of the New Testament. Dr. Andrews' book has strengthened and confirmed my faith greatly.

(Signed) C. M. G., Glendale, Ariz.

Christianity and Anti-Christianity in Their Final Conflict

By REV. SAMUEL J. ANDREWS.

After the Bible, a concordance, a Bible dictionary and, perhaps, an all-around work like Angus' "Bible Hand-Book," the next book I would recommend as indispensable for the library of the pastor, missionary or Christian worker of today is, "Christianity and Anti-Christianity in Their Final Conflict," by Rev. Samuel J. Andrews.—James M. Gray.

PARKER'S PEOPLE'S BIBLE

A LIBRARY OF SACRED KNOWLEDGE

By JOSEPH PARKER, D.D.

This 28-volume library is both guide and interpreter to the treasures of the entire Bible. It throws a clear light on the beauty and significance that are so frequently hidden behind the ambiguities of the text. It is so arranged as to meet the wants of the ordinary Bible reader as well as the requirements of students and ministers. It is a work as valuable for the home circle as for the library or study. Exhaustive special indexes in each volume and a complete Index volume make the contents easily accessible.

ALL DENOMINATIONS JOIN IN ITS PRAISE

METHODIST

"In this work the force, originality, the effective style, the intensely practical teaching of the famous preacher are exhibited at their best."—Methodist Times, London.

BAPTIST

"The work might be almost called the 'Preacher's Bible,' for he will find here what will make him think for himself."—National Baptist.

REFORMED

"Almost every sentence in this great work glows with intense spiritual light, and burns its way to the very center of life."—The Reformed Church Messenger.

PRESBYTERIAN

"It might be almost called a pictorial Bible: each chapter is characterized by vivid verbal pictures, profuseness of illustration, liberally orientalizing the orientalisms of the Scriptures."—New York Observer.

CONGREGATIONAL

"New glimpses of truth will delight readers in every section of the work."—The Congregationalist.

The Process of Growth

For Our Next Stage of Development Watch for Our September Issue, if the Lord Tarries

In the New and Rapidly Changing Conditions

of today, The Moody Bible Institute is faced with a time of testing, allowed of God we believe for blessing. We hear Him saying again, "Call unto me and I will answer thee and show thee great and mighty things which thou knowest not," and cannot doubt that ere long there will be realized that enlargement of the Institute's educational scope, its teaching force, and its dormitory and other facilities, which is so imperatively needed.

More and more urgently comes the call that a graduate course be added to the curriculum which will fully equip young men for the ministry, and thus enable those who so desire to obtain their ministerial training in an institution whose loyalty to the Word of God is unquestioned. Steps preliminary to the attainment of this end are now under consideration.

Besides the immediate and heavy pressure for funds to meet the current expenses, a new dynamo must be installed in our Heating and Lighting Plant before the opening of the Fall Term, costing from $15,000 to $18,000.

Still larger and urgent needs include three new dormitory buildings —one for married students, one for men, and one for women; an administration building; and provision for additions to the teaching force.

In this day of rapidly developing apostasy in the professing church from the foundation truths of the gospel, it is daily becoming more and more needful for those who love our Lord and His Word in sincerity to stand together and "strengthen the things which remain."

Will you join with us in strengthening this Institute which stands unswervingly in the "old paths," and which God has so signally and increasingly honored as the years have passed? Take it on your heart and into your prayers if you have not already done so, and put such a proportion of your money into it as you believe will please Him and bear precious fruit to His glory.

How carefully the affairs of the Institute are managed may be appreciated, from one point of view, by the fact that "System" Magazine printed an article in its April issue under the heading "Short Cuts," explaining how economically and efficiently the Institute's large student body is served substantial and satisfying meals three times a day in its great dining room. In the face of a general advance of eighty-five per cent in food costs in the last five years, the cost of meals at the Institute has increased only forty-six per cent.

Second World Conference

ON Christian Fundamentals

AT

The Moody Church Tabernacle

Chicago, Illinois

June 13-20

The need of the hour is implicit, happy confidence in the Bible as the Word of God. World thought is staggering amid the mists of human speculation and the denser darkness of "doctrines of demons." Men are clamoring for a twentieth century theology, when nothing but the First Century Gospel has Power to Save. Eight days, including two Sabbaths, with sessions morning, afternoon and evening will be given to the presentation of the Fundamental Teachings of God's Word.

Opening Service Sabbath, June 13, 2:30 P. M.

Personnel of Conference

The following outstanding Preachers and Bible Teachers will share in the Conference Program:

W. B. Riley, Minneapolis, Minn.
L. W. Munhall, Germantown, Pa.

Which supper would you like best?

Wheat bubbles or bread?

Millions of children now get Puffed Wheat in their milk dish.

They get whole wheat, with every grain a tidbit. The grains are toasted bubbles, thin and flimsy, puffed to eight times normal size. The taste is like airy nut-meats.

Every food cell is exploded, so digestion is easy and complete. It is better liked and better for them than any other form of wheat.

Three grains are steam exploded

Prof. Anderson has found a way to puff wheat, rice and corn hearts. All are steam exploded, all shot from guns.

So these three grains are at your service in this ideal form.

Serve all of them, and often. Not for breakfast only, but all day long.

Use in every bowl of milk. Use as nut-meats on ice cream, as wafers in your soups. Crisp and douse with melted butter for hungry children after school.

Keep all three kinds on hand. These are the best-cooked grain foods in existence and the most delightful.

Puffed to 8 times normal size

Puffed Wheat

Puffed Rice

Corn Puffs

Also Puffed Rice Pancake Flour

Mix with strawberries

Puffed Rice or Corn Puffs makes a delightful blend. The texture is flimsy, the taste like nuts.

They add what crust adds to shortcake, tarts and pies. They add as much as the sugar or the cream.

An Open Letter

Dear Friends:—

The Ways and Means Committee of the Hebrew-Christian Publication Society seeks the privilege of addressing you this open letter:

The times have ripened into a great possibility for the accomplishment of the work to which this Society is pledged. The great War has disclosed to Christianity the immense importance of the Jewish problem. Many Jews are more ready for the Gospel of our Lord and theirs, than ever since the tragedy of Calvary. They are reading our New Testament with open minds; they are asking sober questions as to the Messiahship of our Christ.

This Society possesses in the person of Mr. Benjamin A. M. Schapiro, one eminently qualified to prepare the kind of literature of which they stand in need. His scholarship in the original tongue; his keen perception of the divine plan of redemption; his acumen for presenting truth directly and forcibly; his intensity of conviction carry his message into the hearts of all who hear Him or read His writings.

Our Society occupies the unique position of issuing literature adapted to the Judaic mind, without cost to those who wish to use it.

We are very anxious to extend the work in every possible manner. To this end the Society has been incorporated.

Any contribution will be gratefully acknowledged by the Treasurer of the Society and also will be reported in the next issue of "The People, the Land and the Book."

Yours very truly,
KENNETH MACKENZIE, AMBROSE S. MURRAY, Jr.,
WILLIAM W. McALPIN, JAMES WOOD,
Ways and Means Committee.

WHAT EMINENT CLERGYMEN SAY OF OUR TRACTS

The late Rev. David Gregg, D. D., LL. D., President of Western Theological Seminary, in the introduction, says:

"I deem it a privilege to be permitted to write a brief preface to this Treatise of Mr. Schapiro on the 'Origin of Sacrifices.' I have known him for twenty years. These years bear testimony to an unsullied manhood. They reveal also an incessant research, a growing scholarship, and a painstaking accuracy, which should secure acceptance and give value to every product of his able pen. This tract is the expression of loyalty to the one living and true God. It is the voice of a true Israelite."

JESUS AND HIS KINSMEN
(Second Edition, 50,000)

Prof. Luther T. Townsend, D. D., S. T. D., M. V. I., who has written the introduction, says:

"The following essay by our friend, Mr. B. A. M. Schapiro, is, therefore, from several points of view of great interest. He is a Christian Jew, is highly educated and abounds in love and zeal for his people."

"His appeals to the Jewish people to accept Christ and His Salvation are among the strongest we have ever seen."

Robert D. Wilson, Ph. D., D. D. Professor of Semitic Languages and Old Testament Criticism at Princeton Theological Seminary, who, writing to the society about this tract, says:

"I have just read Mr. Schapiro's tract on the 'Origin and Significance of Sacrifices.' I believe it is one of the best treatises ever written on the subject."

The above mentioned tracts and others can be secured

The People, the Land and the Book, published Quarterly, pocket edition, 3 1-2x6, contains 96 pages.

NO SAMPLE COPIES, as a limited edition is issued.

You can, however, secure a pamphlet "The Aim" of the Hebrew-Christian Publication Society, containing 28 pages, which will give you an excellent idea of the work of the Society.

America Famishes for Bible Teachers

Theodore Roosevelt

For men and women of yielded hearts, and minds trained in the Bible through faithful persevering study; who know God and His Word and hence are able to teach others.

Oh, how great is the need for such teachers, in and out of the churches, in the homes, in the Sunday-schools, in Bible conferences, everywhere!

False substitutes for the glorious gospel of the Son of God are deceiving millions!

Theodore Roosevelt said:

"To every man who faces life with real desire to do his part in everything, I appeal for a study of the Bible. No man can afford to be ignorant of the Bible."

Yet storm-tossed hearts, hungry for comfort and help, on every hand in thousands, starving for the Bread of Life and the Living Water, are being snared and deceived by Satan through ignorance of the Bible.

Announcement of Sunday services in the newspapers of the large cities are mainly those of Spiritualism, Rationalism, New Thought, Christian Science and Sunday Evening Clubs that fail to hold up the Cross of Christ; pitifully few of them are of churches which honor God's Word and are full of zeal for the gospel.

What is the lesson for the readers of this advertisement? Is it not this?

CHRISTIAN, PREPARE!

Enter without delay upon systematic study of the Bible; or, if already such a student, press on to the goal in view!

No matter what your occupation, you can study the Bible by correspondence.

Doing this, you will find that as you proceed with your studies your life will be wondrously enriched and blessed; your latent intellectual powers will develop and expand; your stores of knowledge and wisdom increase; your vision and understanding gloriously broaden!

And then, as you humbly place all at the Master's disposal, how the Holy Spirit will use you to bless this so terribly needy, sin-cursed world.

Don't wait until a more convenient season! Fill out the coupon below at once, and a prospectus will be sent to you promptly, telling all about our eight Bible Correspondence Courses—the Synthetic Course, Chapter Summary Course, Bible Doctrine Course, Scofield Bible Course, Introductory Bible Course, Christian Evidences, Practical Christian Work, and Evangelism.

ENROLL NOW BEFORE THE PRICES ARE ADVANCED!

These courses have never been sold on a commercial basis, but always below cost, in order that as many as possible might have the priceless opportunity of systematic training in the Scriptures. No advance has hitherto been made in the prices, in spite of the great increase in costs. Soon, however, advances must be made, but those who enroll now will have the advantage of the present rates.

A letter from a Methodist minister in Australia (dated December 31, 1919) who had just completed the Scofield Course, said:

"I must speak a word of appreciation for the Scofield Course. (1) I like it because it is built on the Granite Rock—the Bible. (2) It shows great spiritual understanding. (3) It lays bare the sores of the soul and mind and applies the healing Word. (4) It shows a careful examination of the works of our great spiritual teachers. (5) It primarily shows the mind of the Spirit rather than the mind of the writer—it is written for the glory of God. (6) It has been generally helpful to a young Methodist minister by teaching him what is in the Bible and how to use it, more than all his previous theological training. (7) It is a course he can recommend to his young brethren in the Methodist ministry—or any ministry."

February 18 a Vermont student wrote: "I am getting far more out of my Scofield Course, than I had in all my Bible training heretofore."

A recent letter from a Philadelphia student says: "I wish to express my deep appreciation of the Synthetic Course. It has been the means of a marked change in my life, and helped me to study the Word as I never have before. It is truly wonderful."

Another student of the Synthetic Course, a Methodist clergyman in Maine, wrote February 14: "It affords me unspeakable pleasure to express my appreciation of what the Synthetic Bible Study Course has done for me."

Here is a testimony from a distinguished clergyman of Tsinghua College, Pekin, China: "I have been so impressed with the value of hiding the Word in my heart, that I have taken the study of this course up again (Practical Christian Work), which I had dropped for a term."

Enroll before the prices advance! Fill in and mail the coupon at once.

You will be a personal pupil—time, place and amount of study under your own control.

How I Improved My Memory In One Evening

The Amazing Experience of Victor Jones

"Of course I place you! Mr. Addison Sims of Seattle.

"If I remember correctly—and I do remember correctly—Mr. Burroughs, the lumberman, introduced me to you at the luncheon of the Seattle Rotary Club three years ago in May. This is a pleasure indeed! I haven't laid eyes on you since that day. How is the grain business? And how did that amalgamation work out?"

The assurance of the speaker—in the crowded corridor of the Hotel McAlpin—compelled me to turn and look at him, though I must say it is not my usual habit to "listen in" even in a hotel lobby.

"He is David M. Roth, the most famous memory expert in the United States," said my friend Kennedy, answering my question before I could get it out. "He will show you a lot more wonderful things than that, before the evening is over."

And he did.

As we went into the banquet room the toastmaster was introducing a long line of guests to Mr. Roth. I got in line and when it came my turn, Mr. Roth asked, "What are your initials, Mr. Jones, and your business connection and telephone number?" Why he asked this I learned later, when he picked out from the crowd the 60 men he had met two hours before and called each by name without a mistake. What is more, he named each man's business and telephone number, for good measure.

I won't tell you all the other amazing things this man did except to tell how he called back, without a minute's hesitation, long lists of numbers, bank clearings, prices, lot numbers, parcel post rates and anything else the guests had given him in rapid order.

* * * * * *

When I met Mr. Roth again—which you may be sure I did the first chance I got—he rather bowled me over by saying, in his quiet, modest way.

"There is nothing miraculous about my remembering anything I want to remember, whether it be names, faces, figures, facts or something I have read in a magazine.

"You can do this just as easily as I do. Anyone with an average mind can learn quickly to do exactly the same things which seem so miraculous when I do them.

"My own memory," continued Mr. Roth, "was originally very faulty. Yes, it was—a really poor memory. On meeting a man I would lose his name in thirty seconds, while now there are probably 10,000 men and women in the United States, many of whom I have met but once, whose names I can tell instantly on meeting them."

"That is all right for you, Mr. Roth," I interrupted, "you have given years to it. But how about me?"

"Mr. Jones," he replied, "I can teach you the secret of a good memory in one evening. This is not a guess, because I have done it with thousands of pupils. In the first of seven simple lessons which I have prepared for home study, I show you the basic principle of my whole system and you will find it—not hard work as you might fear—but just like playing a fascinating game. I will prove it to you."

He didn't have to prove it. His Course did: I got it the very next day from his publishers, the Independent Corporation.

When I tackled the first lesson, I suppose I was the most surprised man in forty-eight states to find that I had learned—in about one hour—how to remember a list of one hundred words so that I could call them off forward and back without a single mistake.

That first lesson stuck. And so did the other six.

Read this letter from Terence J. McManus, of the firm of Olcott, Bonynge, McManus & Ernest, Attorneys and Counsellors at Law, 170 Broadway, and one of the most famous trial lawyers in New York:

> "May I take occasion to state that I regard your service in giving this system to the world as a public benefaction. The wonderful simplicity of the method, and the ease with which its principles may be acquired, especially appeal to me. I may add that I already had occasion to test the effectiveness of the first two lessons in the preparation for trial of an important action in which I am about to engage."

Mr. McManus didn't put it a bit too strong. The Roth Course is priceless! I can absolutely count on my memory now. I can call the name of most any man I have met before—and I am getting better all the time. I can remember any figures I wish to remember. Telephone numbers come to mind instantly, once I have filed them by Mr. Roth's easy method. Street addresses are just as easy.

The old fear of forgetting (you know what that is) has vanished. I used to be "scared stiff" on my feet—because I wasn't sure. I couldn't remember what I wanted to say.

Now I am sure of myself, and confident and "easy as an old shoe" when I get on my feet at the club, or at a banquet, or in a business meeting, or in any social gathering.

Perhaps the most enjoyable part of it all is that I have become a good conversationalist—and I used to be as silent as a sphinx when I got into a crowd of people who knew things.

Now I can call up like a flash of lightning most any fact I want right at the instant I need it most. I used to think a "hair trigger" memory belonged only to the prodigy and genius. Now I see that every man of us has that kind of a memory if he only knows how to make it work right.

I tell you it is a wonderful thing, after groping around in the dark for so many years, to be able to switch the big searchlight on your mind and see instantly every thing you want to remember.

This Roth Course will do wonders in your office.

Since we took it up you never hear anyone in our office say "I guess" or "I think it was about so much" or "I forget that right now" or "I can't remember" or "I must look up his name." Now they are right there with the answer—like a shot.

Have you ever heard of "Multigraph" Smith? Real name H. Q. Smith, Division Manager of the Multigraph Sales Company, Ltd., in Montreal. Here is just a bit from a letter of his that I saw last week:

> "Here is the whole thing in a nutshell: Mr. Roth has a most remarkable Memory Course. It is simple, and easy as falling off a log. Yet with one hour a day of practice anyone—I don't care who he is—can improve his Memory 100% in a week and 1,000% in six months."

My advice to you is, don't wait another minute. Send to Independent Corporation for Mr. Roth's amazing course and see what a wonderful memory you have got. Your dividends in Increased earning power will be enormous.

VICTOR JONES.

Send No Money

So confident is the Independent Corporation, the publishers of the Roth Memory Course, that once you have an opportunity to see in your own home how easy it is to double, yes, triple, your memory power in a few short hours, that they are willing to send the course on free examination.

Don't send any money. Merely mail the coupon or write a letter and the complete course will be sent, all charges prepaid, at once. If you are not entirely satisfied send it back any time within five days after you receive it and you will owe nothing.

On the other hand, if you are as pleased as are the thousands of other men and women who have used the course, send only $7 in full payment. You take no risk and you have everything to gain, so mail the coupon now before this remarkable offer is withdrawn.

Hebrew Christian Alliance of America

(Incorporated)

REV. H. L. HELLYER, M. A., President.
REV. A. LICHTENSTEIN, Field Secretary
REV. S. B. ROHOLD, F. R. G. S. Secretary-Treasurer

An organization for the purpose of:

1. Bringing together into mutual fellowship all Hebrew Christians.
2. Endeavoring to present to the Jew, to the Gentile, and to the Church at large, a corporative Hebrew Christian Testimony.
3. Providing for the Evangelical Christian Churches of America an authoritative and reliable channel how best to serve the cause of Jewish Evangelization.
4. Preparing, printing and distributing Hebrew Christian Literature.
5. Helping to educate and to send forth divinely called workers for Jewish Evangelization.
6. Establishing in America a Hebrew Christian Headquarters and Jewish Missionary Training School.
7. Sending forth itinerant Evangelists to propagate the Gospel of Jesus Christ in America, Eastern Europe and Palestine.
8. Fostering and encouraging Hebrew Christians in Palestine to organize a colony and community, thus creating a deep-felt need of a united witness in the Holy Land.
9. Rendering practical and substantial aid to the stricken Hebrew Christians and Jews in general, in Russia, Poland and other parts of Eastern Europe.

The official organ of the Alliance is:

The Hebrew Christian Alliance Quarterly

Rev. S. B. ROHOLD, F. R. G. S., Editor.

He is aided by a staff of able and competent Hebrew Christians who know the Jewish question in all its phases most thoroughly, not from hearsay or by culling out tid-bits from other magazines, but from actual experience. Mr. Rohold is a Palestinian, born in the city of Jerusalem, and has kept in constant contact with affairs there. He made a number of Missionary Journeys to the Holy Land, and only recently returned from a visit there. He is an expert on conditions of Palestine. His articles are always very interesting and instructive.

Dark Russia and Eastern Europe in which most of the Jews live and suffer, is also represented by able men who speak from personal observation. In the near future, the Alliance will have its own representatives in both Palestine and Russia, and the reports of their labors will be published in the QUARTERLY.

The Homefield is also not neglected. Interesting reports from Jewish Missions of our land as well as of the work of the Alliance Evangelist are found on its pages.

Altogether, THE HEBREW CHRISTIAN ALLIANCE QUARTERLY is a Magazine which should be read by all who are interested in the Jewish people and desire to keep abreast with all that God is doing with them. It contains 40 pages and the subscription price is $1 a year.

For sample copies, write—Rev. Jos. R. LEWEK, Manager, 3719 Roosevelt Road, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir: The enclosed $1.00 is for one year's subscription to the Hebrew Christian Alliance Quarterly.

The Greatest Trek in History

The most virile people on earth have been wandering over its surface for two thousand years, homeless and landless. Now they are returning to their own home and land, Palestine. Watch that big migration! The Jews are trekking from every land of earth, from Poland, from the Ukraine and Roumania. They are organizing in hundreds of towns and villages in Russia, buying tickets on the instalment plan. Hungary and the new Slav states are ready to cast them out, as the fish did Jonah. German Jews and Dutch Jews and Balkan Jews are selling their property to go when the Peace Council gives the word. In America and Canada they are forming clubs and studying Hebrew and organizing companies so they can take control of affairs in the new Eldorado. Jews in Argentina, in Australasia, in the Fiji Islands, in the Philippines, in South Africa and Alaska are turning their eyes to the long-lost land in the center of the countries of earth.

What This Return Will Mean

The Jews will astonish the world by their physical regeneration of Palestine. They are raising tens of millions for work there. They will transform the East. They will prove the mediators between East and West. The gold center of the world will be where the Jew is. As the hub of the Near East their land will be the bone of contention in the coming greatest wars of history.

How Watch These Wonderful Changes

"Is it nothing to you?" To keep up with this procession of Jewry you need "Prayer and Work for Israel." It describes these mighty developments better and more fully than any other Christian periodical. You get monthly the very cream of the splendid story. And with it you get the tale of what God is doing to gospelize these millions of Jews.

What Others Say About Our Magazine

Don't take our word for it. Read what others think of it. An Ohio subscriber writes: "I never lose interest in your valuable magazine." A reader in Pennsylvania says: "The January number received, read and devoured; fine, interesting, profitable; not a dull bit in it." A Florida correspondent, formerly editor of an important church missionary magazine, says: "The magazine continues to be most interesting, instructive, pleasing, kindly and discreet of spirit. It does you all credit."

A Trip To Chinatown

If you enter Doyers Street from Chatham Square, keep to the left past the window full of liche nuts, china and red paper mottoes and then walk half way to the turn. Almost opposite the green lantern, you will observe, if you look closely, a little inconspicuous door. Through that door last year passed nearly 200,000 persons. All these who went in, came out again, which is a new sort of history for that door, for there have been nights when men went in there and were brought out, never to go in at any door again.

And of the nearly 200,000 who passed in and out there in the last twelve months, at least 5,000 of them have come out happier than when they went in.

It's one of the most curious and amazing places in Chinatown. The felt-footed Tongs steal up and down the street and strange noises beat against the door—a rattle of shots from Mott or Pell Street, the laugh of noisy women at night, the tinkle of teacups and glasses and every now and then the rap of a policeman's club on the sidewalk. But these noises all stop at the door. There is another business going on inside.

FOR THEY SAY, and DO NOT!

Frankly, what's the use of saying, "Every time I see a Jew I want to take off my hat to him," when you are not willing to take out your dollar to help him know of that Name through which alone he can be saved?

Are you obeying God in your work, prayer and gifts in behalf of the Jew? Are you a layman? Just how much did you give for Jewish Missions last year, and how much to all other missions? Are you a pastor? How much did your church give for Jewish Missions last year?

Our mission merits your every confidence and support. We are here in the midst of almost 2,000,000 Jews. Just now your gift would be especially appreciated. Our paper, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE,—considered by many Bible students the most ably edited Jewish Christian paper in America,—is sent to all contributors. Regular price, 50 cents a year, or 10 cents a copy.

Editorial Notes

"Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not: whosoever sinneth hath not seen him, neither known him." (1 John 3:6).

"Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." (1 John 3:9.)

Cut from the Loaf

In all these four places where the verb, "to sin," is found, it is in the present tense in the Greek, which expresses continuous action. It is not in the aorist tense which is used to denote a single act, as for example, in 2:1. In other words, the apostle does not claim that the Christian never sins, nor does he intimate that it is possible for a man in this life to reach that state of perfection in which he never sins. What he declares is that one who is really born of God does not, and cannot continue to live in sin. As Paul would put it, he does not let sin reign in him.—Willis W. Mead in The Modern Outcry Against the Law.

"Cutting the Gloom"

"There's nothing but gloom in this old world," says the Daytona (Fla.) Daily News. "Nothing but gloom if you take stock in all the talk of poverty, unemployment, debt and predicted hard times that you hear about. But brace up!" It adds, "There's another story—a story of big, ambitious, optimistic projects that will bring food, clothing, good times, happiness and even wealth to great members of the earth's people." It then engages in the process of "cutting the gloom," as it calls it, by reciting some of the enterprises of first magnitude now in process of development.

The difficulty is that these enterprises are projected in a world that does not know God. It is the old Cainite civilization that tries to make the world as comfortable a place as possible to live in without Him.

Of course, these enterprises are great as men count greatness, and they will certainly make for some of the results of which the editor speaks; but who believes that "happiness" will be one of these, or "good times" either, in any real sense? "God made man upright," says the proverb, "but they have sought out many inventions;" yet not one of them has restored that lost uprightness. Only God Himself can do that, and He can do it only as men submit themselves to His Son Jesus Christ.

But the time is coming when that submission shall be brought about, even though, in part, it will be a "feigned" obedience, as the Psalmist says. And then these great enterprises shall be utilized for the benefit of mankind in a way of which their projectors may have little dreamed. (See Psalm 67.) They are not going to be lost. The saints of God shall yet realize upon them in the day when "the meek shall inherit the earth."

But here is the list. Let us look at it and congratulate ourselves on our "futures":

Power canal from the Mediterranean to the Dead Sea, to raise the Sea of Galilee and make a garden of all Palestine.

The largest hydro-electrical plant in the world to make use of the rapids of the Yangste Kiang river in China. Buying the machinery in the United States.

Heavy flowing oil wells developing in Argentine that will greatly increase the world's supply.

Greece prosperous, and government about to tackle mammoth public works planned by Pericles 450 years before Christ.

New railroad from Pekin, China, to run through the province of Pichili, opening up commerce, education, and civilization to millions of people.

French and Italian engineers surveying a tunnel under Mt. Blanc to join the two countries.

Federal and state governments of America to spend seven hundred millions on good roads.

Sir William Willcocks planning canal system to use the Euphrates for irrigating six million acres of desert land surrounding the garden of Eden.

Argentine appropriates $40,000,000 to develop water power of Igauzu Falls, greater than Niagara. Machinery from United States.

A Progressive Devil

What will he be up to next? The latest from Paris, the deeply afflicted Paris, as we called her this time last year, is that hypnotism is now to be applied to dancing. To a cable dispatch by the Universal Service we are indebted for the thrilling information that the intricacies of the tango and the complications of the fox trot will no longer be unapproachable by the uninitiated if the new "art" proves what its patronesses claim it to be.

All that is needed, they say, is a few minutes of hypnotism practiced upon a willing devotee—she must be willing for otherwise the "influence" does not work—whereafter she will be able to perform the most difficult and daring dancing feats with perfect grace.

"Those who attended last night's ball say the large fashionable crowd was held breathless by the marvelous performance of girls who had not mastered the simplest steps when they arrived, but went away fully conversant with all the "new fangled" tricks of terpsichorean art!

Uniting Seminaries

A contemporary recently raised the question as to whether the Auburn and Rochester Theological Seminaries should not unite, the one a Presbyterian and the other a Baptist fitting school for ministers.

The reason for the suggestion was the cost of training their output with the double equipment required, whereas if they were united, students would have the advantage of the strong men of both faculties, while certain subjects, like denominational history, could be treated "along communional lines." The writer thought that theological seminaries should be willing to lose their identity if thereby they could "help more adequately to build the kingdom of God on the earth."

It is interesting to note that The Moody Bible Institute has been conducted on this principle for a generation. Presbyterians and Baptists, and for that matter, about all the other evangelical denominations meet and mingle in the happiest and most efficient manner both on its faculty and in its student body, while representatives of all these denominations find delight in contributing in larger or smaller sums to its support. Thus both men and women are turned out for practically all kinds of Christian service on the most economical basis.

George S. Fisher

News of the death of this devoted servant of God came to us too late for mention in our last issue, but we do not wish the event to go unnoticed by us because he was one of those of whom the world is not worthy. We can say this sincerely, though we know how often and how seriously he was criticized for untempered zeal. God has need of such instruments as he, and the church is the purer and the stronger for their fearless testimony.

Mr. Fisher was the president and editor of the Gospel Message, of Kansas City, Mo., representing the work of The Gospel Missionary Union, and he died on March 22, of typhoid fever, while engaged in the work of that mission in South America. The important work he represented is doubtless crippled by his removal, but God is able to raise up a successor, and supply the faith needed for the emergency. For his widow and the workers he has left behind, we earnestly crave the divine blessing.

Gethsemane

By Eugenie du Maurier

In golden youth, when seems the earth
A summer land for singing mirth;
When souls are glad and hearts are light,
And not a shadow lurks in sight—
We do not know it, but there lies
Somewhere, veiled under evening skies,
A garden, all must sometime see—
Somewhere lies our Gethsemane.

With joyous steps we go our ways,
Youth lends a halo to the days,
Light sorrows sail like clouds afar,
We laugh, and say how strong we are!
We hurry on, and hurrying go
Close to the borderland of woe,
That waits for you and waits for me—
Forever waits—Gethsemane.

Down shadowy lanes, across strange streams,
Bridged over by our broken dreams,
Behind the misty cape of years,
Close to the great salt font of tears,
The garden lies; strive as we may,
We cannot miss it on our way—
All paths that have been or shall be,
Pass somewhere through Gethsemane.

All those who journey, soon or late,
Must pass within the garden gate;
Must kneel alone in darkness there
And battle with some fierce despair.
Alas! for those who cannot say
"Thy will, not mine!" who only pray
"Let the chalice pass," and cannot see
The purpose in Gethsemane.

Spiritism Before the Flood, or, the Mystery of the Fallen Angels

Editorial

THE task we have set ourselves would be inadequately rendered if attention were not called to the mysterious sixth chapter of Genesis, in which the record of the marriages of "the sons of God" with "the daughters of men" and the issue of the same is intended to account for the catastrophe of the flood.

> "And it came to pass, when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them,
> "That the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose.
> "And the Lord said, My spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years.
> "There were giants in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown."

I

The question arises, "Who were these 'sons of God' and these 'daughters of men' whose union produced the powerful and wicked race the iniquity of which resulted thus, and necessitated this judgment?"

We who are familiar with the use of the first-named phrase in the New Testament might at first interpret it to mean men of faith, true believers, real saints; while the second would logically apply to women of the opposite character.

But reflection would recall that Moses was unlikely to be using New Testament terms, and that such phraseology would be foreign to conditions antedating the flood.

Also, it might be asked, "Would godly men contract such marriages, and in such a way, inasmuch as a plurality of wives, and force in obtaining them, seem to be implied?" "And if they did, what would further explain the gigantic stature and colossal wickedness of their offspring bringing about so terrible a penalty?"

In searching for a different explanation we find that "sons of God" is used everywhere else in the Old Testament to designate angels, and why should it not be so used here? Moreover, if it were so used, it would carry with it a confounding of two distinct orders of creatures and the production of a mixed race, partly human, partly superhuman, which would be just such a derangement of the divine plan as to fully warrant that which occurred, namely, the almost total extermination of all who were upon the earth.

Indeed, this was the prevailing view of the passage in the ancient synagogue of the Jews and among Christian theologians for the first three or four centuries of the church. And there is reason to believe it would not have changed in the latter case, had it not been for certain erroneous opinions and practices of Christendom, to which reference will be made later, and with which it was not in harmony.

But naturally there exists a prejudice against such a view. How could such intercourse be possible between the visible and invisible worlds, such an unnatural connection between beings so widely different from each other?

It is our purpose to deal with this question before we conclude, but a more important one precedes it. It is not, as Nicodemus said, "How can these things be?" but rather, is it true that they are? However inconceivable or inexplicable the fact may be, it is first necessary to show that it is a fact.

In doing this we now address ourselves to the two theories that have been most persistently maintained in opposition to it. The first, a Jewish interpretation which holds the "sons of God" to mean men of authority or rank who married women of inferior station; and the second, the church interpretation already mentioned, which holds that godly men, the descendants of Seth for example, chose for wives women of godless life belonging to the line of Cain.

II

The Jewish Interpretation

The Jewish interpretation has been paraphrased thus: "When men began to multiply on the earth the chief men took wives of all the handsome poor women they chose. There were tyrants in the earth in those days. Also, after the antediluvian days, powerful men had unlawful connections with the inferior women, and the children which sprang from this illicit intercourse were the renowned heroes of antiquity of whom the heathen made their gods."

The ground on which this interpretation was founded is that the Hebrew word for God, "Elohim," is sometimes used in the Old Testament to denote judges or princes, hence "sons of God" might mean sons of judges, or sons of princes. And the Hebrew word for man, "Adam," is occasionally used to denote one whose station in the world is lowly or poor, hence "daughters of men" might mean daughters of the lowly, or the poor.

It is admitted that "Elohim" is, in a few instances, applied in the Old Testament to Israelitish magistrates acting representatively for Jehovah, but there is nothing in this passage of that character. Moreover, this word is not "Elohim" simply, but "Bne-ha-Elohim," a very different expression, which means "sons of God," and which in every other instance stands, not for men of any grade or distinction, but for angels. Therefore, the inference is fair that if Moses had intended men, however great, in this place, he would not have used that word but some other, of which there were several from which to choose.

It is admitted also that "Adam" is, in some places, applied to human beings of low degree, but when women of low degree are meant the word is always used in connection with the word "Ish," which is not the case here. Otherwise the word simply means a man, or mankind in general, without distinction of class or condition. Moreover, the particular word now under discussion is not "Adam" simply, but "Bnoth-ha-Adam," "daughters of men," which occurs nowhere else in the Old Testament, so that no argument can be founded upon its usage.

"In short," to quote another, "women of high station as well as low are Bnoth-ha-Adam," and the title simply means Adam's daughters, female descendants, womankind without distinction.

Indeed, it is difficult to understand how such an interpretation of the passage ever found acceptance considering its extreme improbability. "How unlikely," to continue quoting, "that all the great men of the day, or even a large proportion of them, should, at the same time and with one consent, contract such alliances. And how unlikely that female beauty should just then have appeared, and only or chiefly, in women of the lower rank; and that it should have possessed such strongly attractive power in the case of all these 'sons of God.'"

And stranger still, how improbable the results that followed. Why should it have come about that the marriage of the judges or princes of that age with women of low degree but of great beauty, should have issued in mighty men of renown, a heroic race of gigantic size, celebrated for their exploits through succeeding time? And strangest of all, the Hebrew word for "giants" in verse four is "Nephilim," which means "fallen ones," as to whom there can be little doubt that they were more than human beings and derived their origin in part from a superhuman source.

A word of explanation seems necessary before leaving the Jewish interpretation, by which, of course, is not meant that of the ancient Jewish synagogue mentioned above, but that of Jewish teachers of a later time, say, the early centuries of the Christian era. The Jewish synagogue, as was said, held to the angel interpretation. Just what prompted the change of interpretation from that of angels to that of great men is not known except that it could not have been on exegetical grounds. Fleming, from whose work on The Fallen Angels and the Heroes of Mythology we are quoting, thinks it may have been dogmatic considerations concerning the nature of angels of which we shall speak by and by; but suffice for the present to re-affirm that the angelic interpretation was the first which suggested itself, and that it was very anciently received both by Jews and Christians.

III

The Church Interpretation

A fair and clear statement of later Christian or church interpretation is given by Dr. John Gill in his Exposition of the Old Testament, published in the middle of the eighteenth century. He says: "Those sons of God were not angels, because angels are incorporeal beings, and can not be affected with fleshly lusts, or marry and be given in marriage, or generate and be generated. Nor were they the sons of judges, magistrates and great personages; but rather is the phrase to be understood of the posterity of Seth, who from the time of Enos, when men began to be called by the name of the Lord (Gen. 4:26), had the title of the 'sons of God' in distinction from the children of men."

All this is pure assumption on Dr. Gill's part, and was to be expected, since no serious attempt seems to have been made by him to ascertain the real meaning of the words in their place whatever the consequences might be. For example, what ground outside of his own opinion, had he for saying that angels are incorporeal, etc.? And similarly, what ground for saying all that he does say about the posterity of Seth? However, he has plenty of company among commentators and others, including some of the poets, Milton as an illustration, in Paradise Lost. And yet, that great poet in Paradise Regained, Book II, returns to the angel interpretation, where he makes Satan, after the failure of his first temptation of Christ, in addressing the infernal council, say to Belial:

> "Before the flood, thou with thy lusty crew,
> False titled sons of God, roaming the earth,
> Cast wanton eyes on the daughters of men,
> And coupled with them, and begot a race."

What, however, explains the abandonment of the earlier angel interpretation for this of the sons of Seth? The most likely answer is that of John Henry Kurtz, D. D., professor of theology at Dorpat, quoted at some length by Fleming, who attributes it to the rise of certain superstitions and unwarrantable practices in the church growing out of false ideas as to the nature of angels. In other words, it was the coming in of angel worship that drove it out. Angel worship raised its head gradually, but its progress tended to remove everything that might shake confidence in the holiness of angels, or mar the gratification which their worship afforded.

There was also a second cause which was almost equally influential with the first, namely, the spread of celibacy, or monkery, as Kurtz calls it, and the reverence with which it came to be regarded in the early centuries. If Genesis 6:1-4 taught that although the angels in heaven marry not, yet at one time a portion of them, seduced by the beauty of women, came down to earth for the purpose of gratifying amorous propensities, then a weakness of the like kind on the part of "earthly angels" might be more readily excused. As a matter of fact such an apology was pleaded for monkish transgressions, at the time, and it therefore became a pretext for changing angelic "sons of God" into human "sons of God."

It was not until the last century that the angel interpretation began again to find favor with Christian theologians. And for its revival by the way, we are, in a sense, indebted to the destructive critics. Their attacks upon the Bible necessitated a return to the old-fashioned way of studying it with the aid of the grammar and lexicon. Exegesis has been restored to its rightful place, and exegesis never attempts to explain away uncommon or supernatural occurrences just because it does not understand them.

We have spoken of Fleming's work on The Fallen Angels, but he, in turn, is largely indebted to Kurtz above named, and also to Maitland's essays on the same subject and on False Worship as well as to Kitto's Daily Bible Illustrations. Following these authorities he goes on to deal at length with collateral aspects of the question for which we have not the space or time except to mention them. They include the suppositions and assumptions that are involved in the Sethite interpretation, an examination of Genesis 4:26, which speaks of Seth's descendants, a careful inquiry into the use of a phrase analogous to "the sons of God" wherever it occurs either in the Old or New Testament, and the antithesis of the "sons of God" and "daughters of men." We have studied him with care, and feel convinced that the improbabilities involved in the Sethite, or as we have called it, the church interpretation, are so serious as to put it out of court.

IV

Communication Between the Races

In our next article we expect to deal with the angel interpretation and the objections to it growing out of the supposed nature of angels. But we conclude this with some general observations in anticipation of it.

1. It has already been suggested in previous articles, that while angels are immaterial beings, yet they appear to possess, or at least are able to assume, some kind of an ethereal, corporeal form. At the same time it is to be remembered that the human race is composed of immaterial beings, clothed at present with gross bodies akin to beasts, but hereafter, in the case of the redeemed at least, to be clothed with spiritual bodies not unlike that of angels. If therefore, there is in our nature a capability of becoming like angels in some degree, is it so certain that they are as dissimilar to us in all respects as many people believe?

2. We have seen also that angels, both good and bad, are interested in the affairs of men, and have communicated with men. How much more intimate that communication might have been had not sin entered the human family, who can say? And if there is a possibility of greater communication if God willed it so, is it unlikely that evil angels, should it suit their propensities, would endeavor to make it so whether it was His will or not?

"We can not hold it to be an absurd proposition," writes Kurtz, quoted by Fleming, "that angels who, in their state of holiness, desire to look into the deepest mystery of grace on earth (1 Pet. 1:12), should, in their apostasy from holiness, have desired to look into the deepest mystery of nature on earth; and transgressing the limits of their own nature, participate in that mystery themselves."

"I desire my minister to preach every Sunday the simple gospel. The old, old story never wearies the average congregation, if it comes from a devout mind with preparation in the message. My ideal sermon is one which has an appeal to the unconverted and a spiritual uplift for the Christian. I want my minister to be abreast of the times on all new theological questions and research, but I do not want him to bring them into the pulpit. I have formed certain fixed views of Christ, His gospel, and the inspiration of the Bible, from a careful reading of that Book of books and it will not make me a better Christian or profit my spiritual life to unsettle these views by a discussion in the pulpit of new theories of Christ and the Holy Scriptures. Finally, I want my minister to act upon the belief that Christ's Gospel is the surest cure of all social and political evils, and that his best method of promoting temperance, social progress and morality and good citizenship is to bring men into the church. In a word, I want my minister to emphasize in his life work the declaration of the most successful preacher, Paul: 'It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.' A Physician's Report of the Miracles of Jesus

By Professor A. T. Robertson, D. D., LL. D., Louisville, Ky.

THERE is no doubt that the miracles of Jesus greatly attracted Luke. Was he credulous in his report of the wonders wrought by Jesus? Did he have the scientific spirit and the historical temper?

I

Luke a Man of Science

This fact has been often overlooked. Luke's witness to the miracles of Jesus has been brushed aside as the credulous ignorance of a non-scientific age. Each age plumes itself upon the scientific progress over the rest. The word science is simply Latin for the Greek "gnosis," our "knowledge." Progress in knowledge has not been steady and uninterrupted and uniform. Reactions and lapses come. The Renaissance followed the Dark Ages. The Dark Ages belong to the Christian era and succeeded a period of pagan enlightenment. We must not forget that Plato and Aristotle lived long before Luke's day. In the spring and summer semester of 1905 at the University of Oxford over a hundred courses of lectures on Aristotle were offered. Aristotle is still king in the realm of pure intellect. The late Dr. W. H. Whitsitt, for long Professor of Church History and then President of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, used to talk to his classes of the time when "Plato was king in Zion," and then of the time when "Aristotle was king in Zion." Both Plato and Aristotle have left their mark on Christian thought.

Luke's Technical Training

Not simply was Luke a man of general culture, a university man familiar with current literature and literary methods, but he was a man of technical training. Since Hobart's researches concerning the medical language of Luke, it is no longer possible to treat Luke as a "quack," a charlatan, or an ignorant practitioner. He was a trained physician like Galen and Hippocrates, and is one of the best products of Greek culture. So far as we know, he was the first man of science to grapple with the facts and forces of faith and science. He was superbly equipped for his task. He had a passion for the truth, for the facts of nature and of grace. "No other man of his time was so well fitted to judge rightly in questions involving both science and faith; and this ability sprang from the nature of his vivid and varied Greek mentality."[1] So we approach Luke's report of the miracles of Jesus with sincere interest. "His testimony to the miracles is, therefore, the nearest thing possible to the evidence which has often been desired in that of a man of science."[2]

And yet Luke is discounted by some for the very reason that he is a physician. So Harnack[3] instances the healing of Malchus's ear as a case in point: "This is the flagrant instance of the way in which a story of a miracle has arisen, and of what we expect from Luke. He certainly is not following a separate source here; but because he thinks it ought to have been so, he makes it happen so." That is simply intolerable in Harnack. Luke is here ranked no higher than a peddler of tales or a writer of medieval miracle plays, or a dispenser of marvelous cures by a group of "Christian Science" dupes. When Luke has been vindicated by modern research against the whole array of historians and critics who attacked Luke 2:1-7, he is entitled to be heard on his own account before it is assumed that he is incompetent and insincere and even hypocritical. Percy Gardner[4] follows the cue of Harnack and says: "But when we speak of him as a physican the modern mind is apt to be misled, and to attribute to him a scientific education, and methods of investigation such as are commonly used in the great schools of medicine. From this point of view our author is very far removed." Luke, to be sure, did not know the evolutionary hypothesis or the germ theory of disease, but he did have the Greek physician's love of the study of actual cases and of drawing his theories from the facts. This is the heart of scientific progress and Luke is in the line of succession. Gardner[5] even says: "He loves a good miracle," as if to discredit Luke's testimony on the subject. Carpenter[6] accepts this view of Luke: "Physician though he was, he was uncritical about miracles." Again[7]: "He was undoubtedly what we should call a truthful person, but it cannot be pretended that he had the scientific zeal of the best modern historians. He took pains to ascertain facts, but he was not alive to some of the perils that surround historical inquiry." But I submit that the new discoveries justify precisely this claim concerning Luke.

Present-Day Theories Not Finalities

It is not "pretended" that he had modern views of science and medicine, nor will a true scientist today pretend that present-day theories are finalities. The twentieth century has brought a more reverent temper on the part of the scientists concerning both God and man. No one claims that he has discovered the ultimate facts concerning nature. The very "atom," once thought to be absolute and indivisible, is now divided into electrons. Modern chemists, like the alchemists of Luke's day, claim to be able to transmute metals by the aid of radium, and to make diamonds to order out of charcoal. He is a bold man today who will dare to say what man can or cannot do. The Atlantic Ocean has been spanned by the aeroplane in a single flight. One disease after another is conquered by science. Shall we limit the power of God while we enlarge the powers of man? There has never been a day when it was easier to believe in miracles than now, and harder to tell what is a miracle. We can well believe that some of the miracles wrought by Jesus would not be called miracles by all men today. The use of language varies with the growth of ideas. The fundamental question is the fact of Jesus (His birth, His work, His teaching, His character, His resurrection from the dead, His power today over the lives of men).

At bottom we face the same problem that Luke faced. In reality we know not one whit more concerning the ultimate reality than Luke did. The new knowledge of our day has filled us with awe in the presence of God. It is no disgrace for us today to bow before the fact of God in Christ as Luke did. We must open our minds to learn all we can, but the pride of intellectual arrogance must not blind us to the glory of God in Christ. Luke saw God at work in Christ the Great Physician. No physician today can tell precisely how medicine cures disease, or what part the mind plays in the cure, or how far the will of God operates in the whole both in the fight that nature makes, and in the special exercise of His will in the individual case. The physician himself often rouses the will of the patient to victory over disease. Can God not do the same?

Luke as an Eye-Witness of Paul's Miracles

Carpenter[8] has a curious comment concerning Paul's view of miracles: "It may readily be conceded that Paul's attitude towards the miraculous is much truer than Luke's." That remark can only mean that Paul is skeptical concerning the miraculous or that Luke is credulous. But Paul claimed that he himself wrought miracles, a thing that Luke never does. "Truly the signs of the apostle were wrought among you with all patience, by signs and wonders and mighty works" (2 Cor. 12:12). Paul here employs precisely the three words[9] that Luke reports Peter as using in his address at the great Pentecost (Acts 2:22). So in Romans 15:18 f. Paul speaks of what the Holy Spirit wrought through him among the Gentiles "in the power of signs and wonders." We have Paul's first-hand testimony concerning his own miracles. Besides, Paul testifies to the greatest of all miracles in his own experience, the vision of the Risen Christ (1 Cor. 9:1; 15:8; Gal. 1:16). Paul even claims that some of his own converts wrought miracles (1 Cor. 12:9 f., 28-30, 14: 22; Gal. 3:5). These instances all come from Paul's universally acknowledged epistles. It is hard to set aside the witness of a man of Paul's intellectual acumen. There were "Counterfeit Miracles" (Warfield) then as there are now, but Paul's miracles do not come in that category.

Other Eye-Witnesses

We have other autoptic witnesses to the miracles. Mark's Gospel reports Peter's description of the miracles of Jesus. If John the apostle is the author of the fourth Gospel, we have another eye-witness to the miracles of Jesus. (See John 21:24). In John's Gospel we have healings of the sick (4:16 ff; 5:8; 6:2; 9:6 f.), raising the dead (11:44), the resurrection of Christ (chaps. 20 and 21), and miracles over inanimate nature (2:9; 6:11 f, 19; 21:6).

Percy Gardner[10] thinks that Luke "was attracted to the new faith by its power over disease and evil spirits." Even so, we have no right to say that Luke was "taken in" by Paul's "pretense" to work miracles. Luke not only had Paul's word for working miracles, but in the "we sections" of Acts, Luke records miracles which he himself witnessed. "It should always be borne in mind that they are recorded by a physician, who was an eye-witness of them.[11] In these cases, therefore, we have a sort of double proof, Paul's general claim that he worked miracles, and Luke's testimony to seeing him do them. It is wholly gratuitous to say that Luke's judgment as a historian lapsed when miracles came before him. Let us examine some of the cases in question and see if Luke's treatment of the miracles wrought by Paul disqualifies him for discussing in a credible manner the miracles of Jesus.

The Girl With a "Python"

The cure of the ventriloquist girl (Acts 16:18) is in point. The poor girl had a "python."[12] Plutarch says that a ventriloquist was called a python. The slave girl may have been diseased in her mind and was the object of superstition and the victim of a group of men who exploited her fortune-telling for gain as men, alas, exploit girls for base gain. The poor girl troubled Paul, Luke and the rest, "the same following after Paul and us" (Acts 16:17). Luke reports Paul as charging "the spirit in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her. And it came out that very hour." The whole subject of demonology is a dark one, but modern scientists are no longer so positive that evil spirits cannot dominate human beings. Luke saw the cure of this girl, sudden and instantaneous.

Luke was a witness also of the earthquake and the release of the prisoners with the consequent conversion of the jailor (Acts 16:26 34). He does not report the earthquake as a miracle, but as a dispensation of providence for Paul and Silas.

Luke saw Paul restore to life the lad who had fallen out of the window at Troas during Paul's long sermon (Acts 20:9-12). Luke is careful here in his language. He says the boy was "taken up dead," but he implies that Paul brought him round to life and not by medical means. Luke was evidently greatly impressed.

We have also Luke's description of Paul's shaking off the viper unharmed (Acts 28:5) which Ramsay considers a constrictor, a non-poisonous snake. But even so that explanation cannot apply to the cure of Publius by Paul's prayer (Acts 28:8), and to Luke's further practice of medicine in the island (28:9 f.). Luke does not create the impression in these narratives that he is credulous and anxious to tell the marvelous. His language is restrained and simple and quite that of a scholar who weighs his words.

III

Luke's Report of Miracles in Q (the Logia) and Mark

In Luke 7:20-23 (Matt. 11:4-6) Luke reports the record in Q (possibly by Matthew the publican, himself an eye-witness of the miracles of Jesus) of the words of Jesus concerning His miracles. The two messengers from the Baptist in prison brought his despairing question in his hour of gloom: "Art thou he that cometh or look we for another?" (Luke 7:19). But Jesus went on with His work as if not heeding the inquiry. "In that hour he cured many of diseases and plagues and evil spirits; and on many that were blind he bestowed sight" (Luke 7:21). Then Jesus turned to the messengers and said, "Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard; the blind receive their sight, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, the poor have good tidings preached unto them." This was the cure for John's doubt and despair.

We have seen that Q preserves the oldest tradition about Christ that we have. It may even belong to the time when Christ was alive on earth. There is no escape from the fact that Jesus claimed to work miracles and that people believed that He wrought them. Luke had seen Paul work miracles. He would not be prejudiced against the testimony for the miracles of Jesus. But did he not sift the evidence for the miracles of Jesus as he claims to have done (Luke 1:1-4) about everything else? In Luke 7:1-10 (Matt. 8:5-13) we certainly have a quite independent record of the same event that Matthew narrates. Luke gives the two embassies from the centurion to Jesus, while Matthew fails to bring out these details.

Mark gives a detailed report of eighteen miracles of Jesus. Of these Luke also reports thirteen. Luke modifies the language in certain instances, but he does not weaken the argument for the real interposition of divine power by Christ. Two of them are nature miracles (the stilling of the storm and the feeding of the five thousand). The rest (counting the drowning of the swine with the cure of the demoniac) are cases of healing.

Few today will take the position of Hume that miracles cannot be proven or even that of Huxley that we can know nothing about the matter at all. Fewer still assert that miracles cannot happen. Goethe said that a voice from heaven would not convince him that water burned or that one rose from the dead. But water can be made to burn by certain chemicals. The more we know about nature and God, the more modest we become in our dogmatic statements about God's limitations. Many are now willing to admit that Jesus cured nervous troubles by psychic force since we have learned that the mind has a great influence on the body. Professor Hyslop even suggests that hospitals be set apart for the curing of certain forms of insanity by casting out demons. And then many cases of insanity are now cured by pulling out diseased teeth. So we learn slowly. But demoniacal possession is no longer scouted by all scientists.

We must remember that nothing is miraculous to God or to Christ. If modern science could learn all the secrets of nature and by the use of the laws of God do the things that Jesus did, surely this would not disprove the cures wrought by Jesus or His claim to divine energy in doing them. "My Father worketh even until now, and I work" (John 5:17). With amazement and with difficulty we unlock a few of the mysteries of nature and pride ourselves on our own attainments. Jesus played with the forces of nature as a master musician. The more we learn of the marvels of nature, the more we marvel at Jesus. There is only one explanation of His person and His claim and His prowess. He was the Son of God.

IV

Five Cases of Healing in Luke Alone

Of the thirty-five miracles described in detail in the Gospels, Luke gives twenty. Of the twenty-six miracles of healing Luke gives sixteen and five are peculiar to him. These five excited the special interest of Luke. They were all chronic or incurable cases like the old woman with curvature of the spine (Luke 13:10-17), the man with the dropsy (14-1:6), the ten lepers (17:11-19), the case of surgery (22:51), and the restoration to life of the son of the widow of Nain (7:11-17). They were all cured instantaneously by Jesus and were genuine miracles. Not one of these was a case of nervous disorder. These cannot be explained by any theory of modern psychology Luke was a psychologist, like all true physicians, but he has no hesitation in recording these cases that go beyond all human power now as then. Luke alone reports the remarkable case of the raising of the son of the widow of Nain. The funeral procession was stopped and the boy given back to his mother. It is one of the tenderest touches in the Gospels. It manifestly touched the heart of Luke. "There is no need to prove that the representation of our Lord given in the third Gospel is dominated by the conception of Him as the wondrous Healer and Saviour of the sick, as, indeed, the Healer above all healers."[13] But we are not at liberty to distort this fact into meaning that Luke attributed supernatural powers to Christ in order to create that impression. We may, if we will, say that Luke was incompetent to distinguish a miracle from an ordinary case of healing or was a poor judge of evidence, though our opinion makes no change in the facts of the case. Gilbert;[14] endeavors to explain away Luke's belief in the miraculous: "We cannot doubt that Luke, who was little interested in the miraculous element * * * was profoundly moved by what he learned of the depth and the universality of the Master's sympathy." But how does Gilbert know that Luke took little interest "in the miraculous element?" Percy Gardner says that Luke loved a good miracle so much that he would lug it in to brighten his narrative. It is hard to satisfy critics of Luke. Luke gives no evidence of being an excitable physician or a poor diagnostician. He writes calm and serious history after prolonged and thorough research. We are bound to give due weight to what he records as true whether we accept it or not. It is easier to ask questions than to answer them. Who today can tell what is the origin of life, or the true nature of life, or what death is and means?

V

Miracles of Christ over Nature

Luke did not hesitate to record evidences of the power of Christ over animate and inanimate nature outside of man. It is here that some modern scientists take a more positive stand against miracles. Possible explanations have been offered for some of the miracles of healing so that men of science are less skeptical about the rest. But it must never be overlooked that the fact of the miracles of Jesus by no means depends upon our being able to offer intelligible theories about them. They may thus be rendered easier for some men to believe, but the miracles of Jesus are grounded on the central fact of God's mastery over nature. Jesus presents God as personal, and not as an abstract philosophical concept on or as misty pantheism. God is like Jesus as Jesus is like God. Personal will rules the universe, the will of God expressed in His laws, but superior to His laws, the source of all energy and life. This is the view of Jesus and He acts upon it. Luke accepts it and records proofs of Christ's power and claims. It is not unscientific that a real God should be at the heart of the universe. Modern scientists hesitate to say that God cannot or does not guide the universe by His will. Wonderful powers have been discovered in certain forms of matter like radium. We must either be materialists or spiritualists (in the proper use of that word). Either matter is eternal and self-sufficient and the source of life and energy or God is eternal and before matter and the creator of matter and the guide of the universe. No one today conceives of a mechanical God who started the universe and then took His hand off of the machine. God is working today as much as ever. He works by His laws, by the laws of His own nature, some of which we have discovered. But He works on whether we are ignorant or whether we know. Nothing is miraculous to God. His will is the supreme law of the universe. It is thus an ordered world of law, but not a merciless machine that, like a juggernaut, overrides all. Presumption pays the price in such a universe. But we are not hopeless and helpless before the perils of nature red in tooth and claw. Law at bottom is love and God is love. God does not act by whims and caprice, but He is our Father.

So Jesus lets the demons rush into the swine to save the man (Luke 8:33 f.). "He gave them leave," Luke says, following Mark's record (5:13). Whatever our explanation of the reason that prompted Jesus, Luke puts down what Mark has. The result proves that the people cared more for the hogs than they did for the poor demoniac, or they begged Jesus to leave their shores (Luke 8:37). It mattered little that the man was now clothed and in his right mind (8:35). This miracle is usually counted as one and the same with that of the Gerasene demoniac. Huxley had his fun with Gladstone over "the Gadarene Pig Affair," but, all the same, hogs are subject to mass attacks like sheep and like mobs of men. Huxley's point about Gerasa and Gadara vanishes, for we know that the village of Khersa (Gerasa) by the lake, is meant, (not Gerasa thirty miles away), the village tributary to Gadara some six miles distant.

Luke alone gives the draught of fishes (5:1-11). Some critics find here another version of the draught of fishes in John 21:1-14, but without adequate justification. Peter plays a leading part both times, it is true, but that is not strange. One of the strangest of all theories is that of [14] Jesus, pp. 46 f.

Schmiedel who thinks that Luke is giving an allegory of Paul's conflict with the Judaizers about the Gentiles.[15] No wonder Carpenter[16] calls this interpretation "an interesting example of the over-subtlety with which Luke can be treated." And that is termed historical and scientific exegesis! The allegorizing is that of Schmiedel, not of Luke. Luke (8:22-25) reports the stilling of the storm, following Mark's Gospel (4:35-41; Matt. 8:23-27). The mastery of Christ over wind and wave is clearly shown to the marvel of the disciples, who gain a fresh revelation of the person and power of Jesus.

The feeding of the five thousand is given in all the four Gospels, the only one of the miracles wrought by Jesus that is thus attested. Huxley does not ridicule this witness which is on a par with the resurrection of Christ in its full testimony. And yet Luke records this amazing incident with much detail (9:10-17). Mark's Gospel here preserves the vivid details of Peter's description, the garden beds and the green grass (Mark 6:39 f.), but Luke follows Mark with the orderly arrangement of the crowd and the manifest miraculous multiplication of the loaves and the fishes in the presence of all the multitude. Jesus stood on the hillside and blessed and broke the loaves as the disciples rapidly bore and distributed the baskets. This miracle is a stumbling-block to all who believe in an absentee God or in no God. But we see here Jesus as Lord of nature and of man, with infinite pity and boundless power. He hastened or skipped the usual processes of nature. The miracle created a crisis in the ministry of Jesus and led to His withdrawal from Galilee because of popular excitement and misunderstanding. It is hard to think that the great crowds were fed by a trick and so purposely misled by Jesus. The picture of Jesus on the eastern slope of the Sea of Galilee near Bethsaida Julias challenged the interest of Luke, as it compels men today, to pause. The crowd wanted to take Him by force to Jerusalem and crown Him political king as the panacea for earthly ills. If we crown him King of our lives, we shall find Jesus to be what Luke took Him to be, the Great Physician for soul and body, the Saviour from sin and sickness, the Lord of all nature, the Giver of all grace and good, the Lord of life and of death.

"What Manner of Time," 1 Pet. 1:11

By Rev. Henry Ostrom, D. D.

WHEN Eve named her first-born son Cain, how great and strong must have been the hope back of the choice of that name!

Cain means, "I have gotten a man from the Lord." Eve had likely heard God's words, "It shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel" (Gen. 3:15). Whose head? The serpent's head. What shall bruise his head? The woman's seed.

Does she now consider, "This boy is mine, here is the seed, he is the one who shall bruise the serpent's head, I will name him accordingly 'the man from the Lord' ?" She had no knowledge of the extended history of mankind to consider. All this was at the initial stage. "Ah," she thinks, "this is the Messiah. I have gotten Him!"

Time Does Not Count With God

"But not so, mother Eve. At length the promise will be fulfilled, and to the full; but the God who made this promise is the eternal God. He hath set eternity in His heart. He carries out plans conceived in the ages of the ages; they are large to infinity, and wise and holy to boundlessness. Hence, centuries must pass before the promised serpent-bruiser is born of woman's seed, and centuries more thereafter must be, before the fulness of that glorious promise is seen (Luke 1:31-33)."

"One day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day" (2 Pet. 3:8). That is, when time with God is to be considered we have to abandon all rules of arithmetic, for, one three hundred and sixty-five thousandths parallels three hundred and sixty-five, and three hundred and sixty-five fits only alongside one three hundred and sixty-five thousandths. With Him the former is as now, and what is now is as the former. So above time is He that it becomes timeless.

After all, it is not so difficult for man to grasp this truth. Do not we, we finites, when waiting for some belated railway train to carry us to a friend in a startling hour of peril, seem to feel that one hour is a whole day? O, how waiting stretches time! Contrariwise, do we not, when in delightful visiting with an old-time friend, seem to realize that two hours are only two minutes? And we exclaim, "It cannot be so late!"

Thus does the short seem long, and the long short. It is far from impossible to trace the significance of the words, "A thousand years are as one day," and its opposite. It is the language of timelessness which is eternity. Thus, we wait, and from one point of view the ages are so drearily long. We look, and from another point of view, the event, centuries away, is "at hand."

The Timeless Element in the "Blessed Hope"

When John the Baptist began to announce "The kingdom of heaven is at hand," his expression "at hand" gave to men the truth that this would be the next outstanding epoch. The epoch might extend over an hour or over centuries. Epochs can not be tied too firmly to ticking clocks.

When Paul announces by the Holy Spirit also, "The Lord is at hand," as the reason why saints are to be anxious for nothing, it is the same as saying that the next great event is the fact that He is coming back. Indeed, that is the event, and we are to be so expecting it that if we reach out the hand, it may be then and there that the heavens will light up and He will appear. But as to time, it is the same as in John the Baptist's announcement. When Paul says, "We shall not all sleep but we shall all be changed in a moment," he includes himself in that "we." How the Holy Spirit here also gives the truth in the terms of eternity rather than those of measured years of twelve months each!

Yes, of the eternities! For you and I are also included here. "We!" Is not that just as he uses the word "we" in 1 Corinthians 15:49? There he says, "As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." Who bear the image? The church—people of Corinth only? Surely not. He is writing for us also. Like the old prophets "Searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit which was in them did signify" (1 Pet. 1:11), they wrote clear beyond themselves. So the Holy Spirit here is through Paul including us in the hope of the image of the heavenly, and in the epistle to the Thessalonians is he not including us in the "we?" There is evidently the arithmeticless and the timeless element in this precious declaration of that "blessed hope."

When Jesus says, "Now shall the prince of this world be cast out" (John 12:31), we think He means that one of whom it is said, "The whole world lieth in the wicked one." We say, "Now?" Yes, now, just as the cry on the cross, "It is finished," was as truly the finishing of my guilt as a believer in Jesus, as if I were transferred across the centuries and were standing today beside the Roman centurion and looking upon Jesus on the cross for me. So this word "now" is of the same timeless tang. We are in that epoch. Only the Eternal can speak so. And when God condescends to accommodate Himself to our actual periods of time, as He so often does in the prophets and elsewhere, it is but one more token of His merciful interest in us.

Centuries of Silence

If we imagine ourselves living in those days after Malachi, and before our Lord's advent to accomplish His marvelous work of salvation for us, we consider—what centuries of silence! Thus, too, when we look back from our present day to those hours before His crucifixion and hear Him saying, "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again," we say, "How long this silence lasts since He pronounced those words and a little later was received up!" How long since He was to come again!

And today we hear it said, "Where is the promise of His coming?" His coming! Is it not in the very air about us to argue as of old "since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were" (2 Pet. 3:4)? And there continues that long space of silence. Could He have forgotten—or failed? No, no. Again the long silence will be broken (as of yore) and suddenly. For, at length, "He that shall come will come, and will not tarry."

"The Lord is at Hand"

Say not, tested soul, that it is a long time waiting. Say rather what is true, "We do not quite know whether it is long time or short time. We have so often proven that the long is short and the short time long that we resign it completely to Him who knows the hour." Say rather, that you are to so prove the Holy Spirit increasing your faith that viewing it from the standpoint of His own revealed message, His holy Word, you rejoice in the fact day by day, "The Lord is at hand."

Have the God-given view. He with whom a thousand years are as one day and one day as a thousand years has imparted that standard to us that we may rest in it. Resting assured that "we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ" is as positive a truth as in the moment when first uttered (2 Pet. 1:16).

When those early and tested followers of our Lord Jesus asked Him, "Wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" Israel! The asking of that question is the spring of the bow of faith so far that it is just ready to break, but Jesus prevents the breaking. And how? By showing them how exceedingly small are "the times and seasons" when placed alongside the great, sure fact of the promised kingdom, in which He is to be King, after their witness, and ours. He seems to say, "I hold that project in hand duly, meantime I give you the honor of being witnesses in this special order called the church." (See Acts 1:6,7.)

Yes, it is so, He of the "yesterday, today and forever" may come and call His own up into the air this minute, or it may be He will not do it until tomorrow, or it may be much later by months, or years, or even decades. But with the Spirit of the Eternal filling us, we become so in tune with His Word that it becomes a constant language of the soul to say, "The Lord is at hand." How contenting, and how exalting and assuring!

Time Is Eternity Trimmed at Both Ends

Then let all affairs of business, recreation, conflict or friendship fit this glorious hope. Then let me witness to the last person possible that Jesus saves, and Jesus alone. Then too, let me be this moment the most fully Spirit-filled possible. I am living on earth, to be sure, but in the midst of the eternities, and "the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." For what is time but eternity trimmed at both ends?

We are in the same age with Peter, James, John and Paul. Other ages have terminated. This one will terminate too. It is an age described in the ninth chapter of Hebrews, with three great finger-board events: "Once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." Christ has entered "into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us." "Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time, without sin (or the sin-offering) unto salvation" (Heb. 9:24, 26, 28).

Let us keep the warm heart's greeting up to the very lip-edge. Ever ready! "The Lord is at hand!"

THE FALSE BROTHERHOOD AND THE TRUE

By Rev. Herbert J. Bryce

War hath not ended war, nor can it end
That sin born demon of the countless years;
Can ruthless force make warring spirits blend?
Can souls be cleansed by flowing blood and tears?

How sweet to dream of that new brotherhood,
"When each man's good will be each other's care,"
And man, by man no more misunderstood,
Shall dwell in love, and work and worship there.

Dream on, and strive, but vain the dream and toil,
While carnal mind rejects the Crucified;
Cain's brother's blood will yet besmear the soil,
Till man and God at last are reconciled.

There is no "Fatherhood," till sinners fling
Their weapons down and take God at His word;
There is no "brotherhood," which does not spring
From sonship born of faith in Christ the Lord.

"Is the World Growing Better?"

Or, Dr. Snowden as a Prophet

By Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D. D.

WHEN Christ said, "Be of good cheer," He gave a reason for the exhortation, and Dr. Snowden adduces in his book with the above title what he regards as genuine grounds for an optimistic view of things in general at the present day.

But unfortunately, his treatment does not carry out his thesis. Thus he speaks of optimism as the belief that the world "though infused with some evil, is yet fundamentally good and will grow better and better." Yet surely this is not strictly true to existing facts.

Then, it is said that personal theism is optimistic as opposed to impersonal pantheism, though he must know that there are many who are strongly convinced of personal theism who cannot be regarded as optimistic in Dr. Snowden's sense of the word.

Material progress is regarded as belonging to the kingdom of God (p. 45), and as such is to be considered as a proof that the world is getting better. But side by side with this there is a significant admission that "our whole material civilization is a monstrous powder magazine, that uncontrolled human selfishness can blow up in a world explosion that would shake the planet to its center. We must control it or it will destroy us" (p. 131). This does not inspire us with the conviction that material progress is to be considered as part of God's kingdom.

There are also some admissions that evil will continue, and that there will be a special outbreak of it at the end, though how this is to be reconciled with a gradual progress upward is not clearly indicated.

Christ's teachings are said to be optimistic (p. 64), though Dr. Snowden does not provide any real treatment of the questions of sin and redemption. His optimism does not rest on facts, but is largely a product of his own imagination.

It is curious to be told of the beneficent results of the war and in particular that "there are times when the sword of the Spirit and the sword of steel, the Bible and the bayonet, go together and do the same work" (p. 81). This is altogether different from the frank confession of a well-known English Unitarian that the disasters of the last four years will take centuries to repair and that in any case this can only be accomplished by some special divine interposition.

Dr. Snowden's reference to the League of Nations is equally optimistic and yet equally baseless as far as actual facts are concerned.

It is surprising that so well-informed a man can refer to Mr. H. G. Wells, as speaking about "a personal God in a vein that sounds orthodox" (p. 84). Dr. Snowden knows that so far from being orthodox, Mr. Wells is one of the bitterest opponents of Christianity and has spoken in deplorable terms of our Lord. As in the former book, Dr. Peabody, the Unitarian, is warmly praised without any hint being given of his theological position.

But the most impressive feature of Dr. Snowden's book is the manifest weakness of his treatment of Scripture. What are we to say to the interpretation of "energize" in James 5:16, as referring to our own energies first of all, "We must energize our prayers . . . God will then energize our prayers with His omnipotence" (p. 127).

We are also told that Jesus quickly hurried His three disciples down from the Mount of Transfiguration to the plain. It would be interesting to know the proof of this "hurry."

Our Lord's weeping over Jerusalem is said to have been followed by such religious, civil and political reform that "He cleaned up that town" (p. 157). Somehow we have never become aware that Jerusalem experienced this remarkable transformation.

In keeping with Dr. Snowden's postmillennial view, we are told that the leaven of Christianity is to leaven the whole mass of humanity and thereby the great prophecy will be fulfilled, "The kingdom of this world is become the kingdom of our Lord and His Christ." Here, again, a little reference to the context would have prevented so obvious a misuse of the passage.

Most surprising, and, it must be added, most flagrant of all, is the use of Romans 8:28 to explain the gradual progress of the world in Dr. Snowden's view.

The passage, "Then cometh the end" in 1 Corinthians15:24, is similarly misused, and given an interpretation which is entirely opposed to the context.

The question of the world getting better could not be considered without some reference to the problem of Christian unity and church union, and Dr. Snowden points with approval to the spirit of unity which now possesses Protestant denominations and "will widen and deepen and take on other communions and in time embrace all Christian bodies, Protestant, Roman Catholic and Greek" (p. 145). How this unity is to be accomplished without the sacrifice of truth is not indicated.

One more illustration will show quite clearly the essential position of Dr. Snowden. "Commerce, democracy, education, brotherhood, the League of Nations, and especially Christianity, are the fingers of God with which He is molding the world into form and fashioning it into a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." This is an astonishing statement even for Dr. Snowden, but it carries its own condemnation in the face of patent facts in the world today, to say nothing of the utter misuse of Scripture in the closing words.

This book has been read, like Dr. Snowden's former one, with the great desire of learning all that is possible of his point of view, more particularly as some of his earlier books were truly helpful in their Scriptural and forceful presentations of truth. But it must be said that if the students of the seminary in which Dr. Snowden is a member of the staff, are given teaching of this kind, it would not be in the slightest degree surprising if they enter the ministry either with an inaccurate view of Scripture and present-day facts, or else with no vital message of redemption for fallen man, and for a world that "lieth in the evil one."

The Insufficiency of the Interchurch World Movement

By Rev. D. Lauck Currens, M.A., Pastor, Oak Hill Presbyterian Church, Evansville, Ind.

A paper read before the Ministerial Alliance of that city and published by request of its members.

With the request for the publication of the article the following commendations were received. —Editors.

From the Presbytery of Indiana

Rev. D. Lauck Currens is a member of the Presbytery of Indiana, and pastor of Oak Hill Presbyterian Church, Evansville, Ind. His pastorate has been greatly blessed both in the building up of his church, and the conversion of souls. He has taken a prominent part in the work of the Presbytery and in general Christian effort, being a leader in Christian Endeavor and the Vice President of the Evansville Ministerial Alliance. He is a preacher of force and power, and his sermons display study and thought, and a loyalty to and knowledge of God's Word and the plan of salvation. He is faithful to the fundamentals. We take pleasure in commending him.

H. R. TAYLOR, Moderator of Presbytery.
J. S. HOWK, Stated Clerk of Presbytery.

From Evansville Pastors

I am glad to add this word of personal appreciation of the article. It is intended for the sober and serious reader. In it there is offered substantial food for serious reflection.

G. C. SCHAUB, Pastor, English Lutheran Church.

Rev. D. L. Currens' article in my judgment is the most unique exposure of interchurch autocracy and inefficiency I have been privileged to hear.

J. W. JENKINS, Pastor, Calvary Baptist Church.

Thousands of Bible Christians and conscientious believers will welcome this pointed treatment of the great "world-betterment" propaganda known as the Interchurch World Movement.

J. FREDERICK RAKE, Minister, First Baptist Church.

THE objectives of the Interchurch World Movement are good. Summarized they are: spiritual life, intercessors, ministerial and missionary volunteers, stewardship, world survey, soul winning, and the application of the principles of Christ in all civic relationships. Many good men are affiliated with the Movement.

Its methods, however, cannot be commended as in keeping with the honor of Christianity. This may seem unimportant. We might say that the plan of salvation is unimportant so long as men are saved. But if the means are insufficient then that becomes the vital question. The means employed by the Movement are insufficient to attain the goals it has set.

I

It Is Autocratic in Organization

Its originators were a few self-appointed and self-authorized men. They advertise the denominations as saying: "It is not enough for us to go forward. We must go forward together." This makes the Movement indigenous but the fact is, it is exotic. It began in a corner outside the church—we know not where—and has been working its way gradually into the denominations. This opens the way for all kinds of unauthorized movements to seek shelter under the branches of the church. If it had been born of the Spirit it would have come into being by each denomination spontaneously electing representatives to create such a co-operative agency.

The leaders are autocratic. They invited ministers, as guests rather than representatives, to their conferences, where they proclaimed their decisions. They forced the unauthorized Foreign Missions Conference to ratify a budget of $104,000,000 unauthorized by their respective boards or churches. Of the thirty-nine leaders, fifteen are Methodist and seven Presbyterian. The Methodists have pledged nothing to the expenses of the Movement and the Presbyterians $1,000,000. Why representation without taxation? The Methodists and Y. M. C. A. men hold down all the leading executive positions. New York is fast becoming the Rome of America where the heads of the would-be Protestant hierarchy have their seats of authority.

The influence of the Movement is autocratic. It influenced the Executive Commission of the Presbyterian Church to authorize the boards to reappropriate part of the benevolent funds of over a million people, and to keep their books open ten days beyond the closing date, which is a flat violation of church law.

The financial canvass is called a "drive." This implies a driver, and that means autocracy and slavery. Dr. G. A. Gordon designates such campaigns as "Caesarism gone mad," and "wildcat ecclesiastical campaigning."

Will democratic churches bow the knee to this Baal? We cannot believe that Protestants, freed from such idolatry in Reformation days, will yield.

II

It Is Extravagant in Expenditures

Dr. Agar informs us that it was underwritten by the denominations co-operating, the Banker's Trust Co., of New York, loaning the money, being confident that the security is good. Think of the risk the church is taking in view of the high cost of living, industrial conditions and the economic deflation that will come! Should she be left in debt when the storm breaks, what will become of her honor in the eyes of an unfriendly world? The Movement then is spending money which is not its own.

Who gets the money for the surveys? Not the pastors who do the greater part of the work, but those who command. Bishop Neely said: "The centenary committee has no business to tell us what we must do. I cannot see why their work must be done by a committee at a cost of $1,000,000 a year when twenty thousand pastors are ready to do it." This is true in a larger degree of the Interchurch Movement.

Some items of extravagance that might be mentioned: Conventions in capitals when the same facts could have been given in local centers, saving the railroad fare of ministers; maps that could have been secured from boards or made by existing organizations; addresses that could have been given under boards; spectacular advertising and unnecessary literature, and experts who are termed "courageous" for leaving problematic parishes to receive high salaries doing sums in arithmetic.

The southern Baptists completed a $100,000,000 campaign at a cost of less than three-fourths of one per cent. The Interchurch Movement needs 5 per cent for its expenses. Why not secure the Baptist organizers and save four and one-fourth per cent of the budget?

III

It Is Worldly in Methods

The fact that secular periodicals since the Movement started are saying to the church, "Shoemaker stick to your last," should call her back to an evangelistic and spiritual program.

This from Life: "The primary job of the churches is to conserve and impart religion. Their great office is to connect things visible with things unseen. If they do not do that, all their organization for benevolences, and all the dollars they entice from submissive contributors will not save them from failure as churches. Their errand is spiritual. It cannot be accomplished by mere material activities, though such activities are bound to follow if the spiritual errand really prospers."

The Philadelphia Inquirer says: "A decline in interest in churches may, in part, be set down to the fact that so many are engaged in movements foreign to their purpose. When a church becomes a vaudeville house and a forum for men who have axes to grind and salaries to earn, it degenerates into an omnibus of bedlamic distractions that irritate a lot of persons and disgust as many more."

These quotations show what the world expects from the church and what it gets. That it will get no more from the Interchurch is evidenced by what it has done and the materialistic and worldly commission it gives. Men are employed to get money to feed machinery to produce motion. Jesus sent His disciples to preach the gospel.

1. The gospel method is vital not motive. The Movement realized from the start it must do something to attract attention, so these modern Babel builders put on "The Wayfarer" in New York. Thirty professional performers who were not Christians mingled with church people in the cast. The star said, "The Koran appeals to me more than the Bible." An admission was charged. Advertisements read. "See the mob streaming toward Calvary to the crucifixion. The Triumph of the Cross. The tomb of Joseph on the day of the resurrection."

Thus the most sacred events that ever took place upon this planet were dragged down to the level of the comedy and the vaudeville. Should a Movement which so prostitutes the fundamentals of our faith by commercializing them to gain publicity merit anything less than the righteous indignation and anathemas of every contender for the faith?

Motion is not life. Organization is good but it cannot take the place of life which is not made, but given by God. Life must come first—being internal, organization may follow—being external. The Movement has put organization first.

2. The gospel method is spiritual not mechanical. The leaders speak of the value of the spiritual yet their Movement is mechanical. Spectacular attractions, hurry-up methods, and forced effects seem to announce that God would have His church geared to the hustling American spirit, and that the Kingdom of God will come in a day. Dr. John Mott said, "It seems to me in the past five years God has done the work of one hundred years. We must quicken our pace."

God can make a squash in a few months, but it takes Him years to grow an oak tree. Do we want a superficial Christianization of humanity? The old symbol of the altar, the ox and the plow—ready for sacrifice or patient service—has been displaced for the band and the oil can. The Interchurch Movement is attempting to make God grow a harvest in one day by machinery and very little seed.

3. The gospel method is God-energized and not money-energized. The Movement is so anxious to get money that it does not care where or how it is secured. It merits the criticism of Wells that religion today is only exploitation. It would have us infer that if money fills their treasury all that Christianity should do for the world will be accomplished immediately.

It is reported that in an Interchurch conference these questions were asked:

"Who will supply the millions in the budget?" The leader answered: "The millionaires."

"Why are successful men taken from pastorates to join the Movement?" He answered, "They can do better persuading millionaires to give up their money."

The Continent presents logical objections to the excursion into "No Man's Land." Summarized they are:

"The church wants the credit of doing millions of dollars worth of good, and tells the world she will invest half of the amount if it will put in the other half even if it doesn't care much for the churches. It means the church passing the hat and beating the drum on the street, strengthening the idea that the church cares more for the money than the man, fortifying the man who considers that a gift to a good cause will let him out of all further obligations, callousing the conscience so that he thinks the pocketbook will get him forgiveness, and reversing the apostolic ambition to get men to first give their own selves to the Lord. It means denying the Christian principle that money given from a spiritual motive has greater power to build the kingdom, and teaches the church to rely on others to perform part of her obligation to her Lord—a death wound to the sense of responsibility necessary for stewardship.

"Some may be brought into the church in this way but that does not necessarily mean they have become Christians or that the principle could successfully be applied wholesale, for many will be driven away from the church, and worse still, from Christ. To invite Sanballat and Tobiah to help us do spiritual work in a mechanical way is to break down the line of demarcation between the church and the world. The church needs other things worse than it needs money."

Dr. J. M. Duff, of Pittsburgh, says: "As for securing that power from on high which alone, in our business, can make any human effort effective, we should remember that Pentecost had neither numbers, capital, organization, nor promoters and yet "they were all filled with the Holy Ghost."

The Interchurch Movement is trying to make effect precede cause in its attempt to pool the interests of the church before Pentecost has come.

4. The gospel method is divine not human. The Movement trusts in man more than in God. Hosts of young men have been taken from pastorates to become money raisers. Christ sent them to preach, the Interchurch Movement to raise money. They hope to glean from the one per cent of church youths in college future leaders who will at least be able to hold the bag like Judas, while the less fortunate, who do not hold diplomas, fill it.

If the money is secured where will the men be found who can do gospel work? Twenty per cent of our ministers have left the pastorates for other vocations since the war began. The southern Baptist campaigners are to do evangelistic work. How many Interchurch men are, or could? Why did they not go out into the field and help in the Easter ingathering? Theological students will be sent this summer into lumber camps but as lumber-jacks only. Would Jesus have sent them with sealed lips concerning the message they are to deliver through life?

The Movement does not care to regenerate a man so much as by "painless extraction" to draw from him money for itself and its program. The two leading bodies last year lost 84,000 in membership. Is it not time for them to hear the voice of the laymen calling the church from its worldly enterprise to preach the gospel?

IV

It Is Untruthful in Some of Its Statements

The fallacies are mostly inferential and therefore the more misleading. For example:

"It is the agency which the churches have created." This has been proven fallacious.

"Practically complete Protestantism will unite in raising together the budget." The Methodists, southern Baptists, Episcopalians, Lutherans and others will make no Interchurch canvass.

"Every dollar has its post of service assigned to it in advance." In the five year budget $154,000,000 for home missions is marked "Unallotted."

"Put the church in a town and you insure a community where law and order reign." An Interchurch speaker said recently that in eastern Ohio, an overchurched section is noted for its corruption and vice. Have they tried the gospel?

"Part of the Interchurch program is a living wage for every minister." "Just what and where is the money to be spent? Item 6,—pastors salaries." "In preachers' homes life will be made happier and better." "Rosy vision of benefits pastors will enjoy through Interchurch Movement"—Interchurch Bulletin. Notice that these benefits are to come through the Movement and not the local church or denomination.

S. J. Greenfield writes from the headquarters of the Survey Department. "There is no effort being made to create an endowment fund for the benefit of effective ministers. The amount in the budget is entirely for ministerial relief and pensions" (ministers past sixty-five). "It is better to show the churches their financial ability and the meager support now given their ministers, and then leave it with each local church to decide the matter for itself."

V

It Is Setting Aside the Faith

G. Frederick Wright observes that the strenuous efforts put forth by various denominations to raise immense sums of money occurs at the same time that there is a noteworthy letting down of their standards of faith, notably in their recognition of the authority of the Bible.

The absence of Scripture in the advertisements of the Movement is noticeable. Cannot the leaders agree that the Bible is the Word of God? Or, does the world not need it? Only two texts have we seen and they were mutilated, the vital truth being cut out. The laymen are "weary for the Word" today.

The official organ of the Movement, the World Outlook, has launched the definite policy of making Christianity appeal to everybody, even the most skeptical. Its main object is to "show the practicality and attractiveness of Christianity, not creed."

"Can two walk together except they be agreed?" We conclude then that the churches which are walking together in this Movement are agreed that declarations of faith should be set aside, and ethics should be pushed to the front. Hence the name of Christ is not found in the name and seldom in the advertisements of the Movement.

Only that in Christianity which is "attractive" and appeals to the "most skeptical" shall be presented, therefore doing away with the spiritual for "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." That which is foolish to the unregenerate man would not be attractive to him. "The preaching of the cross is to them that perish, foolishness; but unto us which are saved, it is the power of God." Thus the cross should also be set aside. The practical silence of the Movement's literature concerning the cross and the empty tomb proves this to be the case.

This quotation from Bushnell cannot be passed over: "One more revival, only one is needed, the consecration of the money power to God, when that comes the Kingdom of God will come in a day." Peter preached: "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord." Jesus said to the church (Laodicea), representing our day: "I will spue thee out of my mouth. Because thou sayest I am rich and increased with goods and have need of nothing. * * * I counsel thee to buy of me gold. * * * Behold I stand at the door and knock." Would Jesus not use the same words were He to speak from heaven today concerning the Interchurch Movement?

What comment would He make on the decision of the General Committee that "for the present non-evangelical and interdenominational and undenominational bodies should not be related in an organic way?"

What would Christ think of the plan of His churches to "co-operate in foreign mission fields to produce the largest results in international education, health, and good will." Why not in evangelization?

All of these things show that the belief in the supernatural and the fundamentals does not occupy an important place in the hearts of many of the leaders.

VI

It Is Unionistic in Tendency

Some quotations will show this drift of the Movement:

A leading minister speaking on it said, "I am glad the day of denominationalism is over." The "elimination of competition in local and foreign fields" certainly is a big step in the direction of union.

The present plan of co-operation is considered "temporary." Certainly the leaders do not think that after several years the churches will cease co-operation! The next step in the other direction will be union.

"The spirit of co-operation is in the air, and sectarianism, and the accompanying bigotry which it engenders, will not be tolerated."

The statement of the General Committee concerning the churches not admitted to the Movement speaks of them, in its statement, as not being related to it in an "organic way." Is not that a unionistic term?

A secular paper writes: "With the League of Nations now in working order, in the next three years we will have a league of churches so near as to pass for an actual accomplishment."

This we find in the Movement's advertisements: "The evangelical churches of North America have formed a league (in another statement 'have united') in a great co-operative movement."

There can be no doubt regarding the unionistic tendency in these statements. Do we want it? What will it mean? Ecclesiastical autocracy, such as is pictured in Revelation 13:11-18; a mechanical and not a spiritual union, for that is of the Spirit and cannot be made; prohibition against the proclamation of the fundamentals of our faith; and the monopoly of ecclesiastical funds.

"If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, (of Christ) receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed: for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds" (2 John 1:10,11).

The time has come for ministers and laymen to demand a survey of this Movement, and refrain from bidding it God speed.

Dr. I. M. Haldeman's Church on the Interchurch Movement

AT the close of the regular Sunday morning service, April 25, 1920, the First Baptist Church of New York City adopted resolutions, unanimously declaring that it would not have any fellowship with the Interchurch Movement, and would refuse the invitation of the Northern Baptist Convention to participate therein. The church also gave reasons for its action of which the following is the substance:

The Interchurch Movement is postmillennial; it teaches an ethical rather than a sacrificial Christ; it emphasizes Christ's work through His life rather than His death on the cross; it teaches the regeneration and salvation of society rather than the individual; it substitutes the kingdom of Christ for the Church of Christ; it teaches that the kingdom of Christ is to be established by the preaching of the gospel; it would turn the churches into community centers rather than organizations interested solely in the preaching of Christ to the world; it teaches that the world is growing better; it teaches that God is the Father of all men; it says nothing about heaven or hell; it is supported by theological seminaries, professors, preachers, and teachers who do not stand for the inspired Word of God; and it accepts modernism, while wearing the guise of evangelical and missionary appeal.

Voices from God's People in Germany

By Professor Franz Zeller, Bloomfield, N. J., Theological Seminary

THE question might well be asked, How do God's people in Germany feel about the present deep distress of their own country? How do they view the outcome of the past bitter struggle? For surely in Germany too, as in every nation where the gospel has been preached, God has His own, His elect, members of Christ's Body, the Church, those seven thousand whom He has left unto Himself, who have not bowed the knee unto Baal.

Now that communication has been restored with Germany, we can hear again from God's people in that land; apparently the avalanche of war had buried them, obliterated them, but in reality they had meanwhile rooted deeper into Christ. We hear their voices of sorrow, humiliation and affliction.

But they are not alone, their Saviour is with them, comforting and upholding them. The Holy Spirit enlightens them and reveals to them the secret why God has permitted this suffering to come upon them. And what is this secret? They are passing through this furnace of trial in order that they be cleansed and prepared for future service of the Lord. They had been in danger of being lost in the quicksands of materialism, of rationalistic modernism; worldliness by its many allurements had threatened to engulf them. They see their mistakes; one dominant note in these voices is repentance.

I

This is from letters by a German who had been in the trenches and then was requisitioned for digging coal in Westphalia.

"All our complaining is of no avail. We have deserved it, that Germany now lies on the ground. God's hand lies heavily upon us, yet the majority of the people do not see God's hand, but think that all is only man's doings. Because I know that all comes from God, good and evil, because it is God who speaks to us so earnestly, I have comfort, for nothing can happen to me but what He has permitted and what is for my good.

"O that our nation might awake and come to repentance! I know not whether the other nations are better than we; at any rate we were ripe for overthrow and our enemies are the instrument of God; nevertheless they also are responsible and must give an account.

"God alone guides the history of the world. He is love and 'would have all men to be saved,' is patient with us, and seeks us when we are lost. But if we reject His grace, He will reject us also; this has befallen the people of Germany.

"In the beginning of the war it seemed as if a great awakening and a general conversion had taken hold of the people. At present they seek those who have caused the war. Let each one rather seek the guilt within himself, for we all have contributed our share. Because of our sins the war broke out. The wrath of God must at last burst forth. We have not yet passed through this testing time, rather we have entered into it.

"One feels like exclaiming: 'Earth, open thy mouth and devour us,' as I often have said, while in the service; yet we must again lift up our eyes and praise God for His wonderful grace with which He has visited our nation. He sits on the throne and directs everything well. But thou, poor German people, art blinded, thou dost not see thy God in this change of circumstances. Thou art going towards an abyss.

"God wished to save our nation, but they cast God from them, they dance at the verge of their grave. O God, save what is worthy of thy grace!

"Hostile thoughts I have none, even not if your husband should have fought against us, for God willed it so."

Thus wrote the ex-soldier to his relative, a lady in America, in the summer or fall of 1919.

II

A godly woman who evidently has had much blessed experience of her wonderful Saviour, writes from Saxony or Silesia, September 22, 1919:

"But the Lord our God has His good intentions with us, especially with us Germans. He desires to make us entirely free from all earthly things and with all earnestness to draw our hearts to Himself and thus to make us useful instruments for the building of His kingdom. All these dark leadings are nevertheless naught but true signs of His Father-love.

"O, for nothing I long more deeply, for you and myself, than for this—that we might always remain the Saviour's entire property."

III

A teacher who during the war had been in the army in Russia, writes from Hamburg:

"With deepest sorrow I write to you again after so long a time; I have been shaken to the depths of my being by all that has happened. But I also lift my eyes from the dark events of this earth upward and seek to understand all these terrible things as higher providences. To overcome evil with good, that seems to me to be the task of all those who do not lose themselves in material things."

IV

From a man of a village in Württemberg, southern Germany, who leads a "Stunde" (a gathering of pietists, yet members of the State church) this has come to our notice:

"The dear Lord has deeply humbled Germany by this great war, but of the larger part of the nation it must be said: 'Men will no more let my Spirit chastise them, for they are flesh'" (Luther's translation of Genesis 6:3).

He then writes of the fearfully high prices prevailing in that country, but adds: "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God. As yet, there is no real, actual famine prevailing among us, but such will soon be the case, unless the dear Lord have mercy upon us.

"May our God and Saviour give us grace, that we cling to Him ever more closely; then we can look into the future, free and confident, come what may."

V

But not only do private letters breathe repentance, resignation and trust in God, who is glorified in these, His dear children, by having brought forth in them such precious fruit, but in a church paper, of the State church, similiar expressions are found. Der Christen-Bote (The Christians' Messenger) (Stuttgart), in its issue of December 14, 1919, brings a brief meditation on Romans 3:10-21 and says in it:

"Our text contains a hard saying which one does not like to hear. But it fits very well our present circumstances and lights them up with the light of truth. Our deplorable collapse would not have taken place, we would not have been given over into the power of our external foes and into the hands of the revolutionaries, if not a sin and guilt of our whole nation existed.

"We must humbly submit ourselves to the Word: 'There is none righteous, no, not one.' Who has in all matters, before the war and during the war, so behaved that he could stand before God? Who has never wronged others by word or deed? 'There is none that understandeth.' How many mistakes have been made during the war, at home and abroad! 'They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one.' Because large numbers of our nation have departed from the fear of God and from gratitude toward God and man, therefore, we all have become unprofitable."

More expressions like these, of repentance, a humbling oneself under the mighty hand of God, of resignation to His will, might be cited from this religious paper of the State church.

VI

What is to be the attitude of the Christian people of America towards these confessions and those who made them, God's people in Germany? One of haughty condemnation, of Pharisaical self-righteousness: "I thank Thee, God, that I am not like these Germans?"

Dare we, as a nation, sit in judgment on the faults of other nations? Are we, the American people, in God's eyes, perfect enough to judge others? Woe unto this land of ours, if the chastisement of God upon Germany causes us to grow only more self-complacent! Then God will have to humble us just as He humbled Germany because He loves us too much to let us perish through pride. "Whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth."

What of the Sunday desecration in our land which has grown to fearful proportions? What of the awful greed and heartless luxury on every side? What of the passion for intoxicating pleasures, indulged in by multitudes to a degree which in former years would have been incredible. Do we need to repent of our national sins?

America's worst sin is her self-righteousness. We condemn others, but overlook our own sins. The great forward movements of the church, at the present time, will be utterly in vain, yea, worse than vain, unless there is repentance. To have expended millions of dollars and gained thousands of church members will only mean increased self-righteousness of the church. They will say: "Peace, peace, and there is no peace." They will have the form of godliness but will deny the power thereof.

O that the church of today would heed the Saviour's warning to the Church of Ephesus: "Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent!" O that our nation would take to heart the Word of God to Israel, spoken through Jeremiah, the prophet: "It may be they will harken and turn every man from his evil way, that I may repent me of the evil which I purpose to do unto them because of the evil of their doings!"

Where to Expect Blessing in Service

By William Henderson, Superintendent, Shantymen's Christian Association

WE ALL know that God has given us a message of invitation to pass on to lost sinners, but not all carefully ask just where He desires the message delivered. The experience of the apostles when led by the Holy Spirit showed that for each time there was a special place to go. It was not the place of their choosing but the one to which they were sent. (See Acts 16:6, 7).

For any to be delivering their message in the wrong place is clearly disobedience, and such cannot expect blessing. Because of God's promise, however, wherever the good seed is sown same will grow, but only in the soil prepared by the Holy Spirit can an abundant harvest be reaped. In the last analysis this is a matter for each individual servant of God to find out for himself, and the Master certainly will clearly guide anyone ready to do His bidding.

At each period, however, certain signs have indicated in a general way the special fields for which messengers are required. For example, the wonderful way in which all the heathen world has been opened up during the past century is clearly the "open door" spoken of in Revelation 3:8, and constitutes a call second to none in importance for all who can go. Most of us however have our place of service in the home land, but it should be our business to find out in what particular field at home we are to work.

Students of prophecy who believe that the time for the Lord's return is very near at hand should have no difficulty in reading directions for the present field of service. The last order

In the North Woods—A Haul of Hemlock Logs given is: "Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in that my house may be filled."

No Longer the Streets and the Lanes

Forty years ago the message was to go into the streets and lanes of the city. To carry out this command the Salvation Army was raised up, and in every large city men were especially called to start rescue missions, such as Jerry McAuley's mission in New York, and the Pacific Garden Mission in Chicago.

These agencies still continue to work but anyone familiar with them knows that no longer do "the spiritually maimed, halt and blind" crowd the penitent benches as they did years ago. They are rather poor men's churches where humble Christians meet together and are refreshed by teaching, prayers and testimony, and where a few lost despairing souls come in and find their Saviour. We thank God for every one of them where the old-fashioned gospel is still proclaimed, and the only point we want to make is that no longer do the outcasts in any numbers crowd into them. The invitation they have given has reached every street and lane in the cities and "yet there is room."

Now the command has gone forth to reach the men whose labors are building up the great "highways," the railroads, or working in the "hedges" or the forests.

Within the past twenty years hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent for this purpose in the cities. In Vancouver, Winnipeg, and Duluth alone, expensive fire proof buildings have been erected for this purpose that run into the above figures. The same is true in many other cities, but as far as bringing any number of men to Christ is concerned their effort has been an expensive failure.

The men will crowd their sleeping capacity to the limit because it is economical and clean, but when the invitation is passed round the reading room to come into the gospel meeting not one in twenty will accept it. If the gospel meeting was started in the room it would be the signal for the men to leave en masse.

The Sleeping Camp vs. The Rescue Mission

Why then this failure? It is because the order is to "go" where the men are. By so doing one man can preach the gospel in a few months to more unsaved non-church or mission going men than all the rescue missions or men's owns combined, can reach in a year.

More than that, these very men who run away from the gospel meeting in the city show the greatest interest in the message when delivered to them in the sleeping camp, and ask the missionary to return as soon as possible.

It is true that in places where no missionary has been for years, such as the British Columbia camps, very bitter opposition from the infidel leaders among the men is encountered, but this merely demonstrates that the adversary of souls who has had undisputed sway is alarmed, and knows his influence is endangered.

A Typical Logging Camp—Lumberjacks Among Whom the Shantymen's Christian Association Labors

An Attractive Investment

Every child of God who holds a stewardship of money should consider then where He would have it invested so as to do most good. Every man consecrated to God's service surely wants his life to count for the very most use and therefore we draw attention again to this our Lord's command for the last days: Go and tell these men that "all things are now ready" for the great supper, and they are invited to come as guests. To know what obedience will mean read Luke 14:26, 27. It will be the joyful bringing in of the lost sheep (Luke 15:4-7), and seeing many prodigals come to themselves, (Luke 15:17).

All over this great continent of North America in the highways and hedges are great multitudes out of reach of any place where the gospel is preached. Who will help us give at least one invitation in a year to these scattered lost sheep? Within a few months if God's servants were obedient the invitation could be carried not only to every camp but to every neglected part of the country districts.

The Present Need

1. Consecrated messengers willing to endure hardship.
2. Motor cars to carry the messengers from farm to farm.
3. Motor boats to reach fishermen and lumbermen on the coast or up the rivers.
4. Horses for the mountain districts.

If you are looking for the Lord's return is it with the consciousness that you have been obedient? Anyone desiring to enter this service can be put in touch with the writer of this article by addressing him in care of this magazine.

"Evolution and Agnosticism"

A Letter from Philip Mauro

An editorial note in our March issue said that Mr. Callaway's article on the subject quoted above must bring the discussion to an end unless Mr. Benson, our earlier contributor, claimed the privilege to close the debate.

But when that dictum was expressed we could not know that Mr. Philip Mauro would take a part in the discussion, and we think that his prominence as a Christian teacher justifies the further exception we now make in publishing his letter.

Before doing so let us say, that Mr. Callaway's article which he criticises, was passed upon by two members of our editorial staff, both competent so far as general scholarship is concerned, and both as thoroughly devoted to evangelical truth as Mr. Mauro. Neither of them, however, had his experience in "Nineteenth Century Materialism", which may explain why they were not as keen in discerning the "scientific delusions and follies" to which he refers.

Nevertheless, Mr. Callaway, we apprehend, will be surprised to learn that he is a believer in organic evolution or that the theory he set forth is as baseless as Mr. Mauro affirms. Our own views on this subject, expressed briefly in an editorial note in our February issue, are more in accord with those of Mr. Mauro than Mr. Callaway, but for that reason we would not deny our readers the opportunity to hear what he had to say.

A further instance in point is Mr. Mauro's own book on "The Kingdom of Heaven," with which we do not entirely agree, and for advertising which we have been criticised, but with which we think our readers should have an opportunity to become acquainted if they desire.—Editors.

Framingham, Mass., R. R. No. 1
April 22, 1920

Editor Christian Workers' Magazine,
Dear Mr. Editor:

May I be permitted to utter a brief word of protest against the article (in your April number) entitled "Evolution and Agnosticism," and to express my surprise and deep regret that you should make yourself responsible for its publication?

The aim of the writer is not only to commend that baseless hypothesis commonly known as "evolution"—which is now discredited even in "scientific" circles,—but also to make it appear that the nebular hypothesis, exploited by Herbert Spencer, is more nearly in accord with the inspired account of creation (Genesis 1) than the view generally held and taught by those who base their conclusions upon the Bible. Indeed, the writer of that article declares that he cannot see "any disparity" between the nebular hypothesis and the statements in Genesis!

Having myself been cradled in nineteenth century materialism, and having receptively imbibed its doctrines for about twenty-five years ere the light of God's truth shined in my heart and mind, and mercifully delivered me from these "scientific" delusions and follies, I may claim to speak with at least a fairly accurate knowledge of what Darwin, Spencer and others actually held and taught. But realizing that I must needs confine myself to a very brief statement I will only say:

First, that the nebular hypothesis in general, and the theory of organic evolution in particular, are utterly at variance with the Word of God; and

Second, that the aforesaid theory has been riddled to pieces and exposed as an elaborate absurdity by men of science—beginning with the Duke of Argyll (Organic Evolution Cross-Examined), and including even Charles Darwin's own son—men who were not in any way interested in defending the biblical viewpoint.

It is distressing, indeed, to find a baseless theory, (through which the faith of many has been overthrown, but which even "science" itself has now discredited and discarded) thus resuscitated and set forth with approval in the Christian Workers Magazine. My little book, The World and Its God (Chaps. 16-23), will show to any who desire to pursue the matter further, how utterly unfounded and how opposed to the truth of God, is the once popular doctrine of materialism.

Yours sincerely,
Philip Mauro.

What Would Have Happened If Israel Had Accepted Christ?

From a Pamphlet by Arthur W. Pink, Entitled, The Kingdom of Heaven, Its Significance and Scope

WE have left till the last the most forcible objection, and one that, no doubt, has proven a real difficulty with many. Before we state it, let us express clearly the particular point against which the objection is levelled. There is need for us to do this, for it has been grossly misrepresented. We have already seen that an offer of the Messianic kingdom was made to the Jews by the Baptist, by our Lord, and by the Twelve; the offer being not an unconditional one, but contingent on Israel's "repentance." It is natural that the question be asked, "What would have happened if Israel had complied with the condition, had repented?"

In reply let us say with emphasis, that the Messianic kingdom would not have been set up immediately (and so far as we know no one has ever taught that it would), though this is the assumption of those who take the other view, and it is because their assumption is entirely erroneous that their arguments to disprove it are all quite beside the mark.

Daniel's Seventieth Week

We have previously pointed out that the prophecies of Daniel made it clear that a part of the nation would not respond to the call of repentance, but instead would be in sympathy with the Antichrist when he appeared. We have also suggested, in case there had been a general response to John's call, that those who had "repented" would have formed the "saints" of Daniel 7:21 upon whom the "little horn" is to "make war"; in other words, the godly Jewish remnant of the tribulation period.

Further, it is abundantly clear from Old Testament prophecy that, in any event, the Lord Jesus was to be crucified by the Jews, and these prophecies would then have found their fulfilment at the hands of that part of the nation which had not repented. It is also plain from Old Testament prophecy that after His crucifixion the Lord Jesus should rise again from the dead and return to Heaven, but nothing is said as to how long He should remain there.

Therefore, had there been a general repentance among the Jews at the time of which we are speaking, after our Lord's crucifixion, which terminated Daniel's sixty-ninth week (Dan. 9:25,26), the seventieth would have followed without any break, and at the close of it Christ would have descended to earth and set up His Kingdom.

But here we are faced with the objection that this could not be, for then the prophecy of Nebuchadnezzar's "image" (Dan. 2) which outlined the course of the "times of the Gentiles," would have been falsified. Extremely puerile is such an objection. It is scarcely necessary to remind those for whom this is written that the fourth of the four "kingdoms" of which Daniel's "image" speaks was already in existence when our Lord was born at Bethlehem, and there was nothing in the whole book of Daniel which intimated how long the Roman Empire or the times of the Gentiles must continue. The "image" was already there, right down to "the legs of iron" when the Baptist appeared and the feet and ten toes would have found their fulfilment in the seventieth week which might have followed the sixty-ninth without any break.

But again, the question is asked, "If the seventieth week had immediately followed the sixty-ninth and the millennium had succeeded this, then what of the Church which is the Body of Christ that is being built during the break between the sixty-ninth and seventieth weeks?"

In reply we would say the fact is, the above difficulty is purely a hypothetical one. Israel did not comply with the terms on which the kingdom was offered to them, and therefore we need not unduly exercise ourselves as to what would have happened if they had.

Was a Bona Fide Offer Made?

But, it may be asked, "If God had eternally purposed to form the one Body (and He had) how could He make a bona fide offer of the kingdom to Israel?" This raises the old problem of the relationship of divine sovereignty and human responsibility, which must always be looked at separately. How can God command that a bona fide offer of the gospel should be made to "every creature" when He foreknows that many will reject it? It is perfectly evident from Matthew 12 that the Pharisees had committed the sin for which there is "never forgiveness," and yet the Lord bade His disciples go forth and preach the gospel to every creature—but how could a bona fide offer of the gospel be made to these who had blasphemed against the Holy Spirit?

Once more it was certain that Peter would deny his Lord, for Christ said he would; yet after He had announced Peter's fall, He directed him to "watch and pray" lest he enter into temptation! Where was the consistency of this?

Now these cases will never be properly understood until we separate in our minds God's sovereign and immutable decrees and man's responsibility. God had decreed the unpardonable sin of the Pharisees (though the sin was theirs, not God's), yet they were responsible creatures, and in view of their responsibility the gospel must be preached unto them. God had decreed that Peter should deny His Son (yet the sin was Peter's), but it was in view of his responsibility that the Lord told him to watch and pray lest he enter into temptation.

In the same way, God had decreed that the Jewish nation should reject and crucify their King, but it was their responsibility that was being tested when the kingdom was offered to them on the condition of their repentance.

No Change of the Divine Plan

There has been no change of plans on God's part. He foreknew (put it that way, if "He decreed" be objected to) that the Jews would reject the offered kingdom, and, speaking after the manner of men, He made His plans accordingly.

God had eternally purposed the salvation and glorification of the one Body, but that is God's side! From the human side, the Jews were His covenant people, they to whom His Son was promised and their responsibility must be tested. The test was their response to John's message. God's offer to them was a bona fide one, just as is the gospel offer today to the non-elect. "Whosoever will may come," and if all came, all would be saved. And this is the human side again. From the divine side only those come to Christ that were "given" to Him by the Father (John 6:37).

So also, if Israel had repented the kingdom would have been set up seven years later. But from God's side it was decreed they should reject His Son (Acts 2:23). The "if" in the case is no invention of ours, but the word of Christ Himself—"If ye will receive him (John) this is Elijah which was for to come." That which needs to be insisted upon is, that it is a fact that the Messianic kingdom was offered to Israel, and if this be admitted, then it is only our unbelief which would seek to set it aside by objections of our own inventing.

The Bible in the Public Schools

Statement of the Chicago Church Federation

THE Board of Trustees of the Chicago Church Federation at its meeting on Monday, March 1, 1920, adopted the recommendation of its Commission on the Constitution with reference to the Bible in the public schools.

The Commission's recommendation was for the adoption by the Constitutional Convention of the following clause in the new Constitution:

> "As religion, morality and knowledge are necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, each teacher in the public schools of this state shall at the opening session of each school day read a selection from the Bible of not fewer than ten verses and without comment."

Several states and the cities of New York and Washington, (D. C.), make the daily reading of the Bible in the public schools compulsory. Four of these states have adopted this policy during the last seven years, as follows: Pennsylvania, 1913; Tennessee, 1915; New Jersey, 1916; Alabama, 1919, which is an indication of the trend of public sentiment upon this important question.

Under the proposal for the Illinois Constitution in communities where Jewish teachers are employed there can be no objection for these teachers to read from the Old Testament, and in communities where Catholic teachers are employed there can be no objection to Catholic teachers using the Douay version of the Bible. This would be a matter left to the sentiment of each community as reflected in the school board. It is hoped that this provision will have the support of all religious people of all sects and creeds and it is believed that there can be no serious and well founded objection raised to the provision.

A careful survey was made of the state of Pennsylvania where the compulsory reading of the Bible has been the custom for the past seven years. Letters were sent to all of the county superintendents of schools and to others in different sections of the state. Fifty-three out of the sixty-seven county superintendents have been heard from up to the present time and they are unanimous for the use of the Bible.

The reply from the only Catholic county superintendent in the schools of the State is very interesting and is as follows:

Question—Is the law requiring the reading of the Bible in the public schools quite well observed in your county?

Answer—Absolutely, yes.

Question—If not, what seems to be the main reasons for non-compliance?

Answer—None, all anxious to read Bible.

Question—Is there any considerable opposition to the law from teachers, pupils, patrons, Catholics, Jews, Unbelievers, or others?

Answer—None whatever.

Question—If any difference, is the law better observed in American or foreign communities?

Answer—No difference.

Question—Is pressure sometimes necessary to secure compliance on the part of teachers?

Answer—None, as all may read own choice.

Question—Do you have many complaints that teachers show disapproval in any way during the reading? or that pupils show disapproval?

Answer—None.

Question—Was the Bible quite generally read in the schools before the passage of the law?

Answer—In about one half the schools.

Question—Is the reading usually from the Bible itself, or from a book of selections? If the latter, what book, if any, is most in use?

Answer—From Bible itself. Each teacher is allowed to use version of her choice, which removes all objections.

Question—Is the repetition of the Lord's Prayer required?

Answer—No.

Question—Is it permitted?

Answer—Yes.

Question—If the latter, is it used extensively?

Answer—It is used as a practice in nearly all classes.

Question—Is any other prayer permitted?

Answer—No request for others.

Question—Is prayer often used?

Answer—Lord's Prayer only.

(Signed) J. W. Sweeney,
County Superintendent of Schools of Elk County, St. Mary's, Pa.

Mr. Sweeney comments as follows:

"If your Constitution will provide that teachers shall read the Bible, without comment, and each is allowed to read the version of her choice, all will be anxious to read it and to end with the Lord's Prayer. It is the only way to begin a school day, and it is only fair that each Christain teacher should read a Bible, the version of which is agreeable and sacred to her. We could not dispense with such a beginning of the new day."

Mr. Frank J. Loesch, a member of the Commission, expresses its views in the following words:

"It is not a question of whether the Douay version, King James version, or a revised version shall be read. The thing is to compel a teaching of morality from the only authority we have on the subject. It is a serious question as far as Chicago is concerned, for there are literally tens of thousands of young people growing up here in the city without the slightest religious moral training, and of course without any knowledge of the Bible whatsoever."

Roman Catholics and the Bible

We have been asked by a Roman Catholic Layman to publish the following from The Catholic Tribune of Dubuque, Ia. The article was entitled, "Your Spiritual Food," and had as a sub-title, "Catholics Are Neglecting to Read the Bible, Says Bishop Glass."—Editors.

CATHOLICS are neglecting the reading of their Bible, Bishop Glass told the Salt Lake City Cathedral congregation last Sunday. "The man of today is busy. He has other things to do. When he returns home after his work he is tired and hungry; he wants food, but he neglects to partake of the spiritual food. Just as food is needed in material life, so also is spiritual food needed to strengthen the soul. One of the greatest spiritual foods is the Bible.

Old Bible Recalled

"Many Catholics know very little of the Bible, although their knowledge of other things is great. Outsiders, non-Catholics, say that Catholics cannot read the Bible, yet all of us remember the old custom of keeping the family Bible, with its record of births, marriages and deaths, on the parlor table. This kind of Bible is too heavy and unwieldy for ready handling, but there are smaller Bibles that can be handled very easily. The Douay version of the Bible should be in every Catholic home.

Many Verses Clear

"Many verses in the Bible need interpretation by the church, but many verses are so clear that they may be understood by any child," Bishop Glass continued. "Children are growing up in ignorance of many of the great truths of the Bible, because their parents fail to tell them of the Bible. The parents take no interest in teaching the Bible to their children, or else they excuse themselves on the ground that they are too busy.

"Catholics should read the Bible. They will learn to love it by reading it. Some of the most beautiful literature ever written is to be found in the Bible. Read leisurely, comfortably, knowingly, and we get much pleasure from it."

"A man may go to heaven without health, without riches, without honors, without learning, without friends; but he can never get there without Christ."—Dyer.

TRUSTING

By Ruth Graham Robinson

Lord, I mistrust me, but I trust in thee,
  How blest is that despair, that self-mistrust!
  Let me, like thee, remember I am dust,
Let me remember thine eternity;
  Then, more than I mistrust my nothingness,
  I shall be trusting in thy power to bless.

The Death Penalty

The letters following are self-explanatory, and we have considered them of sufficient interest and value just now, to reproduce them. The first is addressed to the editor-in-chief by an official of a Prisoner's Aid Society, and the second is his reply thereto. We supplement the latter by a few facts in an editorial of the Chicago Tribune.—Editor.

I

Letter to the Editor

MY Dear Dr. Gray:

"My attention has been called to a clipping from the Chicago Daily Tribune, in which you are quoted as advocating the enforcement of capital punishment as a law of justice and a means of preventing crime.

"In that article you are said to refer to the Old Testament statement, 'Whoso sheddeth man's blood by man shall his blood be shed' and that this law has never been abrogated.

"May I ask, Dr. Gray, what would be your interpretation of Christ's statement, 'Ye have heard that it hath been said, an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, but I say unto you that ye resist not evil'?

"It has always seemed to me that in this and many other statements made in the New Testament, the law of retaliation is clearly superseded by the law of love and of mercy. It is quite evident that with the increasing promulgation of the Golden Rule and of Christianity there has been a decrease in the spirit of retaliation and the proportionate amount of crime as well.

"My observation of twenty years in dealing with the crime problem is that in the twelve states of the Union and the twelve countries of the Old World where capital punishment has been abolished, there is less crime than in the states where executions still prevail.

"I should really like to have your exposition of any teachings of Christ which would sustain capital punishment, and of such passages of His as would seem to indicate the contrary.

"Feeling assured, of course, of your conscientious convictions in the matter, and hoping to hear from you, I remain

"Sincerely yours."

II

The Editor's Reply

My Dear Mr. ——:

"Circumstances will permit only a brief reply to yours of the twelfth re capital punishment.

"As between Christ's words to His disciples and God's covenant with Noah, the one is dealing with personal retaliation and the other with the magisterial function of human government.

"The problem before us, as I look at it, is not one of statistics but the simple question of obedience to God's law. When men profess to be more merciful and loving than He it bodes ill rather than good for the race.

"As to the teachings of Christ it is to be remembered that Christ is God. That is to say, the Jesus of the New Testament is the Jehovah of the Old Testament. It was Christ, as God, who laid down the principle in Genesis and who has never changed it; and when He comes a second time, in judgment on the ungodly world, He has forewarned us that He will act upon it.

"It would be a great benediction if all the good men in the world who are really trying to help their fellows, were fully acquainted with the Bible which is the Word of God. Not with parts of the Bible but with the whole of it. Through co-operating with Him, they would be co-operating with one another in a way to insure His blessing and bring about righteous and permanent results.

"Yours very truly."

From the Tribune Editorial

Maine has abolished capital punishment. Maine has 77 per cent more murders than Massachusetts, 92 per cent more than Vermont, 109 per cent more than Connecticut, 360 per cent more than New Hampshire.

Rhode Island has abolished capital punishment. There are 175 per cent more murders in Rhode Island than in Vermont, 200 per cent more than in Connecticut, and 560 per cent more than in New Hampshire.

Murder in France increased 68 per cent after the abolition of the death penalty, and the guillotine was restored in 1909.

This from Sheriff Peters: "If one-half of the energy now spent in sympathy on murderers and criminals would be devoted to the families of the victims and the other half to bringing to justice the brutes who have blotted out the lives of law abiding and peaceable citizens and darkened forever the lives of others, this would be a happier and safer world to live in."

A WORD TO PREACHERS

"We are all apt to get into grooves of favorite thoughts, and to teach but part of the whole Gospel. If we do not seek to widen our minds to take in, and our utterances to give forth, all the will of God as seen by us, our limitations and repetitions will repel some from the truth, who might have been won by a completer presentation of it, and their blood will be required at our hands. None of us can reach to the apprehension, in its full extent and due proportion of its parts, of that great gospel; but we may at least seek to come nearer the ideal completeness of a teacher, and try to remember that we are 'pure from the blood of all men,' only when we have not 'shrunk from declaring all God's counsel.' We are not required to know it completely, but we are required not to shrink from declaring it as far as we know it."—Alexander MacLaren.

ERIE SIDE SUMMER BIBLE CONFERENCE

At this conference, July 16-25, 1920, the following will be teachers: Revs. W. Graham Scroggie, Edinburgh; W. B. Riley; Robert A. Hadden; Joseph W. Kemp; Lewis S. Chafer; P. W. Philpot; R. E. Neighbor; and others.

Rev. W. C. Wilkinson, D. D., well known in educational and theological circles, and the author of many books, died in Chicago, April 25, 1920, at the age of eighty-seven. His writings ranged from analyses of Greek, Latin and French classics to biblical essays. The ministers of twenty-five years ago will recall his valued ministry through his writings.

FRANCIS NATHAN PELOUBET, D. D.

This name has been a household word for tens of thousands of Sunday-school workers in this and other lands for many years. The first volume of Peloubet's Select Notes was issued in 1875, and each year a new volume has appeared. Dr. Peloubet was the author of other books and was active until very near the end of his long life of eighty-eight years. He died at Auburndale, Mass., March 27, 1920, leaving a wife, four daughters, eleven grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren.

A SPIRITUAL SLIP-UP

Not so long ago an estimable lady who had once had a sweetheart but who had reached middle age unmarried, took up the art of automatic writing and to her delight found herself in communication with her erstwhile sweetheart. From him she learned that he had gone to war and had been killed. Their conversations were many and they enjoyed many reminiscences of their old days. With fluttering heart she wrote to a friend in Chicago only to find that her lover was very much alive, married and the proud father of four children. There must have been crossed wires somewhere in the spiritual telepathy.

OPEN AIR EVANGELISM

One hundred and fifty representatives of more than a score of denominations and special Christian groups met in the Young Men's Christian Association Building recently to consider the subject of open air evangelism under the direction of the Chicago Church Federation. A series of resolutions was adopted embodying plans for the coming summer's activities along this line. It is said that great enthusiasm was manifested and steps are being taken to realize the plans suggested. Such a work means the employment of men and women experienced in it, and strong backing with counsel and money.

WORLD IN DEBT 200 BILLION

The world's debt was estimated by the National City Bank, January 25, at $200,000,000,000, compared with $40,000,000,000 in 1914.

Paper currency throughout the world increased 600 per cent since 1914, while the gold reserve behind it increased only 40 per cent, according to statistics compiled by the bank.

The face value of paper currency of thirty principal countries, which totaled $7,250,000,000 in 1914, had increased to $40,000,000,000 at the time of the armistice, and to $50,000,000,000 in December, 1919, exclusive of $34,000,000,000 issued by the Russian soviet government.

A FINE RECORD

The Bible Colportage Association of Chicago, which is in close touch with the Institute, has done a remarkable work. In the last twenty-six years it has published 7,326,131 colportage library books in six languages and 112 titles; of these, 2,506,116 were Mr. Moody's own works.

The Association has employed one hundred colporteurs during the past year, and has put out 253,445 colportage library books, besides 156,677 reprints. The missionary and book fund donations enabled the Association to send out 1,878,690 copies of Bibles, Gospels, colportage library books and tracts, to all parts of the country and world—to soldiers, sailors, lumbermen, miners, etc.

A CHRISTIAN SCIENCE TRAGEDY

Andrew Walker of Newark, New York, was found guilty of manslaughter in connection with the death of his young daughter, Mary, last May. He and his wife were both Christian Scientists, and were tried before the court, and the wife was acquitted. The child died of diphtheria, but the employed Christian Science healer denied that there was any such thing as diphtheria, and that it was only "a claim." The counsel for the defense says that the case will be carried to the higher courts.

It appears that two new questions are presented by this case. Does a father escape responsibility for providing the medical care for a sick child by reason of the fact that he belongs to a religious organization which rejects medicine in favor of healers ignorant of medicine?

Is a father who asserts that his action is inspired by his religious belief entitled to have those statements accepted at their face value, or should they be left to a jury to decide whether the man is telling the truth or not?

AN EXPLANATION

The Board of Publication of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., was recently asked why it advertised the book of Dr. James H. Snowden on the Lord's second coming as authoritative. The Manager of the Presbyterian Book Store in Philadelphia has written that such an advertisement was "ill advised," and that there was no intention in the advertisement of committing the Presbyterian church to either side of the discussion as to the second coming of the Lord.

Various statements in printed form that the book is authoritative have deceived many, and it seems unfair to advertise a book as authoritative unless the ground for its authoritativeness is given. In this case, if scholarship is the ground for the authoritativeness, there is scholarship on the other side. If careful readers of Dr. Snowden's book would note his departure from evangelical belief in several other particulars, aside from the second coming, his book would not only lose its authoritativeness, but would be suspected as to its main contention.

CHRISTIAN THINKING IN GERMANY

In one of his series of articles on what the Christians of Germany are thinking, the Rev. James Stalker, D. D., says that Professor Deissmann of Berlin, the instructor of multitudes of American and British students had a cosmopolitan mind. In the earlier years of the great world war Professor Deissmann endeavored to work for mutual understanding and reconciliation, but was staggered when America entered the war on the side of the Allies.

He has rapidly changed and sees everything black, and the iron of his country's misery has entered his soul. One of the things that has obsessed him somewhat strangely is the sad condition of German prisoners in various places, that have not yet returned to their own homes, the most awful conditions being those of the prisoners in Siberia, the condition beggaring description. Some light comes to the soul of this distinguished teacher in the stream of benevolence flowing to the distressed people in central Europe. Professor Deissmann cannot keep, however, from laying the blame of the war calamities at the door of the nations who fought against Germany; yet it was he who wrote the remarkable acknowledgment of the guilt of Germany in attacking Belgium, that was presented to the Christian ministers who met in Holland after the close of the war.

"I attended the Baptist Ministers' meeting last Monday morning and I found there as I have found elsewhere among northern Baptists much alarm over the plight that they got into at Denver last year by voting to go into the Interchurch World Movement. They are stung and they know it. They realize now that a trap had been set by pedobaptists and those wonderful northern Baptist 'statesmen,' of whom we have heard so much for so many years; they promptly fell into said trap and dragged the churches into it along with them. Northern Baptist leaders are being openly discredited today as never before and a split is imminent at Buffalo when the northern Convention meets. All the Baptists are going to get out of this movement is a great loss of money and a great revolt. This promises to be the most shameful scandal in the history of the denomination, wholly unnecessary and absolutely without excuse. Northern Baptists are warned by the action and advice of the Southern Baptist Convention. Dr. Gambrell went to Denver and told the northern brethren why southern Baptists would have nothing to do with this or such like 'union' movements. Northern Baptists have sown to the wind and they are scheduled for a whirlwind harvest from which they may never wholly recover."—From letter in Baptist Standard, of Dallas, Tex.

The Year Book of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America for 1920 presents the following:

Increase in total church membership since 1916	2,779,667
Total Roman Catholic population	17,549,324
Total Jewish membership	260,000
The two Mormon bodies number	494,388
The Greek Orthodox reports	119,781
Russian Orthodox	99,681
Syrian Orthodox	50,000
The total Protestant membership is	25,980,456

The membership of the bodies making up the Federal Council has increased 580,366 in a year. The present strength of the various churches is as follows:

"The largest Protestant body is the Methodist Episcopal Church, with 4,175,502 members. Next in order comes the National Baptist Convention (negro), with 2,938,579. The Southern Baptist Convention is third, with 2,887,428. The M. E. Church, South, has 2,152,974 members. The Presbyterians (U. S. A.) have 1,603,033. The Northern Baptist Convention, 1,502,341 members; the Disciples of Christ, 1,193,423, and the Protestant Episcopal Church, more than 1,000,000 members. The next largest in order is the Congregationalists, with 808,122. The United Lutheran Church in America has 782,801, and the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri and Ohio and other states has 621,887 members. The African M. E. Church, with 548,355, is the second largest of the negro denominations, closely followed by the African M. E. Zion, with 458,574."

What Bible Reading Will Do for Us

Psalm 119:97-104

What Bible reading will do for us depends largely upon how we read our Bible. The late George Muller gave these directions concerning Bible reading and they have never been improved upon:

1. Read the Scriptures regularly through. Read, alternately, portions from the Old and New Testaments. Begin at the beginning of each. Mark where you leave off, and begin there next time. When you have finished each Testament, begin it again.

2. Read with prayer. You cannot by your own wisdom understand the Word of God. In all your reading of the Scriptures, seek carefully the help of the Holy Spirit. Ask for Jesus' sake that He will enlighten you.

3. Read with meditation. Ponder over what you read. The truth is thus applied to your heart. You see new and deeper meanings. It is better to think over a little than merely to read a great deal.

4. Read with reference to yourself. Never read only with a view to instructing others; but for your own teaching. Receive blessing yourself first, and you will communicate it to others. Always ask yourself, "How does this affect me?"

5. Read with faith. Not as statements which you may believe or not, but as the revealed Word of God. Receive every word as true, with simple, childlike trust. Rest upon the promises. Read them as made for you.

6. Read in order to carry into practice. We must accept His Word as being the revelation of His will. In it He tells us what to be and what to do. He expects us to be "obedient children."

What Bible reading will do for us may be seen in the 119th Psalm from which our lesson is taken: It quickens (v. 25); cleanses (v. 9); preserves from sin (v. 11); strengthens (v. 28); comforts (v. 50); gives liberty (v. 45); gives great peace (v. 165); gives rejoicing of heart (v. 111); gives understanding (v. 104); gives light (v. 130). A book that will do all these things, surely deserves the most careful reading.

In the eight verses of our lesson, you will notice several things concerning the Bible and the results of reading it: It is to be loved (v. 97); gives wisdom (v. 98); imparts understanding, that is, the power to perceive, to weigh, and to reach right conclusions (vv. 99, 100); restrains from evil (vv. 101, 102); is sweeter than honey (v. 103); leads to hatred of falsity and error (v. 104).

Now a question—Are you taking time daily to read your Bible? Mr. Spurgeon once said that "half the errors in the world spring from people not reading their Bibles." Are you reading yours, really reading it in a comprehensive and beneficial way? If you have no good method remember that The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, through its Correspondence Department can help you. It has eight courses, any one of which will serve to awaken and develop an interest in Bible reading, which will be full of beneficial results. A postal card addressed to the Correspondence Department will bring you all the information necessary.

Common Mistakes in Daily Living

Proverbs 24:27-34

The common mistakes against which the Scripture lesson warns us are criticism and deceit (v. 28), a selfish course of action (v. 29), and slothfulness (vv. 30-34). Common mistakes and faults, indeed, are these, and into them one easily falls. It is easier to criticize than to construct; to condemn rather than commend; to be a witness against one's neighbour; or in other words to be a destructive critic of others. This seems to be the human bent and tendency, and with it, there is coupled deceit. Unfavorable criticism of others is often made because of the inward desire to exalt oneself in comparison with others, and at the expense of others. We like to justify ourselves by this method of comparison, which leads to a feeling of complacency. The comparison is usually made with those whose mistakes and faults are more conspicuous than our own. Adverse criticism of others usually means, commendation of ourselves, as compared with those others. "The heart is deceitful above all things" and leads us in this direction. Self-judgment is rare. The self-life avoids it. Only when taught by the Holy Spirit of God, do we enter upon self-judgment. The unregenerated life judges others. The truly converted and spirit-taught life judges self.

The second common mistake is seen in verse 29. Doing to others as they do to us is the iron rule. Doing to others as we would have them do to us is the golden rule. Which of the two are you practicing? The spirit of Christ alone can enable us to follow the golden rule of Christ. Secretary of the Navy Daniels, declares that the only permanent solution of the vexing problems which seem more acute now, than ever, is the application of the golden rule. We all agree to this most heartily, but when will it be recognized, that the application of the golden rule comes, not through a mental assent to a proposition, but through yieldedness of heart and life to our sovereign Lord who gave the golden rule? The ethics of Christ are impossible apart from the resurrection life of Christ regnant within the heart.

Slothfulness is the third of these common mistakes, and is presented in verses 30-34. Slothfulness is disastrous, both in its present reaction on the life, and also in its ultimate results. Slothfulness in study, in business, or in spiritual things is deplorable. Many enter upon courses of study, but never finish the course. Only a small percentage of the boys and girls who enter high schools finish the prescribed course of study. This is largely due to slothfulness. Many business failures are chargeable to the same fault, and in church life and spiritual experience, slothfulness is among the greatest of our foes. The book of Proverbs, which contains heavenly wisdom and directions for our earthly walk, warns us against this weighty and often times besetting sin. (See Prov. 6:6; 13:4; 20:4; 26:16.) The New Testament also warns us against slothfulness and encourages us to diligence and fervency of spirit—"Not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." This is a splendid standard for Christian life and enterprise, and is supplemented and supported by Hebrews 6:12, "That ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises."

Honesty in Word and Deed
Ephesians 4:25-32

The chapter from which our lesson is taken deals with the walk of the Christian believer. In the opening verse there is a plea to "walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called." What that calling is may be found in the preceding chapter of the epistle. Briefly, we are called to be "a holy temple in the Lord" for "a habitation of God through the Spirit" (See 2:20-22). How shall we walk worthy of this high calling? We must walk in unity (4:1-16). The unity has been made, we do not have to make it, but we must guard against breaking or marring it.

Again, we must walk in purity (4:17), in love (5:1), and in wisdom (5:15). Only by such a course can we walk worthy of our calling.

The world walks by impulse and self-will, by passion, pride, and prejudice. The Christian believer walks by faith and in the Spirit. While thus walking, it is impossible to be dishonest, either in word or deed, but when fellowship with God is broken and the life sinks to a worldly level, then the temptation to be dishonest is easily yielded to.

Honesty in word is emphasized in verses 25-27 and 29-31; honesty in deed comes into view in verse 28, then in verse 32 the antidote to dishonesty, both in word and deed, is provided. Honesty in word and deed is sorely needed just now. An atmosphere of suspicion permeates our political and industrial life. Charges of radicalism and countercharges of profiteering are heard on all sides. The leaders of our country are discussing these questions and the problems they create, and are prescribing various remedies. In the Christian Herald of April 24, Dr. W. H. P. Faunce, President of Brown University, in discussing the great need of the day, has this to say: "No new machinery can save our broken down civilization. No league can keep the peace among nations who really want to fight. No commissions or committees, no institutions or laws can enforce brotherhood on sullen, suspicious, hateful men. The one essential now is real vital religion; religion that is not ashamed of itself, or afraid of its task. Without religion there is neither peace nor production nor progress. The world, which two years ago moved on a plain of heroic devotion, has suffered a moral slump and is given over to either gayety or pessimism. Only religion, the life of God in the soul of men, can bring us back to the calm serenity, the tireless patience, the invincible courage of Jesus." To this may be added the remark that the religion we need is the religion of Christ as expounded by the writer of the epistle to the Ephesians. This is the religion of the Cross and the resurrection; the religion of the indwelling Christ, who after becoming a substitute on the cross for sinners is now both willing and able to become a substitute for the old fallen self-life, so that Christ lives again in the hearts of those who are truly His, and they are able to say, even as the apostle said: "I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." In the power of this indwelling, honesty in word and deed becomes, not only possible, but actual.

Living Up to Our Responsibilities
Matthew 25:14-30

It is written that "every one of us shall give account of himself to God." This will take place when Christ returns from heaven—the "far country" to which He has gone.

During His absence, we are called to represent Him and to continue His work. When He thus calls, He qualifies. To some He gives five talents, to others two, and to others one. He expects a faithful use of the talents entrusted to us and of the gifts bestowed upon us. When He returns there will be a reckoning or a judgment, concerning the use of our powers and our opportunities. In that day some will receive a reward for faithful service and others will suffer loss because of unfaithfulness. (See 1 Cor. 3:11-15.)

Concerning this passage of Scripture Dr. G. Campbell Morgan says, "In order to rightly interpret the parable, we must remember that it concerns the servants of the King. He has not

Practical and Perplexing Questions

Grant Stroh

The right is reserved to reject questions which may be deemed unprofitable to answer especially those of a controversial nature.

GOD AND THE CONSTITUTION

L. L. G., Northfield, O.

Question: Since Satan is the god of the present world system, or kingdom, would it be proper to incorporate the name of God into the constitution of any government or organization which is a part of this system?

Answer: Would that not depend somewhat upon the connection and the purpose of such an incorporation? If the purpose was to acknowledge dependence upon God, there could be no objection; but if it were a mere form or in a manner dishonoring to God, it would be improper.

PAUL ON THE WOMAN QUESTION

O. B. J., Minneapolis, Minn.

Question: Would you explain 1 Corinthians 14:34, 35 and 1 Timothy 2:11, 12?

Answer: It is proper for a woman to pray or to prophesy (testify, or exhort) in a Christian gathering, provided she be properly appareled and conforms to existing customs (1 Cor. 11:5). But in the fourteenth chapter Paul is speaking of indecorum in the exercise of gifts. In this connection he urges that women question their husbands at home rather than in the church. In 1 Timothy 2:11, 12 Paul deals with the relation of the married woman to her husband, which is to learn rather than to teach, and assume the place of authority. See Bible Problems Explained, by Dr. Gray, page 41.

THE PARABLE OF THE MUSTARD SEED

J. T., Union, S. C.

Question: What is the meaning of "The kingdom of God" in the parable of the Mustard Seed? Does it refer to the present age or to the millennial age?

Answer: Interpreted in the light of the parable of the Sower and the parable of the Wheat and Tares, the present, or mystery form of the kingdom is referred to. The more common interpretation of the seed represents the growth of Christianity from a small beginning to vast dimensions. Others see in the parable an abnormal growth of the kingdom in its present form, affording shelter for birds of the air, which Christ connected with Satan in the parable of the Sower (vv. 4, 19).

THE GUIDANCE OF GOD

E. W. W., Detroit, Mich.

Question: How can a child of God find out what God wants him to do? Shall a Christian ask a sign from God?

Answer: We should put no dependence upon signs. God has given the Christian other means of knowing His will. The first thing is absolute surrender, then to live so that one can hear God's voice and recognize it when He speaks. If one knows what His Word requires in general of all Christians, this will be a help. Often God guides by providential circumstances, such as the opening or closing of doors of service, as Paul experienced many times. We must always depend upon the approval of the Holy Spirit (Acts 16:6, 7). Sometimes the unusual thing decides (Acts 6:9, 10). Persistent prayer is the most essential thing of all.

THE APPROACHING JUDGMENTS

J. H. F., Sumner, Miss.

Question: If all are killed who will not worship the Beast (Rev. 13:15), then all Christians would be dead, and also all who follow the Beast and the False Prophet (Rev. 19:19-21). Who are left upon earth for Satan to deceive (Rev. 20:7,8)?

Answer: These questions arise from an imperfect or partial study of the Revelation. The entire series of judgments are prefaced with a vision of saved Israelites and multitudes of Gentiles (Chap. 7). Moreover, the Church is probably not included in these judgments. When Christ returns there will be many upon the earth to be judged, but also many to be rewarded (Matt. 25). The deceiving by Satan described in the twentieth chapter is to occur at the close of the millennium.

THE PRESENT OCCUPATION OF DEPARTED CHRISTIANS

M. W., Hazlehurst, Miss.

Question: What do the spirits of believers do while their bodies are in the graves?

Answer: The Scriptures have little or nothing to say about what Christians do between death and the resurrection. They are with Christ in heaven, and no doubt, blissfully happy, for Paul said that it was far better to be there with the Lord than to be here (Phil. 1:23, 24, R. V.). There are no scriptural grounds to suppose that they are employed upon missions to the earth, though that is not an impossibility, for Moses and Elijah descended upon the Mount of Transfiguration and talked with Jesus. This is the false teaching of Spiritualism, by which many are now being deceived. During the present time God would shut us up to dependence upon Him and His Word and prayer. The spirits of believers who die go directly to heaven, and their service seems to be confined to heaven.

INFANT SALVATION

W. E. P. and Mrs. B., Newark, N. J.

Question: Are children who die in infancy saved? Does the atonement cover inbred sin? Are the children of Christians more favored than others?

Answer: It is prevalently believed that all children who die before reaching the age of accountability are saved by the grace of God, since they are not actual transgressors of God's law. Matthew 18:10 and Luke 18:16 are usually quoted in proof. These afford ground for hope and may amount even to assurance but not to positive assertion. 1 Corinthians 7:14, "but now are they holy," can hardly have reference to salvation, else were all children of believers saved, they who live as well as they who die in infancy, which is contrary to fact. The same Greek word here translated "holy" is rendered "sanctified," or consecrated in the former part of the verse. The whole matter is one that we can trustingly leave in the hands of the loving Father.

EVIL SPIRITS

E. C. O.

Question: If evil spirits are sent by God, how can He be a good God?

Answer: We learn from 1 Samuel 16:14 that when the Spirit of the Lord departed from Saul that "an evil spirit from the Lord troubled him." Some go so far as to claim that Saul became at times demon-possessed. Whether or not this be true, we know he became irritable, jealous, discontented, despondent. What perplexes many people is—"Was God responsible for this unhappy condition? Why not, if He sent the evil spirit?" Our reply is, "When God's Spirit is withdrawn, is not a spirit of unrest, discontent, and depression the natural sequence? Indeed, what can prevent it?" Soothing music or amusement may bring temporary relief, but cannot change the heart. It is a merciful provision of God that when men who have the Holy Spirit refuse to obey God, as Saul did, He makes them unhappy in their sin. But through this very unrest and misery of spirit, God seeks to awaken the desire to return to Him and to know again the joy of the Holy Spirit abiding within.

LYING SPIRITS

E. C. O.

Question: Does God send lying spirits to men?

Answer: In 1 Kings 22 the prophet Micaiah depicts a council between God and all the hosts of heaven as a result of which a lying spirit is granted permission by Jehovah to go and deceive King Ahab as to his course of action. The language is highly pictorial and must not be taken literally. God is never in need of counsellors (Rom. 11:34). The prophet simply uses the symbolic picture of an earthly court to make more real to King Ahab the truth of the situation. This truth was that a lying spirit was in the mouth of the false prophets. That Jehovah had no part in this deception is clearly shown by the fact that He sent His own prophet, Micaiah, who, through the Holy Spirit, should speak the truth to Ahab and warn him against the lying spirits. It is true, however, that when men refuse to believe God and His messengers then God delivers them over to strong delusion to believe a lie (2 Thess. 2:10-12, R. V.). Since this is a law of God He may, in this sense, be said to send lying spirits.

BRIEF MENTION

A. H. F., Derry, Pa.

Unable to give information about the Megiddo Mission, Rochester, New York. Would suggest writing to them directly.

B. E. Z., Philippi, W. Va.

No; we cannot always tell a Christian from a child of the world. Christian standards of living are frequently sadly lowered. Sometimes only God can tell.

G. W. R., Lincoln, Neb.

The question is referred for literature to the National Christian Association, 850½ W. Madison Street, Chicago, whereby all questions concerning Free Masonry may be answered.

J. S. C., Slater, Mo.

The Greek word for "castaway" in Luke 9:25 is not the same as in 1 Corinthians 9:27. The one in Luke means to suffer loss or to forfeit, while in 1 Corinthians the word means to be rejected or disapproved.

M. A., Spokane, Wash.

We regret that we cannot take the time and space to answer these fourteen questions. To do so would hardly be fair to others. Last month some were omitted from publication because of our limited space.

S. G. Dunnville, Ontario, Canada.

John Alexander Dowie founded his sect in Zion City, Ill., in 1896. Divine healing is the most prominent factor in their beliefs. The things prominently forbidden are pork, tobacco, liquor, and drugs. Zion City is a city without drug stores or doctors.

E. Y., Pittsfield, Ill.

The word "deep" in Genesis 1:2 apparently refers here to the mists and waters which covered the earth. "The prince of the powers of the air" (Eph. 2:2) is Satan. Note the plural (powers), then read for a sidelight, Ephesians 6:12 in the Revised Version.

E. A., McLeansboro, Ill.

The Scriptures unquestionably teach that hell is the place of punishment for the wicked in the life after death, and it will certainly be no "happy hunting ground." If in this present life "there is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked," it certainly will be still less true in hell. (See Matt. 25:41; Rev. 14:11.)

R. C. McC., Noti, Ore.

The "Church of God" probably refers to the Winebrennarians, whose first tenet is that every local church of believers in Christ constitutes one body and should be called "The Church of God." They also believe that divisions into sects under human names and creeds is unscriptural; that the Bible is the sole rule of faith and life; and that there are three ordinances, baptism, the Lord's Supper, and feet-washing.

As to harmony of the teachings of the Seventh Day Adventists with the Bible, we would refer you to pages 81 and 82 in Bible Problems Explained, by Dr. James M. Gray. An exhaustive treatment may be found in Elder Canright's book, Seventh Day Adventism Denounced. Pamphlets on the subject may be obtained by writing to the Bible Institute Colportage Association, 822 North La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. J. Z. H., Clermont, Ga.

What is the meaning of Mark 13:17,18?

The days portrayed are days of extreme suffering and anguish. Approaching motherhood, or mothers with little children, would be a condition of added suffering. The "woe" would be increased by reason of the aggravated conditions. Likewise the injunction to pray "that your flight be not in the winter" carries forward the same thought. The conditions had to do with the city of Jerusalem when it was destroyed by Titus in 70 A. D., but may have reference also to the consummation of the age when Jerusalem will again be involved.

B. L. H.

"Why should I still care so for the work I wanted, but which God has taken away?"

If you are sure it was God who took away the work you wanted, is it not a sin still to care for it? Is it right still to want what God has disapproved of your having? Have you not faith enough in God to believe that He knows best about it? Your question, "Why should I still care?" reveals that you do not understand God's dealing with you. In such a state of mind is it not your highest wisdom simply to trust the loving hand of God? Paul besought the Lord for what he wanted but instead God gave him grace. He will do the same for you, if you will only trust Him for it. However great your sense of loss, you certainly have a wonderful opportunity for developing a virile sustaining faith in God's all-sufficiency. Christ is able to give you His peace. It is yours for the taking. When our wishes are denied and when losses come, then is the time to expect Christ to supply our every need.

J. C. M., Bixley:

Who were the Nephilim (Gen. 6:4)?

Divergent views are held as to the origin of the Nephilim. It may signify fallen ones, that is apostates. In this sense some have applied the term to fallen angels. Others believe that the term designates a particular class of men. They would appear to be already in existence before the "sons of God" intermarried with the "daughters of men," and if so, could not be identified with them. The term "Nephilim" does not necessarily mean physical giants, though this may have been, but men mighty and renowned for their deeds of violence, who in later pagan nations were exalted into the demigods of mythology. Upon the other hand, Pember in Earth's Earliest Ages and others back to the earliest days of Christianity, present a strong argument in favor of the view that they were results of unlawful intercourse between sinning angels and the daughters of men.

Why is the Hebrew letter "Yod," translated "J" instead of "Y"?

So far as known, it seems to be for phonetic, rather than linguistic reasons.

S. A. W., Norfolk, W. Va.:

Is there Bible authority for changing the Sabbath from the seventh to the first day of the week?

Such a change would be impossible. The Jewish Sabbath occurred upon the seventh day of the week and can occur upon no other day. Christians observe the first day of the week, which is Sunday or the Lord's Day. That it was observed by the apostles from the first, see such passages as John 20:19-26; Acts 20:7; 1 Cor. 16:2; Rev. 1:10. For a full discussion of this subject, see "Seventh Day Adventism Renounced," by Rev. D. M. Canwright.

What Bible Authority Is there against Gambling?

We know of no direct command against gambling. It is an attempt to get something for nothing and so considered a dishonest practice. Paul's injunctions were to "work with your hands," and "If any man will not work, neither let him eat." Again, gambling may be considered a form of stealing—getting something for which nothing adequate is given in return—which is certainly forbidden in Scripture. Considered in a still broader sense, gambling is demoralizing. It lowers one's respect for himself and eats away the vitals of character. It acts as a depressant. No gambler can be happy or self-respecting, and many are the suicides of gamblers. The practice is wrong and unwholesome and demoralizing, and as such is contrary to the spirit of the Bible standards of conduct.

committed His goods to rebels, but to His own. To apply this parable to all men is to suppose that the absent Lord has committed His stewardship to rebels as well as to subjects. During the period of His absence there will be those faithful to the trust, and those unfaithful. The crisis will come with the return of the Lord, and His reckoning with His servants. Those who have been faithful will be appointed to share with Him in authority over His Kingdom. Those who have been unfaithful will be cast into the outer darkness." This outer darkness doubtless corresponds to the words in 1 Corinthians 3:15, "If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss; but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire."

This matter of the Christian believer's judgment should cause us serious thought and create within us the ambition to be well pleasing in His sight. It is not merely the commission of the wrong that concerns us but the omission of that which is rightly required. Dr. Goldsmith has well said that life's omissions must be taken into account, not merely what one does, but what one neglects or avoids doing must be considered. Perhaps you have not deliberately passed by on the other side; quite as often we step over without seeing and without knowing the duty that lies within our path. Our Lord has much to say about the sins of omission, the buried treasure that remained uninvested, the slighted invitation, the neglected beggar, the foolish virgins without oil, the guest without a wedding garment, and the barren fig tree. Each of these tells the story of what was not done that ought to have been done.

In closing our meditation on this topic, we quote Ephesians 5:15-17—"See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil. Wherefore be ye not unwise, but understanding what the will of the Lord is."

"With few exceptions the churches in New England are almost empty and all the churches are declining, not only in actual numbers, but in influence and power. This began before the war and goes on unarrested. The fault lies chiefly in the pulpit and unless there is a different type of preaching the future is dismal."—J. Fort Newton in a letter to the Editor of the Christian Register, of Boston.

JEWISH PROPHETIC CONFERENCE

The Jewish Prophetic Conference in June, under the auspices of the Chicago Hebrew Mission, will be held at the Auditorium of The Moody Bible Institute, from Monday Evening, June 7, to Thursday Evening, June 10.

The address of welcome will be given by Dr. Charles A. Blanchard, president of the Mission, and will be followed by a number of testimonies of Jewish Christians. The main address on the opening night will be given by Rev. Paul Rader on "The Jew—A Miracle."

Three sessions will be held daily, and among the speakers will be, Dr. A. C. Dixon of Los Angeles; Rev. Henry L. Hellyer of New York; Rev. R. E. Neighbor of Elyria, O.: Rev. S. B. Rohold of Toronto; Dr. James M. Gray, Dean of the Institute, if it can be arranged consistently with other engagements; Rev. Joseph S. Flacks, Bible Teacher; Rev. J. C. Page of the Institute; Rev. Charles G. Sterling of Lansing, Mich.; Rev. R. A. Belsham of Augusta, Ga., and others.

The prayer hours will be under the direction of Mr. Thomas E. Stephens of the Great Commission Prayer League.

Testimonies will be given each day by Hebrew Christians as well as class exercises by Jewish children. Representatives of Jewish Missions in Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, New York, Toronto, and other cities are expected to be present and take part in the conference.

Entertainment for out-of-town guests may be secured by addressing the Institute or Norman H. Camp, superintendent, 1311 South Kedzie Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

All lovers of Israel are urged to pray earnestly for God's blessing upon the conference and, if possible, to attend.

CHURCH UNITY

In October, 1910, the American Episcopal Church appointed a commission to invite all Christian communions throughout the world to arrange for a general conference for the consideration of questions of faith and order of the church of Christ. Some 75,000 letters have been received by the secretary of the commission, Robert H. Gardiner, 174 Water Street, Gardiner, Me., expressing interest or cordial sympathy. A deputation was sent to Europe in 1919, which secured co-operation of all of the eastern orthodox churches, the Coptic Church and the churches of Norway and Sweden; the Pope declined to take part in the movement.

It is suggested that January 2-9, 1921, be set apart as a season of special prayer for Christian unity. Many commissions were appointed by the various denominations throughout the world, and a preliminary meeting of not more than three representatives of each commission will be held at Geneva, Switzerland, August 12, 1920, to settle details of procedure, and fix a place and date for the ultimate world conference.

A Shepherd Boy Chosen King
1 Samuel 16:1-13

Golden Text: "The Spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward."—1 Samuel 16:13.

I. The Lord Rebuked Samuel for Excessive Grief (v. 1).

It was a bitter experience for Samuel to pronounce God's judgment upon Saul. On that fateful day at Gilgal the two lives parted never to meet again. Though Samuel had very reluctantly yielded to the clamor of the people for a king, it was a severe trial for him to see so promising a vessel shattered and broken so soon. Then, too, Saul had many engaging qualities which, no doubt, endeared him to the old prophet. Besides, the dangers to the kingdom, if a change of dynasty occurred, were very great. The cause of Samuel's grief was threefold:

1. The Wreck of a Promising Life. In all history, perhaps, a life with greater promise can not be found, and yet it affords us no example of a more wretched failure. A great and noble man like Samuel would naturally grieve over such a downfall. As we look about us and see the downfall of so many promising young lives, can we escape the tinge of sorrow?

2. A Personal Loss. No doubt as the spiritual adviser of the king, Samuel found many things in him to admire. His removal, therefore, Samuel most keenly felt.

3. Anxiety for the National Welfare. Samuel knew quite well that a change of dynasty oftentimes meant severe war and the reign of anarchy. This would very seriously weaken the already weak kingdom. His concern for the people's good was therefore a part of his grief. One can readily see why Samuel should mourn, but as a prophet of God he should not have indulged to excess. The Lord's question, "How long wilt thou mourn for Saul?" has in it a rebuke for Samuel. Grief for others is a sacred thing, but whenever it is carried so far as to interfere with one's duty it becomes sinful. In our severest trials and chastisements we should show a disposition to yield to God's sovereign will.

II. Samuel Sent to Bethlehem to Anoint Saul's Successor (vv. 1-5).

Though Saul failed, God is able to provide a successor who is better than he. Samuel is directed to go to Bethlehem and from among the sons of Jesse choose a successor. Samuel again showed his weakness in expressing his fear lest Saul should kill him. If God sends a man on an errand, what matters it though a thousand Sauls be waiting to kill him? The life of the one whom God sends on a mission is immune from harm till his work be done. Even though it means death, if God sends, who dare refuse or offer excuse? God instructed him to avoid publicity by the concealment of his real purpose. Some may question the diplomacy of Samuel, but we must remember that no one is under obligation to tell all that he knows, especially to parties who have no moral right to know. To withhold truth which should be uttered is duplicity which dare not be practiced. God allowed Samuel to hide his true errand under the cloak of a sacrifice in order to shelter his weakness. The whole matter was already decided; the moral acts were already committed; the issues were already faced. The exposure of Samuel to the murderous hatred of Saul would have only made matters worse. There is, for wise reasons, much concealment in God's providential dealings with men.

III. The Method of God's Choice (vv. 6-12).

The elders of Bethlehem were somewhat alarmed when Samuel came. He, in the exercise of his judgeship, went from place to place, and at times he doubtless had to deal in severity with the people. He calmed their fears by assuring them that he came peaceably, even to worship God. While the preparation for the sacrifice was being made, Samuel seems to have had the interview with Jesse and his sons. When the eldest of Jesse's sons passed before him he decided that this stalwart young man must be God's choice, but God told him that man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart. We should learn, like Samuel was obliged to do, that the qualifications in God's sight for workers are inward, not outward. The one who does God's work must do it by leaning upon Him, not through personal strength or endowments. To the utter surprise of Samuel and Jesse, David the shepherd boy was chosen.

IV. Samuel Anoints David (v. 13).

When this stripling of a boy came before Samuel, the Lord indicated his choice. Samuel proceeded to anoint him. This anointing typified the endowment of the Holy Spirit, which is essential for any and all service for God. The preparation which David needed for the office of king was just what he got as a shepherd boy. God's choices are not arbitrary. As king, his responsibility was to defend, feed and lead God's flock, and this he had learned to do as he attended his father's flock. This anointing was that which qualified David for his work. The mighty hand of God kept him and made him ready for his work. The one who is faithful in the discharge of his duty, be it in the most humble station in life, will be found out by God and promoted.

The Lord Our Shepherd

Psalm 23

Golden Text: "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want." Psalm 23:1.

This is a lesson so simple that a child of tender years can understand. The teacher's work will be mainly to point out the riches of its content, not to explain difficulties. The position of the psalm determines its value. It is preceded by the Psalm of the Cross. Only those who are under the power of the Cross can claim its promises. There are no green pastures to those who have not seen Christ on the cross. Only those who have received Christ's atonement can claim Him as their shepherd, "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus" (Gal. 3:26). It is imperative that one be able to claim Him as his personal shepherd, for He may be a shepherd and still not mean anything to the individual. Since we can claim Him as our shepherd all our wants are supplied. When we have God we have all we need—there is no want which He is unable to supply. To have everything else in this world and not God is to want the best there is in the world for us. If one has his millions of dollars and has not God he is a pauper.

The relationship of the Lord to His children is set forth in this psalm as:

I. The Divine Shepherd (vv. 1-4).

The teacher should thoroughly familiarize himself with the life and service of a shepherd. As our shepherd, the Lord

1. Feeds His Sheep (vv. 1, 2). The "green pastures" are for nourishment. The Lord always provides food for His own sheep, both temporal and spiritual. He gives us our daily bread, but our highest and best food is Christ. the Bread sent down from heaven for our souls (John 6:58), of which if we eat we shall live forever.

2. He Gives Rest (v. 2). He not only gives food, but He maketh His sheep to lie down. When the sheep have been satisfied with food they lie down to rest. Our finite natures require rest—we cannot go on forever; so the divine shepherd has arranged resting places on the way, two of which are night and the Sabbath. How sweet they both are to the child of God! Sometimes He makes us to take enforced rest. It is most comforting to know that when He makes us to lie down it is in the green pastures, not on the dusty road or the rocky mountain side. Our shepherd sometimes leads us over steep and rocky roads, but this is in order that we may reach the spots of green pasture.

3. He Keeps the Sheep in Safety (v. 3). He restores our souls. The rest by the still waters results in the restoration of bodily and spiritual strength. In the times of quiet He restores the spiritual life by the feeding upon God through His Word and means of grace. The restored soul is led into the paths of righteousness, that is, in the performance of labor for Him. We have been saved not merely for our pleasure, but that we might do His good pleasure, that is, His work. We are saved to serve.

4. Guides the Sheep in Times of Danger (v. 4). He goes with His own through danger and trials. There is no night so dark or sea so stormy, but what we can hear the voice of the divine Shepherd saying, "Be not afraid, it is I." May we have ears to hear!

5. He Comforts His Sheep in Sorrow (v. 4). The rod was used by the shepherd to count His sheep. Passing under the shepherd's rod was the sign of ownership. Such acknowledgment would greatly comfort, even though the rod was the instrument which caused the sorrow. The consciousness that it was laid on by the loving shepherd's hand would turn the rod which smote to a staff to lean upon.

II. The Divine Host (vv. 5,6).

1. He Spreads a Table in the Sight of Our Enemies (v. 5). Though dangers are on every hand, the enemies plotting and scheming, the mighty Shepherd provides a feast for His own in their sight. We can sit down to that feast with the assurance that no one can disturb us.

2. He Anoints Our Heads with Oil (v. 5). Oil is a symbol of joy. The sheep are filled with joy. There should be no sad faces among Christ's own. The divine goodness overflows all our lives. Our joys and blessings outnumber our sorrows and troubles.

3. Goodness and Mercy Perpetually Follow (v. 6). These are God's two angels which encamp round about those that fear Him. They hold back the enemies from overtaking us; we can feast at God's banquet table. Even when the days seem dark and sorrows come thick and fast, God's goodness and mercy still follow.

4. Eternally Dwelling with God (v. 6). They shall no more go out from His presence. He who hath begun a good work in us shall complete it unto the day of redemption. May everyone take this psalm for himself and make Christ his own personal shepherd! He will be the guide and defender, the provider and eternal rewarder of those who trust Him.

The following division as suggested by another, using the letter "P" may be of interest:

1. Possession—"My shepherd." It is only when one can say "The Lord is my shepherd" that this psalm has vital meaning.
2. Position—"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures."
3. Promise—"He restoreth my soul."
4. Progress—"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death."
5. Provision—"Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies."
6. Prospect—"Goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life."

Review: The Noble Life of Samuel

Selection for Reading: 1 Samuel 12:1-5;13-25

Golden Text: "I will teach you the good and the right way."—1 Samuel 12:23.

The method of review must largely be determined by the teacher and the grade of the class. For the Junior and Intermediate grades a good way will be to make it biographical, centering in Gideon, Eli, Samuel, Eli's sons, Saul, and David. Of course, the outstanding personality is Samuel, whose life may be viewed as follows: first, his parentage; second, meaning of name—Samuel—asked of God, given in answer to prayer; third, dedicated to the service of God; fourth, trained in the temple of God.

For the older classes the following from Peloubet's Select Notes is an interesting and profitable method:

This review, suited to older classes only, will deal with difficult questions involved in or suggested by the various lessons of the quarter, questions that you may not have had time to discuss adequately during the quarter. Assign one of these to each student, and divide the time evenly among them. The following list of topics may prove helpful, but it is intended to be only suggestive:

Lesson I. How to put religion into our state and national governments.

Lesson II. How to utilize better than we are doing, the power of women.

Lesson III. How to bring together and use the righteous and brave minority.

Lesson IV. How to single out and help the deserving poor.

Lesson V. How to develop the religious capacities of children.

Lesson VI. How to open the eyes of parents to their children's faults.

Lesson VII. How to bring to bear upon public questions the decisive power of prayer.

Lesson VIII. How to select the best leaders in church and state.

Lesson IX. How to develop individual initiative without the loss of discipline.

Lesson X. How godly men may influence the progress of affairs.

Lesson XI. How to inspire children with lofty ideals.

Lesson XII. How to make our lives serene and trustful.

A plan which can be adapted to all grades is the gathering of the main facts of each lesson and then stating its leading lesson.

The following are suggestions as to the leading lessons:

Lesson for April 4. As Jesus joined the disciples on the way to Emmaus, so He joins all who are journeying life's way in sorrow and says, "Tell me your troubles and perplexities." He wants us to confide in Him.

Lesson for April 11. Deborah's judgeship shows that a woman is capable under God not only of the administration of justice, but of leading a nation forth to victory in time of war. Because she knew that God was speaking through her she could with confidence call Barak to lead the army.

Lesson for April 18. The secret of Gideon's victory was his faith. The ground of his faith was God's Word, and the token which was given him. The great need today is men who like Gideon have heard the call of God and are willing to go forth in His strength to win victories.

Lesson for April 25. Because Ruth forsook country, friends, and her gods for the true God she has been accorded a place of honor in the ancestry of Christ. Those who make God first shall have all things needed.

Lesson for May 2. Because Samuel was given in answer to a mother's prayer and was dedicated by her to the Lord's service, the Lord was able to use him in a large way.

Lesson for May 9. Parental indulgence results in the shame and ruin of both Eli and his sons. God's judgment shall surely fall upon even the priest of God who neglects his duty. The father's love should have been lost in the light and justice of the high priest.

Lesson for May 16. When God's people repent of their sins and turn to Him for pardon He will not only forgive, but will fight their battles and give victory.

Lesson for May 23. When the people took their eyes off God their King they desired a man as king in conformity to the practice of the heathen round about.

Lesson for May 30. Because Jonathan felt the call of God to deliver his people and waited for God's sign for him he was able to go forward and win a victory in such a way as to show that God was with him.

Lesson for June 6. Because Saul disobeyed the command of God and made a hypocritical pretense for having obeyed, judgment from the hand of God fell upon him.

Lesson for June 13. God looketh not on the outward appearance, but on the heart: His choices are not arbitrary.

Lesson for June 20. "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want."

David in Camp and Court

I Samuel 17:1-18:16

Golden Text: "David behaved himself wisely in all his ways; and the Lord was with him."—1 Samuel 18:14.

I. David in Camp (1 Sam. 17).

On the north side of the valley of Elah, on the highlands, stood Saul and his army, and on the south side stood the Philistine hosts, eyeing each other for battle. According to an ancient custom, the Philistines having a warrior among them of great strength sought to decide the war by a combat between two selected champions. The nation whose champion was slain was to be subject to the other.

1. The Champions (vv. 4-37). 1. Goliath of the Philistines (vv. 4-11). Note his characteristics: (a) He was a giant (v. 4), perhaps eleven and a half feet in height. The appearance of such a man made cowards of the Israelites. Saul made no attempt to meet this giant. Even Jonathan, who had distinguished himself at Michmash (1 Sam. 14) seems to have lacked in courage. (b) He was filled with conceit. His size, his panoply of war, and his strength caused him to believe that no evil could befall him. His very conceit became his snare. "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." (c) He was boastful. No doubt he was a much-talked-of man among the Philistines. Likely his reputation reminded them of a former experience when Samson, Israel's giant, wrought such great mischief among them. Little did they realize that their boastings would so soon come to an end. (d) He was defiant. He openly defied the army of Israel—the people of the Most High. The champion of Satan's hosts now is becoming more and more defiant of the Lord's people and will ultimately defy the Almighty Himself. (e) He was scornful. He treated the Israelites with the utmost contempt. This is what Satan is doing daily.

2. David the Israelite (vv. 12-37). In the providence of God David was sent to the camp at a time to hear the boasting of this proud and contemptible Philistine. His three elder brothers were in the army and his father sent him with some provisions for them as well as for the captain. While talking with his brothers, Goliath made his appearance. The sight of Israel's cowardice and lack of zeal for God prompted David to offer his service. Note his character: (a) A mere youth not used to war. (b) Courageous. He had proven his bravery before in defending his flock against the lion and the bear. When all Israel were afraid he undertook this task. (c) He had faith in God. He argued that what God had done for him He would do again. God is pleased with the faith that thus reasons. (d) He had meekness and self-control. This he exhibited in a remarkable manner under the gibes of Eliab (v. 28). (e) He was skillful. He had become such an expert in the use of the sling that he had absolute confidence in the issues of his attack. He was not a blind enthusiast who disregarded the use of means, but was careful to use means, and most particular as to what they should be. He put aside the untried armor of Saul, knowing that God's will for him was to use by faith that which he had thought insignificant. We should by faith use the gifts and powers we have to the pulling down of Satan's strongholds.

2. The Battle (vv. 38-48). When Goliath beheld David coming up against him he cursed him by his gods Dagon, Baal and Astarte, showing that it was not merely a battle between David and Goliath, but between the true God and false gods. David hasted to meet Goliath. This he did to give impetus to his stone. A stone from his sling smote Goliath and he fell to the earth upon his face. David went forth in the name of the Lord of Hosts that all the earth might know that there was a God in Israel.

3. The Victory (vv. 49-58). Goliath was killed and the Philistine army routed. This victory is a prophecy of a greater one when the devil, the defiant enemy of God, shall be broken and his army put to flight. David is thus the type of Christ and Goliath the type of Satan, the opposer of Christ. Goliath's sword was turned against himself; so Christ shall turn Satan's weapon against himself for his own destruction.

II. David in Court (18:1-16).

1. Saul Jealous of David (vv. 1-9). David went unto battle with Goliath out of zeal for God and true religion, not for personal glory; but it turned out as always, that because he made God first, God honored him. "Him that honoreth me, I will honor." Upon David's return from the pursuit of the Philistines he was met by a triumphal chorus of women from all the cities of Israel, shouting praises unto him for his victory over their enemies. Perhaps they sang as two answering bands. The one sang, "Saul has slain his thousands," and the other answered, "And David his ten thousands." This was too much for Saul. To hear the praises of a young shepherd boy surpassing his own stirred up his envious disposition and caused it to express itself habitually—"Saul eyed David from that day forward." This was but the occasion which fanned into a flame the passion which lingered in Saul's bosom. This same wickedness may be in any one of us, and unless we think more about God and our duty than about our reputation it will crop out. When our fellow Sunday-school teacher is being honored above us, or our brother preacher is heard with greater delight than ourselves, we are tempted to be envious and jealous, and may the awful tragedy of Saul's life be a warning to us!

2. Saul Tries to Kill David (vv. 10, 11). This is an example of the awful tragedy which may result if we harbor envy and jealousy. Saul had prepared a place in his heart for this evil spirit to dwell. When one gives himself up to the indulgence of his baser passions, the Devil finds a place in his heart to dwell. "Every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lusts" (James 1:14, 15). Saul's sin cannot be defended on the ground of his insanity; for his insanity was a kind for which he was responsible.

3. David's Wise Conduct (vv. 12-16). Because Saul recognized that God had departed from him, and that David must increase while he must decrease, he tried to get rid of David. He sent him from him and made him captain over his army. His envy even assumed a role of cunning, and he offered his daughter to David as a reward for bravery in battle. Not that he cared for David, but that the Philistines might kill him instead of doing it with his own hands (v. 17). In spite of all this David acts discreetly. He wins the favor of the people and is loved by the Lord. Despite Saul's intrigues, David went from success to success. He was going upward while Saul was going downward. The issue in both cases was the result of a personal choice. Those who make God their choice shall prosper, though the hatred of men be most bitter.

Sunday-school News, Methods, Appliances and Questions

By Hugh Cork

AN ORGANIZED CLASS WORTH WHILE

Can young people in a city of seventy thousand population in which a dozen motion picture and vaudeville houses do their best to desecrate the Sabbath, be won and held to the church? Can religious attractions be made as enticing to high school boys and girls as worldly amusements?

"Our Class," the largest Sunday-school organization in Rockford, Ill., has proven that these questions can be answered in the affirmative. Two years ago it started with a membership of eighty-eight boys and girls who were members of the confirmation class of Trinity Lutheran Church. It now has a growing membership of nearly two hundred; its Sunday attendance seldom falls below one hundred. Some of its members travel fifteen miles to be present at its sessions.

It is composed of and managed by the young people. Their president, a young lady employed in a Rockford factory, presides at all the business sessions. The remainder of its officers and the members of its various committees are all young people who either attend school or work in some of the offices or factories of Rockford. The teacher, Melvin C. Smith, is a student at The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, who returns to Rockford every week-end.

Undoubtedly much of its success is due to the fact that its members believe thoroughly in prayer. They are asked to spend fifteen minutes a day in prayer for some special need of the class. Often each member is asked to pray for some one who seems to be straying from the Sunday-school. Every class session is opened with prayer. A devotional service was held by the class as the New Year came in. Prayer has become a natural part of the members' lives.

The members are made to feel that the teacher and officers have a personal interest in them. When they are absent they are either visited by a committee or receive a letter telling them that they were missed. In order to do this an accurate attendance record is kept, each scholar's record on a separate card, on which is noted everything of interest about that member, including the number of calls and class communications he receives.

Visiting Committee: When our members are sick this committee visits them. Some folks say there's no joy in the Christian Life. Draw your own conclusions.

Every member is given something to do, which takes some of his spare time every week. About twenty-five serve as officers and members of committees. A number are active in the class orchestra which plays at every Sunday session and at its entertainments. There are also basketball, baseball and volley-ball teams for both boys and girls. Then there are many special tasks, such as decorating the class room, making mottoes and posters, and telephoning delinquent members.

"Our Class" is widely advertised. Every activity in which the public is likely to be interested is heralded in the three local newspapers. Posters are put in the store windows where young people are likely to pass. These are made attractive by the display of snapshots of various well known members. Also advertising circulars are printed in lots of six hundred and distributed through the city schools.

TEACHING'S SECOND LAW AND SEVEN OF ITS RULES

"The learner must attend with interest to the truth to be taught."

To enforce this law the following seven rules are made:

1. Never begin a class exercise until the attention of the class is secured.
2. Pause whenever the attention is interrupted or lost, and wait until it is regained.
3. Never exhaust the pupil's power of attention, but stop when weariness appears.
4. Fit the length of the exercise to the age of the class.
5. Kindle and maintain the highest possible interest in the lesson itself.
6. Present those aspects of the lesson and use such illustrations as fit the ages and attainments of the class.
7. Address the instruction to as many of the senses and faculties of mind as possible but keep the subject always in view.

SECURING OFFICERS AND TEACHERS

Too often, in fact generally, in many schools, a willingness to become an officer or teacher is the chief qualification for filling vacant positions. No wonder such schools produce small spiritual results. If God has "set some in the church to teach" it goes without saying there are some whom He did not intend should teach and it is going against His plan for us to use them as teachers.

The following steps to be taken in filling positions of officers and teachers seems scriptural and has been found very practical.

1. Be sure you have a clear conception of the qualifications needed to meet the requirements of the position to be filled.
2. By the process of elimination reduce the possible candidates for the position by eliminating those whose fitness might be questioned.
3. Pray to be divinely guided to the one whom God has selected for this service asking particularly that the one He has chosen may come to your mind, and say "yes" to your request, pleading Matthew 9:37,38.
4. After these three steps some names will surely suggest themselves. From this number go personally and interview the most likely one in your judgment.
5. In presenting the requirements of the office do not minimize the work to be done, and caution against either accepting or declining the position except the mind of the Lord is clear after prayerful consideration.
6. Give sufficient time to decide what the Lord's will in the matter is, and set the time when the decision shall be rendered.
7. If the decision is favorable take it as God's answer to your prayer and do not question the appointment or plan to "wait and see." If you have been led to the wrong one then look up the next most likely, treating them the same way until the place is filled.

This plan has always found "workmen that needeth not to be ashamed rightly dividing the word of truth." Try it.

"MY COUNTRY, 'TIS OF THEE"

The author of this great national hymn, Dr. Samuel F. Smith, was born in Boston in 1808, and was a graduate of Harvard University in 1829, in the same class with Oliver Wendell Holmes. Dr. Smith was always poetical and wrote many verses When his graduating class were having a reunion a few years before he died Oliver Wendell Holmes read his famous class poem. When he came to refer to Smith this was his reference:

> "And there's a nice youngster of excellent pith,—
> Fate thought to conceal him by naming him Smith;
> But he shouted a song for the brave and the free,
> Just read on his medal, My Country, of thee!"

In 1831 a noted educator of New York was sent to inspect the public schools of Germany, with a view of incorporating their good features into the schools of this country. He found the Germans paid much attention to music, and he brought back a number of their school music books. These were given to Dr. Lowell Mason to work over for use here, but Dr. Mason not being able to read German, brought them to Dr. Smith, who was then a theological student at Andover, for translation. Among the pieces he found the music of our "America" not knowing it was really the English "God Save the King," and he immediately sat down and wrote on a slip of blank paper our national hymn as we have it now. He did not know, or even think he was writing a national hymn, but the German words being patriotic they inspired him to pen something which would fit America. He laid the song away, and nearly forgot that he had made it. Some weeks later he sent it to Dr. Mason, and on the following Fourth of July, 1832, he was surprised to hear it sung in Park Street Church by a children's chorus, in which was Dr. Edward Everett Hale, at that time a boy ten years of age.

Dr. Smith said, just before he passed away, "I do not share the regret of those who deem it an evil that the national tune of Britain and America is the same. On the contrary, I deem it a new and beautiful tie of union between the mother and the daughter, one furnishing the music and the other the words."

At Hampton Institute, Va., they have a very interesting and effective manner of rendering "America." The Government school has in it mountain whites, Indians and negroes. A trio, representing the white, Indian and negro races sing together:

"My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing."

The Indian alone sings,

"Land where my fathers died,"

The White man,

"Land of the pilgrim's pride,"

And the Negro,

"From every mountain side
Let freedom ring."

All the Indians then in chorus sing the second stanza, beginning.

"My native country, thee;"

The Negroes together sing the third,

"Let music swell the breeze;"

And then all join in the last—

"Our father's God, to thee,
Author of Liberty,
To thee we sing.
Long may our land be bright,
With freedom's holy light:
Protect us by thy might,
Great God, our King."

MANY DELEGATES ENROLLING FOR "TOKYO—OCTOBER 1920"

Reservations by those who are going as delegates to the World's Sunday-school Convention which will be held in Tokyo, October 5, are being received daily at the World's office, 216 Metropolitan Tower, New York City. The revised tour bulletin has been issued and it is interesting to announce that trips from and returning to a Pacific Ocean port will cost from $700 up, the larger cost being for those who take the more extended tours to Korea, China and the Philippines. All necessary expenses of travel, guides and hotels, except fees to stewards on the ocean steamers, are in the inclusive costs of the various tours Over one hundred have already made inquiry concerning the Around-the-World Tour and full information concerning this trip will be ready shortly for those seeking information.

The convention building is to be erected on the plaza in front of the Tokyo railway station. A restaurant seating 1,000 will be attached to the convention hall. These buildings are near the Y. M. C. A. where the great Sunday-school exhibit will be set up. The hearty enthusiasm on the part of the missionaries and native Christians, is manifested in all the preparatory work of the General Committee.

Mr. Coleman has just returned from a trip to Korea where he found that the Koreans wanted the number of delegates which have been assigned for that country increased from 100 natives to 200, and 50 missionaries are planning to be present.

FEDERAL COUNCIL PLANS FOR ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE

Plans looking toward an ecumenical conference, representing Christians of every faith and land, were approved by action of the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America at a recent meeting in New York City. The preliminary meeting of an international committee to arrange the details for the larger gathering was called at Geneva, Switzerland, August 10, 11, 1920.

The plans under consideration will involve the assembling of the most widely representative Christian gathering of modern times. Protestant churches have for several decades been holding great international meetings which have sometimes been called ecumenical conferences. The meeting will be less doctrinal and theological in its purpose than the world conference on faith and order which is being promoted by leaders of the Episcopal church looking toward the reunion of all Christendom.

CHRISTIAN TRUTH INVESTIGATION

The International Christian Truth Investigation Society has headquarters at 402 Marquette Building, Chicago. The President is Rev. W. E. Biederwolf, D. D., one of the first vice-presidents is Judge McKenzie Cleland, and the secretary is Rev. Stephen Byron Dexter. The purpose of this society is the enlightening of people regarding erroneous religious beliefs, such as Christian Science, Theosophy, Russellism, Spiritism, etc. One of the means of placing literature that combats religious error before the people is by putting literature racks in public places, such as hotels, railroad stations, post offices, etc. These racks can be secured from the society at the address above. On an exhibit of seven of these cases, among the many thoroughly reliable periodicals copies of the Christian Workers Magazine were found in four, and possibly hidden in others. Write the general secretary for further information.

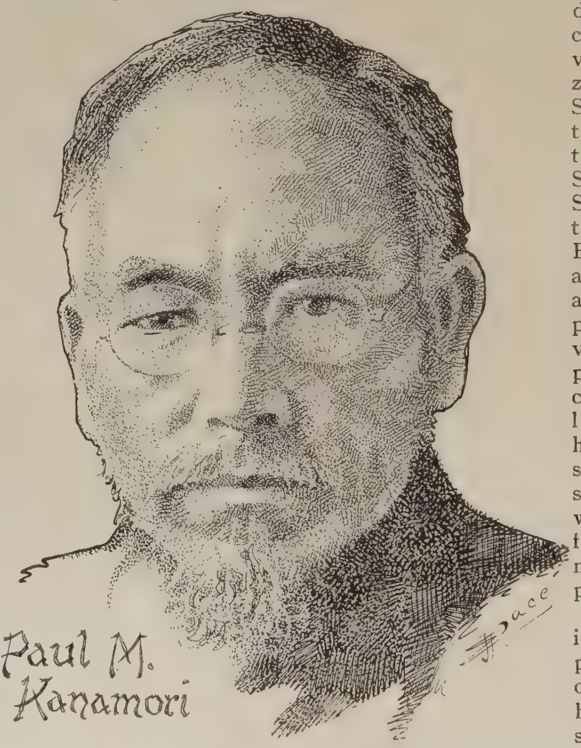
KANAMORI, PREACHER OF ONE SERMON



He would be a daring preacher indeed, who, in America at least, should announce publicly that he had only one sermon to preach and that it would require three hours to preach it, and having preached it would invite his hearers to stay away next time and allow others to come in their stead. But such is the Rev. Paul M. Kanamori of Japan, now touring this country for his Lord, and speaking with cordial welcome in the churches, seminaries, colleges and conferences of our land. He comes furthermore, as a missionary to our shores, a Spirit-filled messenger with a Spirit-born message; and his message is the old, old message of the Cross.

It ought to bring a blush of shame to our faces that God finds it necessary to bring back from the mission field a missionary, but lately won from the darkness of heathenism, to call us back from our wild idealism of world-reconstruction and social reform to "the faith once for all delivered," to faith in the redeeming, sanctifying blood of the Son of God.

Mr. Kanamori himself had his years of leanness—twenty of them—when he wandered about in the waste, dry places of German rationalistic theology, only to come back again, gaunt and hungry, poor and naked and spiritually blind. From an erudite professor of theology, and lecturer on social and moral reform he became a child again, found anew his old, joyous, simple, sunny faith in the redeeming blood of Jesus, since when he has gone about, a man of one message and one sermon, and the grace of God is with him. In the last four years God has given him 38,000 souls of his fellow Japanese, won to faith in Christ by the preaching of the blood.

The Story in Detail

Back in the seventies a Japanese prince gathered one hundred likely lads from various parts of the empire for special military instruction, inviting as their instructor an American army captain. Such is the timely providence of God that this captain should be a devout Christian and zealously evangelical. Six days a week he taught those boys military science, then on Saturday nights and on Sunday mornings read to them out of the Bible. They became absorbed in that Book and to use Kanamori's phrase, literally "devoured" it. When the period of vacation came a group of these lads refused to go home, preferring to stay for the further study of the Bible, which they pursued from morning until night with the keenest possible zest.

As a result of this intensive Bible study a powerful revival broke out among those one hundred boys, and in spite of the ban of the imperial decree imposing a penalty of imprisonment upon any convert to Christianity, forty of these lads climbed the "mount of flowers," as its name signified, a hill situated near the military school, and there under a pine tree that is still standing, signed their names to a pact drawn up by one of their number, to accept Jesus Christ as Saviour and Sovereign and to follow Him to the end, cost what it would. And then the storm broke, and bitter persecution burst upon them, but of that number the most of them proved faithful and have served Christ gloriously in all the years since.

Simultaneously with the heroic stand of these military students the hand of God's providence was working, all unknown to them, in another part of Japan. The saintly Neesima was laying the foundations of the Doshisha, in Kyoto, to which in time came some of those forty young men, among them Kanamori. So rapidly did he advance that he became co-laborer of Neesima as professor of theology.

But here began the sad part of his story. His theological studies took him far afield in the writings of German theology, and following Euchen, Wellhausen and others he gradually lost his faith in the Bible, and in Christ as the world's Redeemer. He left the ministry and entered the employ of the government as popular lecturer on social reform and kindred topics. These were his "prodigal years," as he calls them, which were ended by the sudden death of his wife, a godly Christian woman. He could find no assuagement for his grief in the philosophies in which he was steeped, nor comfort for his nine motherless children. He was brought again a penitent suppliant to the foot of the Cross; his faith was again restored, he re-entered the ministry which has since been marked with great power and effectiveness, and to the preaching of the "blood of Christ" as this world's only remedy for sin.

The Three Hour Sermon

Mr. Kanamori's three hour sermon consists of three parts in which he takes up successively God, sin, and salvation. The fundamentals of the faith with regard to God and sin are applied to conditions as he finds them in Japan. His audience is usually with him when he pillories with ridicule the popular worship of idols. He laughs and they laugh with him. A deep and oppressive silence follows a scathing exposure of national and social sins. There is no comeback; they all know that the indictment is true. Then with consciences quickened he tells the simple story of the crucifixion of Jesus, narrating the details of the tragic scene and offers Him as God's appointed Saviour from sin.

Kanamori has proved again the power of the Cross, as witnesses the following summary of his campaign conducted throughout three and a half years in 305 cities and villages of the Empire, with 503 native churches and 40 missions of all denominations co-operating. During that campaign more than 38,000 accepted Jesus Christ as sovereign Lord and Saviour and were committed to the shepherding of the co-operating churches. The final meeting of the campaign was in the capital city, Tokyo, conducted throughout six days, under the auspices of the Presbyterian churches. The churches were thoroughly organized for the campaign and had for months been praying. Three hundred and fifty thousand handbills were printed and each member of the church given 500 to distribute. No church was large enough to hold the crowds, so the auditorium of the Tokyo Y. M. C. A. was used. The churches assumed a goal of 1500 decisions; Kanamori doubled that number and asked God for 3000. The campaign of six nights resulted in 3061 converts, every one located and committed to the pastoral care of the churches. These decisions included men and women of all walks of life, university professors and students as artizans, shop-keepers, and laborers.

Kanamori is a man of prayer and in the little upper room of the Tokyo Y. M. C. A. the battle was fought out. "I plead with God for hours in that upper room," he said. "I reminded Him that He was the same yesterday, today and forever; that He had given Peter 3000 souls on the day of Pentecost. Was not I at last in the Jerusalem of Japan? Could not I have 3000 souls too? I asked and He answered with three thousand and sixty-one."

Mr. Kanamori's three hour sermon is translated into English and is soon to be published by Fleming H. Revell & Co.

Christians in America are requested to pray for this Moody of Japan, that not only when he returns to his own country he may be mightily blessed of God in the greater campaigns of evangelism he is planning, but while here in America his testimony to the power of the Cross may be honored and blessed of God.

PREMILLENNIALISM AND MISSIONS

By John G. Moffat, Dunmore, Pa.

Have you ever heard the charge that looking for the Lord's coming cuts the nerve of missionary endeavor? In my experience as treasurer of the missionary fund of the Presbyterian church in Dunmore, I have found it to have quite the opposite effect. The pastor of our church is an ardent premillenarian and missionary enthusiast. He preaches the Lord's coming as an incentive to missionary endeavor, not for the purpose of converting or saving the world, but for the gathering out of the elect, the bride of the Lamb. What has been the result?

The present pastor has been with us a little less than a year, yet the gifts of the people for missions have nearly trebled. The Sabbath-school received a missionary offering of $1,400 in actual cash last Christmas, and now has its own representative on the foreign field, laboring among the Koreans in Manchuria. Besides paying his salary, the school gave to Waldensian work in Italy, to Rev. Harry Strachan in South America, and to the general fund of our Foreign Mission Board. Out of $2,300 received, $600 was spent on running expenses, and $1,700 given to missions. I might state that our consecrated Sabbath-school superintendent is a no less ardent "Pre" than the pastor.

The church gave one year ago $800 for missionary purposes, but for the year just closed it gave $2,700, and is now asking the Foreign Board to give us a representative in some needy field. We insist that our representative believe in the plenary inspiration of the Scriptures and that he not only believe, but shall preach the coming of the Lord. Not a cent of our money shall go to support a higher critic or mere humanitarian worker.

Three of our families provide three-fifths support of a former Moody girl, Meta Kuehn, in China, under the C. I. M. Another group is hoping soon to support a worker in Africa under the A. I. M. The church also provides for the support of two Russian students in Pastor Fetler's school in Philadelphia. The women's missionary society under the leadership of a consecrated and capable young woman, also one who loves His appearing, gained seventy-five new members during the year just closed, and more than doubled its contributions to the missionary cause. It is the largest society in the church and its meetings more largely attended than those of any other society.

Does some one ask how has this affected contributions for local support? Last year we had the best year in our history, receiving for local support $1,300 more than the year previous. Every obligation was met. Four hundred dollars was paid on the mortgage and a balance left in the treasury instead of a deficit, as was the case the year previous. The pledges for the coming year for current expenses are over a thousand dollars in advance of what they were at the beginning of the year just closed. At the congregational meeting held recently the pastor's salary was increased $600; also the salaries of the organist and soloist were increased.

One of the seven year old boys in our primary department had a birthday some time ago, and received a dollar as a present. The first thing he did was to have it changed so he could bring half of it to Sunday-school for the missionary offering the following Sabbath. The same little fellow was asked what was his favorite Bible story.

He replied, "I like best to hear about Jesus' coming."

Like this boy, our people who give most to missions love the truth of the Lord's coming.

God is blessing the work here, adding unto us such as shall be saved. Last Sabbath twenty-four persons made confession of their faith in Christ and joined us in remembering His death, "Till he come." Speaking from experience, I would say the charge that premillennialism cuts the nerve of missionary endeavor is untrue of the work here; rather has it been a powerful incentive to increased effort for the wide spread proclamation of the gospel message.

PRAYER FOR GERMANY

Mrs. J. Wilberforce Stoughton of 6052 Ingleside Avenue, Chicago, is asking Christian people of this country to join in prayer for Germany. The specific petition should be for the believers in Germany, for Christian workers there, and for other men and women to go into Germany and give the gospel to the people; and for spirit-filled men and women to form a council and provide for such work.

HYMN OF PASTOR HSI

When Thou wouldst pour the Living Stream
Then I would be the earthen cup,
Filled to the brim and sparkling clear.
The Fountain Thou and Living Spring.
Flow Thou through me, the vessel weak,
That thirsty souls may taste Thy grace.

When Thou wouldst warn the people, Lord,
Then I would be the golden bell
Swung high athwart the lofty tower,
Morning and evening sounding loud;
That young and old may wake from sleep,
Yea, e'en the deaf hear that strong sound.

When Thou wouldst light the darkness, Lord,
Then I would be the silver lamp
Whose oil supply can never fail.
Placed high, to shed the beams afar,
That darkness may be turned to light,
And men and women see Thy face.

When Thou wouldst slay the wolves, O Lord,
Then I would be the keen-edged sword;
Clean, free from rust, sharpened and sure,
The handle grasped, my God, by Thee,
To kill the cruel, ravening foe,
And save the sheep for whom Christ died.

When Thou dost sound the battle call,
Thy standard bearer I would be,
With love for shield and right for spear
I'll sound Thy praise from east to west;
From Thy high throne speak forth the words,
And sin must yield before Thy praise.

When Thou wouldst write the records, Lord,
Then I would be Thy ready pen,
A medium subtle for Thy thought,
Desirous to write it true;
That when the book of life is read,
Therein those names be found inscribed,
Which hell nor death can e'er blot out.

Refrain:—
My body's Thine, yea, wholly Thine;
My spirit owns Thee for its Lord.
Within Thy hand I lay my all,
And only ask that I may be
Whene'er Thou art in need of me,
An instrument ready for Thy use.

A MISSIONARY SERVICE FLAG

By Rev. Albert S. Reitz, Berlin, Wis.

He was almost through his college course, a bright wide-awake lad, well liked by all because of his strong Christian character and loyalty to the church. Then he enlisted, went into training and within a few weeks was stricken with pneumonia and died. His blue star had

GOD AND OUR NATION

Text.—"The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God."—Psalms 9:17.

I. The nation was founded on the principles of righteousness. The Puritans were intensely religious and the vast majority of the American immigrants to this country were men and women of piety. The first thing they did in the communities they settled was the establishment of the church, and beside it the school. Practically all the higher educational institutions were established for the purpose primarily of raising up an educated ministry.

II. The nation as such has given recognition to God, although the name of God is not in the Constitution, as some most excellent people desire. It also acknowledges God on its coins, and in the halls of legislation there is a formal recognition of God by asking His guidance. The nation has its thanksgiving days, and days of fasting and prayer have not been unknown. It has made human slavery and the liquor traffic illegal.

III. Social and religious conditions are such that they invite serious consideration:

1. The spirit of lawlessness indicated by the disobedience of children to parents, the disposition in all human organizations to disregard authority, and the general trend towards extreme democracy suggesting Bolshevism.
2. The conflict between races and classes threaten revolution.
3. The wide desecration of God's holy day.
4. Increased immorality, especially in connection with the seventh commandment.
5. The inordinate seeking after ease and pleasure.
6. The growth of Roman Catholicism, with its avowed purpose of controlling both Church and State.
7. The sweeping over the country of many erroneous religious beliefs, such as Christian Science, Spiritism, Mormonism and Theosophy.
8. The vast material wealth of the nation, its extreme selfishness in connection with over-emphasizing Americanism, and the breaking down of the distinction between sacred and secular things.

ELEMENTS OF TRUE PRAYER

Adoration—

"And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory."—Isa. 6: 3.

"I prayed unto the Lord my God . . . and said, O Lord, the great and dreadful God, keeping the covenant and mercy to them that love him, and to them that keep his commandments."—Dan. 9: 4.

Confession—

"When ye make many prayers, I will not hear; your hands are full of blood. Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes."—Isa. 1: 15, 16.

"While I was speaking, and praying, and confessing my sin and the sin of my people Israel . . ."—Dan. 9: 20.

Thanksgiving—

"Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God." —Phil. 4: 6.

"We give thanks to God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you."—Col. 1: 3.

Forgiveness—

"Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors."—Matt. 6: 12.

"When ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have aught against any: that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses." —Mark 11: 25.

Faith—

"What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them."—Mark 11: 24.

"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God . . . and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering."—James 1: 5, 6.

Petition—

"Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."—Luke 11: 9.

"This is the confidence that we have in him, that if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us."—1 John 5: 14.

Submission—

"Thy will be done."—Matt. 6: 10; Luke 11: 2.

"All things work together for good to them that love God."—Rom. 8: 28.—The Christian.

HINDRANCES TO PRAYER

Isaiah 4:3

There is failure (1) through neglect of prayer; (2) because the one praying is not in the right condition.

Some of the hindrances to prayer are—

1. Consuming it on your pleasures (James 4:3). Asking the right thing for the wrong purpose —not for the glory of God.
2. Your iniquities (Isa. 59:1-3). Lack of answer does not necessarily prove that the object desired is contrary to the will of God. Pray, "Search me."
3. Idols in the heart (Ezek. 14:4-7). An idol is anything that takes the place of God.
4. Stinginess (Prov. 21:13). The promises are all to abounding givers.
5. An unforgiving spirit (Mark 11:25). In repeating the Lord's Prayer many a man is asking God to damn him.
6. Conjugal discord (1 Pet. 3:7).

—The Reaper.

THE WOMAN OF SAMARIA

John 4:7

The Opportunity Seen (vv. 4-9).
    Offered (vv. 4-6).
    Used (v. 7).
    Blessed (v. 9).
The Offer Made (vv. 10-15).
    God's gift declared (v. 10).
    God's gift described (vv. 13, 14).
    God's gift desired (v. 15).
The Obstacle Put (vv. 16-18).
    The request (v. 16).
    The reply (v. 17).
    The reminder (v. 18).
The Opposition Shown (vv. 19-24).
    The rejoinder (vv. 19,20).
    The requirement (vv. 21-23).
    The revelation (v. 24).
The Object Attained (vv. 25-29).
    The despairing response (v. 25).
    The definite revelation (v. 26).
    The delighted realization (vv. 28, 29).

TWO THINGS GOD'S WORD WILL NOT DO

1. Will not pass away, Mark 13:31.
2. Shall not return void, Isa. 5:11.

MEN AND ANGELS—A CONTRAST

1. Made lower than the angels (Heb. 2: 7), in that man was subject to death.
2. Equal to the angels (Luke 20: 36), being brought by resurrection into a deathless state.
3. Superior to the angels, because the saints will yet be called by God to judge angels.

INTIMACY WITH CHRIST, AND ITS EFFECTS

"And they took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus."—Acts 4: 13.

I. It is the Privilege of Believers to be with Jesus.

It implies—

1. A Scriptural knowledge of Christ.
2. Intimate friendship with Christ.
3. Regular intercourse with Him. By prayer, by praise, by meditation. In His Word, in His gospel, in His ordinances. As His pupils, as His sheep, as His soldiers.

II. Our Intercourse with Him will be Manifest.

Two sorts of evidence:

1. Internal, only manifest to ourselves.
    (1) Abundant peace.
    (2) Increasing confidence.
    (3) Ardent love.
    (4) Enlarged joy.
2. External, manifest to others.
    (1) By our deadness to the world.
    (2) Our spirituality of mind. Likeminded with Christ.
    (3) Our humility of spirit.
    (4) Our love to His saints and compassion to the world.
    (5) Zeal and courage in His service.

—J. Burns.

THE GOSPEL IN FOUR LINES

Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman wrote a hymn called "One Day." The chorus is:

> "Living, He loved me; dying He saved me;
> Buried, He carried my sins far away;
> Rising, He justified freely forever;
> One day He's coming—O glorious day!"

A Scotchman who heard this chorus said it had enough gospel in it to keep a man preaching a week. It was so wonderfully the gospel message of Dr. Chapman that Mr. Alexander, who often sang it in Dr. Chapman's evangelistic meetings, asked that it be the epitaph written above his last resting place. It was sung very beautifully by his singers at Dr. Chapman's funeral.

—Selected.

"HELPING TOGETHER BY PRAYER"

"Lord, what a change within us one short hour
Spent in Thy presence will prevail to make!
What heavy burdens from our bosoms take!
What parched grounds refresh as with a shower!
We kneel, and all around us seems to lower;
We rise, and all—the distant and the near—
Stands forth in sunny outline, brave and clear;
We kneel how weak; we rise how full of power!
Why, therefore, should we do ourselves this wrong
Or others—that we are not always strong,
That we are ever overborne with care,
That we should ever weak or heartless be,
Anxious or troubled, when with us is prayer,
And joy and strength and courage are with Thee?"
—Archbishop Trench.

COURTLAND MYERS ON PREACHING

Has the old gospel lost any of its power in these days?

No! With a deep dash line of emphasis under it! It has its message for every day, and pre-eminently for this day. The great churches, the influential churches, the crowded churches, are all the evangelical and evangelistic churches. The Presbyterians made Dr. Carson, the evangelist-preacher, their moderator; and then Dr. Mark Matthews, the great evangelistic preacher, and pastor of the largest Protestant church in America, their moderator; John Timothy Stone, and then Dr. Chapman, the well-known evangelist, their moderators. They are wise in that they recognize where their strength and hope lie. More men in the ministry have been side-tracked and ruined by the so-called New Theology, which is as old as the first opposition to the Cross, than for any other reason. It is a subtle poison and always works death. Men into whose veins and arteries it has entered have gone out of the ministry or are preaching to a woodyard and are drawing a salary under false pretenses. They mock at some of those, for instance, who preach the literal and imminent second coming of Christ, but these are in the great class and the successful class, with Spurgeon and Moody and the whole royal catalogue of the past, and with G. Campbell Morgan, F. B. Meyer, Webb-Peploe, Stuart Holden and England's best to-day, and with the great men and great churches of America. "By their fruits ye shall know them."—Watchman-Examiner.

ABSENT FROM PRAYER-MEETING

A Brooklyn (N. Y.) minister once remarked to his people: "There is more room for men in the prayer-meeting. Thomas was a man. He missed the prayer-meeting just after Easter, and he missed meeting Jesus. The next time he turned up he was an incipient skeptic. Let us hope that this will not be the fate of any of our men who are absent from this service."

HOW TO PRAY

"As for me, I will call upon God; and the Lord shall save me. Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray, and cry aloud: and he shall hear my voice." Ps. 55:16, 17.

Prayer is not only not to be omitted; it is not to be hurried. We are to approach God in prayer not only with a sober, but with a calm mind. Dew falls, we are told, only when the atmosphere is still, and the dew of prayer will fall abundantly on our souls only when we are at leisure. Do more by doing less. To pray well is to work well.—G. H. C. Macgregor.

"KEEP YOURSELVES IN THE LOVE OF GOD"

In The Morning Star, I find the following interpretation of the exhortation, "Keep yourselves in the love of God," i. e., "Keep yourselves so that God can love you." The love of God is everlasting, and unconditional, and unchanging. Nothing can separate us from it (Rom. 8: 38, 39). He never ceases to love us. I commend instead the following interpretation:—Keep yourselves in such a condition of soul, that you can enjoy the love of God. If you creep into a cellar, you will not enjoy the sunshine, but the sun shines all the same.—G. de M.

SOME GOOD SUGGESTIONS

The pastor of the First Baptist Church, Clarksburg, W. Va., begs of his people that they will put into practice during 1920 the twenty suggestions that follow. These suggestions are applicable to God's children everywhere.

1. Become an active member of the church.
2. Attend public worship regularly and punctually.
3. Make the prayer meeting a regular engagement.
4. Engage in systematic and organized Bible study.
5. Pray daily for God's blessing on the pastor and the church.
6. Erect and maintain a family altar.
7. Make persistent efforts to bring souls to Christ.
8. Lay aside habits that do not commend Christianity.
9. Do a good turn daily.
10. Read a religious paper and pass it on.
11. Study the work of the denomination.
12. Find some definite work to do for Christ and the church.
13. Cultivate the graces of Christian living—"Take time to be holy."
14. Carry sunshine everywhere, especially to the sick and "shut-ins."
15. Love God supremely and your neighbor as yourself, but love your brother in the church more than self.
16. Emphasize successes rather than criticise failures.
17. Join some department or organization of the church and help to push it along.
18. Try to induce others to worship God with you in the regular services of the sanctuary.
19. Give systematically "as God has prospered" to support the Lord's work.
20. "Be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS

Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 2d of the month preceding date of issue.

"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns, and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work, nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

Emma Paige, evangelist, reports a meeting at Traer, Ia., which began May 16.

W. C. Moorman reports a good meeting at Amity, Mo. He next went to Keenan, Okla.

J. W. Troy conducted meetings in Prosser, Sunnyside, and Spokane, Wash., also The Dalles, Ore. At the time of writing he was singing in the First Baptist Church of Seattle, Wash.

H. J. Bray writes: "Mrs. Bray and I have had a most enjoyable and blessed year. We open our summer work at Stringtown (Prescott), Ia. This is a return engagement."

Melvyn M. Lawton assisted Rev. J. Irving Reese, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Northumberland, Pa., in a very successful and blessed meeting. There were 25 decisions for Christ.

The Saxon-Harris Evangelistic Party spent the month of March in a campaign at Wilburton, Okla. From there they went to Hominy, and then to Snyder, Okla.

Rev. Charles Frederic Sheldon reports a most profitable meeting with the First Presbyterian Church of Sherman, Tex. His next meeting was held in Perry, Ia.

The Crimm Evangelistic Party report a successful union revival campaign at Chickasha, Okla. Their next meeting was held at Houston, Tex. Miss Junia Sells of Newark, O., has joined the party as pianist.

S. D. Goodale reports a fine meeting in Springdale, Ark., although the weather was very unfavorable, and they closed in one of the worst storms of the season. His next meeting was held in Preston, Kan.

The Taylor and Fleming Gospel Team report a successful meeting at Ladysmith, Wis. During the meeting 150 persons accepted Christ and 87 joined the church. They next went to Spooner, Wis.

Harry Beckman writes: "Closed a meeting at Wahpeton, N. Dak., on Easter day with about forty conversions." He next went to Jellico, Tenn., where a genuine old fashioned revival was held.

F. A. Geisenheiner conducted evangelistic meetings at Thurman, McPaul and Bartlett, Ia., resulting in many conversions. Twenty-three persons were added to the membership of the church at Bartlett, Ia.

Evangelists M. F. Ham of Anchorage, Ky., and William J. Ramsay of Chattanooga, Tenn., closed a successful meeting at Dayton, O. They next went to Lewisburg, Tenn., for a four weeks campaign, and then to Lebanon, Ky.

J. C. Watt, the Scotch evangelist, closed a three weeks meeting, March 14, in the New Chicago Mission, Fairfield, Ia., with 78 conversions and a deepening of the Christian life of the large crowds that attended all services.

The report of the Morning Star Mission, Joliet, Ill., for the second quarter, eleventh year is as follows: 114 conversions, 446 free meals, 265 free beds, 32 persons clothed, 192 Gospels given out, 70 jail and police court visits.

G. A. De Flon writes: "I closed my work at Grand Island, Neb., on April 4. It was a hard field but God was with us." On April 8 he opened a meeting at Dixon, Mo., closing May 2 with a great victory for the Lord. He next went to Hooper, Neb.

Miss Sara C. Palmer and her singer, Miss Evangeline B. Rodda, held a two weeks meeting with the Central Baptist Church, Duluth, Minn. The services were inspiring and helpful to Christian people and there were a number of professed conversions. Miss Palmer's afternoon Bible talks were much enjoyed.

Othie Sackett reports 81 conversions in a five days meeting at Savannah, Ill., 67 conversions at Central City, Mar. 8-14, 150 conversions at Anoka, Minn., Mar. 19-21, 45 conversions at West Union, Ia., Mar. 22, and 100 conversions at Oelwein, Ia., Mar. 23.

Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, the Canadian evangelist, assisted Rev. Charles A. Shreve, in a campaign at McKendree M. E. Church, Washington, D. C., lasting three weeks. The Lord blessed the meeting and many were saved.

The Aldrich Evangelistic Party report a very successful six weeks tabernacle campaign at Anoka, Minn., with 869 conversions. The tabernacle seated about 1,200 and was full every night except about four nights out of the six weeks. Their next meeting was held at Litchfield, Minn.

E. L. Wolslagel assisted Dr. J. W. Gillon, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Mayfield, Ky., in a campaign resulting in 130 conversions. He then assisted Dr. B. V. Ferguson, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Fort Smith, Ark. There were 162 accessions in two weeks as a result of this meeting.

Richard Low writes: "Our two weeks meeting at Portis, Kan., closed with 48 members of the Sunday-school deciding for Christ, and a general upbuilding of the entire church." Rev. C. E. Hall, the pastor, did the preaching and Mr. Low had charge of the music. Mr. Low next assisted Rev. C. M. Snyder at Quinter, Kan.

The Vom Bruch Party closed a two weeks meeting in the Methodist church, Geneva, Ill., with 74 decisions for Christ the last night, besides many decisions during the week. Over 300 girls of the State home for girls at Geneva registered their decision for Christ. The party next went to Flint, Mich.

The Hamilton Evangelistic Party closed a campaign at Mannington, W. Va., March 14, with 1,450 reconsecrations and converts. The personnel of the party is as follows: John S. Hamilton, evangelist; Mrs. John S. Hamilton, women's worker; H. E. Storrs, chorus director; J. O. Doner, tabernacle custodian; Miss Beulah Doerr, pianist.

Charles Reign Scoville writes: "We held our first meeting this year in Deming, N. M., where Camp Cody had previously been located. Eight hundred and ten persons came forward there. We then went to Bisbee, Ariz., and had 1,269 persons respond to the invitation." Their next meeting was held at Nowata, Okla., with 1,328 conversions at the date of writing.

H. Evan McKinley reports a successful meeting with Dr. Morgan Lee Starke at Rogersville, Tenn., with 185 conversions. His next meeting was with the Magnolia Avenue M. E. Church, Knoxville, Tenn., with 112 decisions. His next meeting was a campaign of the Baptist churches of Knoxville, Tenn., under direction of the Home Board evangelistic force.

The Lake Orion Bible Conference will be held at Orion, Mich., from July 24 to Aug. 1, inclusive. Among the speakers for the 1920 Session will be: Dr. Cortland Myers, Rev. James M. Gray, Rev. Harris H. Gregg, Dr. Ernest C. Wareing, Dr. James B. Ely, Dr. A. B. Winchester, Miss Helen Brynes, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C Norton (Belgium Mission), Dr. J. J. Ross and Dr. Frank E. Taylor. For information write Rev. C. E. Wakefield, 82 Larchmont Ave., Detroit, Mich.

McMinn and Wieand held a very successful meeting in Farmington, Minn., where the response of the young people of the high school was remarkable. There was scarcely a Protestant student in high school who did not accept Christ during the services. They also report the conversion of a man and wife, more than seventy years of age, their two sons and their wives, and several grandchildren—three generations. The next meeting was held at Lakefield, Minn., where results were very promising at the time of writing.

The campaign for funds for the 1920 work of the Evangelistic Committee of New York City has been the most successful in the history of that organization. Before the Spring rally at Carnegie Hall on the night of April 22, reports of team workers showed that cash and pledges had been received representing a larger sum than the total budget of last year, and the amount collected at the rally, while not counted at the time of this report, is known to be more than double the high water mark of last year. The success is said, by Dr. Arthur J. Smith, general secretary, to be the greatest in the history of the committee in more ways than one. Not only has a larger amount been subscribed, but there has been an awakening of a large body of laymen who have caught the vision and have seen their own responsibility.

A ladies quartet, Misses Mabel Allen, Mary Newton, Neva Jordan and Ann Pedersen, held a very successful campaign during January in the Presbyterian church of Packwaukee, Wis., during which time there were 50 decisions for Christ, 22 adults uniting with the church on the last Sunday. The Spirit of God was manifested in mighty power. From Packwaukee the quartet went to Oxford, Wis., having even greater results in this campaign. After this meeting the quartet was compelled to disband and Miss Pedersen and Miss Jordan went on together, holding several campaigns in the various parts of Wisconsin, recently closing a most successful series of meetings in Itasca and Allouez (Superior) Wis.

turned to gold. And back in the little church at home they placed it in the center of the service flag and there it hung until the war ceased and the boys, came back one by one to their homes.

Then they planned to demobilize the flag. How should it be done? Some one suggested giving the flag to the "gold-star mother." But a better plan soon presented itself. When the service flag is taken down let another be raised in its stead—a missionary service flag (a dark red banner with a white cross in the upper left hand corner and a white star for every missionary worker the church was supporting in the foreign field) and let the gold star be placed thereon, with the parents' consent to support a native worker in the boy's name. To this they readily assented.

Now the war flag is rolled up and put away and in its place hangs the missionary flag with four white stars representing soldiers of the Cross who follow the Captain of their salvation in the needy places of the world, and one of the white stars is almost hidden beneath the gold star of the lad who "being dead yet speaketh."

Truly of him it can be said, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord * * * that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

"Christianity is not a creed or a philosophy, but the practice of the love of God and all His creatures through fellowship with our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, who revealed that love in the days of His flesh. If that be Christianity, then it is absurd to ask if Christianity has failed. Christianity is eternal and invincible, and it is the lack of it that occasions whatever is amiss in the condition of the world. Lay your finger on any wrong, and consider whether it has the sanction of the Lord Jesus Christ, whether it would exist had His law been obeyed and His way followed. The simple truth is that the millennium would be a present reality if only His will were done; and when things go wrong, then, instead of crying out that Christianity is a failure, we should rather resolve to give it a chance in good earnest."—David Smith.

Book Notices

Any book favorably mentioned below may be secured at price named from the Bible Institute Colportage Association, 822 North La Salle Street, Chicago.

Apt Illustrations for Public Addresses, by A. Bernard Webber.

A new book of illustrations, but not all new illustrations. They cover a wide field and are well selected. A single good illustration is sometimes worth the price of a book. There are many here. Book-illustrations are never so effective as those connected with personal experience but better to use the former than none at all.

225 pages. 7½x5¼ inches. George H. Doran Company, New York. G. S.

Old Bible Characters, by George E. Morgan, M. A.

These characters were drawn, according to the title, by a "modern pen." The chapters are all short, and contain practical and usable suggestions. Such characters as Abraham, Jacob and Joseph, get more than one chapter. The name of the publishing house always insures the reader against liberal and skeptical doctrine. Such books on the center tables of Christian homes will always be a blessing.

223 pages. 8 x 5½ inches. Morgan & Scott, Ltd., London. J. H. R.

Songs of Faith and Comfort Out of Doors—Nature Songs by the Way—Travelogues of Cheer, by Miss Annie Johnson Flint, with an introduction by the Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D. D.

Readers of this magazine can testify to the truth of Dr. Thomas' words when he speaks of the poems of Miss Flint as possessing not only facility of composition, but an uplifting spiritual message. It is a pleasure to us, as to him, to realize that some of her fugitive pieces can now be found in this permanent and very beautiful form. We congratulate the publishers, as well as the authoress, on the form, which could scarcely be more attractive. We trust the little volumes will have a wide sale, for wherever they go they will bring happiness and blessing.

MR. PACE TO INSTRUCT OUTGOING MISSIONARIES

Some seventy outgoing new missionaries under the Presbyterian Board who are to gather in New York in June for special conference with the Board secretaries, will be given a course in phonetics at the Bible Teachers Training School June 16-23 inclusive, by Rev. E. J. Pace, director of the Institute's Missionary Course. For several years this service has been rendered by Dr. Thomas J. Cummings of the Bible Training School, which houses the class during the period of instruction. Dr. Cummings is now on a tour of Africa and other mission lands.

A NEW RESIDENT NURSE

Miss Esther B. Olson

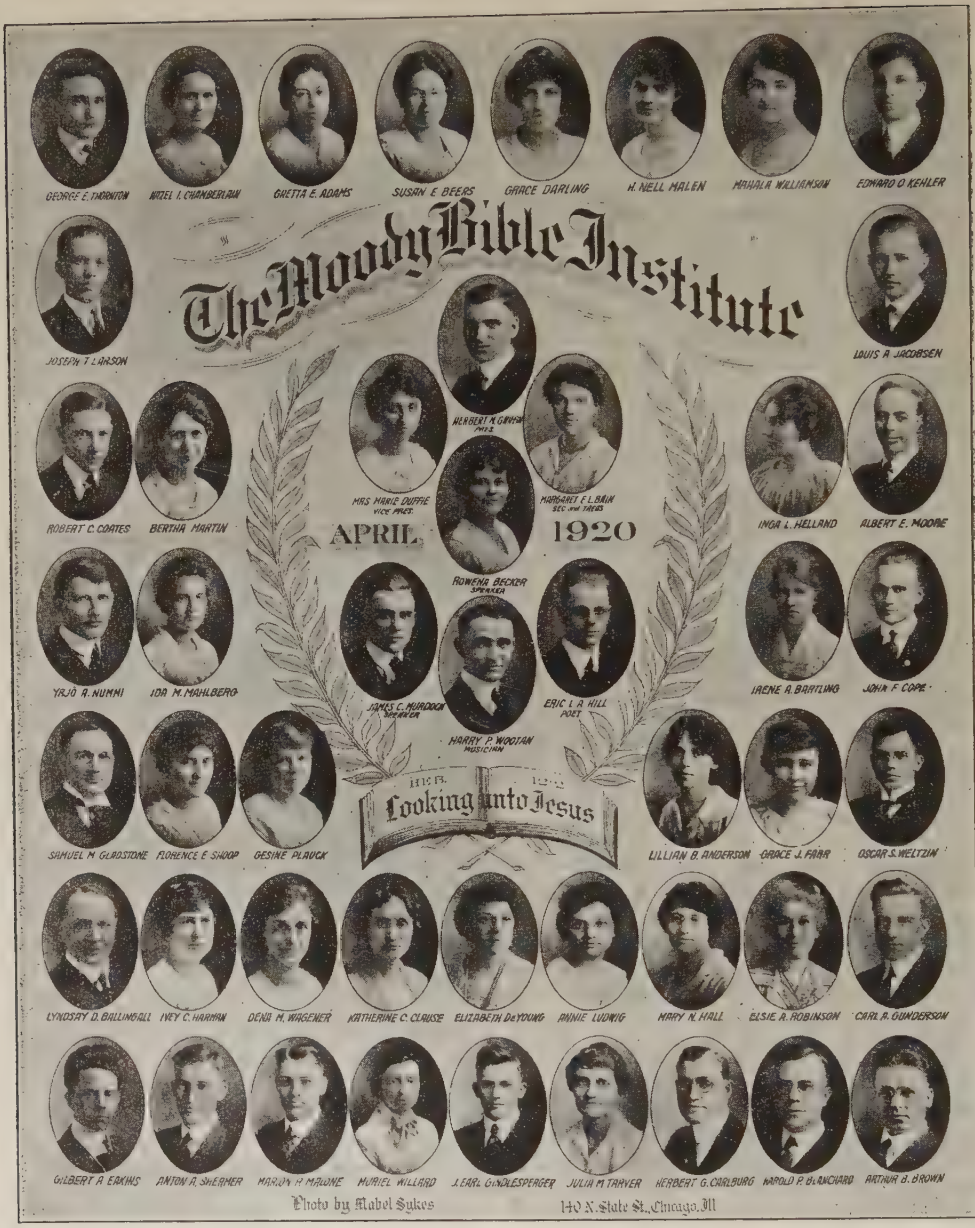
Miss Esther B. Olson, who began her work as resident nurse last month, is a graduate of Augustana Hospital Training School of Chicago, and brought strong recommendations, both as a nurse and a teacher of nursing, from the superintendent of the hospital and the superintendent of nurses. She is also endorsed by one of the best known surgeons of the city, as well as by one of her predecessors in office in the Institute, whose name is always mentioned with pleasure.

As to the Christian character and standing of Miss Olson, the Institute, as usual, became satisfied before inquiring further as to her professional ability.

GRADUATION EXERCISES

The Winter Term graduation exercises held on April 22 were marked by several features of unusual interest, chief of which was Dr. Gray's address on "Scholarship, False and True," delivered at the evening session to an audience which completely filled the auditorium.

At the class exercises in the forenoon excellent addresses were given by Mr. James C. Murdoch, representing the men, and Mrs. Lulu R. Becker, the women, the latter enthralling her hearers with a missionary appeal, the heart of which was a vivid recital of the tragedy of Calvary. An unexpected treat at this hour was a solo by Mr. Talmage J. Bittikofer, accompanied by Mrs. Bittikofer on the piano.



Graduating Class of the Winter Term, 1920

On the other hand, it was with sorrow that the students heard the farewell of their loved instructor, Rev. William Wallace Ketchum, on terminating his connection with the Institute to serve the Lord elsewhere in a business capacity.

"I surely am breaking home ties," he said, "ties that have been very dear to me, for I have been with The Moody Bible Institute in joyful Christian service and fellowship for nearly seven years. I know of no place where men and women can get a better training for Christian service than that offered here, and I am convinced that if anyone does faithfully the work of the Day or Evening Classes he will go out thoroughly equipped with the Word of God."

At the dinner which followed the afternoon reception to the graduates by the members of the Faculty and the Business Staff, the brief address of Mr. George E. Thornton, who spoke for the class in the presentation of the class picture to the Faculty, was manifestly given in the power of the Holy Spirit.

Dr. Gray's address brought out the interesting information that Herbert Spencer, whose writings, he said, had contributed more than any other single influence to the widespread acceptance of the theory of evolution, had never had a college or university training, was never a scholar in the technical sense, that until the age of thirty or thirty-one he had never read a book on philosophy or psychology. Though reared in a Christian home he was irreligious from his youth, would have none of family worship or the singing of hymns, the principle of obedience always foreign to him, his personal judgment always exercised in defiance of authority and no fear of God before his eyes, all of which was stated by himself in his autobiography, and that at the end of his career he declared he had all his life been dealing in inconceivabilities.

Stating that men who are scholars in the technical sense are commonly specialists and not always able to draw wise conclusions from their own data or the data of others, Dr. Gray brought out that vastly more important than the assembling of data was the reasoning power by which correct conclusions may be deduced therefrom.

"Criticism of the Bible," he continued, "is not a question of knowledge but of correct reasoning from the knowledge in hand. The incongruities of the destructive critics make their hypotheses untenable."

The diplomas were presented to the graduates by Hon. McKenzie Cleland of the Board of Trustees, who paid a high tribute to the teaching force of the Institute, and made a stirring appeal to the graduates to do their part in holding back the present day apostasy with its accompanying flood of bolshevism and threatened revolution.

It was announced that certificates had been awarded to 172 students completing courses in the Correspondence Department from December 2, 1919, to March 5, 1920. these representing thirty-seven states and six foreign countries.

The names of the graduating class follow: Gretta Emarilla Adams, Lillian B. Anderson, Margaret Esther L. Bain, Irene A. Bartling, Lulu Rowena Becker, Susan E. Beers, Katherine C. Clause, Hazel Isabel Chamberlain, Grace Darling, Elizabeth De Young, Mrs. Marie Duffie, Grace J. Farr, Mary Nell Hall, Ivey Cilvia Harman, Inga L. Helland, Annie Ludwig, Ida Maria Mahlberg, H. Class Song

RECEPTION TO THE WINTER TERM SENIORS

This was a most delightful affair given by the Juniors on Monday evening, April 12. Keith Hall had been transformed into a veritable bower of beauty. Thousands of pink blossoms seemed to have burst from branches arranged about the lower half of the pillars and in front of the platform. They also hung in ropes from the suspension lights, clever shading of which gave the appearance of blue and white clouds on the ceiling. Small tables placed about the room, each seating four, held vases of fragrant sweet peas and fern leaves, which later served as favors for the guests. Beside the plates were pink and white bon-bon cups and exquisitely painted place-cards, the latter, with the programs and invitations, being the work of Miss Margaret Eavey and Mrs. C. M. Yates.

An organ solo by Miss Greta Hamilton preceded the event of the evening, the reading of Tennyson's "Princess" by Mrs. Harriet Kennedy, assisted by the Junior octet, which sang two selections, "Sweet and Low" and "The Bugle Song" from the "Princess."

The guests were then invited to find their places at the tables and after dainty refreshments had been enjoyed the remainder of the program was given, consisting of a vocal duet by Mrs. Yates and Mr. Richard Nyberg, a piano solo by Mr. Leonard Voke, known as Mr. Charles M. Alexander's pianist, a tribute to the Faculty written by Mr. M. O. Burfurd and delivered by Mr. Jacquel Kelewae, and the charge to the graduates, given by Miss Olive Taylor.

The evening was brought to a fitting close by an impressive fellowship meeting led by Rev. J. R. Schaffer, Assistant Superintendent of men, the song service being conducted by Mr. Harry Wootan.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION MEETING

A joint meeting of the Alumni Association and the Chicago Auxiliary was held in the Institute dining room on the evening of April 19. The Winter Term graduating class received the guests in the hall of the Women's Building where a social hour was enjoyed, followed by supper to which 218 sat down. After a musical program Rev. Walter Swartz, '14, extended greetings from the Chattanooga Auxiliary, and Miss Olive Taylor, '20, represented the New York Association.

The address of the evening was given by Rev. W. L. ("Bob") Simmons, '13, who spoke on "The Laid Down Life."

The object of the Chicago Auxiliary was presented by the president, Mr. O. B. Ransopher, '12, and after reading of the minutes of the last meeting by the secretary, Mrs. B. B. Sutcliffe, '01, Dr. Fitzwater was called to the chair and the following officers for the General Association were elected: President, Rev. J. F. Rake, '04, Evansville, Ind.; first vice-president, W. L. Cain, '15, Des Moines, Ia; second vice-president, Miss Mary R. Phinney, '05, Highland Park, Detroit, Mich; secretary, Rev. E. E. White, '01, 153 Institute Place; treasurer, Mr. A. F. Gaylord, '91, 153 Institute Place.

The meeting was closed with prayer by G. D. Ainger, '11. The enthusiasm of those present revealed a cordial co-operation most encouraging for the work of the coming year.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT NOTES

Dr. Henry Ostrom gave a number of addresses in Denver under the auspices of the Denver Bible Institute, April 11-17, in connection with which Dean Fowler said, "He met with a great many obstacles in the way of an automobile wreck, Tennessee floods, hot-boxes, switchmen's strikes, and snow-storms, but by the grace of God our brother was highly used in many lives." During May he conducted a union evangelistic campaign for the Christ and West Baltimore Methodist Protestant Churches.

B. B. Sutcliffe taught the Bible class afternoon and evening, April 25, at Hope Gospel Mission, Detroit. During an address on the Institute he asked those in the audience who had been students of the Institute at any time to rise, and thirty-seven responded. On May 2 he preached morning and evening at the Madison Street Church of Oak Park, Ill.

George E. Guille taught the Bible at the Presbyterian church, Monticello, Ga., May 9-16.

Dr. W. P. White, regional director of the Northwest and Pacific Coast, is planning several gatherings for Bible study in vacation resorts in Oregon this summer, the first to begin July 25 at Gladstone Park near Portland, to be followed by another conference at Ashland, if it can be arranged. Such approved leaders in Bible study as Lewis Sperry Chafer, well known through his topical books on salvation, Satan, etc., and his platform work in Bible institutes and conferences; George E. Guille and B. B. Sutcliffe, authors and teachers, of the Extension Department field staff, will be supplemented by strong inspirational expositors of the Word of God from the Pacific Coast. Fuller information will be given by the secretary of the Extension Department.

Miss Elinor Stafford Millar gave evangelistic addresses and Bible studies at the Fred Daniels Rescue Mission, Waterloo, Ia., May 16-23.

Mrs. Margaret T. Russell assisted the First Presbyterian Church of Danville, Va., during an evangelistic campaign, in preparatory meetings and Bible teaching, and later gave a series of studies and lectures at Dallas, Tex., under private auspices. She plans to attend the World's Sunday-school convention in Tokyo, in relation to which she has been invited to become a member of one of the seven or eight deputation parties to go throughout Japan to carry the message of the Bible to the people. She has also been asked if she would be available for addresses at five conventions which it is desired to hold in Korea and several others in China. There would also be some opportunity for her to speak in the Philippines if she should go there.

Rollin T. Chafer, regional director of the Southeast, was called to Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, to conduct a Bible conference May 12-16 under the auspices of the Edmonton Evangelical Committee.

C. E. Putnam, the Bible teacher who has had a successful business career as a background for his rich ministry of the Word, assisted the Rev. Lucius B. Compton at Asheville, N. C., during May.

Merwin A. Stone, in addition to teaching the Union Bible Class at the Smithfield M. E. Church of Pittsburgh, and a similar one at the Hope Gospel Mission of Detroit, conducted conferences at the Baptist church, Almond, Wis., at the Dayton Gospel Center, and at Scottdale, Pa. May 1 he became pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Oak Park, Ill. His work under the Extension Department was much appreciated.

Mr. John R. Riebe gave an illustrated address on Africa at Grace Evangelical Church, Chicago.

FORMER PRESIDENT TAFT AND MEMBERS OF CHICAGO'S "COMMITTEE OF FIFTEEN"

Mr. Crowell, who is president of the Institute, is president also of the Committee of Fifteen, under whose auspices Mr. Taft was invited to give an address on "Americanism" at its annual banquet May 10.

The Committee of Fifteen has virtually abolished open immorality in Chicago. In 1915 it secured the passage of the Injunction and Abatement Law, and has since sent 988 notices to owners of property used for immoral purposes. In all of these instances except 181 the immorality was eliminated. Further action was taken under the law in these cases, but in only fifteen instances was it necessary to apply for an injunction, which was granted in every case and enforced.

The picture, which was taken by a staff photographer of The Chicago Daily News at the LaSalle Street Station, May 10, on Mr. Taft's arrival, is reproduced by courtesy of the Daily News, which loaned the photograph for this purpose.

HOW ABOUT IT, MR. PUTNAM?

An incident showing the attention given to Mr. C. E. Putnam's Bible lectures in Lakeland, Fla., some weeks ago by even the wee listeners was related in the Lakeland Weekly Advertiser. The editor's son, Dan, three and a half years old, was in one of the services with his mother. A little girl of ten begged permission to take Dan across the street for a drink, which was granted. In crossing, Dan was knocked down by an auto and badly bruised. No one could tell just how it happened nor to whom the car belonged. That night, when questioned by his father, Dan said the car belonged to Colossians, and the next day he said it belonged to Thessalonians.

THE AUDITORIUM CHOIR

A much appreciated portion of the regular program of the four o'clock Sunday Bible Expositions is the singing of the student choir, which is conducted by different members of the Music Faculty, from term to term. Mr. Alfred Holzworth, conductor in the winter term, is also in the front row.

CHARTER MEMBERS OF MOODY POST, AMERICAN LEGION

Since the picture shown herewith was taken the membership of Moody Post has increased to ninety. The Post has organized three evangelistic groups and is holding services every Sunday at Fort Sheridan. They are also purchasing French Testaments for distribution in France.

Former students who were in the service are invited to join Moody Post, if not already enrolled in some other. Address Adjutant Charles B. Pavey, 153 Institute Place, Chicago, Ill.

THE CHRISTIAN WORKERS' BUREAU

That the Christian Workers' Bureau continues to be the means of help for which it was designed is shown by frequent letters of appreciation addressed to Mr. Riebe.

Miss Golda L. Runkle, '18, writes from the Industrial Home for Girls at Chillicothe, Mo.: "I want to report that so far everything has proven so good here that I feel I could serve a life sentence and be happy in doing it. We have 240 girls and 39 officers and teachers. We live on a farm, have cows, chickens and pigs, and the girls raise nearly everything we eat. The four buildings in which we live are called cottages to make it seem more homelike, so I have four Sunday-schools, and four Endeavor meetings. It is a larger field for service than I expected and I pray I may be humble enough to be used. Thank you, Mr. Riebe, over and over for sending me to a reform school."

Miss Isabel Publicover, '16, writes from Lenoir, N. C., where she began work in March among the cotton mill workers: "I arrived safely and found a great field awaiting me, with wonderful opportunities for service. I am working under the direction of the ministerial association in behalf of the cotton mill people who are segregated on the outskirts of the town. They are mountain people, very friendly, and responsive to a bit of kindness, but densely ignorant and dirty. The women are overfond of tobacco and snuff. It is a family heritage and will take generations to wipe out. I am greatly pleased with the pastors. They seem to be a splendid group of men and co-operate with me very cordially. Please pray for me."

Miss Eva Milton, '18, sends word of her arrival at Wellington, South Africa, in February, where she is teaching in the Huguenot Seminary. She says: "We had a very pleasant voyage, only four weeks out. I think I'll soon be as enthusiastic about Africa as you were. It doesn't seem far away at all." Miss Annie Grover, '15, is missionary nurse in the same school.

A letter from Miss Helen Bell tells of her work as a Y. W. C. A. secretary at Kalamazoo, Mich. She is teaching eight Bible classes and says: "It is a privilege for which I praise God to be teaching more than 100 girls every week." She is also called on frequently for talks to young people's and missionary societies.

M. B. I. REUNION IN AFRICA

The picture above was taken at a reunion of former students at Kijabe, British East Africa, in January.

Middle row—Miss L. N. Collins, '07; Mrs. G. Woodley, '14; Mrs. J. E. Raynor; Mrs. Charles E. Hurlburt; Mrs. L. S. Propst.

PERSONALIA

A. E. Laraway, '11, sailed for Tai An Fu, Shantung, China, April 30, from Vancouver, on the S. S. Monteagle.

A. A. Holmes, '00, for several years state evangelist in California under the Northern California Baptist Convention, is now serving in a similar capacity for the Florida Baptist Convention, with headquarters at Orlando, Fla.

Don E. Gillespie, '17, is serving his second year as pastor of the United Brethren church, Cridersville, O., a suburb of Lima, and reports a new church building paid for and $1,500 raised, for a parsonage. The church ranked second in the conference for increase in membership, and the Sunday-school third for contributions per capita, the average amount being 9¾ cents each Sunday.

L. C. Smith, '12, in addition to his pastoral work in the First Presbyterian Church, Deep River, Ia., is moderator of the Iowa City Presbytery, and county director of stewardship in the Interchurch World Movement. He says of the magazine, "I greatly appreciate your valuable magazine and it occupies a prominent place in my study. It is a real Christian worker's magazine."

Susan J. Jenks, '18, is connected with the Washington Street Mission, Springfield, Ill., which celebrated its tenth anniversary in January. An especially successful branch of the work has been the classes in English and citizenship for the Italians, from which Bible classes have developed and grown steadily in interest. During special meetings conducted by Mr. A. F. Scorza, '19, Italian evangelist, Chicago, there were thirty decisions.

S. Hallgrimson, '15, is missionary for the western district of the American Sunday School Union, with headquarters at Ainsworth, Neb. Since leaving the Institute he has spent two years at Wheaton College, a year at the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary, Chicago, and several months overseas, one on the front lines. His field of work now comprises about 9,000 square miles of territory in north central Nebraska. He desires prayer for the thousands of children in that rural district "that they may be given a chance to know the love of God." In June, '19, he was united in marriage to Miss Norah Keyes, '19, a student in the Evening Classes.

J. Milton Harris, '03, writes from Distant, Armstrong Co., Pa.: "We began our intensive campaign of evangelism January 1. We have had no outside help or attraction. The Lord has given us 88 decisions and reconsecrations. The Colportage Association has greatly assisted me in the meetings. In these days of mixed faith I am glad to stick close by the Moody Bible Institute and its people."

Mrs. B. B. Sutcliffe, '01, has returned from a four months visit in California, spent chiefly at Lagoona Beach, which, she says, is an ideal rest place. During her stay at Los Angeles she met many Institute friends. She has resumed her Bible classes in the Married Women's Guild.

D. S., '19, and Mrs. McAlpine are resident workers in the Good Will Home and Industries, conducted by the Brooklyn City Mission Goodwill Work for Men, 80 Willoughby St., Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. McAlpine is also active in the work of the Williamsburg Rescue Mission.

David C. Anderson, '18, has charge of two rural churches near Madison, Ind. Address Route 9.

S. L. Brown, '14, has closed a four years pastorate in Bellingham, Wash., and accepted a call to the First Baptist Church at Dryad, Wash.

Ernest R. Frey, '12, is pastor of the Baptist church in Oakley, Idaho, situated in the midst of a Mormon population, the only Protestant church within a radius of twenty-two miles. He desires prayers for that needy field.

One of the gladdening messages received during April came in a cablegram to Dr. Ralston from Col. C. P. Titus, Coblenz, Germany, who ordered a second supply of sections of the Synthetic Bible Study Course. Mrs. Titus was a correspondence student in '19, and has been very active in interesting our men in Germany in Bible study.

Among recent callers were Elizabeth Rieman, '18; Ida Koritz, '18; Alice Reinhart, '18; Juniatta Ricketts, '01, a missionary in China for nineteen years; and Mrs. Elizabeth Wild, '93.

W. J. Lows, class of August, '20, has been called to the pastorate of Ada Baptist Church, Barnard, Kan.

P. L. Ayre, '15, is Sunday-school missionary in the Yellowstone Presbytery, under the Presbyterian Board of Publication and Sabbath School Work. His field covers nearly seven counties with Billings, Mont., as headquarters.

C. E. Havener, '16, is manager of the financial department of the Savage Harvester Co., Denver, Colo. He was recently called to California by the death of his father.

James R. Smith, '92, is pastor of Olive Branch Congregational Church, St. Louis, Mo. During an interdenominational Bible conference held there early in May, a reunion of Moody Bible Institute students was held. H. L. Bourner, '11, is president of the Alumni.

William C. Grindle, '15, who has been working as singer for four years with Evangelist B. M. Long, writes of successful meetings in Nebraska in April and May. From Nebraska they were to go to Georgia.

Miss Mary A. Grace, who retired from the Institute's Correspondence Department after four years of service as chief examiner to take up Bible teaching, has conducted meetings at Cleveland and Magnolia, O., with much blessing, especially at Magnolia, concerning which she writes: "The Magnolia meeting seemed to be very successful in every way. Interest kept up to the very last and I have a number of names to send to Miss Cary. I left behind a class of ten enrolled in the Synthetic Correspondence Course."

Rev. H. Ellis Lininger, of Cowles, Neb., was made secretary of a temporary organization of The Moody Bible Institute students at the late Interchurch Conference of Nebraska pastors, in Lincoln. It is proposed to secure the addresses of all Moody Bible Institute students in the state with a view of some kind of future state organization.

Frank Filek, a Junior in the Day Classes, died April 12. He was a Bohemian, nineteen years of age, entering the Institute in September, 1918, having been converted at the age of sixteen. His work at the Institute was highly satisfactory, and he had the Christian ministry in view. He was able to speak several languages, and was an excellent student in the New Testament Greek class. During the past winter, a gentleman recognized as a Christian leader in Chicago made an address along modernist and liberal lines, to which Mr. Filek wrote a reply, which was quite a resume of evangelical truth, and was thoroughly biblical as to the fundamentals of the Christian faith.

Lucia Hammond, '15, is studying French in Paris and expects to sail soon for Batanga, Cameroun, West Africa, c-o American Mission.

Beulah MacMillan, '17, under Baptist Board, expects to go this Spring to Matadi, Congo Belge, West Africa.

BORN

To George W., '17, and Mrs. Reynolds (nee Ethel C. Horn, '17), at Atlantic, Ia., a son, William Jensen, April 2.

To W. A., '16, and Mrs. Rowland, at 1716½ Fifth Ave. S., Minneapolis, Minn., a son, Alfred Joseph, April 25.

To Frederick E., '15, and Mrs. Holland, at Kijabe, British East Africa, a son, Frederick Theodore, January 25.

To J. Gordon, '13, and Mrs. Stephenson, '13, at Machakos, Kinoi M. Station, British East Africa, a son, John Griffith, February 26.

To H. L., '17, and Mrs. Fleming, at Vesper, Wis., a son, Paul Newton, April 25.

To. G. W., '10, and Mrs. Playfair, '11, at Minna, Africa, a daughter, February 24.

MARRIED

Ernest R. Frey, '12, and Maria B. Svenson, at Salt Lake City, Utah, April 7.

Morris S. Slichter, and Irma Lee Newcomb, '15, at Chungking, Szechwan, China, November 4, '19. Address, Anshun, Kweichow, China.

DIED

George Scott Speer, '99, at Oak Park, Ill., May 7. Mr. Speer was president of George S. Speer and Co., bankers.

Edward E. Lowans, '95, at Plainfield, N. J. Mr. Lowans was pastor of the Baptist church, Orange, N. J.

EMPHASIZING THE FUNDAMENTALS OF CHRISTIAN TRUTH

There is need today for a re-emphasis upon the great fundamentals of the Christian faith and Christian truth. It is undeniably true that a dangerously liberal theology is being taught in novel, lecture, in certain magazine articles, and in conversation.

It has become popular in certain quarters (not a widespread popularity) not only to point out the failings and the shortcomings of the church, but to hold it up to ridicule as an effete institution which has served a good purpose in the centuries that have gone, but for which our twentieth century civilization has no place. Proprietors of several widely read magazines have scoured christendom to find some one who would for a consideration write a sensational article for publication, denying some well-established and approved doctrine of Christianity.

It is well, we believe, in these days of destructive criticism and the supposed passing of what were once regarded as fundamentals of the Christian faith, that parents in the home, teachers in the Sabbath-school, and ministers in the pulpit should strive to fix in the minds of the young people the great fundamental principles of Christian truth and teaching.

The inspiration and authority of the Holy Scriptures, the divinity of Jesus Christ, the character of Christ's suffering and death as differentiated from every other death, the personality and the renewing and sanctifying work of the Holy Spirit, the necessity for regeneration, and the continuity of the soul after death—are not these and others among the great essential truths which in this commercialized and materialized twentieth century should be taught with clearness and strong emphasis, in the home, in the pulpit, and in the Sabbath-school class?

If these great fundamental doctrines are kept before the youth, there will be little danger of skepticism or false liberalism in mature years. The pulpit is in need of this hint no less than the home and the Sabbath-school. It will not do for pastors to take too much for granted in the way of clear and definite doctrinal knowledge in their people. These old fundamental articles of Christian belief should certainly have a place in every year's course of preaching. If we overlook them in our teaching, whether in the home, the Sabbath-school, in the pulpit, or in the press, we shall have a sad harvest to reap by and by—even a harvest of skepticism if not of downright unbelief.

Let us awake to our opportunity and consequent responsibility!—The Brethren Evangelist.

PLEASE!

Remember "at the throne" those godly men and women who are taking the Gospel Messenger in print to the homes.

WHAT IS THE MUSICAL OBSERVER?
It is a monthly music magazine published in the interests of the student and teacher and the music lover in general.

WHAT IS IT LIKE?
It is in a class by itself. Not only does it go into detail for the various branches of musical art, but it also keeps you abreast of all the musical happenings in the concert and operatic field in all the large cities.

WHAT WILL IT BRING ME?
It will bring you 100 pages of reading matter—articles by such writers as Leo Ornstein, Leopold Godowsky, Fritz Kreisler, Eugene Gruenburg, Leopold Auer, Eleanor Sherwood, including 20 pages of music—carefully selected copyrighted numbers for piano, organ, voice and violin.

WHAT DOES IT COST?
It costs $2.00 a year. Less than 17c a month. Just stick a two dollar bill in an envelope, write your name and address carefully and mail it to us. Uncle Sam will deliver it safely to us—HIS BOYS ARE HONEST.

Thousands of students and teachers read the Musical Observer every month and rely on it to help them in their work and to keep them informed of what is going on in the music world. Try it, you will find it is just what you have been looking for.

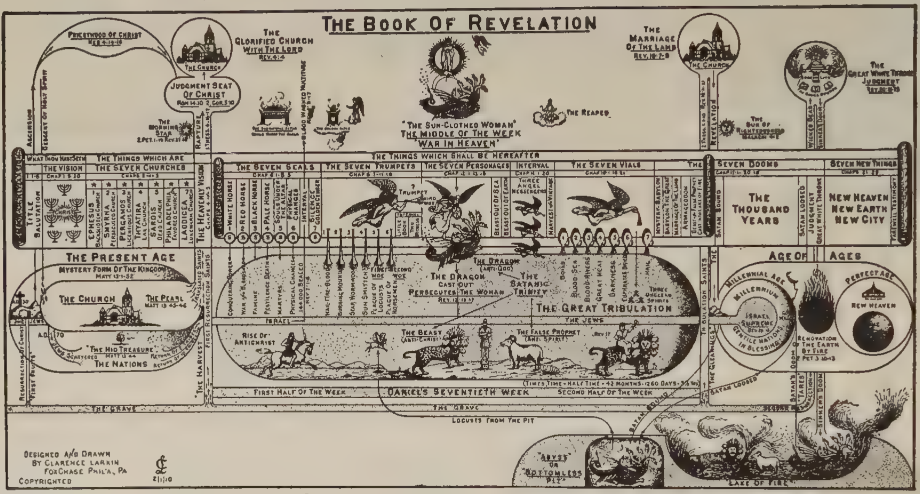
ANOTHER GREAT BOOK

By the Author of the Great Book "DISPENSATIONAL TRUTH"

THE BOOK OF REVELATION



THE BOOK IS ILLUSTRATED WITH 30 FULL PAGED CHARTS AND MAPS AND NUMEROUS CUTS OF THE BEAST AND SYMBOLS MENTIONED IN THE BOOK. THE SCRIPTURE TEXT OF THE OLD VERSION IS EMPHASIZED IN BLACK TYPE AND PRINTED OVER EACH SUBJECT. THE DESCRIPTIVE MATTER IS ALSO EMPHASIZED IN BLACK TYPE.

The Writer's aim has been to prepare a standard work on the Book of Revelation from the Futurist standpoint, and to show that it is to be taken literally, and that it is written in chronological order. The size of the type and the page (6 x 9 inches) makes it equivalent to an ordinary book of 400 pages.

A Career for Your Daughter

THE most womanly of professions, and the most useful to mankind—Nursing. No other profession offers so great a variety of opportunities, or such assurance of profitable, congenial employment from the beginning. No other profession of equal dignity is so easily prepared for, in so short a time, and at such slight expense.

Graduates of first-class schools of Nursing are assured of constant work at good salaries ($100 to $150 a month), with many personal expenses saved. They may choose private nursing, work up to executive positions in hospitals, or devote themselves to school, municipal, industrial, or public health nursing.

Education for this profession among surroundings and influences that prevail in Christian homes may be had at THE BATTLE CREEK SANITARIUM AND HOSPITAL TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES. The course includes unusual instruction in Massage; Hydrotherapy; Medical Dietetics; Medical Gymnastics, and all branches of Health Reconstruction. Nurses trained in Battle Creek methods are in special demand.

All essential expenses met by service, with a liberal cash "merit allowance" of $100 each year. Exceptional opportunities for recreation and personal health building. Students may enter any time, but should apply at once.

Send for illustrated announcement.

PARKER'S PEOPLE'S BIBLE

A LIBRARY OF SACRED KNOWLEDGE

By JOSEPH PARKER, D.D.

This 28-volume library is both guide and interpreter to the treasures of the entire Bible. It throws a clear light on the beauty and significance that are so frequently hidden behind the ambiguities of the text. It is so arranged as to meet the wants of the ordinary Bible reader as well as the requirements of students and ministers. It is a work as valuable for the home circle as for the library or study. Exhaustive special indexes in each volume and a complete Index volume make the contents easily accessible.

ALL DENOMINATIONS JOIN IN ITS PRAISE

METHODIST

"In this work the force, originality, the effective style, the intensely practical teaching of the famous preacher are exhibited at their best."—Methodist Times, London.

BAPTIST

"The work might be almost called the 'Preacher's Bible,' for he will find here what will make him think for himself."—National Baptist.

REFORMED

"Almost every sentence in this great work glows with intense spiritual light, and burns its way to the very center of life."—The Reformed Church Messenger.

PRESBYTERIAN

"It might be almost called a pictorial Bible: each chapter is characterized by vivid verbal pictures, profuseness of illustration, liberally orientalizing the orientalisms of the Scriptures."—New York Observer.

CONGREGATIONAL

"New glimpses of truth will delight readers in every section of the work."—The Congregationalist.

The Illinois Centennial Monument, Erected to Commemorate the One Hundredth Anniversary of the Admissoin of Illinois as a State in the Union--Logan Square, Chicago

Some Words of Friendly Appreciation

During the Winter Term a number of men and women students were assigned one block each for house-to-house visitation around Grace Methodist Episcopal Church. While instructed to keep in mind the interests of all the churches, they were specially urged to help build up the Sunday-school and aid the Easter revival of Grace Church.

In a letter telling of the results, the pastor of Grace Church, Dr. Earle M. Ellsworth, said:

> "Your students who were assigned to us did exceptionally good and thorough work. Our Sunday-school increased by leaps and bounds, many new names were added to the Home Department and Cradle Roll, careless church members were stirred up and several souls were won for Christ. Much of the credit for these results must go to the splendid body of students assigned to us, who through the weeks did such faithful and systematic work. It is a real pleasure to give this testimonial.
> "My relations to Moody Institute during my pastorate at Grace Church were exceedingly pleasant."

Another recent letter, addressed to Dr. Gray by the Rev. John Timothy Stone, D. D., pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, Chicago, says:

> "The other evening I had the pleasure of looking over carefully the 'Synopsis of Department Reports' of the Institute for the year ending August 31, 1919.
>
> "In going through carefully this outline, as printed, I am impressed more than ever by the earnest, helpful and inspiring work which is being done. * * * No one can review the splendid work which the Institute is doing without being grateful for it and for the fact that Jesus Christ and His Word are being honored in such a definite and real manner.
> "I am sending you this letter with no thought of suggestion from another, but as it came spontaneously to me after giving the matter some real personal attention.
> "God bless you, and may each year add to the efficiency and lessen the real difficulties which surround such an effort."

We are grateful to these good friends for their encouraging words, and pray that God will use them through this page "to stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance" concerning His work in The Moody Bible Institute and its heavy financial needs.

Christ teacheth ST. JOHN 3. Nicodemus.

in Jerusalem at the passover, in the feast day, many believed in his name, when they saw the miracles which he did.

24 But Jesus did not commit himself unto them, because he knew all men,

25 And needed not that any should testify of man: for he knew what was in man.

CHAPTER 3.

THERE was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews:

2 The same came to Jesus by night, and said unto him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him.

3 Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.

4 Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?

5 Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

6 That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.

7 Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again.

8 The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit.

9 Nicodemus answered and said unto him, How can these things be?

10 Jesus answered and said unto him, Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?

11 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness.

12 If I have told you earthly things, and ye

In your milk dish use Puffed Wheat

They are whole grains puffed to bubbles, eight times normal size. Toasting has given them a most enticing flavor. Every food cell is exploded so every atom feeds. The greatest food in existence is Puffed Wheat in milk, yet it tastes like floating tidbits.

Mix Puffed Rice with your berries

You serve Puffed Grains with cream and sugar, but also mix them with your fruits. The flimsy, flavory Puffed Rice grains add a delightful blend. They add to fruit what flaky crust adds to shortcake or to pie.

Try melted butter on your Corn Puffs

Some add butter, then milk and sugar, to multiply delights. But also crisp and butter like peanuts or popcorn for hungry children in the afternoons. Then Corn Puffs taste like confections, and they are vastly more healthful, you know.

Puffed Wheat Puffed Rice Corn Puffs

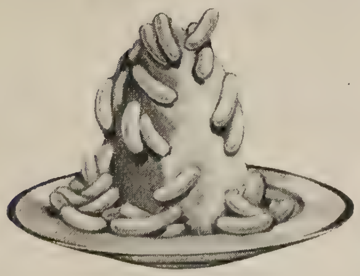
Also Puffed Rice Pancake Flour



On ice cream

Puffed Rice or Corn Puffs taste like nut-meats puffed.

Each has its own delights

The three Puffed Grains are as distinct as three foods well can be. One needs them all.

But each is a steam-exploded grain. All are shot from guns. Every food cell is blasted so digestion is easy and complete. And the three delightful flavors give variety to grain food.

Thus three premier grains more hygienic, more inviting than they ever were before. Serve at all hours in the summer, in all ways, and abundantly.

More Than 6,000 Active Students

Rev. J. H. Ralston, D.D.
Secretary of Correspondence Department are now studying one or more of The Moody Bible Institute's Correspondence Courses.

In the eight months beginning September 1, 1919, and ending April 30, 1920, a total of 2,825 new enrollments were received, which is a gain of 915 over the corresponding period a year ago.

We thank God for this, and ask readers of this page to join us in praying that He will lay it on the hearts of thousands more to undertake quickly the systematic study of the Bible by enrolling for a MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE CORRESPONDENCE COURSE.

The Bible rewards you, as you study it, in a way which gives the knowledge and wisdom without which abiding satisfaction in life is never attained. It is also an education in history and correct English, and an unparalleled revelation in biography, poetry and oratory.

Dr. Robert E. Speer names the following reasons for Bible study:

1. Our souls need nourishment as truly as our bodies, and the Bible is the best food for our souls.
2. It occupies the mind with good thoughts, and gives volume, depth and dignity to our lives.
3. It helps to restrain wrong in us and to awaken and intensify the purposes of righteousness.
4. It moulds the character and reveals to us the will of God as to duty and work, and the sphere of action of our lives.
5. As Justice Brewer says, "He is the best patriot who loves the Bible best and teaches it to others."
6. The Bible contains all that we know about God.
7. It is the most interesting book in the world.
8. If we want to do any Christian work with others and for others we must know the Bible.
9. Christ was a student of the Bible—the Old Testament.
10. Prayerful Bible study opens up real fellowship between us and God.

8 BIBLE STUDY COURSES

Synthetic Bible Study
—a fascinating study of the contents of the whole Bible, "really in a class by itself."

Practical Christian Work
—for soul winners and workers in exceptional forms of Christian service.

Bible Doctrine
—a biblical course in the great doctrines of the Christian faith.

Bible Chapter Summary
—a unique method of becoming acquainted with every chapter in the Bible.

Introductory Bible Course
—true to its name.

Evangelism
—nothing in modern evangelism overlooked.

Christian Evidences
—an old subject brought up to date.

The Scofield Bible Correspondence Course
—scholarly, comprehensive, tested for a quarter of a century, and taken already by ten thousand students.

No matter what your occupation, you can study the Bible by correspondence. One student who has taken several courses is doing all his studying on the street car, going back and forth from his place of employment.

Another student says: "I am sure money can never buy the blessings which I have received from taking that course (Scofield). It is certainly a wonderful course. In a week or two I shall enroll in another course. I would like to go through them all."

To Really Know the Bible

is an education out of which springs the fullest and best development of one's powers in any vocation. Trained Bible students are in great demand for Christian service at home and abroad. Whether in the home, church, school or the business world this training is of inestimable value.

ENROLL NOW! You will be a personal pupil—time, place and amount of study under your own control. The prices are very low—much below cost. There is no better time to start than NOW. Send the coupon at once for Free Prospectus describing our eight Courses in detail.

The Greatest Trek in History

The most virile people on earth have been wandering over its surface for two thousand years, homeless and landless. Now they are returning to their own home and land, Palestine. Watch that big migration! The Jews are trekking from every land of earth, from Poland, from the Ukraine and Roumania. They are organizing in hundreds of towns and villages in Russia, buying tickets on the instalment plan. Hungary and the new Slav states are ready to cast them out, as the fish did Jonah. German Jews and Dutch Jews and Balkan Jews are selling their property to go when the Peace Council gives the word. In America and Canada they are forming clubs and studying Hebrew and organizing companies so they can take control of affairs in the new Eldorado. Jews in Argentina, in Australasia, in the Fiji Islands, in the Philippines, in South Africa and Alaska are turning their eyes to the long-lost land in the center of the countries of earth.

What This Return Will Mean

The Jews will astonish the world by their physical regeneration of Palestine. They are raising tens of millions for work there. They will transform the East. They will prove the mediators between East and West. The gold center of the world will be where the Jew is. As the hub of the Near East their land will be the bone of contention in the coming greatest wars of history.

How Watch These Wonderful Changes

"Is it nothing to you?" To keep up with this procession of Jewry you need "Prayer and Work for Israel." It describes these mighty developments better and more fully than any other Christian periodical. You get monthly the very cream of the splendid story. And with it you get the tale of what God is doing to gospelize these millions of Jews.

What Others Say About Our Magazine

Don't take our word for it. Read what others think of it. An Ohio subscriber writes: "I never lose interest in your valuable magazine." A reader in Pennsylvania says: "The January number received, read and devoured; fine, interesting, profitable; not a dull bit in it." A Florida correspondent, formerly editor of an important church missionary magazine, says: "The magazine continues to be most interesting, instructive, pleasing, kindly and discreet of spirit. It does you all credit."

Try it yourself. Sample copies free. But better still, fill out coupon below and have it in your home.

A Book for the Times

Forty Prophetic Wonders

as predicted in Daniel and Revelation. Some already fulfilled, some in process of fulfillment, and others yet unfulfilled.

By the late

REV. MICHAEL M. BAXTER
Founder of the "Christian Herald."

Of interest to all students of prophecy. First edition published in London, in 1866, since which over 10 editions have appeared and students of prophecy both in Europe and America are familiar with the work. The present edition is a revision of the earlier ones, and retains all their essential features. Published at a time which, as authorities agree, is one of prophetic fulfillment, it will be welcomed by all who are interested in the study of prophecy.

The book contains over 300 pages. Neat paper binding, large readable type. Price, 60 cents. Address

Christian Workers Magazine

Editorial Notes

Another Milestone On Our Way

This magazine entered the world of literature as the Institute Tie, November, 1891. Its publication lapsed for a period, but was revived in a new series beginning September, 1900, with a sub-title describing it as "A Monthly Devoted to the Interests of the Moody Bible Institute, Its Students and Friends." Mr. A. P. Fitt was the editor in those days and Mr. William Norton, the Business Manager.

An editorial in the first issue of the new series explained that it had been revived for three reasons, viz:

(1) That it might be a medium to keep donors and friends of the Institute informed of the work.

(2) That it might be a "tie" to unite students past and present—"a news letter or bulletin."

(3) That it might serve the students "month by month with suggestions and studies."

Thus originally it was to be confined to the interests of the Institute, its students and its work, with no thought of becoming a general magazine. Nevertheless, that first issue, all unconsciously, sowed the seed which germinated into the present plant. It announced that articles would not be sought except from those "who lectured, taught or were in some other way associated in Mr. Moody's enterprises." But as a matter of fact his enterprises were so many and so varied and extensive, that by a process of natural and healthy growth, and as we believe by the leading of the Holy Spirit, rather than any planning of its promotors, the Institute Tie gradually expanded into a periodical of larger size, and of a more general type, with a circle of readers extending considerably beyond the students of The Moody Bible Institute.

Gradually these readers began to agitate for a title more commensurate with the scope of the magazine, hence the issue of April, 1909, appeared with the old title but a new description, thus: The Institute Tie—The Christian Workers Magazine.

At length, in October, 1910, the old title was altogether dropped and the new description succeeded it as a name.

By a strange turn of affairs, however, but still as a result of natural and healthy processes, that name has now become too narrow, while the earlier one, or one approximating thereto, seems to possess the greater breadth. It certainly now expresses more clearly and positively the principles and purposes for which we stand.

In explaining this, it may be said that the Moody Bible Institute from the time of its founding by the great evangelist and Christian educator, D. L. Moody, in 1886, has ever been a world-wide force for evangelical teaching and service. Moreover, in all these years while it has multiplied itself through its students and its extension work, the grace of God has kept it true to the faith which was once for all delivered to the saints. For this reason it has come about that in these dark days of apostasy it is leaned upon in a sense, and turned to by thousands of earnest and sincere Christians all over the world who never were within its walls, but who are seeking for advice, instruction and comfort. Naturally, therefore, its magazine has an ever-increasing list of subscribers, and from these it is, in part, that a further pressure has now been brought to bear to change its name once more, and to make it more distinctively an organ, or a mouthpiece, of the institution whose spiritual life and power breathes through its pages. In other words, if formerly being tied up to the Institute seemed to weaken the value or limit the range of its influence as a Christian periodical for general use, the opposite is now true; and if it is to tell the most for an inspired Bible, a divine Saviour, a fallen race, a full gospel, and the "blessed hope," the name of The Moody Bible Institute should be formally attached to it, and its standard thus flung to the breeze.

Beginning with the September issue, therefore, we propose to do this, and thereafter the Christian Workers Magazine will be known as The Moody Bible Institute Monthly.

However, something more is in store, as we intend to change the shape of the magazine as well as its name, so that it will correspond to the standardized form of such periodicals as the New Era, the Literary Digest, and others. Our object in doing this is to economize space for more reading matter, or to print a good part of our copy in larger and more readable type. It will also make our pages more convenient and economical for advertising purposes, and give greater opportunity for illustration. We feel sure that our readers will like the change and consider it an advance over the present form.

And last, but not least, we have found it necessary to increase the price to $2.00 a year beginning with the new series. Until the last moment have we refrained from doing this hoping that conditions would change, but such is not the case. Since January 1, 1917, printers' wages and supplies have increased 100 per cent and the cost of paper 133 per cent, so that no alternative is left.

We are not conducting the magazine for profit, and even at a subscription price of $2.00 a year a deficit is not unexpected, but it is our duty to keep it at a minimum. The price is low in view of the work put into our make-up and the character of our contributors, and as it will not go into operation until September 1, present subscribers are privileged to renew for one or even five years, at the present rate.

We confidently expect the continued interest and co-operation of all our readers, and especially their prayers, that we may be sustained as faithful and fearless witnesses to the truth until Jesus comes.

Two Views of the Same Matter

In the same mail recently, The Moody Bible Institute received two letters which balanced each other in an interesting way. One was addressed to the Publishing Agent of this periodical, and the other was intended for the Secretary of its Extension Department, whose work it is to put evangelists, Bible teachers, and gospel singers into the field. Both letters related to the attitude of The Moody Bible Institute towards the Interchurch World Movement, an attitude which to feel obligated to take has caused it regret, but to which it was impelled by its conception of truth and loyalty to Jesus Christ, and the welfare of the Church "which he purchased with his own blood."

The communication to the magazine is from a college professor in one of the Middle States, who says:

"I have received recently two numbers of the Christian Workers Magazine. Today I am in receipt of an invitation to subscribe for it.

"The attitude which you have taken toward the Interchurch Movement, and which some of your followers take toward Christian colleges such as ours, is so absolutely incomprehensible to me that I wish to decline becoming a subscriber.

"I cannot understand why a paper such as yours, which assumes the name 'Christian' can fight against an attempt on the part of the Protestant churches to join forces to advance the kingdom of God on this sorrow-torn world. Why, when a very large portion of the Christian forces of the world are combining, do you assume the attitude of separatism? How can you expect the support and sympathy of the consistent members of those churches?

"Yours very truly,
************"

That intended for the Extension Department is from an executive officer of one of the larger Christian denominations, and contains a request for a number of Moody Bible Institute graduates, or under-graduates, to co-operate in a plan for extensive instruction and inspiration to pastors about evangelistic work, "men who know the Bible and whose evangelistic work will have a large element of Bible teaching in it." In the closing paragraph the writer says:

"I have rejoiced as I have learned of the growing power and influence of the Institute and of its teachings within the bounds of our church. We have a very large element of ministers and laymen who are quietly holding fast to the truth, and who constitute a strong anchor for the church as she is tossed about in the cross currents of world plans and policies which have been presented to her for adoption as against the apostolic policy for the church of Christ.

"I think we will absolutely put down and out the notorious Interchurch World Movement program, the organization of which is financially down and out now, and I hope it will never recover; for the success of an organization founded on such principles as those which it put forth, would mean a long delay and hindrance in the progress of a truly apostolic Church.

"Cordially yours,
*********"

To continue a little further, we wish to say that we are in receipt of a number of letters on the Interchurch Movement, pro and con, such as were published in our May issue, but we believe we have given enough space to that subject at present, and will ask our correspondents to pardon us if their communications do not appear.

Sowing the Seed

Expert card players know how to manipulate a pack of cards so that by partially bending them in the hand and then releasing them they can be made to shoot across a room, and a converted gambler of whom we have heard, uses this method for shooting into pool rooms cards of invitation to church services. As he passes an open doorway, he sends in a dozen or more to be picked up by the patrons. Sometimes he substitutes tracts for the advertising cards, his idea being to print on both sides of the card, so that no matter which side is up its full message will be in view.

This same gentleman has observed that men seldom throw away a text of Scripture. Therefore, he not only prints such a text on his cards, but as a change from the usual form of tracts, he occasionally secures cheap copies of the New Testament, tears apart the leaves, and passes them out. He has discovered that many men look these over, and if they do not read them at the time, they carry them away to be read at another time.

We recommend the example of this earnest and consecrated soul-winner, who is an insurance solicitor by the way, and does considerable railroad traveling. His bag is always packed in such a way that his Bible is as easy of access as his rate book, and his supply of tracts as his insurance literature. His business, like William Carey, is preaching the gospel, and he sells insurance to pay expenses.

The Bible in the Schools

Five speakers on the use of the Bible in the public schools have been sent to Illinois by the National Reform Association at the request of the interdenominational committee on the Bible in the schools of Illinois and of the State W. C. T. U. to aid in the campaign on behalf of compulsory Bible reading in the schools.

These speakers include Dr. James S. Martin, general superintendent of the Association; James S. McGaw, of Los Angeles, Calif., its general field secretary; Dr. A. A. Samson, of New York City, and Dr. J. Renwick Wylie and W. McClean Work, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

They are available without charge on Sabbaths and week nights, a free-will offering being taken at the close of their addresses to aid in the expenses. Their services may be secured by addressing the National Reform Association, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Landing of the Pilgrims

This year marks the 300th anniversary of the landing of the Mayflower at Plymouth Rock and the coming of the pilgrims to America, which was a movement of the greatest significance to the history of the times. It has been well said that the Mayflower carried with her the moral destinies of the world, for the pilgrims were in a profound sense the pioneers of civil and religious liberty. Their confidence in the Bible as the revealed Word of God, their faith in popular government and popular education, and their sense of obligation to man, as well as God, made their sacrifices worth while.

To recover the sense of the value of these principles, and to make the spirit of the pilgrims the basis of an appeal to heroism, Christian consecration, and political purity, are the chief objects for which an organization has been formed, known as the American Mayflower Council, for which our co-operation is desired.

Further information may be obtained by addressing the executive secretary, Rev. Charles W. Gulick, 105 East 22nd Street, New York.

"What sought they thus afar?
  Bright jewels of the mine?
The wealth of seas, the spoils of war.
  They sought a faith's pure shrine!

"Ay, call it holy ground,
  The soil where first they trod!
They have left unstained what there they found,
  Freedom to worship God."

Economize and Save

The anniversary of the founding of this nation is an appropriate time to emphasize the patriotic duty of an honest facing and acknowledgment of what expenditures are right and necessary, and what are wrong and unnecessary, in this time of unprecedented strain and stress.

Not long ago Mr. Leffingwell; assistant secretary of the treasury of the United States, in an address before the Academy of Political Science at New York, uttered a terrific arraignment of the reaction and waste which have seized on the American people, and which he pronounced as the cause for the present economic evils now threatening us. "Liberty Bonds and Victory Notes," he said, "were never meant to be used as spending money, and their misuse in that way is the primary reason for the fall in price of those securities.

"Since Armistice Day," he continued, "the world has not only failed to make progress towards the restoration of healthy economic life, but in fact has receded further from a sound position. Hence, effort is being made, first here and then there, to improve the condition of some of the people at the expense of all of the people. For plain living and high thinking we have substituted wasting and bickering, and are enjoying high living at the same time that we grumble at the high cost of living."

As Christian citizens, let us reconsecrate ourselves at this time to God and the highest welfare of our nation. Let us work and save, produce more, and consume less. Remember that the treasury department has adopted the issue of War Savings Stamps and Treasury Savings Certificates as a permanent policy, and that there is no easier and safer investment in dollars and cents than these.

Pray for the Armenians

We have been asked in common with other Christian periodicals to appeal to our readers to pray publicly and privately for grace and protection to be given to Christian people of the Near East, and especially Armenia, and for the establishment of a government among them that will guarantee permanent safety.

These people continue to be outraged and murdered with impunity, according to the safest authority, and while it may not be the duty of the United States to accept a mandatory for them, we can still beseech God on their behalf, and continue to send practical help to them in the way of foodstuffs and other supplies.

We may do more. By addresses, resolutions, press articles and personal letters to our national representatives, we may help to strengthen a public sentiment that will influence the stronger nations of Europe to do what lies in their power towards the establishment of a government among them, based on the principles of justice and freedom.

Christian Tourists in Europe

Members of our churches who are to be in Europe during the coming summer are asked to visit the Protestant churches and institutions in France and Belgium, and to make their arrangements with the Comite Protestant Francais, M. Andre Monod, secretary, 8 rue de la Victoire, Paris, France; and the Comite Belge d'Union Protestante, Dr. Henri Anet, c-o Eglise Chretienne Missionnaire Belge, 11 rue de Dublin, Brussels, Belgium.

Advance information, with handbook, may be obtained on application to the Commission on Relations with France and Belgium of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, 105 East 22nd Street, New York City.

Morgan and Scott

We are pleased to pass on the information concerning this old, established and honored publishing house of London, that of recent date several important changes have occurred in its organization. Mr. G. E. Morgan, who since 1908 has been chairman of the company, has relinquished that position, though both he and his son, Mr. S. Cope Morgan, remain members of the board of directors.

Mr. Robert Caldwell has been appointed chairman, and in conjunction with Mr. G. Wilson Heath will act as managing director. Dr. F. B. Meyer and Pastor D. J. Findlay retain their positions as directors.

The general management of the business will be conducted by Mr. James Roy, with whom is associated Mr. F. E. Monk as deputy manager. These have for years held responsible positions with the company, and will carry out its best traditions.

"Give Us A Name"

In our February issue we asked our readers to suggest a new name for this magazine, promising a payment in money to the author of the title which we might ultimately select from those offered to us prior to April first. Also, in order to stimulate effort, we promised to compensate the authors of the next most desirable titles as determined by our Publishing Board.

As a matter of fact, the title we have chosen was suggested in our own Board, and we fear that the unhappy genius who suggested it will not get a cent for it, as a prophet is not without honor save in his own country. However, the titles which came the nearest to the one chosen were "The Moody Bible Institute Magazine," "The Moody Bible Institute Herald," and "The Moody Bible Institute's Monthly Magazine." The first named was suggested by Mrs. C. B. Douglas, 310 West Ward Street, Versailles, O.; the second by John W. Langston, 542 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, and the third by Miss Theresa Johnson, 2030 Maple Avenue, Evanston, Ill., to each of whom our Publishing Agent is mailing a check with our thanks and appreciation.

The Bishop of Durham

The death of Rev. Handley G. C. Moule, D. D., is an event of such interest to the evangelical Christian world that a somewhat extended notice of this distinguished man will appear in our August issue.

The Threefold Deliverance

By Rev. James M. Gray, D. D.

Who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver: in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us.—2 Cor. 1:10.

God hath delivered me,
His Son on Calvary
Bore my iniquity,
And I am free!

God doth deliver me,
Giving me victory
And blest security,
Keeping me free!

God will deliver me,
And through eternity
Serving Him joyfully,
I shall be free!

Glory and praise shall be,
Adorable Trinity,
Now and continually,
Offered to Thee!

"Sons of God" Marrying the "Daughters of Men"

Editorial

IN THE preceding article we have seen that Spiritism in one of its forms was directly responsible for the flood. The "sons of God," who took to themselves wives of "the daughters of men" (Gen. 6), were evil angels, who entered upon that intercourse, the offspring of which were the "Nephilim," "the fallen ones," the mighty heroes of antiquity. These in their turn, presumably, furnished the ground for the stories of the loves of the gods and demigods of classic lore.

The proof of this being presented, as well as its corroboration by the ancient Jewish synagogue and the greater number of the early Christian writers, it remains to more fully consider the objections raised against it on the ground of the nature of angels, and the teaching of our Lord in Matthew 22:30.

I

Is the Angelic Nature Spiritual and Immaterial?

It is said, for example, that an angel is altogether spiritual and immaterial, and hence such implied intercourse is impossible.

To this it might only be necessary to reply, (1) that even if it were true, even if the angelic nature were such, it could not change the fact stated in the text, that "the sons of God" took to themselves wives of "the daughters of men" the offspring of which were as described. Nor could it change the fact that "sons of God" is a phrase everywhere in the Old Testament used of angels, and not men. That is to say, faith does not wait to learn the possibility of a thing before it believes it. It believes it on the evidence presented, assuming its possibility until the opposite has been shown. In this case, however, "impossibility never can be shown until an exhaustive knowledge is possessed of all that is possible to angels in the line of sinful degeneracy within the powers bestowed upon them at creation." (Kurtz, quoted by Fleming, p. 89.)

(2) This leads to the remark in the second place, that no one is qualified to say just what the angelic nature may be, because no one really knows. On the other hand, the implications are against the spiritual and immaterial idea as shown in our former articles dealing with the biblical representations on the subject. Angels have appeared to men in human form, and have been taken for men, and have partaken of food like human beings.

It may be said that these were instances where God wrought miracles to produce the phenomenon, and hence that they furnish no standard for judging of what angels in rebellion might do. Granted, but what right have we to suppose a miracle? The Bible being silent on the question, why should we introduce it, especially when we know that the working of miracles on God's part is reserved for great emergencies.

Moreover, angels themselves may work miracles, as we have already seen. What about Satan's assumption of the body of a serpent in Eden? What about the magicians withstanding Moses in Egypt? What about the beast with the two horns in the book of Revelation (13:11-15), and "the spirits of demons, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty" (Rev. 16: 13-14)? Angels do not possess power to create something out of nothing, which is alone the prerogative of God, but they may be able so to combine existing elements as to form for themselves bodies similar to the human.

(3) It may be seriously questioned whether there is any being in the universe who is simply spiritual and immaterial, except the Infinite Himself, who is above and beyond all time and space. Isaac Taylor in his Physical Theory of Another Life, takes the position that the idea of an absolutely incorporeal being is irreconcilable with that of a finite creature, because anything created can subsist and work only within the limits of time and space, and corporeality confines the creature to such limits. It is God only who exists above and beyond these limits. In other words, an embodied state of some kind is indispensable to a finite mind, whose faculties cannot otherwise come into play or produce effects.

(4) As Fleming reminds us, should all these views still be unsatisfactory, there remains the fact that human bodies have been possessed by evil spirits, which may have been the case here. Through the medium of such bodies thus possessed, "the sons of God" may have had the intercourse referred to. Indeed this has been the opinion of some of the older commentators, and is suggested as early as the Clementine Homilies (Hom. IX). It is a very simple, and yet sufficient solution of the difficulty, for we are taught in the Gospels that the powers and faculties of the human being thus possessed were completely controlled, intensified and directed by the demon, or else that the two natures, in some incomprehensible manner were interfused and the weaker overborne by the stronger.

The remarkable physical proportions, the superhuman strength and the evil disposition of the Nephilim would be the natural effects of such a power imparted to human beings by fallen spirits. Nor would such possession necessarily involve the suffering of physical and mental evils to which demoniacs of the Gospels were subjected, for Satan can transform himself into an angel of light, and no doubt his emissaries would conduct themselves in a way to accomplish the object they had in view. (The Fallen Angels, p. 95.)

(5) One more supposition is still to be considered, namely, that "the sons of God" in their spiritual nature, or at the most in some kind of subtle, ethereal body, or with the appearance of a human body, might in some incomprehensible way effect what the text in Genesis declares to have been the fact. Augustine in the City of God, (book XV,) thinks this possible; and so also does Dr. Henry More, an English divine and philosopher of the seventeenth century (Mystery of Godliness, book III, chap. 18), and the Rev. Theodore Campbell in the Irish Ecclesiastical Gazette, 1867, all quoted by Fleming. Of course this involves difficulties of its own, and is not presented as a solution, but merely as a supposition worthy of consideration. Those who wish to consider it further will find a good deal of information in a book easily accessible, known as Earth's Earliest Ages, by G. H. Pember, pp. 205, 213, 375-391, edition of 1885 (Armstrong, New York).

We quote a paragraph or two from this work:

"Spiritualists teach that all will marry in the next world, if they do not in this; and that true marriage lasts through eternity. The natural inference is that the true spouses of some are already in the spirit land. And to such an extent is this inference followed out that many are reported to be receiving visits and communications from those spiritual beings with whom they are to be united forever. The ceremonious marriage of a woman to a demon is a thing not unknown in the United States."

Pember mentions a book called An Angel's Message, claiming to be communications from a spirit to an English lady, his destined bride for eternity. The demon-lover describes himself as the spirit of a man of deep religious feeling, who, during his sojourn in the flesh was accustomed to visit the house of the lady's father, though at that time he found no attraction in her. In the course of years he died, as did also the mother of the lady. Soon after the decease of the latter her daughter began to receive communications understood to come from the mother, in the course of which the demon-lover is introduced, and thereafter inspires the medium (i. e. the lady in the case) himself. It is she who, under his inspiration and control now pens the following:

"She who writes these lines is my wife more than may be thought possible by those who have not had a similar state opened in themselves. She is not so as to her natural body, but she is so as to her spiritual body. For 'there is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body.' The one is within the other as a kernel within a shell.

"But this state can come to the outward perception of those only who are open to spirit-intercourse. No others can perceive, during their life in the world of nature, that which belongs to the spirit alone. This state constitutes mediumship; for she who is mine is not only a writing medium, but she is also susceptible of very palpable impressions of my presence with her. We are one; and she has received the assurance of that truth by other means than the merely being told so in these writings."

There is much more to the same effect; but that which we have quoted is sufficient to unveil the danger which may be threatening many.

Marrying in Heaven

It remains to speak of our Lord's words in Matthew 22:30, and the parallels, where in rebuking the Sadducees, He says:

"Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures nor the power of God. For in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven."

Two ways of meeting this objection in harmony with the foregoing have been suggested. One is to say that Christ is speaking of the holy angels only, from which no inference is to be drawn as to that of which the same beings might be capable if fallen from their original state. The other is that He is stressing the word "heaven," meaning that they do not marry in heaven, but saying nothing as to what they might do under other circumstances or in a different environment. The first is the view of Kurtz, the theologian, and the second that of Nagelsbach, the commentator, in the Lange series.

But is either hypothesis a necessity? It is true that angels always appear in the Bible as masculine, never feminine, the former being the gender used of beings in whom sexual distinctions do not exist; but is it inconceivable that the germ of such distinction may be latent in their nature?

Man, for example, was not created to sin, and yet he had in his constitution the capability of sinning, a capability which came into operation in his departing from the ordinance of the Creator. In like manner it is thought, the germ spoken of as a possibility in the angelic nature might be unfolded as a result of wilful departure from the original condition of existence, and the sinking to a lower and unnatural state in apostasy from God.

One author quotes Paradise Lost, book I, where Milton names the chiefs of the fallen angels after the idols of the Canaanites and others, and of some he says, they bore the names

"Of Baalim and Ashtaroth, those male,
These feminine; for spirits, when they please,
Can either sex assume, or both; so soft
And uncompounded is their essence pure."

Finally, following Kurtz again, there is an analogy seen in the resurrection life of man. In this world he has the distinction of sex, but that which is beyond, i. e. in heaven, he will neither marry nor be given in marriage, but in that respect be equal to the angels. Therefore, is it unlawful to infer that, in the event of the angels falling, by their own wilful act, from the higher to the lower sphere of existence, a degradation of their nature, analogous to the elevation in the other case, may take place, and that thus might be developed that power which belonged to the lower grade, but of which the principle always existed in the upper?

Christianity Without the Resurrection

By Canon H. P. Liddon, D. D.

A Vermont reader asked us for an article on the value, importance and necessity of the resurrection of our Lord. We did not wish to re-publish one that appeared in our pages sometime since, neither did we have time to prepare one. But we are thankful to be able to print this sermon of the one-time eloquent Canon of St. Paul's, London, which will be blessed to all who read it.—[Editors.

"IF CHRIST be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." 1 Cor. 15:14.

The text carries us at a bound over a quarter of a century from the resurrection of Christ to listen to discussions about it in one of the active centers of Greek life and thought. It takes us to the Christian schools of Corinth, and Paul is pointing out to some ready, but not very far-sighted disputants the consequences of their denying the Christian doctrine of the resurrection of the dead. "How say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?" To deny this doctrine in the block—so the apostle argues—is to deny that Christ Himself has risen. If He has really risen from His grave, it is impossible to say absolutely that there is no such thing as a resurrection of the dead, since here we have a representative instance of it.

There were, it seems, some at Corinth who did not shrink from encountering this argument by denying that even He, our Lord Jesus Christ, had really risen. To these persons the apostle points out, that, however unconsciously, they are in point of fact giving up Christianity altogether. If Christ was still in His tomb, the errand of the apostles to the world, and the obedience of the faithful to the doctrine which they preached, were equally based upon a vast illusion. "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain."

I

It is pretty certain that the persons with whom Paul is arguing this matter were not converts from Judaism to the faith of Jesus Christ. Whatever may be said of those Jewish freethinkers, the Sadducees, a religious Jew or a Pharisee had no difficulty whatever in professing his belief that the dead would rise. He had always believed it. How strong and clear this Jewish faith was, in an age before the coming of our divine Lord, we see from the account of the martyrdoms in the Book of Maccabees. Those pious Jews died under the hand of the persecutor, firmly believing that they would rise again, And when Paul was arrested in Jerusalem and placed before the Sanhedrin, he knew how to strike a chord which would at once enlist the sympathies of the majority of his hearers:

"Men and brethren," he cried, "I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee: of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question."

The appeal was successful. "The scribes that were of the Pharisees' part arose, and strove, saying, We find no evil in this man: but if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God."

Unwelcome to the Greeks

On the other hand, to the pagan Greek the idea of a coming resurrection of the dead was not merely novel; it was unwelcome. It was opposed to current Greek conceptions about the condition and destiny of the dead. To an ordinary Greek it would have seemed a materialistic way of stating the very shadowy possibilities of a future existence which alone presented themselves to his mind. So palpable and literal an assertion, that man would live once more an unmutilated life, in his body as well as his spirit, would have repelled the Greek. For the immortality of the soul itself, although an original truth of natural religion, appears in Greek literature only as a fugitive speculation; elegant and pathetic as its rendering at times undoubtedly is.

Indeed, the resurrection of man's body lay altogether beyond the frontier of customary Greek habits of thinking. When Paul began to preach the resurrection at Athens, his hearers missed his true meaning so entirely as to suppose that the word which expressed it was the name of a new deity. "He seemeth to be a setter-forth of strange gods," they said, and this "because he preached unto them Jesus and the resurrection."

And when these deeply rooted prejudices were carried by converts from Greek paganism into the church of Christ, they contributed largely to form the systems of fantastic error which took definite forms in the second century after Christ, and are collectively described as Gnostic. Ten years after writing to the Corinthians Paul mentions to his pupil and legate, Timothy, two Greek teachers at Ephesus, Hymenaeus and Philetus, "who concerning the truth have erred, saying that the resurrection is past already." These persons would seem to have wished on the one hand to keep the language of the apostolic church, but on the other to get rid of its meaning and substance. They accepted a resurrection; but it was a past resurrection, not a resurrection in the future; a moral resurrection of the soul, not a literal resurrection of the body.

Shell, but no Kernel

This, you observe, was the Greek feeling, in secret rebellion against the faith, but not wishing to come to an open rupture, and so attempting an explanation which might hold to the terms of a Christian profession, and at the same time reject the realities which those terms were meant to convey.

At Corinth we see the same feeling at work; but the Corinthians were recent converts, and they did not all of them know what a revelation from God meant and involved. They thought that it was much like one of their own philosophies, something to be reviewed, discussed, partly accepted, partly rejected, at their pleasure. There was much in Christianity that they liked and accepted without difficulty, nay with enthusiasm. But "the resurrection of the dead" some of them at any rate could not tolerate.

They asked, in contemptuous scorn, "How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?"—as if such questions had only to be raised in order to show all sensible people how absurd it was to expect an answer. Their difficulties about it arose out of their physical speculations, their theories about the universe, their ideas of the nature and destiny of beings.

But they did not imagine that in denying the resurrection of the dead they were trifling with essential Christianity, or doing anything more or worse than rejecting a coarse dogma of Jewish origin.

Trifling With Christianity

This was the state of mind with which Paul is dealing in the text: and his first object is to oblige his readers to understand what their words really came to. In all matters to some extent, in religious matters especially, people use language without weighing its meaning; without asking themselves how much it involves and whither it will carry them. The Corinthians who denied "a resurrection of the dead" would liked to have confined themselves to discussing a presumed physical impossibility of anything of the sort. Paul cuts them short by saying, "If you mean what you say, you mean that Christ Himself never really rose."

If any of the Corinthians were prepared to accept this consequence, they probably did not see why they could not deny even the resurrection of Christ, and yet somehow continue to be Christians. They did not wish in terms to give up Christianity. They may have flattered themselves that they still retained a firm hold upon all that was really essential in it; that they had only given up legendary additions to the simple story of the life of Christ; additions which their Greek science had pronounced impossible.

They were willing to believe in a Christ who displayed before the eyes of men a perfect example; who did many works of wonder and of love; who taught a heavenly doctrine; who died a cruel and shameful death. But the assertion that, being dead and buried, "He rose again on the third day, according to the Scriptures," was, they thought, a superstitious, although an apostolical, addition to the simple truth. It was no part of the fragment of Christianity which approved itself to their order of intelligence as being really fundamental; and they dismissed it as unimportant, if not untrue.

No Christianity At All

It is to these persons that Paul says solemnly, "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." Paul will not allow that this faith in a Christ who has not risen from His grave is any Christianity at all. According to him, if it is a religion at all, it is another religion; it has nothing really to do with the faith preached by the apostles.

These Corinthians might still talk about our Lord Jesus Christ. They might still claim the honors and the risks of the Christian name. They might even imagine that they only differed from the apostles in being more clear-sighted and better informed, without being less tender-hearted and devout. But Paul will allow nothing of the kind. Do not let them deceive themselves in a matter of such momentous import. To deny or ignore Christ's resurrection is to abandon Christianity. It is to give the very core and heart of the faith. The beliefs that remain may have an interest of their own; but it is the sort of interest which belongs to a corpse. It may remind us of the past, but it has no longer any place in the land of the living.

II

Why, it may be asked, should this be the case? Why can not a man be a true Christian believer who rejects the resurrection of Christ? How is it that the rejection of this truth can make vain or empty the faith which still clings to much else, but denies this particular doctrine?

1. The answer is, because the resurrection of Christ is the foundation fact on which the Christian creed rests, in a believing soul. If any of the apostles had been asked how it was that they knew that Jesus was the promised Messiah, the eternal Son of God, the Saviour of the world, by whose teaching and example men were to be enlightened, by whose blood men were to be redeemed, to whom all the children of men were bound to pay the homage of their obedience and their love—the answer would have been, because the Lord Jesus rose from the dead.

Read through their sermons as reported at the beginning of the Acts of the Apostles, and observe how they base the claims of Jesus Christ upon the fact of His resurrection, the fact to which they themselves bore a personal witness. In their eyes the resurrection of Jesus was God's visible interference with the order of nature in order to certify the true mission and claims of Jesus. Our Lord Jesus Christ, indeed, had appealed beforehand to this very certificate. The sign which He had given to an unbelieving generation in proof that He came from God, was that he would raise the temple of His body from the dead in three days.

Earnest of the Future

2. But the resurrection does not merely light up the past: it is an earnest of the future. It is the warrant that Christ will come to judge us. When Paul has told the Athenians that God has "appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained," he naturally reflects that a critical and sceptical audience will ask what proof there is to allege in favor of so startling an announcement. Accordingly he adds, "He hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead."

The apostles when preaching the faith, were like those architects who make a stone roof of wide area depend for its support on a central pillar. They know that the pillar is strong enough for its work. They were themselves appointed to be witnesses of the resurrection; and they never met the world without bearing their testimony. They knew that if the resurrection were sincerely believed, all else in the Christian creed would hold good. They knew also that if the resurrection of Christ was rejected, nothing else could be received at all in the long run.

Suppose, for instance, that one of these Corinthian rejectors of the resurrection had said, "I am not a man to believe in Christ's resurrection, but I do not wish to reject the benefits of His death." The apostle would have asked, "What benefits do you mean?"

Otherwise No Value in His Death

What becomes of the death of Christ if it was not followed by His resurrection? It at once descends to the rank of a purely human event. It does not differ in character from the death of any other high-minded and disinterested man for a cause to which he is attached. It may still have—undoubtedly still has—the importance of a great example; of devotion to truth, to charity, to justice. But the language which the apostles use about it, and which Christendom has ever believed, becomes at once unmeaning.

Why should the death of a mere man, whose body has mouldered in his grave, be a power in earth and heaven, mighty to cleanse from guilt, and to win for the sinner pardon from God? Paul's bones rest somewhere in or near the great city where they slew him, some thirty-five years after his Master's death. But who could speak of Paul as dying for his followers, or for "the ungodly," or as "bearing their sins in his own body," or as being set forth as a "propitiation through faith in his blood?" Who would dare to say that Christians are "reconciled to God by the death" of Paul, or that by him they had "received atonement," or that Paul is a "propitiation for their sins, and not for theirs only, but also for the sins of the whole world," or that Paul "gave himself a ransom for all"?

Every believer in Christ feels the shocking profanity of applying this language to any other than the divine Redeemer.

But Why Is It So Profane?

Because it is the divine person of Him who died on Calvary, which gives such meaning to His atoning death. "Ye were not redeemed," exclaims Peter, "with corruptible things, as silver and gold," or, indeed, with the blood of a merely human victim, "but with the precious blood of Christ, as a lamb without blemish, and without spot." "If God," argues Paul, "spared not his own Son, but freely gave him up for us all, how shall he not with him also" —it is the inevitable Christian inference,—"freely give us all things?"

But then how do we know that the sufferer on Calvary was God's own Son? The answer is, by the resurrection. The resurrection, if I may dare so to speak, put the death of Jesus Christ before the world in its true light. It was an immense reversal of prima facie appearances. What had looked like a defeat was seen to be a triumph. What seemed the execution of a condemned criminal was recognized as an awful transaction, having immense results on earth and in heaven, throughout all time. If Christ "was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the power of God."

The Keynote of Apostolic Teaching

The resurrection had lifted His death to a higher or rather altogether different level from that of any human sufferer. But then if the resurrection is denied, all the apostolic language about the atonement becomes a tissue of mystical exaggerations, which, as applied to the death of a mere man, are worse than unintelligible. This consequence the Corinthians might not have seen at once. But at any rate their faith in the atonement was already undermined by their disbelief in the resurrection of the crucified Christ.

But suppose the Corinthians to say, "Very well, we will give up the atonement, but we will continue to believe in the beauty of Christ's language and example. This, after all, is in our opinion the essential thing in Christianity. The rest may go; and we shall not, perhaps, be the worse for losing it."

Here Paul would have explained that in order to recognize the beauty of Christ's language and example, there was no necessity for faith, properly so-called, at all. Faith is the acceptance of the unseen upon sufficient testimony. It is a venture, warranted indeed, but not by experience. Its proper object is something which does not lie within the range of our experience.

No Need of Faith

You and I do not need faith, or anything but ordinary judgment and common moral sense, in order to do justice to the good sayings and good actions of any one of the many excellent people who may be named as having died some twenty or thirty years ago. We know enough about them, on very good evidence, to enable us to give full play to our admiration, and we admire them accordingly. It would be absurd to call them objects of faith.

Certainly Paul would have said that faith, by which the soul takes possession of the invisible, is not wanted for any such purpose as these Corinthians might have pleaded. But might he not would he not, have gone a step further? Must he not have pointed out that to deny the resurrection, and at the same time to profess to admire the words of Christ, or the example of Christ, is really impossible? Did not our Lord more than once, when challenged for a sign or warrant of His claims, say that He would be put to death and rise again the third day? There is a precision in the announcement which forbids figurative interpretation of this language, as if, forsooth, it could be satisfied by the remote triumph of His Name or doctrine, while His body mouldered in the grave. No, it is impossible to admire some of his best-attested words if His resurrection be denied.

No Example to Admire

Let me add, that it is impossible to admire His example. Upon what kind of ground can we explain or justify His inviting the love and trust and homage of all those pious souls who thronged around Him, if in reality He was not more than one of themselves; if He had not in Himself some sources and supplies of strength which were more than human?

"We preach not ourselves," says His apostle; but He, the Master, says, "I am the way, the truth, and the life"; "Come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden"; "I am the light of the world"; "I am the true vine"; "I am the good shepherd; all that ever came before me are thieves and robbers." The constant, reiterated self-assertion of Jesus Christ,—in the face of His own precepts about the beauty of being humble, and self-forgetting and retiring,—is to be explained by the inward necessity laid upon Him by His divine personality of which His resurrection was a visible witness to the world.

To deny His resurrection, and His character, as we have it in the Gospels, requires "reconstruction" if it is not to be met by the moral sense of a man with a judgment very different indeed from that of sympathy and admiration.

III

These are some of the grounds on which Paul would have maintained that if Christ be not risen, the faith of Christians is vain.

But observe the character of his arguments; it is an argument from the consequences of rejecting the resurrection. Elsewhere he proves the resurrection directly. It may be inferred from the words of Jesus, from the language of prophecy, above all, from the actual experiences of actual eye-witnesses to be counted by hundreds, and many whom living when Paul wrote.

A Trenchant Argument

Here Paul says, "See what will happen if you reject Christ's resurrection. You will have to give up your Christianity altogether. If Christ be not risen, our preaching is vain, your faith is also vain. You Corinthians are in a dilemma. You must go forward or you must go back. You must either believe with us apostles in the resurrection of Christ, and in the resurrection of the dead (which is its consequence), or you must fall back into the darkness from which you emerged at your conversion."

This is a kind of argument which—if it were not being handled by an inspired apostle—we should describe as trenchant. Plainly it is meant to cut discussion short, and to bring matters to an issue by a short and easy method.

Paul feels that something must be said which will not be forgotten. He feels as when he told the Galatians—"If ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing," or, "If we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed," or the Corinthians, "If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be anathema marantha." It was in this same state of mind, with this same general intention, (that, namely, of rousing dull minds by some vivid statements to see how matters really stood) that he wrote, "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain."

It may be urged that arguments of this kind are inconsiderate and unsuccessful. Do they not crush out, with their relentless logic, the still surviving faith of weak but inconsequent believers? Do they not forget Him who would not quench the smoking flax, or bruise the broken reed?

And, secondly, do they always succeed? Do they not rouse opposition—almost resentment—among persons of independence of character, who are not therefore hostile to religion? May they not entirely defeat the object with which they are used, when of the alternatives presented the one is taken which was really designed to make the other inevitable? The lever breaks in the workman's hand, just as it is being applied.

The Apostle Justified

This, it must be granted, is true enough of the employment of such arguments in a great many cases among ourselves. No doubt there are writers and talkers who take pleasure in forcing people, as they say, to be consistent; whatever may be the kind of consistency that is enforced. These writers and talkers are like a reckless man who rides at full tilt down a street full of children at play. They are thinking only of their own feat and prowess, nothing of the consequences.

Often, indeed, the employment of such intellectual weapons is very cruel: they leave wounds and doubts in tender minds which are healed only slowly or never at all. They may be very fine feats of reasoning. But like the sports of ancient kings, they are indulged at the cost of the defenceless and the weak. Too seldom indeed do many speakers and writers, in private and in public, track out the effect of their inconsiderateness in the shattered hopes and the distressed consciences and the weakened resolves which are really due to it!

But, granting this, it does not by any means follow that arguments like that of Paul—"You must believe more than you do, or you will cease to be a Christian"—are not sometimes necessary and charitable. They are like critical operations in surgery, which no one would undertake or undergo without adequate necessity, but which are sometimes necessary to saving life.

Everything depends upon the spirit in which, upon the purpose with which, an argument like this is used. It may be used as a vain display of personal power, as a means of achieving intellectual victory. In this case nothing can well be more criminal.

It may be used in a spirit of true charity, in order to save a soul which has wandered into dreamland, and mistakes the pictured forms of its own fancy for the eternal truths. In this case nothing can be more charitable. The knife may be employed by a scientific surgeon to save a patient's life by a timely operation; or by a bungler, who is only thinking of his professional reputation; or by a burglar, to cut a man's throat.

Paul, who watched with such tender solicitude over the brethren in Rome and at Corinth, would never have forced his hearers or readers to choose between the acceptance of one particular doctrine and the rejection of the Christian faith, unless under the pressure of a stern necessity. He had fully reckoned on the risks. He knew what the effect would be on those whom he addressed. He would never have placed them in the dilemma unless he had been satisfied that they loved their faith better than their speculations, and that they would accept the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ when they found that to reject it was to reject Christianity. A serious logical operation was needed, but the apostle knew that the patients could bear it.

IV

There are two practical considerations which present themselves.

1. Reflect how dangerous it is to pick and choose in the things of God. It is not too much to say that some persons who would be distressed at the idea that they were bad Christians have no idea at all of the truth that the Christian revelation, if accepted at all, must be accepted as a whole. They speak and think as if, in approaching the truths which God has set before us through His beloved Son, they were like intending purchasers entering a store, perfectly at liberty to select whatever might strike their taste or fancy, and to reject the rest. The question of believing or rejecting belief appears to them a matter to be decided by personal bias or inclination; although, of course, in reality this is as unreasonable as it is irreverent.

Unreasonable, because all really-revealed truth rests on exactly the same grounds, and recommends itself equally to perfectly-balanced mind; and irreverent, because to reject any part of revelation is virtually to tell the divine Revealer that He has set before the mind of His creature that which is either unnecessary or incredible.

At the same time, it is true that some truths may be rejected with less ruin to the entire fabric of faith than others; just as certain limbs of the human body may be amputated without destroying life, although they impair its perfectness, while others,—the head, for example,—cannot be parted with, without instant death. Thus, too, mistakes may be made about the doctrines of grace, or the meaning of large portions of Scripture, without necessarily leading to fatal consequences.

But to reject the resurrection is to cut at the root of Christian belief; it is to cease, as far as thought and faith go, to be a Christian at all. A Christ who never rose from his grave is not the Christ of the Bible or of Christendom. Such a Christ has nothing in common with our living and adorable Saviour, except the name.

2. Ask yourself, What does the resurrection of Christ mean to me? How much of my life, of my thought, of my resolve, is influenced by it?

Put to yourself the supposition,—for a Christian the impossible supposition,—that it was untrue. What would you have lost? Try to estimate the difference in your thoughts and lives, which the absence of this truth would involve.

We know what the loss of a near relative would mean to us. We can calculate the effect by thinking over our habits throughout the day. We know what the reduction of our income to such or such a sum would involve, in the loss of comforts, or in our means of doing good.

Suppose It Were Untrue?

What then would be the effect upon us of the withdrawal, if we could conceive it possible, of the doctrine of the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the Bible? How would it affect our hold of other Christian truths? How would it change our thoughts about the future, about the world unseen, about death, about all that is to follow after death? How would it touch our thoughts and feelings throughout each day, as they move around the person of an unseen but present Lord and Saviour?

If we get this question honestly answered, we may form a tolerably fair estimate of the value of our faith in Christ's resurrection at this moment. If we do indeed believe that He is risen, that stupendous faith does and must mould thought, feeling, resolve, in very various ways. If we do believe that He is risen and living, then we know that to part with this faith would affect the life of our spirits, just as the extinction of the sun's light and warmth in the heavens would affect all beings that live and grow on this earth.

If Jesus risen is indeed the object of our faith, then our religion is not merely the critical study of an ancient literature, but a vitally distinct thing; it is the communion of our spirits with a living and divine Being.

It is faith in the resurrection which marks our present relations to Jesus Christ as altogether different from those which we have to the famous dead who have in past years filled the thoughts and governed the history of mankind.

At the beginning of this century, Nelson and Wellington were names second to none among the men who claimed the attention of the world. Where are they now? Their ashes moulder beneath our feet. Where are they now?

Their disembodied spirits are awaiting, we know not exactly where, for the hour of the Judgment. But where is Jesus Christ? He, risen from His grave, arrayed in His glorified manhood, is seated on the throne of heaven; He is the meeting-point and center of the vast empire of living souls; He is in communication, constant and intimate, with millions of beings, to whom by His death, and His triumph over death, by His persistent and exhaustless life, He is made wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption.

Yes! to believe in the risen Jesus is to live under a sky which is ever bright. It is to believe that He is "alive for evermore, and has the keys of hell and of death."

The Sanctuary Viewpoint

An Exposition of Psalm 73

By H. W. Waters, Ph. D.

HOW times change! But let us not make the mistake to suppose that human nature changes. There are events peculiar to each passing century, but the characteristics of the human race in all the centuries are the same. The men who lived in these centuries were all men of like passions with ourselves.

Each century has had its good and its bad rulers, its law abiding and lawless people, its rich and poor, its profiteers and its philanthropists, its heroes and cowards, its apostles of peace and its apostles of war, its godly and ungodly men.

We may then conclude that we can with safety and profit draw lessons from the experiences of those who lived in former times, no matter how remote, for having trodden the thorny path of life before us and struggled with the same human passions they are competent to teach us.

"For inquire, I pray thee, of the former age, and prepare thyself to the search of their fathers; (for we are but of yesterday, and know nothing, because our days upon earth are a shadow;) Shall not they teach thee, and tell thee, and utter words out of their heart?" (Job 8:8-10.)

Who Asaph Was

We will now draw attention to the experience of a man who lived approximately thirty centuries ago. What stupendous events have passed into history during that time! Yet we would go back to the experience of Asaph for a much needed lesson.

Asaph was a God-fearing man, one of the religious leaders of his day, but there came a time when he neglected to enter the sanctuary of God. The spiritual fervor of his former days had given place to a routine worship from a sense of duty instead of the spontaneous outflow of a heart welling up and running over with love. His spiritual vision had become dim. He found himself more and more engrossed in the things of time and sense.

There were in his day, as in ours, fools who said in their hearts "there is no God," and others who lived as though there was no God, who had "no fear of God before their eyes." Amongst these were the prototypes of the modern profiteers; those who made the "Ephah small, and the shekel great" (i. e. they made the measure smaller and increased the price). These men prospered, and by reason of their wealth were able to escape many of the troubles that fell to the lot of the poor, therefore they became puffed up with pride and violent toward those beneath them.

"For there are no bands in their death; but their strength is firm. They are not in trouble as other men; neither are they plagued like other men. Therefore pride compasseth them about as a chain; violence covereth them as a garment. Their eyes stand out with fatness: they have more than heart could wish. They are corrupt, and speak wickedly concerning oppression; they speak loftily" (vv. 4-8).

Prototypes of Today

There were in those days also the prototypes of the modern blind leaders of the blind, who "set their mouth against the heavens, and their tongue walketh through the earth;" whose daring utterances in denial of the word of God were published throughout the earth as are the blasphemous utterances of their modern followers of our times.

As a result of the violence, the oppression, the pride, and the blasphemous utterances of these men of the ancient world, the people of God returned to the house of the Lord, not with a cup running over with joy, but with the "waters of a full cup wrung out of them." Viewing their bitter experiences with the ungodly oppressors from the natural standpoint, they were led to doubt the omniscience and even the existence of God. They say, "How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the Most High?" "If God knows that these things are going on in the world, would he not instantly smite those who oppress and rob us, would He not stop the mouths of those who so openly blaspheme His name by swift and terrible destruction?" "But," they continued, "it apparently does not pay to serve God, for we do not prosper as do these ungodly men, they are increased with riches; they have more than heart could wish, whilst we continue to struggle on in poverty."

How Faith Is Shaken

Into this train of reasoning Asaph himself had fallen as we gather from this pitiful lament, "Verily I have cleansed my heart in vain, and washed my hands in innocency. For all day long have I been plagued, and chastened every morning."

But the worst of it was that in this condition of mind he could no longer faithfully testify to the generation of God's people, for his faith in God was shaken.

Let us listen for a moment to his sad confession: "But as for me, my feet were almost gone; my steps had well nigh slipped. For I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked."

He perceived that the ungodly did not suffer as the righteous and that the wicked increased in riches. He had almost accepted the philosophy that greatness is only achieved through wealth, and that as the end justifies the means, wealth should be secured at any cost. He could not now testify for God with a good conscience as he had done formerly, and he was too much of a man to preach in God's house any theory that was not thoroughly supported by God's word. This we learn from his statement, "If I say, I will speak thus; behold, I should offend against the generation of thy children."

Two Ways Open

What a painful position he was in. He could no longer preach the old message with the old time fervor and his conscience pricked him when he thought to preach of his later experiences and reasonings. He was now in a painful position, as he confessed, "When I thought to know this, it was too painful for me."

What a dangerous juncture he had reached! To the human mind there were but two ways open to him. He could follow and teach the reasonings of his own heart, which would appeal to the hearts of many of the people, whose faith, like his own, was wavering. By taking this course he could no doubt have secured for himself a great following and reputation, for, he had but to set his mouth against the heavens and his tongue would walk through the earth.

Or, in order to make it easier for his conscience he could leave God's house and service. By taking this course he would not so badly offend those who had maintained their integrity towards God.

These were the two ways open to his soul. How many in the days of declension in which we live have reached the same juncture and passed along one or other of these ways to their eternal shame and the destruction of many souls!

The Recovery

But which course did Asaph take? Neither, for there was one other way open, God's way; fortunately, that was the way he took. He went into the sanctuary of God and there humbly poured his heart out to God, with the result that his difficulties vanished for he then saw things from God's viewpoint. How wonderful and yet how solemn was the view God gave to him in the sanctuary! "When I thought to know this, it was too painful for me; Until I went into the sanctuary of God; then understood I their end. Surely thou didst set them in slippery places: thou castest them down to destruction. How are they brought into desolation, as in a moment! they are utterly consumed with terrors. As a dream when one awaketh. So, O Lord, when thou awakest, thou shalt despise their image" (vv. 16-20).

No longer was Asaph envious of the wicked, instead, as he looked back upon those wanderings of his heart, he had to confess with humiliation and trembling, "But as for me, my feet were almost gone; my steps had well nigh slipped."

And as the fuller realization of what might have happened had he not turned into the sanctuary of God came upon him he immediately confessed, "Thus my heart was grieved, and I was pricked in my reins. So foolish was I, and ignorant: I was as a beast before thee."

Then came the realization of the loving kindness and care of God. "Nevertheless I am continually with thee: thou hast holden me by my right hand. Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory. Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire besides thee."

This is followed by a thorough appreciation of the unreliability and unworthiness of the human flesh and heart.

"My flesh and my heart faileth: but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion for ever.

"For, lo, they that are far from thee shall perish: thou hast destroyed all them that go a whoring from thee.

"But it is good for me to draw near to God: I have put my trust in the Lord God, that I may declare all thy works" (vv. 26-28).

Our Lesson in the Premises

The fundamental lesson as taught by the experience of Asaph is, that there are two viewpoints from which all things may be viewed, the human and the divine. That, viewing things from the human viewpoint we shall become perplexed and may even be led to renounce our faith in God and Christ. That, if we view things from God's viewpoint we shall see all things as they really are. Further, we shall see ourselves as we really are, and shall be weaned from the things of the world and led to rely not upon our own reason, but upon the word of God.

Finally, that we can only see things from God's viewpoint by continually entering God's sanctuary. We must find time to enter the prayer closet often if we are to be kept from the false reasonings of our own heart and from the bewitching snares of the Devil and his emissaries who go to and fro as wolves in sheep's clothing.

May we as individuals so live that we can with Asaph truly exclaim, "But it is good for me to draw near to God." "Truly God is good to Israel, even to such as are of a clean heart."

Why I Do Not Believe the World Will Be Converted

By Rev. William Jobusch, B. D., Pastor, Presbyterian Church, Eveleth, Minn.

Revelation 1:20: The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches.

THIS subject has been so ably handled from a scriptural standpoint by men like Drs. Gray, Scofield, Gaebelein, and others that I will not touch upon it at all. I will simply show that what these men have advanced in theory, is correct in practice "on the firing line" from the experience of a busy pastor, who has a church in the midst of foreign speaking people where he could rightly be called a foreign missionary; and so close to the lumber camp evangelism that he might rightly be called a home missionary; and also an angel to a self-supporting English congregation.

This subject is especially needful at this time as Americans are living in a fool's paradise of hope, since the liquor traffic has gone and prosperity is found in nearly every home. Some ministers are believing the millennium has come and most church members think it cannot be very far away, since one of man's worst enemies in this country is now under the iron heel of the United States Constitution.

Having been a reporter on a daily paper for three years, a law graduate, reared a Catholic, and for eight years a pastor and a careful reader of denominational magazines, I am in a position to judge far better than a man in the editorial chair, or the class room. Having gone through the seminary as well as spending a little time in a Bible school, I have stood at a distance and taken observations from a neutral rather than a controversial standpoint. Here are my reasons and deductions:

1. The Protestant Church Will Fail Numerically

Children born into Protestant homes scarcely reproduce themselves after being removed one generation from their immigrant ancestry. One of the most prominent pastors in Minnesota with a church of one thousand members has a Sunday-school of four hundred. Being asked the reason, he said, "My people have no children. Over half of the boys and girls in our Sunday-school are gotten from outside families." According to former President Roosevelt, it requires four children for a family to reproduce itself, allowing for those that die in infancy, and those who cannot have children. Those who live in Catholic communities can see where this will lead.

The statistics on church increases in membership at Washington, D. C., cannot be trusted, as a church will take a man from another church and report it as receiving the person "upon confession of faith." This has frequently happened in our community where families of different denominations have been received into a church belonging to a particular denomination.

2. The Five-year Program Now Being Adopted By Leading Denominations Accomplishes Nothing

A tremendous noise is being made in the papers of the country about immense sums of money raised to show "an enlarged program." This is meaningless to those who know. Suppose a church gave one thousand dollars to missions five years ago, and by this special program is giving two thousand dollars to the same cause this year—is that an advancement? The great commercial agencies of Dunn and Bradstreet will show that during this same period the cost of materials and living has advanced over one hundred per cent, and within the next five years, before the program will have been completed, living will have advanced another one hundred per cent. In other words, it costs twice as much to build a mission house or school as it did five years ago. Where is the advantage? Can the church possibly keep up with this advance of prices? In Scotland where there is the most highly educated and orthodox ministry of any Protestant body in the world, you can find ministers back of ribbon counters, supplementing their living. These men are Greek and Hebrew scholars. Every day ministers in this country are entering other lines of work. They love the Lord as much as ever, but their people do not love Christ enough to double their income. A person who five years ago gave twenty-five dollars per year to the work cannot be made to give fifty dollars without the hardest efforts. A pastor, acknowledged as the finest Hebrew scholar in his presbytery, is working for seventy-five dollars per month. Of course, he is advanced in years but has a family.

3. The Interchurch World Movement Is Correcting a Symptom But Leaving the Disease

I have personally been a hearty supporter of this movement, and will continue to be, provided they restrict their membership absolutely to evangelical bodies. That it will remedy present denominational conditions is not to be hoped even in the far future. The Episcopal church, will not give up apostolic succession; the Lutheran will not give up church forms; the Methodist "loves his episcopacy" and Arminianism; the Baptist will insist on immersion baptism; the Presbyterian is wedded to his "precedent and democracy." I am criticising none of the denominations, but the second and third chapters of Revelation are borne out by every day's experience and observation.

4. An Age of Pleasure Is Upon Us

Ministers and editors denounce autos, theaters and the movies, but never so forcibly as in the past year. The most conservative and devout church-going people are quietly but surely weaned away from the Lord's day service by the deceitfulness of pleasure. They finally wind up in open opposition to the church and spend their summers picnicking and fishing on Sunday. One person said, "To have done in the past what I am doing now would have shocked my senses." But it no longer shocks.

The most interesting sermon cannot give the action required by the movie fan. Pastors from all parts of the country say that their young people instead of staying for the evening service on Sunday slip out to the picture shows after their exercises in the young people's society. An organist in a certain church was always exacting to begin the evening services on time. She would even start the prelude before the minister arrived. He learned later that for two years she had been going to the last show in the movie immediately after the evening service.

The dance today cannot any longer be questioned as a source of evil. Even the police say they cannot control it with an officer in each corner of the hall. They are now out-and-out immoral. Our churches are polluted with it and a prominent pastor who drew lines against the modern dance, in a few months saw his young people's society of one hundred and fifty members ruined. Of course, after this, the officers felt they needed a change, not in the young people, but in the pastor.

No automobile factory can supply cars fast enough to satisfy the demands. Millions of dollars for pleasure, but only pennies for missions! The church is still a beggar at the doors of the world, in "No Man's Land."

5. False Doctrines Are Increasing

In Milwaukee, the Christian Science churches cannot contain their crowds, even at the midweek service. In Minneapolis, seven of the most handsome Christian Science structures were built and paid for, before the ground was broken. Evangelical pastors find their churches empty while false cults fill their edifices. Men known as out-and-out atheists unite and accept a cult with more ridiculous doctrines than the wildest fables. In a Serbian community there was no such opposition, as it was flooded with booklets of Haldeman, Dixon and Biederwolf, on the subject.

Dr. Jowett says that the churches in England are empty since the war, and another leader has said that England is "Spiritualism mad." Those who know this country and its delight in fads will soon find the same condition here. Ouija boards are found in many homes, and they are now being used in evangelical Christian homes "for the fun of it." Later what was creed in Ephesus will become practice in Rome. Fun leads to reality.

6. Most Great Institutions and Systems Today Are Anti-christian

The hope that the younger men would be less harsh on the working man than their fathers is an idle dream. They are chips off the old blocks—only a little larger. One son, who has already risen to influence and power, said, as he brought down his fist on the arm of his mahogany rocker, "The working man has us by the throat now; we will get him later and repay him for his tyranny."

Many large colleges and state universities are just as bad. It is reported by one who is a graduate, that in * * * Seminary they teach orthodoxy, while in the college they teach atheism. I recently visited the greatest university in the west. Evolution is taught just as it was twenty-five years ago. Printed signs, all over the bulletin boards, read like this: Stag Smoker; "Freshman Dance Tonight; Sorority Smoker Tonight." Men can drink, go to houses of prostitution, girls can be out all night with questionable company—nothing is said. In one rooming house the matron said that the freshmen and their girls carried on in a way not fit to print.

In one of our big and leading denominational colleges the registrar said that half of the students signed up as being in faith Christian Scientists. This college is strict, does not permit dancing, and has a chair with an orthodox professor in the Bible department.

7. The Human Race Has Degenerated Morally and Spiritually During the War

A young man, who went out from one of the finest homes where bad habits were unknown, made a friendly call on his pastor while on furlough, and sat in his study with a big package of cigarettes in his pocket and one in his hand ready to light. Why not? Did not the Y. M. C. A. supply them with the materials to cultivate this habit? Who dared say a word against the Y. M. C. A. at that time? Since then who dares say a kind word about the organization when a sailor or soldier is present? A Christian soldier told me that eighteen women approached him for immoral purposes in the streets of Paris in one day just before returning. Men in groups gambled before their officers and chaplain, violating both civil and army laws. A Christian doctor said that in his camp fifty thousand syphilitic men were treated.

8. The Present Alarming Situation

Labor is wild everywhere against capital. Men in the American Legion believe that the corporations had much to do with forcing President Wilson into war, while the Republicans were trying to hold him back. Such a reaction has taken place among American Legion men that one captain said in a commercial club meeting that out of the twelve hundred men in his post he could not get one man to be seen in a parade or on the street in uniform. They marched as they promised, but all wore civilian clothing. After all the churches have done for these men, few have darkened its doors. These things show the state of mind in which the public is at present. We are sitting on a volcano and all that is now needed is a leader,—"the man of sin," to unite all these forces.

Our country which once boasted itself of liberty and freedom of speech and press has gotten now to where a man dare not open his mouth even in the pulpit against existing evils. They even sent a committee to investigate the Interchurch Conference at Atlanta because they criticised the mine operators and asked for an investigation into living conditions in the mines.

Until five years ago the writer believed that the church would triumph in the world. He did not preach or teach this truth but felt possibly that the premillennial thinkers might have placed too much emphasis on this point and so be mistaken. With the present world conditions and the Jews returning to rebuild Zion, there is no excuse for any minister or Christian to make a mistake on this point. The "reckless optimism," as Dr. C. I. Scofield calls it, has no longer an excuse. The entire world systems, ecclesiastical and commercial, are doomed. Iniquity is multiplied; the love of the many waxes cold. 2 Timothy 3:1-7 gives a true picture of the life of today. Pray for the "angels of the churches" who are holding out the lamp of life, so that the "called out," the only mission in God's plan for this age, may soon be complete.

"SOUP, SOAP AND SALVATION"

The man who made the words of the above title famous was Rev. Daniel C. Batey, who suddenly died in the LaSalle Street Station in Chicago, as he was returning from the Methodist Episcopal Conference at Des Moines, Ia., May 24, 1920.

"Dan" Batey was converted under the preaching of Rev. C. P. Meeker, now Director of the Practical Christian Work Course of The Moody Bible Institute, at the Bible Rescue Mission, 626 W. Madison St., about twelve years ago.

In his earlier life "Dan" had been a distinguished civil engineer. Falling under the power of sin, he spent eleven years as a common "bum," but his conversion was genuine.

He established a mission at 710 N. Wells St., and later went further south on the same street, afterwards on S. Wabash Ave. He was an ordained minister in the Methodist Episcopal church, and was about to open a home for men when he was suddenly called to his reward. Some weeks before his death he had spoken of the intimation that his physician had given him that he might suddenly die.

With Jerry McAuley and Harry Monroe, "Dan" Batey was a witness of the saving and keeping power of Jesus Christ, because he was saved from the guilt and power of sin, and was faithful to the end.

"Fishing for Boys!"

By Fred A. Spiller, Director of Boys' Work, Calvary Baptist Church, New York City

A SHOUT! A scuffle! and round the corner tears a group of dirty, ragged boys, with a policeman in full chase.

As you step aside from these "rowdies" and "toughs" you are glad that your boy is not as these.

Farther uptown on a desirable corner lot stands the big church where you and your boy attend. And on this particular evening when you are downtown and see these boys your church stands dark and idle.

When your boy is restless during the service, or when he manages to slip away from your side to the basement, or outside, you do not worry.

Did you ever smell the odor of musty cigarette smoke in a church basement? Did you ever notice a group of boys coming furtively from the vacant lot in the rear of the church or up from the basement?

What Is Your Church Doing for Boys?

Why call attention to these things? Because I wish to raise the question as to what your church is doing for the boys. Not only your boy but "the boys," all of them, collectively and individually. For there is a connecting link between your church, your boy, and the boys in the downtown section. The boys smoking cigarettes in the basement of your church and the lads making the policeman swear are brothers, and unless your church is planning for both boys with a full understanding of both their needs and a sincere desire to help them both, then you are not facing the boy problem. So I am asking what your church is doing for them.

I am asking this because I love your boy. I like his clean, manly face. I admire his noble, courteous bearing, and I am troubled at his waning interest in church and Sunday-school.

Also, I love those boys of the street. I like their daring and their courage. I admire their loyalty to one another, and I enjoy and sympathize with that spirit of fun and joy that gleans in their laughing eyes, and that all the weight of environment cannot crush.

You may perhaps ask if it is necessary to do anything at all. You may think, if not say, that the boys of the street are beyond reaching, and that your boy will pass through a period of restlessness and settle down later. This is not so. The boys of the street can be won, are being won, must be won. Your boy may come back but the chances are against it. It has been said that eighty per cent of boys leave the Sunday-school before they are through their high school course and the majority never return.

A Boys' Work Director

In order to reach the boys there should be in each church at least one man devoting his entire time to their interests. A boys' work director will soon be recognized as necessary to a city church as a pastor, an organist or a choir.

He should be a man, who, above all else, loves boys. Every boy should be to him as his own brother. He must see and love the boy that lies beneath the exterior of clothing, condition and habits that have been placed upon him by environment. He must be willing to spend and be spent for just one boy. Is it worth it?

Well, what is a boy worth anyway? It may be that he will spend many an afternoon with only one boy. Talking with him, playing games with him, going out together or doing anything that will create and strengthen a bond of mutual interest between them.

Suppose that one boy were your boy and that he spent an afternoon or two a week with him; then, when your boy comes upon one of the stormy places of life he will find that somehow in these hours together he has come to regard this man as his friend and he will be telling him in confidence of his difficulties. You may never know just what passes between them, but if you are wise you will rejoice in the squared shoulders and glistening eye of your boy, proving that he has not sought a friend in vain. Was it worth it? Yes, indeed, even for just one boy.

Attractive Bait

But this is not all there is to reaching the boy. The fisherman needs bait, and it is the duty of the church to provide that also.

There should be a room set aside for the boy's exclusive use in his work. Not that stuffy old basement room that nobody else wants. Give him the best room in the church that is at all available.

No! I did not say give him the best room for the boys to tear to pieces. It is a wrong supposition that anything given over to boys is inevitably destroyed. Give the director the best room you have that he may instill unto the boys, along with other things, a love of the beautiful, and that he may the better and the more easily win the boys. They, as much as anyone else respond to atmosphere, and it is vitally important if you would make a boy respect property that you accustom him to the use of property worth respecting.

The room should also be tastefully, neatly, and practically furnished and decorated. Try the effect of one or two of Hoffman's works of art upon the mind and soul of the boys. Equip the room with a few quiet games, books, and a table or two, and perhaps the start of a museum. Then place the boys' worker's desk there and let him keep open house and encourage the boys to drop in on him for a chat, game, read, etc. He and the boys will do the rest.

But friendship, after all, is a slow growth. It must come from little seeds carefully sown and wisely fostered. So, while the room and its equipment are necessary, there must also be the larger group and the wider influence where the seeds of this friendship will be sown and from which the boys will drift into the closer relationship.

Organized clubs and classes will meet this need. The meeting of the social, educational or industrial club will give the boys the first touch with the leader and bring him into their confidence. This, also, should be thoroughly and properly equipped. We should remember that here we are bidding for the attention of the uninterested boy. In the public schools and elsewhere he is accustomed to adequate equipment.

Developing the Boy's Nature

The nature of the work done and the organization should be elastic. It should differ with every club in almost every place. Great as they are, neither the Boy Scouts, the Woodcraft League, the Boys' Brigade, the Knights of King Arthur etc., are universal in their appeal to boys. The leader should study his boys and use that which is best fitted to their individual natures and needs. In some big city churches it will be possible and wise to have more than one kind in order to appeal to and reach more than one kind of boy.

Whatever the club, it should leave room for the proper development of the boy's nature. His desire for self-expression should be provided for in the club organization. The election of boy-officers and the giving to them of as much of the responsibility as they can care for will give the boys training in leadership and self-control.

Then there is the instructive side. The boy is really and truly athirst for knowledge of the right sort and in the right form. With a large assortment of crafts to choose from, such as manual training, brasscraft, basketry, printing, poster designing, wireless, etc., it is not hard to find something to appeal to every boy's desire to learn and do.

Then there is the play spirit. If you want order in your club and respect for your club property and room, allow a place for the play spirit. A rough-and-tumble room will solve problems of fidgets quicker than a set of by-laws. If the play spirit can come out naturally and unrestrained in its proper place, it will not be always cropping out at the wrong time and place. Athletics and games should have as large a place in the club program as the equipment will permit.

The Spiritual Side

Then the spiritual side. The club should not merely amuse and attract. While, of course, the most of the character building can be done most effectively by the "zone" method, yet every club meeting should contain something to help the lads in the great battle with life. Some talk, some verse, some story that will make him valiant and strong to fight his many foes. Gradually and best of all lead up to Him who saves and is best able to help the boy, and in whose name he can conquer.

With the leader and the equipment there is still one thing more for the church. And that is co-operation. He will need volunteer helpers for the club meetings and he should have plenty. He should also have the support of the home and the church in prayer. Founded on prayer the work is sure of success.

If the church will pray as it should, provide the worker, and give him the right and necessary equipment unstintingly, the boys will begin to come in amazing numbers. Boys are always to be found where things are moving, and true to their natural instincts they will not be content to remain at the outside of the crowd, but will worm their way to the heart of things, to find the cause of the activity; and if the work is properly founded on faith and prayer, they will find there what the boys of Galilee found at the center of many a crowd—that Jesus is the heart of it all.

Then, as they come to see and know Him, they will, one by one, follow the example of the little fisher lad, and give Him their all, and He will, as before, accept and use it for the blessing of many.

THE PESSIMIST

Nothing to do but work,
  Nothing to eat but food;
Nothing to wear but clothes
  To keep one from going nude.

Nothing to breathe but air;
  Quick as a flash 'tis gone;
Nowhere to fall but off,
  Nowhere to stand but on.

Nothing to comb but hair,
  Nowhere to sleep but in bed;
Nothing to weep but tears,
  Nothing to bury but dead.

Nothing to sing but songs;
  Ah, well, alas! alack!
Nowhere to go but out,
  Nowhere to come but back.

Nothing to see but sights;
  Nothing to quench but thirst;
Nothing to have but what we've got,
  Thus through life we're cursed.

Nothing to strike but a gait;
  Everything moves that goes;
Nothing at all but common sense
  Can ever withstand these woes.

Anarchism in America
Or, The "Reds" and Their Relatives

By Rev. Grant Stroh

It is the desire of this Magazine to keep its readers informed as to movements and events of contemporaneous history, and to aid them in taking the Christian view of things. Hence the present article. Many of the facts are taken from articles and editorials in a recent number of The American Review of Reviews, but the material has been recast and new material added.—Editors.

WHEN formerly we read of anarchy it made little impression upon us—it was so far away. What mattered it to us if it was in Russia? Yet even today when the "Reds" have started to invade America, the people of the United States as a whole seem little concerned. Few realize that the free institutions of America are actually threatened and endangered.

We need no longer be in the dark as to the objective of the anarchists. They are against everything that is good and that we hold dear. They would not only confiscate the property of the rich, but also of the moderately thrifty. In a communalist society each individual must be on exactly the same equality as every other individual. Recognition of property rights and the general sense of morality must be broken down.

Lawless and defiant, the radicals have been, and are conducting a propaganda against the church and all religions, and against the institution of the family. Their circulating libraries contain works well-worn, attacking the institution of marriage and the worship of the Christian God in any form. Prostitution is extolled and the virtuous woman laughed to scorn. It is claimed such libraries are to be found in nearly all radical headquarters.

Against the Government

Communists hold that our government, organized for the protection of the people's property and personal rights, and for freedom of religious worship, must be destroyed. The Haymarket riot in Chicago, years ago, was the first outbreak of the criminal anarchists in our midst. Two of our presidents and many public officials have been assassinated by them. Of late the mails have been used with this intent. Ingenious and skilful use of chemicals and mechanical contrivances have become altogether too common, but they have served to temporarily arouse the public to the evil that is in our midst.

However altruistic their claims may be with regard to the well-being of the masses, the end of communism is to overthrow our industrial system, disestablish our government, destroy home and church, and place governmental and industrial power in the hands of men who by nature and training are ill-fit for the use of it.

That we may wisely combat the growing evil of this thing we must know its methods of working. The underlying method is that of sowing the seeds of discontent and violent revolution. To this end much "Red" literature is used, always of an inflammatory nature, appealing to prejudice and passion and the greed for power.

This literature is handled or distributed by the various anarchistic organizations. It is usually prepared in the languages of the foreigners who compose these organizations. Having suffered injustice under European governments, many being anarchistically inclined before immigrating to this country, ill-informed about this government to which they have come, it is easily seen how acceptable much of this propagandist literature would be.

Taught in Day and Sunday-schools

In some centers schoolhouses have been used during evening hours for the dissemination of anarchistic and revolutionary ideas. In the city of Rochester revolution was openly preached in some of these meetings, and plans made for the wholesale distribution of a letter written by Lenine to the workmen of America, urging the violent overthrow of our government.

It also has been discovered that in many of our public schools, even including our universities, many teachers have been teaching extreme socialistic and revolutionary doctrines. In the city of New York, and possibly elsewhere, there are a number of so-called Sunday-schools, in which the Bible and Jesus Christ are openly attacked, and the children are taught the principles and the spirit of anarchy.

A systematic campaign has been conducted among the colored people of this country for the purpose of inciting class hatred and organizing them into revolutionary societies.

In and about Archangel the Communist Party of Russia was actively engaged in circulating propagandist literature among the American soldiers, inciting them to renounce the service of the United States, and upon their return home to join the movement to overthrow the government.

Adoption of New Methods

The most recent information obtainable as to the methods of the Russian Communist Party, which is the Bolshevists' official title, is that they no longer export agitators to other countries to kindle the fires of revolt. Instead, the method now is to import from other countries the native-born, though crude product of Bolshevism, bestow upon him certain finishing touches in Moscow, and ship him back home thoroughly equipped to handle his inflammatory propaganda.

This work of training in Russia is conducted by the Third International, which has no official connection with the Soviet government. The Third International, with headquarters at Moscow, seeks to represent and unite communist groups the world over. It does not seem to be succeeding with the English and French groups, and would not with us, were it not that our communists are so largely composed of foreigners.

Remedial Action

Thus far our government has done little towards ridding the country of anarchists save to "keep tab" on them, and recently to arrest and prosecute those who are known to be dangerous to the well-being and safety of society and openly hostile to the government. Some hundreds have been deported after due legal procedure. This has seemed the wise thing to do, but nobody can regard it as a cure for conditions. At best it is only remedial.

Sending back revolutionary radicals to their own countries does not change the world status. No longer are we isolated from the rest of the world. American prosperity cannot be maintained apart from the well-being of the remainder of the world. Economic, industrial, and trade problems are now international. Unless other countries prosper we shall in due time feel the effects in our own country.

Times have changed. As in the days of Lincoln our nation could not exist half-slave and half-free, so today, "The world cannot exist half Bolshevist and half Republican."

Legislation at Washington is being formulated against the "Reds." Amendments to our lax immigration laws have been made with more specific provisions for excluding or expelling those who practice or teach violence against the government or organized society.

Education and Americanization offer a more practical method of procedure. Indeed, we cannot dispense with these. We must meet ignorance with knowledge. We can dispel darkness only with light. Day-schools and night-schools, with compulsory attendance, will do much towards transforming enemies of our government into friends. We should also conduct a winsome propaganda through the printed page in the native tongues of those who come to us from foreign shores and thus offset the Bolshevist propaganda of hatred and revolution

The Outlook

As we try to peer into the future of the United States, taking into consideration the extreme radicalism in our midst, and especially the propagation of anarchistic teaching, either of two extreme views is possible:

(1) The hopeless view, that the country is speedily going to the "bow wows," and that we can do little to stay its going. Such a view is dispiriting and untrue. The future is hopeful so far as our own government is concerned.

(2) The rosy-tinted view, that nothing is radically wrong. Many are saying, "Just allow matters to take their natural course, and everything will turn out all right in due time." Adopting this second extreme view, we may fail to realize the possibility of danger and be unprepared to meet momentous issues. Denial of obstinate and deplorable facts does not destroy them. Better far to honestly face these facts.

The Only Real Remedy

Gospelization is more needed than even Americanization. No light will dispel moral and spiritual darkness like the light of Jesus Christ. This is essential. All other remedies are only remedial. The thing that is most radically wrong is the hearts of men.

The church has the only remedy, but is she making full use of it? The old gospel has power today to transform men and society, and to eradicate civil and industrial wrongs, as in the days of the cruel abuses of the idolatrous and degenerate Roman Empire in the time of the apostle Paul.

If only the church would arouse herself and equip herself for the work, making use of spiritual weapons instead of carnal, repent of her own sins of indifference and worldliness and lack of faith, then God could use her mightily in this dear old land of ours, so that hate would give place to holiness, and greed would give place to God.

BIBLE TEXT LEADS HIM TO WASH FAMILY DISHES

Clearfield, Pa., May 26. Mrs. Harriet Prentis Scott, a suffragette of this city, finally after two years of effort, has persuaded her husband to wash the dishes. He often quoted scriptural texts to prove that the household duties belong to the wife.

Smilingly engaging her husband in argument, Mrs. Scott declared that good men in the early ages always washed the dishes and she could prove it by the Bible.

"Prove it," said hubby, "and I'll wash our dishes for the next two years."

"I will wipe out Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it and turning it upside down," slowly read the wife from second Kings.

"Humph! let me see that!" snapped out Scott. "Humph!" he said again, after gazing at the words for a few minutes, "I'll do the dishes."—The Jewish Era.

To Berlin and Back in 1919

By Mrs. John Wilberforce Stoughton

BEING a British subject my passport took me via Paris and Cologne to the towns I had to visit in unoccupied Germany. In Cologne I found the British army naturally very much in evidence, but it was interesting to notice the friendly relations between the Britishers and the towns-people. British rule was lauded everywhere. In fact, a number expressed their regret on the Britishers having to leave, as they had grown quite fond of "die gutherzigen Englischen Jungen." Some of these Tommies were taking home German girl brides, in order, no doubt, to give the home folks an object lesson of international goodwill.

Prices in the Shops

As soon as I had obtained my billet from the military authorities I tried to get settled in a second rate hotel, in the last available room in the ancient ecclesiastical city. Then, womanlike, I went into the town to have a look at the "shops." I noticed a good deal of buying and selling. The armies of occupation had brought money to the city and a flourishing trade had developed. But at what prices! Gentlemen's suits, which in pre-war days would not have cost more than 250 marks, were advertised at 1,200 marks; a boy's suit at 500 marks, which formerly could have been bought at 50 marks at the very most. The cheapest coffee cost 18 marks and cocoa was 20 marks a pound. I paid about 75 cents for a pound of small plums which formerly would have cost but 5 cents. Grated cheese advertised as "sahr nahrhaft," was three dollars a pound, and butter, sugar and margarine were conspicuous by their absence.

After a two days' stay in Cologne during which I had the opportunity of speaking to several editors of German newspapers, who called my attention to the terrible food situation in the interior and advised me to take supplies with me, if I intended going to Berlin, I had to hurry on to a small town in the center of Germany.

The ten-hour railway journey in an overcrowded, stuffy, though so-called "first-class" compartment, was anything but pleasant. Reduction of railway service in consequence of the awful coal shortage and lack of rolling stock, caused a congestion of traffic, which was almost unbearable in those hot summer days. The regulations as to overcrowding, once so strictly observed, had been suspended by tacit consent and the only limit to the number of passengers in a railway carriage, or tramcar, for that matter, was that of physical possibility. So also with smoking. Those who had cigars smoked, and what they smoked did not add to the general comfort and to the sweetening of the air!

Knowing German well, and speaking it fluently, made things very much easier for me.

Dividing Her Crackers and Chocolate

When in the early morning my nearest traveling companions saw me begin my "petit déjeuner" on Huntley and Palmer crackers and French chocolate, which my friends in London and Paris had given me, a buxom German "Hausfrau" who sat opposite me looked knowingly at her husband and then ventured to say that I must come from the "Ausland" for they had not seen these luxuries, pointing to the crackers and chocolate, for years. Chocolate was only for the very rich and white bread only for "Magenkranke" (dyspeptics), and had therefore to be specially prescribed by the doctor.

In a moment my box of crackers and the chocolate made the round of the compartment and thus began a most interesting talk as to conditions in the country.

"Yes, things have changed," said the husband, a well-dressed, kindly looking man. "The old order and authority have gone; the present government is not strong enough to face the situation. You see, the winter will soon be here and lack of food, coal and raw materials, as well as the traffic restrictions, owing to lack of coal, are some of the problems they have to face."

He was almost bewildered when I told him that for years Belgium had suffered the very same privations and that I had actually seen a medal struck in commemoration of the sinking of the "Lusitania." To him, as to many of the people I met, the invasion of Belgium and the German occupation there were purely a military necessity in a righteous war of self-defence, and he would not believe that the said medal had ever been struck in Germany, but explained its existence as a "perfidious" bit of British propaganda! And I believe he was sincere in his convictions.

He was most earnest when he insisted that to ward off another industrial upheaval, there must be food and clothing for the people, and coal as well, and raw materials to set the mills aworking and thus keep the population busy.

Then he said after a short pause, "Have you supplied youself with 'Brotmarken?' "

"Not yet," was my reply, "you see, I have only just got into Germany."

"Well, please take these 'Reise-Brotmarken' (Travel bread tickets)—I'll give you ten marks worth so that you will have enough to start with."

I thanked him heartily and, on parting at the next junction, I discovered I had been speaking to one of the chief police officers of Bremen.

I mentioned this conversation on my way into Germany, as these facts were repeated to me in some form or other by every thoughtful man and woman I met.

Germany from Within

It seemed difficult to realize that the world had passed through five years of awful travail as I walked across the picturesque "Schlossgarten," still very neatly kept, of one of Germany's most attractive summer resorts, that sunny August morning. The trees and wooded hills lay in their summer splendor, everything seemed peaceful and lovely. The red-roofed houses of the little town nestling at the foot of the century-old castle fortress had lost nothing of their quaint and homely charm, and yet, not one home had been spared, not a family but had shared in the sorrows and sufferings of the war, just like Belgium, France and England, yet in a strangely different manner.

On the way to the hotel I met familiar faces, but what a worn look they wore! They seemed tired and discouraged. And no wonder after the years they had been through.

A kindly welcome awaited me, much to my surprise, at the familiar old-fashioned inn. On inquiry as to accommodation, my host told me that he could take me in, although, of course, it was difficult to get food. Up to this time he had always somehow managed to satisfy his guests. I had to pay an extraordinary price for my board, but I knew that I would not go hungry while under his roof.

Soon I found that paper table-cloths and napkins had taken the place of the linen napery, formerly the pride of the inn-keeper, the fourth of his race to keep the old inn going. He had lost his only son in the war and the best part of his hotel had been used as a hospital for nearly five years.

No Sign of Hostility

Having come from France and England, where the feeling of hatred of everything German was still generally kept up, I was agreeably surprised to find no sign of hostility on account of my nationality. My host seemed pleased and even touched by the interest I showed in ascertaining the real facts as to food conditions in Germany, since the armistice. He had not a good word to say for the farmers. In his opinion they were a good deal to blame for the tragedy of the food situation, as they were cornering and hoarding, preferring to let people starve rather than to lower prices.

The day after my arrival I visited a friend, the principal of a well-known and long-established girls' school. She belongs to the "upper middle class" and it is this class that has suffered most severely through the food restrictions and consequent malnutrition.

Being of a happy and sunny disposition, she welcomed me in her usual hearty way, but, oh, how thin and wasted she looked! How pale and listless the young girls seemed as they came up to shake hands with me and to make their pretty little "knix" (courtesies). Soon we got to talking.

She told me that the terrible lack of milk had almost made the girls forget how it tasted. It had affected the health of her girls and heart disease was brought on through lack of proper diet. Milk, she told me, was not given to children above three years of age, in their town, except in the rarest cases. The lack of fat stuffs had caused a kind of rickets.

Then she told of the lack of soap and my little cakes of ivory soap were welcomed with great delight, as was also the parcel of food I had bought in Cologne, and some tea and malted milk I could spare from the English parcel.

Dresses, and Shoes, and Stockings

These girls were mostly children of officials in government service, some of university professors, and officers of the army, many of whom had given their lives for their country. Their pay varied from $1,500 to $3,000 a year. Since the Revolution they had for the most part an increase of salary, amounting to 30 or 50 per cent. They prided themselves on their respectability and the comfortable maintenance of their homes.

I found the clothes of the girls were homemade; some of the under garments made of table linen of grandmother's wedding treasure! I also discovered that the German "hausfrau's" inventiveness had found a way of turning old bed covers and curtains into stylish looking, neatly finished-off frocks.

And then as to the question of shoes and stockings, leather was hardly to be had, so wooden sandals had to supply the lack. In summer time stockings can more easily be dispensed with, but what would they do in winter, when one pair of the cheapest children's stockings cost fourteen marks and there were half a dozen children's legs to be thought of?

"Yes," my friend explained, "Wool, as you know, even in England, is very scarce, and linen and cotton goods also." Wool, she explained, had not been imported since the beginning of the war and all the available linen and cotton had to be used for "patriotic purposes," air planes, I suppose, most of all.

She told me that the lack of cotton was perhaps one of the most serious features of the blockade. She continued that since 1917 cotton goods was practically not to be had, except for the rich. Substitutes had to take the place of cotton, and to replace these cotton clothes they had devised substitutes from paper and wood.

The string to keep my food parcel tied was made of twisted paper, as I soon found out, when the parcel burst in the middle of a muddy road!

So there I had the situation—old clothing and precious little of it; no food and no fuel. Babies were not comfortable in this kind of substitute clothes, and this caused much suffering.

My friend insisted that I partake of their afternoon tea and some home-made "cookies," made without butter, without a vestige of any kind of fat, and naturally without sugar! That week they had not been able to get some of the famous "Suss-stoff"—some mysterious sugar substitute. The sandwiches of black war-bread and marmalade, a kind of jam made of carrots, was very palatable with the herb-tea.

Then she pointed out to me the demoralizing factor of this long-continued food scarcity, from a purely psychological point of view—the loss of freedom in choosing and buying food, and with this, the lack of variety in the diet. Instead of tea, coffee or chocolate, they had only malt or acorn coffee and herb tea! How difficult and how complicatedly simple their housekeeping had become!

The Mother and the Baby

When after ten days I had finished my business, I had occasion to visit another provincial town, well-known for its beautiful churches of Romanesque style and its gabled houses. Here I saw a sight which will remain forever imprinted on my mind.

I was standing, gazing into a book shop. From the number and the variety of its books and publications, this store seemed rather to have extended than restricted its business in consequence of the war.

Suddenly, a woman of the working-class type was beside me. As I turned I saw that she was carrying something under her gray shawl, which covered her head and shoulders. I thought at first it was some kind of a parcel. Then I heard a faint cry. I looked again, and again a faint cry. Yes, it was a wee bit of humanity, and it was breathing—no, trying to breathe, for its little chest was so contracted and it seemed altogether too small for a real baby.

Then the mother noticed me, looked at the little one, pulled the shawl over its head and said sadly, "Yes, it was a fortnight old before it could even open its eyes, and now it weighs hardly four pounds."

"How old is it?" I inquired.

"Nearly four months, and just look at its head."

I looked; the little head was not bigger than a fair sized orange.

And then her story, how before baby came she had lived for months on hardly anything but turnips and potatoes, glad of course to get the food from the "Kummunal-küche," but that was only soup, and again soup, with scarcely any change. Her husband had fallen in France and now there was hardly any milk to be got for baby.

I turned away. My heart was sorely touched and I asked myself, if the outside world knew of these suffering women and starving babies. And if not, I would do all I could, in a small way, to tell people of these innocent victims of the war.

Just as I was wondering what was to become of these dwarf-children and their mothers, I noticed three or four other little ones, hobbling over the old cobble stones of the market square.

Going up to a neatly gowned woman, who like myself was watching them, I ventured to ask whatever had caused such awful cases of "Englische Krankheit," as rickets is always called in Germany.

"Der Kohlrüben-winter" (the turnip-winter) was the laconic reply. Then she explained briefly and with a touch of bitterness in her manner that during the four or five months of the year 1916-17, they had lived mostly on turnips and potatoes, "Marmalade" and "schwarzer Eichel Kaffee" (black acorn coffee).

A few minutes later the old chimes from the cathedral spire rang out the noon hour and a bevy of boys came through an old gateway leading from the cathedral close. They looked healthy, their cheeks even rounded and with some color. On closer inspection, however, I soon detected sunken eyes and pale faces.

I was delighted to see them run and play after a while, because some of them seemed to be carrying the weight of the world on their shoulders to judge from their old-fashioned and drawn faces. Their school master told me afterwards that it was difficult to keep them interested after the first hour in the morning, and complained of inattention in class because they frequently arrived at school hungry.

"Well," thought I, "It must call for very special school teachers who manage to keep boys at their lessons with a 'big, aching void within.' "

Berlin

But if food conditions were such in smaller towns of agricultural districts, what would they be like in the capital city?

After a long railway journey, in the usual overcrowded compartment, minus window blinds or the pre-war long leather window straps and brass door handles, as well as badly in need of a fresh coat of paint, I finally arrived at the "Potsdamerbahnhof" in Berlin.

How crowded the platforms were! How strange to see pictorial posters calling for young men to enlist in the new armies! This in Germany, the country, par excellence, of conscription!

How different everything was! No ubiquitous policeman to note down your name because you had stepped on the grass. Further, to my great regret, no policeman to deal out tin tickets that gave you an inalienable right to a taxi! Instead of those past privileges, the two-seated "Droschke" had received a new lease of life from the scarcity of rubber and petrol. There are some that ply as "Taximeters," but the universal rate is that of the former maximum.

After a long wait I finally was fortunate enough to induce a rather old looking young man to drive me to the "Hospiz," my hotel. Both he and his horse looked as if they needed a good feeding up, with plenty of milk and cream, on an Illinois farm.

Another strange sight was the monstrous wooden statue of Hindenburg at the top of the Sieges-Alles, already cracking before the assault of sun, wind and rain, and the sentries in unfamiliar uniforms, flanking a trestle wreathed in barbed wire at the entrance of Bendler Strasse who indicate that the "strong man" of the situation, Herr Reichswehrminister Noske, is in residence there.

On arriving at the "Hospiz" I found very little outward change from pre-war days, except, of course, the change in the menu. The same neatness and care were evident everywhere, only that the stair carpets had seen a good deal of repair and the bed linen bore marks of artistic mending.

My supper that night consisted of a kind of meat stew followed by a mixture of noodles and apples, a special delicacy I was assured. I had the choice of the latter and a slimy cereal pudding, covered with a substitute raspberry sauce, colored with red aniline dye.

Hideous Posters Everywhere

The next day was a brilliant September day. Berlin seemed to be astir early, but not as early as in pre-revolution days, I was told. The eight-hour day now holds sway. Outwardly, at least, it was very much the picture one knew so well.

The white marble fountains outside the Brandenburg gate were still gay with geraniums and begonias. A squad of workmen were already busy removing dust and dead leaves from the polished roadway of the fashionable Tiergarten Strasse. The iconoclastic hands which, under the empire, more than once defaced the truculent monuments of the kaiser's ancestors in the famous Sieges-Allee have disdained what is now an easy prey, for even the challenging beaks of the eagles remain intact!

It was with difficulty that I discovered bullet marks on the Reichstag building, but the tattered remains of hideous pictorial posters on the pillars of the Brandenburg gate, undreamed of before the war, testified to the laxness of the new regime in such matters; whilst on the other hand, they preached a kind of Bolshevism from every available space and called upon the unemployed to enroll themselves in one or the other newly formed volunteer corps.

Good Samaritans

There was no doubt that outwardly things were trim and tidy, and perhaps the clear sunshine made small defects less noticeable.

My first quest took me to the Wohlfahrte and Hülfstelle für Auslaender at the Monbijou Platz. I had heard about the beneficial work done so efficiently by this committee for English, French and Russian prisoners of war and their dependents. I also had to thank them for special interest shown to dear personal friends. How many thousands of English and French men and women owe their very existence today to the activities of this organization, God only knows. How would they have lived through those four awful years without it! Years of anxiety, terrors in a German camp, renowned for its cruel treatment to its inmates.

They and their wonderful leaders, Dr. Sigmund Schultze and Dr. Elizabeth Rotten had, during four years of war, found means of helping their enemies in every conceivable way and thus "fulfilling the law of Christ." They not only administered physical relief in the form of food, but mental and moral help for the thousands of young men in the prison camps. They supplied them with books and every kind of good literature, organized laboratories for research and even helped in fitting up theatrical and movie shows. Finally, it was by this committee that the return of the prisoners of war was provided for and very efficiently they did it too!

But what were they doing now that all the prisoners had returned and their work seemed finished? "We have the starving children in Germany to think of," was the prompt reply. And then the business-like directress took me into a room, first to show me the department devoted to baby welfare, and from there we passed into another room darkened by cases upon cases of dried milk, flour and dried vegetables which had just arrived as first consignment from England and even from far away Chicago!

She was most enthusiastic in her praise of the kind friends who had found ways and means of getting this food to them to be forwarded to the starving children in the Erzgebirge (a mountain district in upper Silesia), where she said the children had been living mostly on dry roots and even grass, for the greater part of the last two years.

"Yes, they are responding to our need now. You know how we worked for the British and French prisoners when they were at Ruhleben and other camps, and now British friends are helping us with the German babies and children. But it is only a drop in the bucket in comparison to the great need of food and clothing in Central Europe, I assure you."

She then directed me to the "Deutsche Wohfahrtstelle" and arranged for an interview with the women in charge that very morning. This office was in one of the tall buildings opposite the castle in Berlin. From its wide windows I got a splendid view of the Schloss around which some of the most heated street fighting had taken place last November. Workmen were busy repairing the gates and it was difficult to detect the marks of bullet shot, every broken window pane having already been replaced.

On the way my cab driver told me that he had witnessed the looting of the emperor's picture gallery and that quite a number of the empress' gowns had been stolen; but he chuckled when he described the putting up to auction of the horses in the royal stables. These seemed to have suffered most in the street fighting.

Fraulein F. was expecting me and was ready with all kinds of information and suggestions. She told me of the work of her committee on behalf of the feeding of the children in various parts of Berlin, of the careful distribution of food and clothing to the most needy, of sending relief to many other parts of Germany and the co-operation of their committee with the various other relief committees in Holland, Denmark and Sweden.

Need of the Children

Then came the same sad, sad story. She drew my attention to the great need of the children, of the professional and so-called upper classes. It was these children who could not earn a living because they were destined for study in preparation for the professions who needed special care.

She mentioned cases of boys and girls of highly respectable families, stealing money from their parents, falsifying their foodcards, in order to obtain more food. She begged me to interest friends in America in these growing girls and boys who are the future of Germany. Again she told me that tuberculosis was working awful havoc among these children who had been deprived of so much during the last three years, and therefore needed more food and more public care. The condition of the rising generation only predicted a crippling of the nation as a whole, and a set-back of all the institutions of learning. Just the same story as I had already heard in the first town I visited.

That afternoon was spent with old friends in the neighboring town of Charlottenburg. The subway took me there in a few minutes.

On the way my attention was again drawn to the many hideous posters everywhere. Moral questions were asked publicly on these posters. Socialistic announcements were made public, and demonstrations of the latest "Ersatz" substitute were recommended. The beer gardens, furnished with a kind of substitute beer, were as gay as ever and I even saw a few autos spinning down the wide Berliner Strasse. The flowers of the century old lime trees furnished a good deal of the tea that was so popular, and the acorns in the Tiergarten were responsible for the bitter substitute coffee.

The Typical German Home

I found the typical German home of the official class. The coffee was ready, awaiting me on the pretty ivy-clad balcony. The whipped cream which was the usual addition to the coffee in pre-war days was even "Ersatz," for the clever housewife had somehow managed to make some sweet white preparation from starch which she had been able to get for quite a respectable sum. Again the absence of white flour and fat was evident, but everybody seemed to be used to cake made without white flour, without eggs and without fat.

Of course food, and food again, was the subject of conversation. Both my host and hostess belonged to a Christian church. They therefore had kept conscientiously within the rationed food limits, though sadly at the risk of their health. My friend belonged to a well-known young women's organization, and as many of the other members were unable to buy extra food, both she and her husband refused from religious scruples to eat anything but the prescribed ration.

We sat quite a little time in the dusk waiting for the gas to be turned on as the lack of coal had forced the rationing of gas, and nothing could be cooked from 2 P. M. till 7 P. M. and then it was the poorest kind of gas.

One evening we had asked some friends to dine with us at the hotel—representatives of the Volksliga, the German association for the promotion of the League of Nations, and my friends from the various relief committees. When thinking over the table talk of that occation, there are three great facts that stand out in my memory. First, one of the ladies said she had gone to bed hungry many times craving for food, and that she knew of many little children whose whimpering for something to eat almost broke their mothers' hearts; secondly, that Germany felt the spiritual and moral blockade even more keenly than the food blockade; and, thirdly, that if something were not done in a great way to rush food and clothing to central and eastern Europe before the winter, they hardly dared to think of the consequences. They all dreaded another industrial revolution and food and clothing were the only solution to the situation.

Increase of Disease

Early one morning, a young doctor from one of the best known institutions for research called on me on behalf of his work and his friends. He had been obliged to stop, as privation and hunger had kept him like so many others from going on with his research work in eugenics. He needed books. The censor had prohibited the importation of scientific literature. The ways and means for work had been cut short by the existing lack of raw material, and finally the professors could not expect good work from half-starved co-workers.

I think that he was the first to tell me of the serious increase of body parasites in Berlin. Later, when visiting one of the downtown districts, I found that many houses were literally infested with lice brought back by the soldiers from the trenches, and that some fear the spreading of typhus. Lack of soap and cleansal, and of sufficient boiling water have produced these conditions. Later, a sad tale of conditions in Chemitz was brought to me.

Again the "turnip winter in 1916" had greatly increased the number of deaths among young and old. The European representative of one of Chicago's largest department stores told me that he himself had suffered so cruelly from under-feeding that he had been subject to frequent fainting fits. He realized that it was America's money that could do great things for suffering Europe, and he expressed the fervent hope that she would do it "right now."

An Interesting Hospital Visit

At twelve o'clock that day Geheimrat Professor Putter, the director of the "Berliner Charite" had promised to receive me and personally to take me through his famous hospital.

On arriving, I found a tall, fine looking man about fifty-five years of age, who by the lines of his face, bore evident signs of under-feeding. He told me that very often he and his wife had had the greatest difficulty in getting food for their own family, to say nothing of the anxiety he was daily experiencing in feeding his large family of 3,250 at the hospital. His two little girls were scrofulous, and for months he had not been able to obtain a drop of milk for them.

His great plea that morning was for the alteration of the peace conditions, especially with reference to the surrender of such a large number of cows.

"Every litter taken means a baby killed," he said, "and then think of our coal situation." He described the difficulty they have in preparing and cooking food for the sick women and babies on account of the coal and gas shortage, and pleaded unceasingly that these facts should be made known in America.

"If the Americans only knew, they would surely help and help quickly. I know their generosity."

It was not the time and place to remind him of the stern justice in the Entente's demand for the 140,000 milch cows, to replace those which four years before had been taken from France and Belgium.

On the way across the shady court to the children's wards the professor told me that there were about 2,250 people to be cared for daily at the "Charite," including the doctors and the nurses. Since the Revolution everybody had the same kind of food, the "Einheitsessen" as it was called. He, the director, was sharing the same food in kind and quantity as the humblest servant of his institution.

In the children's ward I found a number of kind nurses attending to children from one to four. It is impossible to record these little sufferers, two, three, even seven years old, who could not walk, hardly stand.

All these tiny mites were suffering from underfeeding in its crassest form. The little bodies were sore from want of soft material, as well as suffering from the use of the war soap, that chalky kind of stuff, "Kriegsseife," which could not be coaxed into a lather. Their inflamed wounds and eyes had to be washed with tissue paper as there was no absorbent cotton.

Lack of disinfectants was sadly in evidence. Rubber also was not to be had. Indispensable in hospital use, they had sought to invent all kinds of expensive substitutes. A smile flitted over the director's face when he told me of the rubber nipples for the bottles which had been promised by English mothers to their German sisters. Then he drew my attention to the widely spread skin diseases, forms of diseases which up till now had only been observed in the famine stricken districts of India. I saw one little child literally covered with scabs on head, back, and lower part of the body. Then the professor pointed to the paper bandages made of wood pulp, and to the poor conditions of the bed and the body linen.

Quite Exciting

The visit to the kitchen was quite exciting. That day they had had a special consignment of cauliflower sent from the country, so every man, woman and child was to have a taste of this fresh vegetable. As I followed my kind leader into the exquisitely equipped kitchen with its huge boilers and every facility of pre-war days and German foresight, I sympathized with him when he said that he was at his wits end as to where and how to obtain food. My mind went out to the thousands of men, heads of similar institutions in the central empires and eastern Europe, and their mental anguish, in having to supply food without knowing where to find it.

Then I tested the soup and the stew which was excellent. Meat was not on the menu that day. The weekly allowance is only eight ounces, half a pound. The war bread was impossible for many of the patients, as the meal is very coarse and often dried vegetables are mixed with it, so that it easily gets sour and mouldy. There is only one loaf of white bread for ten patients each week! Owing to the failure of the potato crop last year, beans and peas have risen enormously in price, so with the lack of milk and cereals and cocoa, the diet is often monotonous. They had tried to vary the food by giving the patients different kinds of "marmalade" boiled carrots and other vegetable matters, colored with red aniline and sweetened with "Susstoff" (saccharine), I suppose. How hard it was to recover from serious illness under such conditions!

Then we paid a short visit to the orthopedic department and were delighted to see a number of little cripples taking their sun bath. The professor demonstrated to me the effect of the prolonged malnutrition on rickets and tuberculosis.

In parting the professor gave me his card and said again, "America is our great hope. She can do wonders for us and we are confident she will."

On my way back to the hotel I realized that to the German mind the continuation of the blockade for many months after the signing of the armistice was the greatest cruelty imaginable. They could not understand such policy. They could not understand England keeping their prisoners of war, and leaving one million Russian prisoners on their hands to feed and keep, when three-quarters of their population was starving.

It was difficult to argue with them, for as many told me, they had left "politics" to the professional politician and had been too busy making money. Now things would change, every man and woman would have to have their say in public matters. I never heard public affairs so generally discussed, and more especially by the working women! Judging from the socialist press, the female members of the new German assembly are well instructed and politically alert women of the lower classes.

Among the Leading Men

But it is among the leading men that the mental and moral prostration is the most striking. They seem hopeless and despairing of any future for themselves or their country. This hopelessness is more apparent than any resentment. The contrast of the mentality of these men with their over-bearing self-confidence before the war, is as impressive as the sight of the obliterated villages in the north of France and the ruined heaps of Lens. These men seemed to have lost their nationality.

I found a nation bowed and broken. Three years of insufficient diet both as to quality and quantity indigestible, tasteless and monotonous, has had a marked influence on the mentality of the nation. I noticed general apathy, listlessness and hopelessness, a condition of dull depression and lassitude. The feeling of national pride, so carefully fostered among old and young alike during the past forty years, seemed to have vanished, for there was not much feeling of shame at defeat or the loss of national honor.

Among the religiously inclined I found a spirit of humiliation, but no resentment. These people had faced thirty-one nations; they were now past any feeling of animosity. They seemed to welcome anyone who came with a message of hope, and who showed the slightest inclination to understand their plight.

My last interview in Berlin was with a tattered and torn young soldier at the Schlesischer Bahnhof, who has just returned from the Russian front. In the total absence of porters, and the consequent disorganization of traffic, he had helped me with my valises. He noticed the label "New York," and asked if there were any possibility of my helping him to emigrate. Knowing the latest immigration restrictions, I tried as tactfully as possible to discourage his plan, and urged his getting into regular work, thus preparing for a trip to America later.

"Oh," he said, "I would gladly work, but it is mighty hard to keep steady and good on an empty stomach."

With that my train steamed out of the dingy station and a journey of more than fourteen hours under the same crowded conditions brought me to Dusseldorf and after a long wait I finally was back again in Cologne.

Full of hope that something might be done to succor my former enemies, I found on arriving in London that Lord Curzon had sent out "an urgent call to the people of the British Empire to play their part in the great task of reconciliation and mercy." I further learned that the British government was already spending twelve and one-half millions of pounds on the starving people in Europe—all to be allowed before the harvest. Lord Robert Cecil said in the House of Commons on September 21, "In large parts of central Europe including some parts of Germany, the children, the babies, are practically dying from want of food and milk."

Still there is much to be done. Medical comforts, supplementary food and clothing are urgently needed at once.

May America live up to her great past and to her noble ideals by following the ancient exhortation: "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head."

"Do not let evil get the better of you; get the better of evil by doing good."

THE LORD GAVE HIM ONE

"He would not take the Lord's cross; and so the Lord gave him one." Such was the somewhat quaint remark of an aged brother, concerning one who had fallen from a position of eminence in the vineyard. If we are truly the Lord's, and yet refuse to take up His cross and follow Him, we may be sure we will not be without crosses.—The Believer's Pathway.

"As the body needs its meal-times, so must you sit down at your heavenly Father's Word, until He has satisfied your mouth with good things, and renewed your strength like the eagle's."

The Jewish Prophetic Conference

THIS conference was held June 7-10, in the Auditorium of The Moody Bible Institute, under the auspices of the Chicago Hebrew Mission, and closed with the conviction that a marked quickening of Jewish evangelization is at hand.

The objects of the conference were the following:

To stimulate prayer for Israel and the peace of Jerusalem; to enlist every Christian in the work of evangelizing the Jews by prayer, personal work, and the preaching of the Word; to call forth many new laborers who will devote their entire time to Jewish work; to promote unity on the part of all lovers of Israel; to make known the program of God for Israel and the nations through Israel.

What was actually accomplished, Mr. Camp, the superintendent, states as follows:

1. Jewish workers were helped by getting together and seeing more clearly God's plan for the work and for themselves.

2. Many Christians who had not understood God's program or their responsibility to Israel were caused to see both.

Mrs. T. C. Rounds

3. Open air meetings were held in the ghetto and the down-town district the evenings of June 8, 9 and 10. Six gospel autos were provided with the co-operation of the Practical Work Department of the Institute, which also assumed the direction of this feature of the conference. The audiences were large, and four Jews lifted their hands for prayer. A number of other Jews who had not yet definitely accepted Christ attended the conference sessions. At one of the noon meetings at Willard Hall, addressed by conference speakers, a Jewish woman accepted Christ.

The Conference was notable in its emphasis upon prayer. Its list of speakers included Rev. S. B. Rohold, of Toronto; Rev. Henry L. Hellyer, of New York; Rev. Joseph S. Flacks, of St. Louis; Rev. Thomas M. Chalmers, of New York; President Charles A. Blanchard, of Wheaton College; Rev. Paul Rader, Rev. J. C. Page, Rev. A. C. Dixon, D. D., Rev. R. A. Belsham, Rev. James M. Gray, D. D., Rev. R. E. Neighbor, and Rev. E. M. McFadden, D. D.

Following the address of welcome on Monday evening by President Blanchard, Rev. Paul Rader delivered a stirring address on "The Jew, a Miracle." "I do not mean," he said, "that the Jews in themselves are miraculous; they are like the manna which was miraculous because God made it; they are God-handled and God-blessed, and in this sense they are the miracle of all time."

Speaking on "The Purpose of Christ's Coming Into the World," Rev. Joseph S. Flacks brought out the unique position given the Jew in the announcement that Christ was coming: first, to save His people from their sins (the Jews, the only people He then had); second, to be a light to the Gentiles; and third, to be the glory of His people Israel. Israel's salvation nationally was accomplished on the cross, and national Israel in the coming day will glory in her King. Today Christ is the shame of the Jew, soon He will be their glory.

Speaking again on "Events Connected with the Lord's Return," he named them as follows:

First, the great separation—the rapture of the Church; second, the great congregation—the dead in Christ, together with the living saints, meeting the Lord in the air; third, the great compensation—when the Lord distributes His rewards; fourth, the great conflagration—when dead works will be burned up; fifth, the great tribulation; sixth, the great revelation—the Lord appearing from heaven; seventh, the great commendation and great condemnation at the judgment of the nations; eighth, the great restoration (of Israel); and ninth, the great coronation, when Christ rules as king.

In his first address, on "The Touches of God," Dr. Dixon emphasized the need of God's touch in work among the Jews; God's touch to get the vision, to open the mouth to speak, to touch the heart and make it tender; of God's touch thus to move the church out after the dry bones of Ezekiel's vision, impossible to be revived by man, yet possible by the touch of God.

Dr. Dixon's most vitalizing and inspiring address on "Antichrist and Armageddon" may be published in full.

Rev. Mr. Neighbor's address on "Bringing Back the King" was enthusiastically received. It enlarged upon seven things that the world has vainly sought, that are to be realized when Christ reigns:

(1) Universal peace, (2) universal righteousness, (3) universal social equity, (4) deliverance for the physical earth, (5) deliverance for humanity from the ills and pains of the flesh, (6) establishment of a perfect government, (7) Israel to come to her own.

Other addresses were: Dr. Gray, on "The Messianic Psalms"; Rev. Mr. Hellyer on "Israel's Place in the Plan of God" and "A Wide Open Door for the American Church"; Mr. Page on "Led by the Holy Spirit"; Rev. Mr. Rohold on "Israel's Present Condition and the Gospel" and "Recent Personal Experiences in Egypt, Palestine and Syria"; Rev. Mr. Belsham on "Zachariah, the Prophet of Restoration" and "The Coming Antichrist"; Dr. McFadden and Miss Ruth Angel of New York on "The Best Methods of Evangelizing the Jew"; and Rev. Mr. Chalmers on "Problems in Jewish Work and How to Meet Them."

Our Soldier Dead in France

From copy furnished by the American Committee for Devastated France, 16 East 39th Street, New York

A MEMORIAL Day celebration was planned by Federal authorization by which every motion picture house in the country, on May 30, threw on the screen pictures of the graves and cemeteries where our soldiers lie in France.

In the country of devastation where the work of the American Committee for Devastated France lies, the graves are cared for by the French as well as the Americans. There are about six hundred military cemeteries, the largest being in Belleau Woods, Bomy, Fismes, Lambezelles, Romagne (where most of the men who gave their lives in the great Argonne drive are buried), Seringes (near Chateau-Thierry), Suresnes (near the beautiful district of St. Cloud), St. Nazaire, Thiaucourt (near Verdun), Toul, and others. These resemble a memorial park, as nearly as possible, as a monument to the heroic dead.

In the little French town of Coulonges, eleven kilometers from the station, is the isolated grave of Quentin Roosevelt, concerning whom Theodore Roosevelt, his father, said, "Let the tree lie where it fell." There, on the edge of a sharp rise in the shell-torn fields to the east of the town, this worthy son of a worthy sire sleeps his last sleep.

Little flags of all the Allies bear testimony of many a soldier's reverence; the wire wreaths so typical of French graves, and flowers, miraculously fresh, constantly remind those who visit the graves of the loving care and attention given our dead by the French people as well as the Red Cross nurses and the various American committees doing refuge work in France.

THE "MATTER WITH AMERICA"

What's the matter with America these days?

Too many diamonds, not enough alarm clocks.

Too many silk shirts, not enough blue flannel ones.

To many pointed-toed shoes and not enough square-toed ones.

Too many serge suits and not enough overalls.

Too many decollete and not enough aprons.

Too many satin upholstered limousines and not enough cows.

Too many consumers and not enough producers.

Too much oil stock and not enough savings accounts.

Too much envy of the results of hard work and too little desire to emulate it.

Too many desiring short cuts to wealth and too few willing to pay the price.

Too much of the spirit of "get while the getting is good" and not enough of the old-fashioned Christianity.

Too much discontent that vents itself in mere complaining and too little real effort to remedy conditions.

Too much class consciousness and too little common democracy and love of humanity.

BRINGING IN THE KINGDOM

The Erie Side Bible Conference this year will be held July 16-25. Among the speakers will be Rev. W. Graham Scroggie, of Edinburgh, Scotland; Rev. Joseph W. Kemp, New York; Rev. R. A. Haddon, D. D., Los Angeles; Rev. W. B. Riley, D. D., Minneapolis; Rev. Lewis S. Chafer, New York.

THE KEEWAHDIN BIBLE CONFERENCE

Among the speakers at this conference which will be held at Port Huron, Mich., July 10-18, will be Rev. Lewis S. Chafer, of New York; Rev. A. B. Winchester, D. D., of Toronto; Rev. W. I. Carroll, D. D., and Rev. Robert Evans, of St. Louis. This conference is to be followed by a week of Bible study.

CHARLES AUGUSTUS STODDARD

This noted clergyman and author died in New York City June 3, at the age of 87. He was editor of the New York Observer for many years, and was in different ways connected with that periodical for forty-three years. His letters over the signature of "Augustus," discussing the religious questions of the day, were looked for by thousands of Christian readers every week.

THE BELFAST SCHOOL OF BIBLE STUDY

The first session of this school closed March 30. One hundred and forty students were enrolled in the Bible School and twenty in the special Bible Training School. Rev. A. R. Wright, formerly of Chicago, but now pastor of the Presbyterian church at Newtonards, Ireland, made the closing address, and gave illustrations of the value of Bible study from his experience in such schools in America.

THE NYASALAND MISSION OF CENTRAL AFRICA

This mission, of which Mr. Gaylord of the Institute is the American chairman, reports conditions in Nyasaland as exceedingly gloomy, and that the number of converts and of missionaries is less than heretofore. There are 26 missionaries on the ground with their wives, 1,428 lay workers and teachers, 733 day schools, with 29,836 baptisms for the last year, the number of baptism classes being 7,337.

POCKET TESTAMENT WORK IN DETROIT

Detroit, Mich., has just had a great Pocket Testament League campaign, conducted by Mr. Charles M. Alexander and his party. Interest in the movement was city wide and in every sense of the word it was a great "Bible Revival," awakening thousands to an interest in God's Word. Twenty-nine thousand Testaments were used and many hundreds signified their acceptance of Christ. The work there closed Easter Sunday.

RELIGION ON RAILS

"Last call for services in the forward car!" The northern Baptists plan to provide a Pullman chapel car for every railroad going out of Chicago as soon as the money is available. Already seven Pullman chapel cars are operating across the continent. The cars are fully equipped as places of worship. Instead of the conductor there is a Baptist minister.

The car is built like a Pullman, with living quarters in one end for the worker and his family, and the rest fitted up as a meeting place with seating accommodations for some ninety people. The last one built cost $22,500 and is equipped with a baptistry.

THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH AND THE INTERCHURCH WORLD MOVEMENT

At the recent meeting of the Presbyterian General Assembly in Philadelphia, the Executive Commission, of which Dr. John Willis Baer was Chairman, recommended an entire withdrawal from the Interchurch World Movement. Discussion developed a reluctance to completely sever relations with the movement, and a plan was adopted which provides that the Presbyterian Church will continue its relations with the movement upon a restricted scale, providing the movement consents to a satisfactory reorganization of its governing board, and a gigantic cut in its expenditures.

WORK AMONG THE SHANTYMEN

Rev. Wm. Henderson in a recent letter says: "It is a curious coincidence that on each of our last visits to The Moody Bible Institute students who were formerly western I. W. W.'s have sought me out to tell what the Lord has done for them. The last one (a logger) said he was so bitter against the Bible that he procured one in Vancouver in order to search out for himself all the lies it contained. The Bible, instead, converted him and he is now preparing for the mission field."

In his pamphlet From Ocean to Ocean Mr. Henderson reports the work of the Shantymen's Christian Association in Canada and the United States for the past year. This report shows 740 camps visited, 43,400 men having heard the gospel, and thirty missionaries sent out.

THE JEWISH CONDITIONS IN EUROPEAN COUNTRIES

The Russian Bible and Evangelization Society in an appeal for funds to carry on its great work says:

"Russia, Slavonic and other Greek Catholic countries, with about two hundred and fifty million people, including nine million Jews and thirty million Mohammedans, have never had the opportunity of hearing the gospel of Jesus Christ, and never have had an open Bible. These millions today are in the shadow of death and darkness physically, morally and spiritually.

"Infidelity has ruled all educational and other institutions. Millions are in despair. Among young and old suicide is a common thing. Christ has had no chance. Russia is crying 'Come over and help us.' "

AN INTERNATIONAL PROTESTANT LEAGUE

This league was recently organized in Pittsburgh, Pa., with W. J. Dempster, president, J. Stanley White, vice-president; and E. M. McFadden, executive secretary and treasurer. The headquarters of the league are in the Penn Building, Pittsburgh, Pa., and the fee for membership is $2.00. The declaration of the principles of this league follows:

1. The establishment of a thoroughly hearty and efficient unity among Protestants.
2. To direct the combined forces of Protestantism in an educational campaign through the several churches by which members thereof may become better informed as to the history and achievements of Protestantism since the Reformation of the sixteenth century.
3. To arrange for the delivery of popular lectures on related Protestant themes in all places where the league is able to function.
4. To prepare, publish, and distribute literature intended to interest and inform the members of the league as to the progress of Protestantism and to expose the machinations of its enemies.
5. To safeguard Protestant interests when menaced or attacked, especially by the enemies of the public school system, the open Bible, and other cherished Protestant institutions.

MRS. SHEPARD AND THE Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. Finley Shepard, of New York, formerly Miss Helen Gould, resigned from the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., on which she had served for thirteen years, at the sixth annual convention held in Cleveland, O., in April. As reported by the Springfield Republican, in severing her connection with the National Board, Mrs. Shepard said:

"As an humble worker for and in behalf of the Young Women's Christian Association for a good many years, I must own to a real grief at the sentiments expressed and the measures adopted by this convention. I have always believed in the depth rather than in the breadth of the tenets of its constitution, and I contend that the association's greatest gifts and accomplishments lie in the intensification of the religious and inner life of the nation's young women.

"As an association we are allowing ourselves to be intervened by a wedge that is separating it from the highest purposes of its constitution, and which reasonably may be expected to bring about its undoing.

"Holding the convictions that I do, I must in loyalty to my Lord and Saviour, and in justice to my friends and to myself, request the immediate acceptance of my resignation which I now tender as a member of the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association."

CALL FOR EVANGELICAL SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON HELPS

"To all Publishers of Sunday-school Lesson Helps:

"The large and steadily increasing number of Christian people in the various evangelical Protestant denominations who hold and teach the doctrines for which the World Conference on Christian Fundamentals stands are giving expression to a widespread demand for a complete equipment of Sunday-school lesson helps, suitable for every age and grade or department in the Sunday-school, from youngest to oldest, as well as for the teachers of the various ages and grades, that shall represent throughout, this doctrinal basis. * * *

"Therefore we, the Executive Committee of the World Conference on Christian Fundamentals, hereby extend to all publishers of Sunday-school lesson helps, whether denominational or independent publishing houses, and irrespective of the particular series or course of Sunday-school lessons that may be treated, a hearty invitation to publish lesson helps that shall meet this need. We gladly express our purpose to recommend officially, and give wide publicity to, all lesson helps, by whomsoever published, that shall furnish this sound scriptural teaching. We shall esteem it a favor if publishers who may now be issuing such helps, or who contemplate doing so, will communicate the fullest possible information to us. * * *

"In the fellowship of 'the faith once for all delivered unto the saints' (Jude 3) we commend this call to the prayerful consideration of the Sunday-school publishing houses of the English-speaking world.

"Yours sincerely,
"J. D. Adams,
"Executive Secretary."

Our Duty to Our Country
Isaiah 1:16-20

The condition, cause, and cure of a nation's unrest and dissatisfaction are recorded in this chapter. The condition is described in verses 2-4. In this description there is an absence of all sense of duty to country and of obligation to God. The heavens and the earth are called to listen while the Lord speaks of the people's condition. They have been "nourished and brought up" by Him, but their attitude is one of rebellion against Him. Iniquity, corruption, and a drifting away from God are pronounced features marking the national life of Israel as here described. These features are also prominent in our national life at this time which is marked and marred by gross selfishness. Profiteering, pleasure-loving, immodest dressing, and a general decay of faith and declension from God are seen all about us. The narrow selfishness of our legislators is evinced in their readiness to nurse a political grudge, rather than to help a weak nation, such as Armenia.

The cause of all such conditions is seen in verses 5 and 6, and the cure is found in the verses of our lesson. The application of this remedy is incumbent upon us in the discharge of our duties towards our country. First, there is the necessity of cleansing. Wrong doing needs to be confessed and put away. God deals with nations, as well as with individuals, and national repentance is as necessary to national blessing as in the case of an individual. God is not dealing with nations today as He is with individuals in the sense of eternal salvation, nevertheless when the people of God are awakened to the seriousness of national conditions and turn to Him on behalf of their country, national blessing is secured. A constant duty resting upon us is that of prayer for our country and for those in authority. (See 1 Tim. 2:1, 2.) Some one has said that the Puritans put religion into this country and gave us noble ideals. Many of these noble ideals have been and are treated with contempt. Regard for the Lord's day and His name and His house has well nigh departed. A restoration of these ideals is a part of the duty that we owe to our country at this time. Fourth of July enthusiasm will not suffice to bring this about. The people must be called to return to God.

Sane and spiritual evangelists, men aflame with the love of God and their fellows, are sadly needed right now. It is the deep conviction of many intelligent Christian people that a revival of the old-time religion is the only thing that can save the present situation, and rescue us from a materialism and a lawlessness that threatens to engulf us. We need heralds today who can take the words of our Scripture lesson and make them a living present-day message.

The climax is reached in verses 19, 20. "If ye be willing and obedient," then blessing and prosperity and all that is good; "but if ye refuse and rebel," then judgment. These things should afford sufficient incentive to the doing of our duty to our country.

Brotherhood Among Races and Nations
Acts 17:24-28

There can be no Christian brotherhood among races and nations as such, because there are no Christian races or Christian nations. There are individual Christians in all races and nations, and among these there is a spiritual brotherhood by virtue of one common life derived through one common faith. Having believed in and received the Lord Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour, they have thereby become the children of God, and as children of God they are related to one another in the bonds of one common life. (John 1:12, 13; Gal. 3:26.) Apart from this there is no such thing as "Christian brotherhood." The much talked of "brotherhood of man" is simply a sentiment, nothing more. This does not exclude mutual respect among men and nations, and other relations, such as a comradeship of interests to further certain causes and attain specified objectives. But the phrase "brotherhood of man" used in such glib fashion on many platforms and in many pulpits is an empty phrase, lifeless, powerless, and positively misleading. To get rid of it is to take a progressive step in evangelical truth. The whole trend of New Testament teaching is arrayed against it. The events of the past few years have undermined it. The only brotherhood that the Bible emphasizes is the brotherhood composed of believers in Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour from sin, and Lord of their individual lives. To such believers there is imparted a new life, by virtue of which they become members of the new creation, the new humanity, the family of faith.

Our Scripture lesson teaches that God made the world and all things therein, also He made of one blood all nations of men. This is a definite assertion that God created the whole human race from one common stock. The apostle uses this as a part of his argument in the effort to eradicate the notion so prevalent among heathen people, that there were many gods. It would also assist in the reception of the truth concerning one true God. Not only was He Creator and Preserver, but He also exercised watchful control over all affairs. A beneficent purpose runs through all His appointments and arrangements. This appears in verse 27. As Creator and Sustainer—the giving One—He could be found and reverently worshiped. Moreover He is around about us, for in Him we live and move and have our being, and there can be no proper adjustment to environment apart from recognition of and relationship to Him.

The words of verse 28, "We are also his offspring," are quoted from Aratus, a poet of Cilicia, of which Tarsus, Paul's native city, was the capital. Cleanthes, in his hymn to Zeus, or Jupiter, uses almost the same words—"For we thine offspring are." Such words afford no basis whatever for the popular fallacy concerning the universal fatherhood of God and the universal brotherhood of man. Such a fallacy is a poor substitute for personal faith in the Saviour, and individual regeneration by the Spirit.

Why People Are Unhappy; the Cure

Psalm 32:10, 11

The most familiar call today is that of world reconstruction. We hear it everywhere. It is presented as a panacea for all human ills. Long before this call was issued and popularized, the word reconstruction had become familiar in the world of thought, especially in the world of religious thought. Theological reconstruction has been demanded by certain religious leaders for a long time and it has been very largely realized.

Conscientious effort to restate truth in terms of our own day is commendable. Such effort ought to be appreciated, but the statements issued must be carefully examined. Truth does not change, and is not subject to revision except in the outward form of statement. In all restatements of revealed or religious truth, these things must be insisted upon, namely: the fact of God; the fact of sin; the fact of atonement and forgiveness of sin; and the necessity of a vital experience of salvation.

All of these things are found in the 32d Psalm, which is the basis of our lesson. In the first two verses the way to blessing or happiness is pointed out. The forgiveness of our transgression, the covering of our sin, the non-imputation of our iniquity, is sufficient when received by faith, to make any heart sing for joy. The first and greatest reason for much of the unhappiness in the world is either the failure to come into the experimental knowledge of these things, or else to have drifted away from them. An experience which makes these things a reality is fundamental to permanent happiness.

The words used here to describe wrong-doing are very suggestive. Transgression means lawlessness or rebellion, breaking away from God and His will and authority, as revealed in His law. Sin means erring from the path, that is, deviation from the path of conduct well pleasing to God. Iniquity means the inward perversion of our nature which manifests itself in wrong thoughts and misdeeds. Until this transgression, sin, and iniquity have been dealt with, and dealt with in a way that satisfies the conscience, there can be no inward peace and consequently, no real happiness. God's method in dealing with sin is seen in the other three words that are used—"forgiveness," which means borne or carried away; "covered," meaning hidden as with a covering; and "non-imputation," which means cancellation, because every obligation involved has been met.

Such a psalm as this calls us back to the old paths, the paths of sound doctrine, growing out of a great experience. Verses 3 and 4 describe the soul exercise through which the writer passed, while verse 5 points the way to the blessing already described. Verses 7, 8 and 9 are in the form of a dialogue, while verse 10 presents the conclusion. The words of verse 11 form a very fitting close to such a psalm as this.

Every Christian a Missionary

Acts 1:1-9

It was evidently our Lord's purpose that every Christian should be a missionary, a witness testifying of the things known in spiritual experience. It is also evident that the Christians of apostolic days became missionaries. From the first four verses of Acts 8 we learn that when a great persecution broke out in Jerusalem, about the time of Stephen's death, the disciples were scattered abroad and went everywhere preaching the word. The result of this is seen in Acts 11:21.

This work required the enduement of power referred to in Acts 1:8. Witnessing for Christ requires power. There is always more or less opposition to it. The wall of indifference, ridicule, prejudice, pride, pretense, and self-sufficiency, is hard to batter down. Men and women of faith and of spiritual power are necessary in this kind of work.

A vigorous propaganda (call it preaching if you will) needs to be launched at this time by Christians. "Every Christian a missionary or a propagandist" is a good slogan for the present hour. All Christians may not be able to preach according to the common understanding of that word, but every Christian should be a propagandist. Distributing tracts and printed matter, pointing out the way of life in plain and simple terms—this is missionary work. "The bolshevist propaganda under Lenine, Trotzky, and others, by their own testimony, has been promoted

Practical and Perplexing Questions

Grant Stroh

The right is reserved to reject questions which may be deemed unprofitable to answer especially those of a controversial nature.

THE NEW JERUSALEM

S. E. L., East Liverpool, O.

Question: Is the New Jerusalem in Revelation 21 figurative or literal?

Answer: Some of the language is figurative. For example the New Jerusalem is called "the bride, the wife of the Lamb" (v. 9), and in verse three the city is said to be made ready as a bride adorned for her husband." Other language is also capable of a figurative interpretation, but in the main we must conclude that the New Jerusalem is literal and not figurative. The materials and measurements and inhabitants are too real to be otherwise. We should bear in mind, however, that the city here described is not to be compared with anything we now know. What will characterize the new earth we cannot conjecture. Here we are completely dependent upon God's revelation.

THE DEATH OF SATAN AND ANTICHRIST

G. R. R., Shamokin Dam, Pa.

Question: Is not Satan's death predicted in Isaiah 14:12-17 and Ezekiel 28:13-19? Will not the wicked one be killed when Christ comes (2 Thess. 2:8)?

Answer: These questions confuse the persons of Satan and Antichrist. The passage in Ezekiel is clearly a description of Satan, but describes not his destruction but his pre-eminence, sin, and fall. The language of Isaiah 14:12-17 applies primarily to the King of Babylon, but also includes him who in the consummation of the age is Satan's representative at the head of the world empire of that time (Rev. 13:4-7). This one is to be brought down and cast into the lake of fire (Rev. 19:20). With reference to the wicked one of 2 Thessalonians 2:8, the better translation is "the lawless one," and the reference is to the Antichrist, whom Christ is to destroy when He comes. Satan's final doom follows the millennium.

THE THREE DAYS AND THREE NIGHTS

N. E. B., Aberdeen, Mo.

Question: How long was Jesus' body in the tomb?

Answer: This is one of the really perplexing questions. When Jesus gave to His enemies the sign of the prophet Jonah, He said He would be in the heart of the earth three days and three nights. Yet the facts appear to be that His body was placed in the tomb upon Friday evening, remained there over the Jewish Sabbath, and was raised upon the first day of the week, our Sunday. The generally accepted explanation is to be found in the Jewish mode of reckoning time. They reckoned day and night as a single period, and any part of the period was counted as the whole. In the book of Esther we have an illustration. Queen Esther said she would neither eat nor drink for "three days, night or day," but the record shows that "on the third day" her fast was broken. A part of the day was put for the whole. The Talmud says: "A day and a night make an Onah, and a part of an Onah is as the whole." With this usage in mind we may harmonize Jesus' statement of the "three days and three nights" (Matt. 12:4) with that other statement, "and the third day he shall be raised up" (Matt. 20:19).

FUTURE CONDITION OF THE EARTH

G. R. R., Shamokin Dam, Pa.

Question: Will this earth, renewed, be the final habitation of the saints?

Answer: The answer must depend upon what is meant by "renewed," and also who are included in the "saints." There will be some sort of renewal as the result of the purifying judgments in connection with the establishing of the millennial kingdom. Descriptions of these devastating judgments may be found in the Psalms, the prophets, and the Revelation. The earth, thus renewed, will be inhabited by God's ancient people, the Jews, and the nations associated with them in the kingdom age. "And the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom," the earthly kingdom (Dan. 7:22; Rev. 20:4). This millennial earth is to be followed by a new heaven and a "new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." Truly the saints will be there also, but whether the earth will be their only and final abode is not clear.

Question: When will the earth be utterly emptied and desolate? Jeremiah 4:24-27; Isaiah 24.

Answer: In these passages we find a double reference to the future. They describe coming judgments which are both near and remote. The Babylonian invasion is referred to in Jeremiah 4:6, 12, 20, 27. Jerusalem was to be destroyed and the land waste, yet the desolation was not to be complete (v. 27). In the midst of this chapter describing approaching judgments upon the chosen land, the prophet glimpses a judgment more terrible and sweeping in its character. The earth itself is to be shaken and made waste and void. The Holy Spirit hastens the prophet on to the final consummation of the present age, and even to the conditions which are to precede the creation of the new heaven and earth (vv. 23-25).

In Isaiah 24 the judgment of Jehovah upon Jerusalem is foretold, but the picture also includes the nations and moves forward to the period when Jehovah of hosts will reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and to the final consummation of all things which are to follow that righteous reign.

Your question as to Azazel and the wilderness we are unable to answer.

BRIEF MENTION

E. L. J., Baltic, Conn.

Your letter fully and clearly states our own position with regard to the salvation of the Jew during the present dispensation. Even as a doer of the law he could be saved only by faith, as David was (Rom. 4:6-8).

E. J. S., Buffalo, N. Y.

The doctrine of election seems to be well covered by your statement. Another statement is: "The sovereign act of God in grace whereby certain are chosen from among mankind unto Himself." But to everybody is the invitation "Whosoever will."

R. G., Decatur, Neb.

Concerning the spirits of departed saints, it is generally believed that they go at once to be with God (2 Cor. 5:1-8; 2 Tim. 4:18; Phil. 1:22, 23; Matt. 22:32).

The spirits of unbelievers depart to the place of punishment. (2 Pet. 2:4; Luke 16:23.)

Questions concerning the Sabbath have been answered in recent issues of this Magazine. We would refer all questioners to Bible Problems Explained, by James M. Gray, or to the more detailed discussion by Elder Canwright, Seventh Day Adventism Renounced.

As to whether Lot's daughters were really married cannot be positively answered. Genesis 19:14 speaks of their marriage, but the verb may mean "were to marry," in which case the betrothed would still be called "sons-in-law" according to the custom of the times. Another explanation is that the daughters within the house were unmarried (cf. vv. 8, 15), but that there were married daughters living elsewhere in the city whom Lot sought out and warned (v. 14).

C. A. F., South Milwaukee, Wis.

We regret that our reply to R. W. R. as to the meaning of the word "baptism" in Matthew 28:19 was not acceptable to you, as we think it was not inconsistent with your idea of that for which baptism stands. In further evidence of this, the writer of this note would like you to know that he has professed faith in his Saviour in the very same manner as yourself.

In answering your question as to how we can reconcile our "seeming favor of women pastors," etc., we wish to say that you have a misunderstanding of our position on that matter, as we do not favor women pastors.

"NARROW SECTARIAN RELIGION!"

(An editorial in Harvard Crimson)

"Nearly every member of the university delegation to Des Moines found in the conferences he attended there quite the opposite of what he expected. Men looked forward to a discussion of broad religious problems with their economic and political bearings. What they got, for the most part, from the speeches in the big Coliseum was narrow sectarian religion. It is all very well to tell your audience to think of the most beautiful thing in the world and then conceive God as something still more beautiful—that was the substance of Dr. Robert E. Speer's address in the opening session of the convention —but this type of oratory does not impress the ordinary college man. Not all the speeches of the convention were of this type, however. Dean Brown of Yale gave an inspiring address on the great international problems facing the world today. But up to Friday night, when the bulk of the Harvard delegation left, his had been the only practical speech of the convention.

"It would be superficial, however, to judge the conference merely from the speeches delivered in the Coliseum. An opportunity was afforded to meet and exchange views with men from other colleges and throughout the world, a chance, as one man expressed it, "to get the dope on yourself" that could not have been offered by a small convention or through ordinary discussion. There was something remarkably imposing in the mere sight of seven thousand delegates representing all races and nationalities gathered under a single roof. That was one of the things which helped make the conference broad.

"Similarly organized conventions, aiming at discussion of religious, industrial, and political problems in a broader way would be of the utmost value to the present generation of college men."

The Erieside Conference this year will be held July 16-25. Among the speakers will be Rev. W. Graham Scroggie, of Edinburgh, Scotland; Rev. Joseph W. Kemp, New York; Rev. R. A. Haddon, Los Angeles; Rev. W. B. Riley, D. D., Minneapolis; Louis S. Chafer, New York.

Jonathan Befriends David
1 Samuel 20

Golden Text:—"A friend loveth at all times; and a brother is born for adversity."—Proverbs 17:17.

The friendship between Jonathan and David is peculiar in that it occurred between two men of rival worldly interests. Jonathan was the crown prince, the heir to the throne. David was the heir according to divine choice and arrangement. Jonathan knew this and magnanimously waived his natural personal rights to the one whom he knew that God had chosen.

Following the interview of Saul and David after the victory over Goliath, Jonathan's soul was knit with that of David. He loved him as his own soul. While there was mutual love, yet this pleasing trait stands out more in Jonathan than in David, because it meant great loss to him—the loss of the throne, but immense gain to David—the acquisition of the throne to which he had no natural right. This genuine friendship was shown:

I. By Giving to David His Court Robe and Equipment (18:4).

These belonged to Jonathan as the crown prince. Following the love-covenant between them (18:3) Jonathan stripped himself of these and gave them to David. This act was virtual abdication in favor of David. "Love seeketh not her own" (1 Cor. 13:5).

II. By Defending David Against the Frenzy of Saul (19:1-6).

According to oriental custom, the women met David and his soldiers as they were returning from their victory over the Philistines, and with singing and dancing they ascribed more praise to David than to Saul. This stirred up the murderous envy of Saul and moved him to thrice attempt to kill David. In his third attempt Jonathan defended David before his father and evoked from him the oath that David should not be slain (19:6). Thus he exposed himself to the anger of his infuriated father, for David's sake. When one is willing to lay down his life for another he proves that his friendship is real. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends" (John 15:13).

III. By Revealing to David Saul's Murderous Intent (20:30-40).

The beginning of a new moon was celebrated by sacrifices and feasting, at which all the members of the family were expected to be present (v. 5). David's excuse for absence was to go home to attend the yearly sacrifice of the entire family. This annual feast was more important than the monthly feast.

Matters were now so serious that they renewed the covenant between themselves. In its renewal the terms were projected beyond the life of Jonathan (vv. 14,15). Saul's anger was now so fierce that for Jonathan to be found in company with David was a dangerous thing, so he cleverly plans to give David a sign by which he could know Saul's purpose. We prove our friendship by warning those who are exposed to danger. David's heart responded to Jonathan's love by pledging himself to deal faithfully with Jonathan and his seed forever. Later history proves that this was faithfully carried out (2 Sam. 9:7, 8).

Some observations on friendship:

1. Friendships should be made while the parties are young—while the hearts are capable of being knit together.
2. Real friends are few; therefore be careful in the formation of the ties of friendship. Friends should be selected. We should love everybody, but we can have but few friends.
3. There should be some variations in the temperaments in those who would be friends. Friendships should be formed for the purpose of mutually helping each other. Both parties, however, must possess real merit.
4. Both parties must be God-fearing. David and Jonathan both recognized their obligation to the Lord and that His help was essential to the welfare of both. Without a deep religious life there can be no friendship. There are times when one party must absolutely renounce his interests in behalf of the other. Genuine love is the basis of all friendship.

David Spares Saul's Life
1 Samuel 26

Golden Text:—"Love your enemies, do good to them that hate you."—Luke 6:27.

I. Saul in Pursuit of David (vv. 1-3).

Ever since David took his departure from Jonathan (chap. 20), when that crowning act of friendship was shown, Saul had been hunting him as a wild animal. He now pursues him with 3,000 chosen men. David flees from place to place and is in hiding as an outlaw. Sometimes he is in the enemies' country doing disreputable things. This is the period of his schooling, which fitted him to be the future eminent king. It was a bitter period in his life, but God sent him to this school and adapted the instruction to his needs. David could never have been the broad man that he was had he not been prepared in this crucible of bitter experience. His wading deeply into trouble adapted him to write psalms suited to all men, in all ages, and under all conditions. His life swung through the arc of human experience touching the highest point of fame and dipping to the depths of sorrow and shame. Further, his being hunted as a partridge upon the mountains and being bitterly persecuted made him the beautiful type of the Lord Jesus. Then, personally, he learned many lessons, among which may be mentioned

1. His Own Weakness. It was necessary that he be humbled under the sense of his infirmities. Before anyone is fit to be raised to a position of prominence he must be made to know his limitations and weaknesses. Unless a man has learned this lesson, sudden elevation to power will utterly ruin him.

2. His Dependence upon God. David's many miraculous escapes caused him to realize that the Lord has redeemed him out of his adversity. His hiding places in the rocks gave him much imagery for the psalms.

3. He Learned the Country and People over Which He Was to Rule. By knowing the grievous afflictions which Saul had heaped upon the people, he could sympathize and remove them.

4. He Learned the Magnanimity of Self-control. This a man must know before he can be a true king. He that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city (Prov. 16:32).

II. Saul in David's Hands (vv. 4-20).

1. David Sends out Spies (v. 4). This he did to find out as to whether Saul was come in very deed.

2. David at Saul's Camp (vv. 5-11). He took with him Abishai and went in the night to where Saul was sleeping. Abishai asked to be allowed to kill Saul, but David forbade him because Saul was the Lord's anointed.

3. David Takes Saul's Spear and Cruse of Water (vv. 12, 13). Once before at Engedi (chap. 24) David spared Saul's life. Now again he was at his mercy. This he did that he might show tangible evidence to the king that he had no evil intent.

4. David Taunts Abner, the King's Bodyguard (vv. 14-16). He calls to Abner and taunts him for his listlessness—his failure to watch over the Lord's anointed, the evidence of which is the cruse and spear in his hands.

5. David Reasons with Saul (vv. 17-20). When Saul recognized David's voice, David began to reason with him, showing that he had nothing but good intentions toward the king. He asked that he would show what wrong he had done, or what evil intent was in his heart. If the Lord was directing Saul he was willing to appease his wrath with an offering. If Saul was only hunting him because wicked men were urging him, a curse should be pronounced upon them. David is very humble and begs Saul to relent, for surely if he had any wicked purpose he would not have saved his life twice when the Lord had placed Saul wholly at his mercy. David would not touch the one upon whom God's holy anointing had come. We should learn to revere the one whom God anoints with His Spirit. David recognized the fact that the Lord had delivered Saul into his hands not to kill, but to save. He did not kill, neither did he allow his servant to kill. He regarded that which he could avert as being done by himself. His conscience told him that vengeance was not his, but the Lord's.

III. Saul's Confession (vv. 21-25.)

1. He Confessed that He Had Sinned. The sad feature about his confession is that it lacked conviction, for he went right on sinning. That is the great trouble with people. They are willing to confess that they are sinners, but still they go on sinning.

2. He confessed that He Had Played the Fool and Erred Exceedingly. We see about us daily many using such expressions, but still they go on repeating their sins. David shows his magnanimity of spirit, however, in delivering the cruse and spear to Saul's servant. He knew that Saul's confession was not genuine, so he was afraid to go near. He knew the cunning of that old fox. He still appeals to Saul's kindness to him, and they part never to meet again.

David Succeeds Saul as King
2 Samuel 2:1-7; 5:1-5

Golden Text:—"Trust in the Lord with all thy heart; and lean not unto thine understanding."—Proverbs 3:5.

The death of Saul laid the path to the throne open to David. This would have rejoiced the heart of many, but David was sad. Instead of reward being given to the slayer of Saul, quick vengeance was executed upon him. David sincerely mourned the death of the king, and his soul finds expression of its deepest feelings in his elegy over Saul and Jonathan.

I. David Made King over Judah (2:1-4).

He knew full well that the Lord, by the hands of Samuel, had anointed him to be the successor of Saul. He had learned the essential lesson which the school of Providence was designed to teach, namely, that the position now open to him was no easy one to fill. His exile and sufferings gave him self-control. He had the good sense to know that promotion to the throne did but bring "harder duties and multiplied perplexities." He did the infinitely wise thing here; he threw himself upon God and asked for guidance. He obtained that guidance just as we all can by asking for it in faith (James 1:5-7). He trusted in the Lord with all his heart and leaned not unto his own understanding. He acknowledged the Lord, and the Lord directed his paths (Prov. 3:5, 6). Just how David ascertained the Lord's guidance we do not know, quite likely by the means of the Urim and Thummim (1 Sam. 30:7, 8). We have a better way of finding out the will of God, namely, by the Holy Spirit who dwells within us. David rendered instant obedience to the Lord's answer. If we are to enjoy God's fellowship and blessing we must render quick obedience. He made a right beginning, therefore God prospered him. When he reached Hebron the men of Judah came and anointed him king over them. Thus a part of the nation recognized him as king, and ratified the work which Samuel did many years before. When David went up he took with him all who had been with him in exile and suffering. They are now sharers with him in the kingdom. When David's greater son, Christ, shall enter upon His glorious reign, those who have been faithful to Him in His rejection shall reign with Him. "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him" (2 Tim. 2:12); "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne" (Rev. 3:21).

II. David's Behavior Toward the Men of Jabesh-gilead (2:4-7).

The men of Jabesh owed much to Saul (1 Sam. 11), and they showed this recognition of debt by making a daring dash to rescue his body from the ignominious exposure at Bethlehem. David's act of sending men to Jabesh with a message of good will for their affectionate remembrance of Saul is an exhibition of his noble generosity. His love for the unfortunate king survived all the injuries which he suffered at his hands. He forgave and forgot them all. This was an act of political shrewdness as well as a generous one. In fact the only policy which proves effective is that which proceeds from a generous heart. He deftly follows this generous commendation with a solicitude for the men of Jabesh to transfer their loyalty to himself since he is now their legal king. Since Saul is now dead he urges them to be valiant for him. In view of the civil war which was to follow he knew it would require valiant men to stand by God's king. This appeal to be valiant is needed now, for we all are called upon to take sides between God's appointed King, Jesus Christ, and Satan, the pretender to the throne.

III. The Dual Kingdom—War Between the House of Saul and the House of David (2:8-4:12).

This period of civil war lasted seven and a half years. Most of the tribes of Israel clung to Ishbosheth, Saul's son, whom Abner had proclaimed king at Mahanaim. Feuds continued between the rival generals. David's power increased while that of Ishbosheth waned.

IV. David Crowned King Over United Israel (5:1-5).

Though the struggle for supremacy was long and bitter, Abner's death and Ishbosheth's assassination put an end to David's opposition. David's behavior during this time gradually won for him the confidence of the tribes so that they all came to him at Hebron and anointed him as their king. They accepted his divine right to rule (v. 3). They assigned as their reasons for anointing him their king:

1. He Is Their Brother (v. 1). This is true of Christ our King. Through the incarnation He has become one with us.
2. He Was Their True Leader in War, Even in Saul's Time (v. 2).
3. He Was the Lord's Choice (v. 2).

David Brings the Ark to Jerusalem

2 Samuel 6:1-19; Psalm 24:7-10

Golden Text:—"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise" —Ps. 100:4.

The ark was a symbol of the presence of God in Israel. It represented God's throne, the place from which He communicated His will to the people through the priest (Ex. 25:22; Ps. 80:1).

I. David's Unsuccessful Attempt to Bring up the Ark (vv. 1-5).

This is an example of a wrong way of doing a right thing. That the ark of the Lord of hosts, the symbol of God's presence, should be brought to the very center of the nation's life was a decision worthy of all praise. It surely met God's approval. David gathered together the representative men of the nation in order that the movement might be a national one; also that the Philistines might not oppose them. That David was sincere in this measure can not be doubted, but he was hasty and inconsiderate, for the procedure was an express violation of God's statutes. God had expressly decreed that the Kohathites should bear the ark upon their shoulders (Num. 4:14, 15; 7:9; 18:3). For them to place it even upon a new cart was a positive violation of God's commandment. Though David was sincere, his sincerity did not atone for disobedience to God's Word. The dictum that it matters little what you do, just so you are honest and sincere is one of the devil's blackest lies. David cannot be excused on the grounds of ignorance, because he had the opportunity to know. God cannot be blamed for man's ignorance when He has given him the law and the ability to understand it. Besides, it is evident that they had learned this new method of transporting the ark from the heathen Philistines (1 Sam. 6:7-14). Many of the so-called new and improved methods of doing the Lord's work are directly from the heathen. It may be that some of your Sunday-school methods and machinery originated in that way. Good people may be sincerely ignorant about them and use them, but that will no more do than in David's case.

II. God Vindicates His Law and Holiness (vv. 6-9).

The people were very joyful as they moved on toward Jerusalem with the ark, but suddenly there was a stop to their jubilant voices and music. At some rough place in the road the oxen stumbled and Uzzah anxious for the precious freight on his cart reached forth his hand to steady it. This resulted in his being stricken to death, as a man who touches a live electric wire. Ignorance does not make a man immune from the death which is in the touch of the heavily charged electric wire; neither does it in the case of the violation of God's laws. Even those who were designated by the Lord to carry the ark were not allowed to touch it with their hands. Since the ark was God's dwelling-place among men, they needed to know that He was holy. The crying need of this age is to learn that God is holy and that we should reverence His Word and institutions. God's judgment was severe, but not more so than they deserved. Many, according to 1 Corinthians 11:27-31, are dying because they dare to presumptuously approach the Lord's table. In such case God's judgment must strike. The only way to avoid it is to acquaint ourselves with His way of doing and then render full obedience. When one disobeys God's Word he will soon be handling, with irreverence, God's institutions and ordinances. This awful visitation of just judgment struck terror to David. Well it might, for he was in the path of disobedience. The Lord's presence has no terror for those who obey His Word and do His will.

III. The Ark of God in the House of Obed-Edom (vv. 10-12).

The homes where God is welcomed are always blessed. Obed-Edom was not better personally than Uzzah and David, but he openly received the Lord and properly related himself to Him. What had been death and dread to others was life and blessing to him. This was all because of his attitude toward it. The gospel is a savor of life unto life to some and death unto death to others. The same sun which melts wax hardens the clay. This difference is due to the nature of the material.

IV. The Ark Brought to Jerusalem with Great Joy (vv. 13-19).

1. Sacrifices Were Offered After Going Six Paces (v. 13). David made the start and when convinced of God's approval he made offerings. These were both burnt and peace offerings, typifying the self-dedication of the offerers and their thanksgiving (1 Chron. 16:1).
2. David's Great Joy (vv. 14, 15). The people joined him with great shouting and with the sound of the trumpet.
3. Michal's Criticism (v. 16). Even though David went to excess in his expression of joy, it was wrong in her to criticise, for God seems to have sanctioned David's rebuke of her (v. 23).
4. The Grand Celebration (vv. 17-19). As a token of his gratitude to God, David generously treated the people.
5. The King of Glory, the Lord Jesus Christ, Coming (Ps. 24:7-10).

This was not the psalm composed by David for the occasion of bringing up the ark; that was Psalm 105. (See 1 Chron. 16). It is strange that such a suggestion should have been made. This 24th psalm pictures Christ as the coming and triumphant King. At that time the gates shall open to Him and the King of glory shall come in.

Sunday-school News, Methods, Appliances and Questions

By Hugh Cork

THE CHURCH SCHOOL'S FIRST CONCERN

What is the Sunday-school? In the economy of God it is meant to be none other than the Church of Christ functioning in her ministry of teaching as prescribed by her divine Founder. Being, therefore, nothing more nor less than the Church, the body of Christ (not an "organization" but an "organism"), she has been enjoined by her Lord in her teaching ministry as well as her other world-mission activities, to wait until she receives the Holy Ghost after which to witness of the good news (Acts 1:8), to teach all nations (Matt. 28:19), to win souls for her Master and to prepare them for Christian service (Matt. 28:20), and to select some who can train others (2 Tim. 2:2) whom God Himself has set in the Church to teach (1 Cor. 12:28).

The Church school's first concern, as she contemplates her world possibilities, should therefore be the endowment of power from on high. Any amount of zeal in carrying out her Master's great commission will result in failure unless there is the work of infilling before there is any attempt at fulfilling. "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." The Holy Spirit is already here and just waiting to be permitted to guide the Church school in her teaching function, even in the deep things of God. The Church school has been leaning too much upon man rather than upon God's Spirit, hence her weaknesses and many failures. She needs to learn that spiritual results come not from work "which man's wisdom teaches, but which the Holy Ghost teaches, comparing spiritual things with spiritual." In fact she must ever be conscious of the spirit of God dwelling in her. While Jesus is yonder preparing the home for His bride, He has commissioned the Holy Ghost to come and make His home here in the dwelling place of the bride, to assist her in preparing for her coming marriage. Paul reminds us of this when he writes to a church (not to individuals) saying, "Know ye not that ye (as a church) are the temple of God and that the spirit of God dwelleth in you?" Oh, that the Holy Spirit might have His rightful place in the Church's teaching service, then Christ's great commission would speedily find its fulfilment in the Church school's world-mission!

"SECRETS OF SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHING"

From Edward Leigh Pell's Book

Pour a note book full of new methods into a cold brain and they will accomplish about as much as a tank full of cold water emptied into a cold engine. You've got to have fire beneath the water. You've got to get a motive that will kindle a fire in your heart beneath your brain.

Your great business as teachers in the Sunday-school is to bring the pupils in contact with the Word of God and in contact with your life which has been transformed by that Word, with the hope that from the pages of the printed book or from the hand touch or heart touch of yourself, these may find its way into the heart of the pupil that which will transform his life and develop him into a man like unto the man of Galilee. Your success or failure is indicated at this point.

Cultivate your love for children—not for ideal childhood but for real flesh and blood children, the besmeared child, the homely child, the outwardly repulsive child. Your love is not a love for children until you get behind the besmeared face, deep down into the unsmeared heart.

The Word of God is not likely to find its way down into the heart of my pupil unless it has found its way into my own heart. I must not only possess the truth I am to teach, but the truth must possess me.

The reason a good many teachers never accomplish anything is because they never aim at anything. If you want to be a successful teacher aim at something.

I would not trouble myself to begin with about elaborate equipment or devour all the books on pedagogy the first year. I would not ask in what way I want to help the "souls" of my "pupils," but in what way do I want to help John and Mary and Henry.

Every teacher teaches two lessons at a time—one from his lesson help and the other from himself. What he teaches from his lesson help often goes wide of the mark; but the teaching that goes out from himself—his personality, his character, his life—goes without aim or effort straight to the hearts of his pupils.

Mental stagnation is the secret of half our woes. If your work is to be worth-while you must find time before you go to Sunday-school to wake up your mind. You must get up early enough to wake it up. Take time to ascend the Mount of Transfiguration and then your pupils, seeing your countenance, will feel within themselves, "It is good to be here."

One way to stir up enthusiasm for the work is to think about our work—not about the discouraging things that relate to our own efforts, but about the stirring things that relate to our work as a whole, and what Jesus is waiting to accomplish through us. He gave the child as only a promise of which the man is to be the fulfilment.

I do not hesitate to say that a teacher should go to his class feeling the ground beneath his feet, or he should not go at all. His mind must be settled on fundamental things—not like a reed that bends before every wind.

As you go to the class say to yourself, "I am going to teach this lesson for the sole purpose of bringing my pupils to the point of taking Jesus at His word. I am going to picture Jesus in such a light that it will be easy for them to take Him at His word. I shall have no other purpose, no other thought. Every question that I may ask, every incident that I may relate, every verse that I may quote, every word or look or deed, shall be to this single end. My aim shall shine out before me as clear as a star in the heavens and I shall follow that star as straight as an arrow."

MUSIC'S POWER IN THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL

Dr. George F. Pentecost, the popular pastor of the great Bethany Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia, makes the following statement of the power of sacred song:

"I am profoundly sure that among the divinely ordained instrumentalities for the conversion and sanctification of the soul, God has not given a greater, besides the preaching of the gospel, than the singing of psalms and hymns and spiritual songs. I have known a hymn to do God's work in a soul when every other instrumentality has failed. I could not enumerate the times God has rescued and saved my soul from darkness, discouragement and weariness by the singing of a hymn, generally by bringing one to my own heart and causing me to sing it to myself. It would be easy to fill many pages with interesting facts in connection with the use of hymns in public worship in the house of God. I have seen vast audiences melted and swayed by a simple hymn when they have been unmoved by a powerful presentation of the gospel from the pulpit."

With this in mind we should select our Sunday-school choristers with great care, and see that we do not use hymns to fill up the time while "the janitor lowers the windows," or "the ushers take up the collection."

BENEATH THE CROSS OF JESUS

Mr. Ira D. Sankey said concerning the above named hymn: "I composed the music to this hymn in the home of my dear friend, Dr. Thomas Barnardo, whose death is announced through the public press just at the time I am writing this note. The author of the hymn, Elizabeth Clephane, also wrote 'The Ninety and Nine,' and these two were her only hymns.

"The first time this hymn was sung is still fresh in my memory. The morning after I had composed the music the Rev. W. H. Aitkin was to speak at our meeting in the Great Bow Road Hall, in London, Mr. Moody having made an arrangement to speak at Her Majesty's Theater. It was a lovely morning and a great gathering had assembled at the meeting, which was held at eight o'clock. Before the sermon I sang 'Beneath the Cross of Jesus' as a solo; and as in the case of 'The Ninety and Nine' much blessing came from its use for the first time. With eyes filled with tears and deeply moved, the preacher said to the audience, 'Dear friends, I had intended to speak to you this morning upon work for the Master, but this new hymn has made such an impression on my heart and evidently upon your own, that I will defer my proposed address and speak to you on 'The Cross of Jesus.' The sermon was one of the most powerful I have ever heard, and many souls that morning accepted the message of grace and love. Some years later Mr. Aitkin held many successful meetings in New York and other cities in this country, and he often used this hymn as a solo.

"An odd incident occurred in connection with Mr. Aitkin's use of this hymn in St. Paul's Church, at Broadway and Wall street, the money center of America. A gentleman, having heard this piece sung frequently by great congregations of business men and Wall street brokers in St. Paul's Church, called upon the publishers of the small book of words which had been distributed in the church and said that he 'wished to secure that beautiful English tune which Mr. Aitkin used so much in his meetings.' When he was told he could find it in any copy of Gospel Hymns he became quite indignant, and insisted it was a fine classic which the great preacher had brought with him from England —nothing like the Moody and Sankey trash. Having secured a copy of Mr. Aitkin's hymn book containing the 'fine English tune' to the beautiful words 'Beneath the Cross of Jesus,' he went away happy but only to find it was written by the author of 'The Ninety and Nine.'"

HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS IN BOOKS

Sunday-school teachers using the International (Uniform) lessons for July, 1920, will appreciate the aid given by the following named books:

Aug. 1. "Thanksgiving," in Prevailing Prayer, by D. L. Moody; "Prayer with Thanksgiving," in How to Pray, by R. A. Torrey.

Aug. 8. "The Fruit of the Spirit is Love," in Absolute Surrender, by Andrew Murray.

Aug. 15. Sowing and Reaping, by D. L. Moody.

Aug. 22. "Repentance Must Go With Forgiveness," in All of Grace, by C. H. Spurgeon; "Forgiveness," in Prevailing Prayer, by D. L. Moody; "The Lost Chord Found," in Light on Life's Duties, by F. B. Meyer; "The Blessings of Sins Forgiven," in Short Talks, by D. L. Moody.

Aug. 29. "True Wisdom," in The Overcoming Life.

SELF-EXAMINATION FOR TEACHERS

"I have a surprise for you," announced the superintendent as they were all—teachers and officers—seated about the tables for their monthly supper and conference. "We have decided to give our pupils examinations upon their work. I do not want to examine you—I want each of you to do that for yourself. I have prepared some questionnaires and would like each of you to give a truthful answer, in writing, to each question. Of course, these papers will be strictly confidential. No eye but mine shall ever see them." He then passed the papers down the table. Each was marked with the name of the teacher or officer for whom it was intended. Those for the officers of the school varied according to the office held; those for the teachers were all alike:

1. Do you enjoy your class? If not, why not?
2. Do you know the school and home environment of each of your pupils?
3. Have you made friends with their mothers?
4. How do you meet with your pupils socially?
5. How can you help them more in their home life?
6. How can you help them more in their school life?
7. How can you help them more in the class hour?
8. How much time do you give to lesson preparation?
9. How much time are you giving to advance study along any line?

10. Do you pray daily for each of your class by name?

11. Does each member of your class feel that you are a personal friend to whom they can take their inmost longings?

12. Do you talk with them, privately, of the things of the soul?

13. What are you doing to train them in service?

14. Do you ever pray with them, one by one, in private?

15. If you have omitted the doing of any of these things, will you begin now?

Not all these questions were answered by any teacher. But, one by one, the teachers brought the papers and confessed, some with tears in their eyes, how far they had failed in these things. They would do better.

It was the beginning of a Christward step for each teacher. There was a different atmosphere in the school from that time on; a growth in spirituality which was extremely gratifying to pastor as well as to superintendent and parents. They had examined themselves.—William P. Benton in The School Standard.

TEACHING'S THIRD LAW AND SEVEN OF ITS RULES

"The Language Used to Convey the Truth Must be Common to both Teacher and Learner.

To enforce this law the following seven rules are made:

1. Study the learner's language to get his words and the meaning he gives them.
2. Express your thoughts as far as possible in the pupil's words carefully correcting any defect in the meaning he gives them.
3. Use the simplest and fewest words that will express the meaning.
4. Use short sentences and of the simplest construction.
5. Help out the meaning of the words by good illustrations.
6. When it is necessary to teach a new word give the idea before the word.
7. Here as everywhere in teaching the young make haste slowly.

HUNDREDS BOOKING FOR THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION IN TOYKO

Pennsylvania is still in the lead with more than 85 delegates. Ohio has 29 bookings and New York 26. The first sailing will be July 30 on the "Fushimi Maru" from Seattle. Four ships carrying delegates will sail in August and the last of the delegates will leave on the "Empress of Russia" September 22, from Vancouver.

Some who take the Around-the-World tours will stop over in India for four weeks before proceeding to Egypt, Palestine and Europe. More than thirty post-convention meetings will be held in the Far and Near East and the last rally before the delegates separate at Marseilles will be at Jerusalem, where the Fourth World's Convention met in 1904. All information concerning the Tokyo Convention can be obtained by addressing the World's Sunday School Association, 216 Metropolitan Tower, New York City.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY TOPICS

largely, and in some districts almost exclusively, by circulars and pamphlets in the vernacular. America is now being circularized with the request, 'Read and pass it on.'" It is time for the Christian faith to be propagated by this same method. "A distinguished and trustworthy writer on 'The Facts of the War on World Religions' adduces evidence to prove that Shintoism, Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Hinduism, and Confucianism stimulated by the war, have already inaugurated world-wide campaigns, especially for Europe and America. These are to be largely promoted by the printed page, and the literature is already appearing."

Now is the time for individual Christians to arouse themselves. Let the habit of carrying and distributing good tracts and pamphlets setting forth Christian truth be formed and developed. Thousands of people who did not go into our churches have been won to a saving knowledge of Christ through the wise distribution of tracts. Our Young People's Societies could well afford to inaugurate a campaign in their own communities for the distribution of printed matter, positively Christian in its tone, and clearly directed towards making Christ known as a personal Saviour. "Men now living who know Christ must take Him to those now living who know Him not, if they are ever to know Him."

"Time worketh; let me work too.
Time undoeth; let me do.
Busy as time, my work I ply,
Till I rest in the rest of eternity."

A PLEA FOR THE FAITH MISSIONS

By Rev. E. J. Pace

With no intention to deprecate by invidious comparison the splendid work done by many a denominational mission in the wide fields of missionary endeavor, and joying in the increased facilities the recent inflow of funds will provide such missions, we are nevertheless led by several considerations to enter a plea for that splendid company of men and women who, in the daring of their faith in God's faithfulness to provide, have ventured into the regions beyond with no definite support, humanly speaking, assured them.

Whose heart has not been thrilled by the triumphs of faith recorded in the annals of the China Inland Mission, whose missionaries number now upward of a thousand, whose footsteps have penetrated into the remotest recesses of that vast republic? What men and women of prayer they are! What dependence upon the Holy Spirit of God; what loyalty to the Word of God! We never hear of financial "drives" in their behalf; no stress and strain of creaking ecclesiastical machinery accompanies the silent flow of the needed supplies. Their triumphant witness to the world is, "God is faithful," not only in meeting their material need, but in the abundance of the harvest they are reaping.

There is the Heart of Africa Mission, practically unknown to the average nominal Christian, doing a great work for God in the upper Congo. Mr. C. T. Studd, convert of Mr. Moody's mission in England, a veteran missionary, fifty-five years old, physically depleted by tropical fevers, yet dared to take God at His word and plunged into the midst of the cannibals of the upper Congo, only a dozen years ago. Others, inspired by the daring of his faith, followed in quick succession, and everyone of them, looking to God alone for support, also found Him faithful, and more than faithful. Today there are hundreds of devoted Christian workers who but yesterday were the vilest of cannibals, saved by the power of the gospel and themselves zealously evangelizing the untouched tribes of the Belgian Congo. True to Him and His Word, these missionaries find Him also true, and a blessed harvest of souls is quickly gathered in.

Group of Evangelists of the Heart of Africa Mission. A dozen years ago these were cannibals

Then there is the Sudan Interior Mission, and the Sudan United Mission, seeking with truly heroic faith, and in steadfast loyalty to the whole truth of God, to evangelize the biggest untouched block of heathenism anywhere on the globe. Over one hundred tribes in equatorial Africa are as yet absolutely untouched, but upon whose domains the Mohammedan advance is pushing on like a relentless tide.

Nor would we forget the Africa Inland Mission, that splendid body of men and women pushing inward from British East Africa under Mr. Hurlburt's leadership, every one of whom is loyal to the Lord Jesus and the Book, whose appeal to God asks for 200 more missionaries to man the unreached fields across the Sudan from the East.

Time fails us to do more than mention the Nyasaland Mission, the Congo Inland Mission and the South Africa General Mission, founded by the sainted Andrew Murray "who being dead yet speaketh" in all the policies of that vigorous forward-pushing mission.

Southward in the neglected continent of Latin America are heroes of the eleventh-of-Hebrews type, whom we would also commend as men and women of God, absolutely loyal to the Word. The Bolivian Indian Mission is doing a solid work among the down-trodden Indians of the Andes. The Inland South America Missionary Union is pushing with courage and faith up among the untouched Indian tribes of southern Brazil, and are calling for more workers to meet the need.

Among others we might mention is the Central America Mission, with whom Dr. C. I. Scofield has for so many years been identified, whose missionaries labor amid unspeakable difficulties to evangelize the Indians of Central America. Christians can rely on their soundness of faith and devotion to evangelization.

Other missions of unquestioned loyalty to the Word ought to be mentioned here, as worthy of support, whose faith in God has "subuded kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises—from weakness were made strong, waxed mighty in war, and turned to flight the armies of the aliens—of whom the world is not worthy."

God bless the 'faith missions' and all others whose steadfast loyalty to the Word entitles them to the support of God's people.

PRAYING MISSIONARIES OUT OF THE FIELD

The Master's words, "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that he would thrust forth laborers into his harvest," have been heard on many occasions when the needs of the mission fields have been presented to Christians, but it is not often that a reversal of this prayer finds voice.

From a missionary recently returned from Korea we learn that practically the entire mission force of all denominations, and practically the entire church of Korea, is premillennial; that the Korean Christians and preachers to a man believe the Bible through and through, and it is not their purpose to stand for any teaching subverting to their simple faith in the fundamentals of the Word of God, including the blessed hope of the Lord's coming. When a missionary appears on the field whose views of the Bible and of this doctrine are at variance with the established belief, we are told that the Korean churches unite in prayer to thrust this laborer out of the field. Such has been done in the case of a number of missionaries, who found themselves "personae non gratae" and their surroundings so uncomfortable that they found it best to return to America.

Japan Favors the Chundokyo

The religion of Japan is identical with patriotism; the Emperor standing in the place of God. The rulers of Japan see in the propagation of the gospel of Jesus Christ the most potent and subverting propaganda to undermine their national faith that could be conceived. The Chundokyo or "preaching church" of Korea is a cleverly contrived substitute for Christianity, the endeavor being to propagate the ethics of Christianity, placing patriotism, however, as foremost in the code of ethics.

Information comes that recently the imperial government granted fifty thousand yen to the propagation of the Chundokyo movement, with the view of undermining the church of Jesus Christ in Korea. The imperial militaristic government of Korea has assigned 1920 as the time when the image of the Emperor must be hung in every Christian school, and upon certain festive occasion all Koreans must bow to the image of the Emperor. Korean missionaries to a man, and Christian leaders, have sworn their refusal to either do, or allow such a thing, whatever the consequences might be.

We naturally wonder if we are not having a duplication in our day of Christianity undermining the paganism of Rome in the early centuries of the church by passive resistance to unspeakably brutal oppression. May it not be that the brutality of militaristic Japan will find in the passive resistance of Korea that which will break up the foundations and effect its collapse? Already we are told a deep current of resentment surges through Japan presaging a disintegration of militarism and the anti-christian opposition.

A REMARKABLE MISSIONARY CHURCH

By Rev. E. J. Pace

It was the writer's privilege to attend, some time ago, and have some part in, a missionary rally in the Gospel Church of Cleveland, O., of which Rev. Herbert McKenzie is pastor. The church is not large, there being somewhat less than three hundred members enrolled, but these members have been blessed with faithful shepherding.

Pastor McKenzie believes the Bible, and teaches his people in season and out of season, and the results of his faithful indoctrinating appear in ways intensely practical. In these days of strained emphasis upon service, to the neglect of sound doctrine, it is immensely refreshing to find a church proving to the world the practicability, nay, rather the necessity, of sound teaching in awakening interest in world evangelization.

We have long felt that the way to get folks interested in missions is to get them interested in Jesus. True missionary interest and zeal cannot thrive on missionary pageants and pantomimes, helpful as these might be to enlighten folks about people abroad. Where there is a want of a whole hearted and sound enthusiasm for the Lord Jesus Christ, almost vain are the efforts to awaken and maintain a loyal support of missions.

One day in the year is given to missions in the Gospel Church of Cleveland, upon which day the annual missionary offering is received. Several days of preparation precede the day, wherein missionary speakers are heard and the needs of the work abroad are presented. Then on the missionary Sunday the people are simply invited to lay their offerings upon the table for the work of Christ abroad, and what a sight it was! No urging, no exhorting, no cajoling, but quietly and without the least confusion, practically the whole church came forward with gifts, totaling more than $10,000. So deep was the impression made upon me that I requested a statement from Pastor McKenzie how he accomplished it, which he gave as follows:

"My missionary vision came in 1897. Up to that time I had taken one missionary offering of about $23. My first after I beheld the fields was $296, and within one year had equipped and sent forth my first missionary. This was in London, Ont.

"I came to Cleveland, January, 1908. The missionary income for 1907 had been $390. The missionary's salary was $150 in arrears. It was soon raised. Our first missionary day brought over $1,100, and we have steadily grown to $10,000, our last offering having reached that figure.

"We have only one business man in the church, his offering has usually been $500, that is in recent years. This year it mounted to $800 rising from $200, eleven years ago. We have one member—our missionary blacksmith—who has gone up from $5 to $400, given in cash the day you were here. The Sunday-school offering this year reached nearly $1,000. This of course included givings of young men and women, members of Bible classes who were members of the church, who did not divide their givings between the church and school.

"We have five missionaries on the field which we have supported. This year we have sent five to Bible Institutes for preparation. One member has been recently accepted for Africa and will be added to the list. You will note on our missionary calendar that we have the joy of fellowship with over fifty missions or workers.

"Names on our roll stand at about 290. Thirty-three per cent of these should be struck off as unknown—they are merely names, as is the case, I presume with, nearly all churches. We never dun nor personally canvass our members, neither do we solicit. We pray about our date for missionary day, then pray about our offering. In our heart we desire and pray for lives for Him. The cash and pledges in offering are incidental. We believe firmly that every stream will dry up unless it rises from the throne of grace. Satan and unbelief could make us rich in money so that we would say, 'I am rich and increased in goods and have need of nothing.' The Lord alone can accomplish His purposes and we emphasize the need of love in order to give to His pleasure.

"Other finances do not suffer. Our church liabilities are always met and we always finish the fiscal year with balances in hand."

It ought to be added that not only was there hearty response in money, but upward of two score of young people offered themselves on that day for missionary service as God would choose to use them.

THE READING BOOK OF AFRICA

Africa, "the world's backward child," is learning to read. The black man is putting himself to school. The keenness to "learn book" beggars description.

The first book that missionaries translate into a native language is generally one of the Gospels. For immense multitudes this forms to-day their only literature; but it is the best they could have. In its pages they come face to face with the picture of Christ, "the Africans' only figure in history," and they learn the gospel of the love of God.

A missionary working in Kavirondo writes of the mass movements: "People often walked thirty or forty miles for the Book that was now so precious to them, and in order to preserve it, they would sew the covers in goatskin or cloth. They read it so often that they could recite whole passages by heart. Every convert must pass an examination in the gospels before being baptized."

In 143 different African tongues, the Bible Society has already sent out some part of Holy Scripture. These include the complete Bible in 22 languages, the New Testament in 32 more languages, and some book or books of the Bible in 89 languages besides.

In Africa hundreds of languages and dialects have not yet been reduced to writing. There are many revisions to be undertaken in the translations already made. There is an extraordinary increase in the demand for the Book among large and rapidly growing African Christian communities."—The Presbyterian Messenger.

SPIRITUAL DISTANCES

I. While Unforgiven, we are—

1. Near to sin. "My sin is ever before me." Ps. 51:3.

2. Far from God. "The Lord is far from the wicked." Prov. 15:29. "They that are far from thee shall perish." Ps. 73:27.

II. When Forgiven, we are—

1. Far from our sins. "As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us." Ps. 103:12.

2. Near to God. "Now in Christ Jesus, ye who sometime were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ." Eph. 2:13.

"Hide not thy face far from me; put not thy servant away in anger: thou hast been my help; leave me not, neither forsake me, O God of my salvation."—Ps. 27:9.

I. The Sorrows and Doubts of the Two Disciples.
    Inexpressible sorrow overwhelmed them.
    They were sore perplexed.
    They were bewildered.
    They sought a solution of the dark enigma.

II. The Sorrows and Doubts of the Disciples are Met by a Divine Explanation.
    He first rebukes their spiritual ignorance and unwillingness to believe (v. 25).
    His explanation caused peace.

III. The Sorrows and Doubts Were Lost in the Supreme Joy of the Risen Lord Fully Revealed.

OLD TESTAMENT TEACHING ON THE MESSIAH

What we learn from the Old Testament respecting the Messiah, the great Deliverer, who is to accomplish the redemption of mankind, may be summed up in the following eight propositions:

1. As to derivation, He is to be the Seed of the Woman (Gen. 3:15), of Abraham (Gen. 12:3; 22:18), of Isaac (Gen. 26:4), of Jacob (Gen. 28:14), of Judah (Gen. 49:10), of David (1 Sam. 7:12, 13; Isa. 11:1-10; Jer. 23:5).

2. He is to be born of a Virgin (Isa. 7:14), at Bethlehem (Mic. 5:2).

3. He is to be "cut off" seven sevens and sixty-two sevens (of years) after "the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem."

4. As to His nature, He is at once both human and divine (Isa. 9:6); (Ps. 2:8).

5. He is to be a prophet, "like unto Moses" (Deut. 18:15), a priest "after the order of Melchizedek" (Ps. 110:4), and a king, whose dominion is universal (Ps. 2:8; 72:8), eternal (Ps. 45:6; 102:26,27; 145:13; Dan. 7:14), exalted (Isa. 6:1), peaceful (Gen. 49:10), just (2 Sam. 23:3).

6. He is to die for the sins of the world (Isa. 53:8-12; Zech. 12:10; 13:7; Ps. 22:16).

7. He is to rest in the grave, but not to remain there (Ps. 16:10).

8. He is to be raised again from the dead, to ascend into heaven, there to remain seated at the right hand of the majesty on high "until he shall put all things under his feet" (Ps. 16:11; 110:1).

A SUGGESTIVE PETITION

Some time ago in a pulpit prayer by Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, of New York, a petition was offered as suggestive and as eminently pertinent to the times in which we live: "Deliver us from the illusions of the religious life; keep us from becoming disciples of the fictitious." "The disciples of the fictitious" are a great host in number.

THE BELIEVER'S WALK

Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. Matt. 6:13.

Our rule should be, not to see how near we can live to the world and still keep the name of Christian, but, on the contrary, to keep just as far away as possible, "avoiding the appearance of evil." Not praying "lead us not into temptation," and then going right into temptation with our eyes open. The pilot of a United States revenue cutter was asked if he knew all the rocks along the coast where he sailed. He replied: "No; it is only necessary to know where there are no rocks."—D. W. Whittle.

FAITH AS GOLD

1. Gold is precious; so is faith.

2. Gold is very desirable for many things of life; so is faith for all things of religion.

3. Gold is tried by refinement in the fire, by weight, by ringing, etc., in order to discover whether it is genuine; so is faith tried in various ways by God.

4. Gold, pure and current, is comparatively scarce, so is the true saving faith of the gospel.

Faith is the saving grace, it is the connecting link between the soul and Christ. Take that away and all is gone. Faith is a simple trust in a personal Redeemer.

The simpler our trust the surer our peace.

—J. Ellis.

HOW TO BUILD

A common temptation is to neglect foundation work in religion and run up the "building" quickly. This plan saves trouble for the present, but your time and toil are thrown away. The absence of a foundation will not be known at once, perhaps not for years. Death alone will uncover some impostures. O ye builders, care not merely for the present! Build for judgment and eternity; dig deeply if you do dig a foundation. If it be repentance, let it be an intensely earnest repentance; if faith, believe right up to the hilt. He who builds for eternity has much to get rid of. Self-trust, love of sin, worldliness, pride, self-seeking, all sorts of "earth" must be thrown out. The man who builds securely builds on the Word of God. What He has said is a rock; what man teaches is shifting sand.

—C. H. Spurgeon.

THE VISION OF GOD

"I have set the Lord always before me." —Psalm 16:8.

This is the real practice of the Presence of God. It is the endeavor to see everything in the light of that Presence, and never to regard anything as detached from the divine relationship. In the flat miles of country round about Lincoln, England, everything can be viewed in relation to its noble cathedral, uplifted there on the mount. Whether you are toiling in the fields, or walking along the road, or sitting by the way, the cathedral is ever before you, throwing its sacred suggestiveness over every common lot. And to have the Lord always before us on the broad plains of daily life, overlooking our playfields and our battlefields, our place of business and our place of worship, the green pastures and the green churchyard—this is to cultivate the vision of God. "I saw the Lord high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple."

Now this kind of vision is not easily attained, nor can it be gained in a day. It was said of the late Bishop Westcott that "he only saw because he took time to see." That is where so many of us miss it. We do not give time to see. We are so feverish in action that we have no leisure for vision. We are more concerned about movement than we are about direction. We are more ambitious to have the wheels going round than we are to receive the divine sanction. And so the plain has no towering cathedral. The day is not overlooked by the Eternal. Life has no sacred mount.

It has been said that the poet is one who "sees the infinite in things." Then in a very rich degree we can all be poets, seeing the Infinite in our ordinary work, or in the country lane, or amid the festivities of a wedding, or in the shadows by an open grave. We can verily "set the Lord always before us."—J. H. Jowett, in British Weekly.

A SERMON TO PREACHERS

I am greatly disappointed with some preachers of today,
With their logic and their ethics; their aristocratic way;
With their science and their theories, and their New Theology,
Full of everything but Jesus and His love for you and me.
There is plenty in the Bible for the preachers of today.
If they will but search its pages and for help divine would pray;
For God's Word is everlasting, and it never will grow old—
'Tis, indeed, a priceless treasure—far more precious e'en than gold.

What we want is consecration in a good, true man of God,
With a Bible education, and a love for God's dear Word;
Who can lead us and direct us to the Truth, the Life, the Way,
Which brings peace to soul and body through the burdens of the day.
If the preachers in our churches would preach Jesus crucified,
How through love for us He suffered, and through love for us, He died,
Then our pews would not be empty, as so many are today,
But be filled to overflowing, in a pentecostal way.

What we need is just plain gospel, in the good old-fashioned way,
Place of Emerson or Shakespeare, or some topic of the day.
What care we for all their sayings, or their teachings true and tried?
We want just the dear old story of the Saviour crucified.
That alone can make men better, that alone can make men free—
Just the precious, dear old story, of God's love for you and me;
That is what the people's wanting, there is where the crowd will be;
Where they hear the same old story, which they heard at mother's knee.

—Luetta Cummins, in The Christian Herald.

OPEN-AIR PREACHING

What to avoid in relation to

THE WORK

Avoid conventional ideas of the work:
  That it is a mere extra.
  A species o advertisement.
  A sphere for inferior speakers.
  Conventional ideas as to methods.

THE AUDIENCE

Avoid whatever the audience cannot enter into:
  Hymns which concern Christians only.
  Inappropriate tunes.
  Prolonged prayers.
  Long readings of Scripture.
  Technical terms.
  Personal opinions.

THE PREACHER

Avoid whatever inspires contempt or ridicule:
  Bad singing.
  Vulgar forms of speech.
  Pandering to vulgar tastes.
  Affectations of language.
  Self-advertising.
  Bad manners.
  Finishing another man's address.
  Mending another man's theology.
  Compliments to previous speakers.

THE MANAGEMENT

Avoid inducing irrelevant trains of thought:
  Unnecessary matter of detail.
  References to peculiarities in persons present; age, color, nationality.
  References to other Christians.
Avoid all distractions to speaker or audience:
  Inattention in supporters.
  Discussions by rank and file
  Passing of music, etc.
  Tract distribution.

What to do concerning

THE MATTER

Have a message.
Have a message from God.
Have a message from God to your audience.
Have a message from God to your audience that is urgent.

THE METHOD

First make it clear to your own mind.
Then make it clear to your audience:
  Illustrate to make clear
Make the matter real to your audience:
  Quote instances and give parallels to make real.
Speak to persuade and to move to action.
Distinguish between sermonizing and lecturing.
Appeal to intelligence to convince.
Appeal to feeling to move action.
Get at the work in hand.
Make progress.
Stop when finished.

THE MANNER

Speak as one having authority:
  The authority of one sent.
  The authority of knowledge,
  The authority of urgency.
Speak as in the presence of God.

—John Galt.

Paul had three strong desires, and they were all about Christ: that he might be found in Christ; that he might be with Christ; and that he might magnify Christ.

The Evangelistic Field

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS

Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 2d of the month preceding date of issue.

"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns, and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work, nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

Chester Birch reports a campaign held at Lincoln, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. John Imrie, singing evangelists, assisted in a meeting in Salt Lake City, Utah, and from there went to Paragould, Ark.

Charles H. Gray reports a successful meeting at Melbeta, Neb. His next meeting was held at Rushville, Neb., and from there he went to Clinton, Neb.

The Ham-Ramsay Party closed a successful campaign in Lewisburg, Tenn. This was a union campaign in which five denominations united.

O. L. Cotterell, J. W. Troy and Foss Fellers will hold a three weeks meeting at Olney, Ill., commencing July 4. Olney is Mr. Cotterell's home town.

The Prestons assisted I. E. Honeywell in meetings at Red Bluff, Corning and Imperial, Calif., and Willcox, Ariz. The Lord blessed each meeting with large results.

The Steve Burke Party held a hard fought but victorious meeting in Golden City, Mo., for five weeks. It was a union campaign, in a big tent, five churches co-operating.

The Vom Bruch Party closed a short meeting in Montgomery, Ill., and Flint, Mich., with good results. Mr. Vom Bruch was a speaker at the Evansville (Ind.) Bible Conference.

The E. De Witt Johnston Party recently conducted campaigns at Hammond, Ind., Brantford, Ont., and Fullarton, Ont. At Fullarton, five churches united in a community meeting.

Homer A. Hammontree and Mel Trotter held successful meetings at Wichita, Kan., and Polo, Ill. At the time of writing they had opened an evangelistic campaign at Tucson, Ariz.

The report submitted by G. W. Cory, superintendent of the Union Mission, Wheeling, W. Va., shows over 83,000 meals given out at the mission since March, 1917, and 1,884 conversions.

The Crowe-Hobbs Party closed a community tabernacle meeting at Hayti, Mo., during which there were more than 300 professions and many pledges for Bible reading and family worship. Their next tabernacle meeting was held at Steel, Mo.

J. P. Carter, singing evangelist, writes: "We are having great blessings from the Lord in our evangelistic work. We had a great simultaneous campaign in Birmingham, Ala., where 36 Baptist churches united in a special effort for soul winning. Nearly 1,800 were added to those churches, with many other professed conversions."

Miss Sara C. Palmer is, at present, conducting a series of meetings at Belfast, Ireland, with Pastor Alex. Jardine. The meetings are exceptionally well attended during the week, while on Sundays the building is crowded to its utmost capacity and numbers turned away. Already many have decided for Christ and God's people have been wonderfully blessed.

Edward Clare Harding writes: "I am singing for Rev. T. M. Thomas, an evangelist of Kansas City, Mo., at Chatham, Va. Things were not quite ready here so we went out to a country church for one week and had 71 conversions, 6 by statement or letter, and 54 reconsecrations."

Richard Lowe reports a two weeks special meeting at Bethel, Kan. He assisted Rev. Mr. Bridwell during this meeting. Mr. Lowe writes: "Bethel is a run down charge, having had no pastor for over a year. Nine were converted and reclaimed.

G. E. Vinaroff writes: "Our meeting at Biddeford, Me., which began May 2 and closed May 24, at the Foss Street M. E. Church, resulted in twenty-six conversions and six consecrations for Christian service. Mrs. Vinaroff and I took charge of the music, the pastor doing the preaching." From there the party went to Delta, Me., where they were at the time of writing.

Leroy J. Mitchell writes: "On March 28 we closed a three weeks campaign at Waverly, Ill., with about 200 conversions. All of the high school student body, except two, were enlisted for Jesus Christ, 32 being converted in one service, and 25 of them consecrated their lives to life service. This was a union meeting of four churches. On April 28 we closed a two weeks engagement at Macon, Ill., in the Methodist church. There were 150 confessions. On May 2 we closed a two weeks meeting at Carlyle, Ill., which was a union meeting of three churches, with 150 conversions.

The Chicago Church Federation conducted a speaking campaign in the larger centers of the State in the interest of the Church and Community Convention held in Cleveland, O., June 1-3. The convention was held under the auspices of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. The convention call was based on the principle that where two or more churches are near each other, some form of council, committee or Federation, is necessary for the performance of vital community tasks. The convention was a summons to all those who earnestly desire that the new unit of "Community Life" shall be essentially Christian, and was held in order that prompt action might be taken to more fully occupy this field in every city and town.

The Demarest evangelistic campaign in Newfoundland resulted in between seven and eight hundred conversions. Their first campaign of the New Year was held in a town where there had not been a revival for twenty years. They were particularly delighted with the number of men, both young and old, who surrendered to Christ. After this meeting they returned to St. John's where they held an even more fruitful campaign than last year. Their next meeting was to have been held at Grand Bank but because of heavy storms and fog they were not able to reach the place and were obliged to continue on their way home. On the way home they stopped at New York, where they held some meetings. Their new Chicago address is 5925 Midway Park.

Evangelists Frank and Mrs. McKeegan closed a successful campaign May 30, with Rev. A. H. Meyer and Rev. A. E. Buriff, pastors of the three M. E. churches at Klemme, Ia. Although the weather and roads were unsatisfactory, yet the people turned out, and the spirit of the Lord was present in great power, Christians were revived, and a large number came out and consecrated their lives afresh to the Lord for service, and a number of the unconverted came to the altar and accepted Christ. May 30 was observed as decoration day and Mr. McKeegan was invited by the Mayor to give the address. The services were held in the city park at 3 p. m. The people came from all parts, and the word of the Lord was in power. Saints were blessed and sinners convicted of sin. Mr. and Mrs. McKeegan began an Evangelistic Campaign on June 6 with Rev. A. W. Gauger, Methodist Episcopal Church, Hayfield, Ia.

The Charles Reign Scoville Party report as follows, June 8: "We are in a union meeting at Kearney, Neb., with eight churches cooperating. We have had 2,548 persons come forward, repenting of their sins and confessing their faith in their Lord and Saviour. Many hundreds of these were new converts, several hundred had been members of churches elsewhere, and several hundred prodigals have returned to the fold; and some Christians have come to reconsecrate and rededicate their lives for a closer walk with God—460 signed the tithers' pledge last Sunday. The tabernacle proved inadequate to accommodate the crowds. In our party of seven workers there are two former Moody students—Mr. L. T. Arlander, of Nebraska, and Rev. C. R. Clark, of Kansas. Both have been doing fine work. Rev. Mr. Clark was converted several years ago in a meeting we held at Hutchinson, Kan. Mrs. Scoville is soloist and superintendent of business girls' and high school girls' work. Mr. A. L. Haley, of Colorado, has charge of the children's work and Bible drills, and Miss Grace Stuart, of California, is our superintendent of young people's work and secretary of the company. We will close this campaign June 14."

BIBLE CONFERENCE AT SEATTLE

The annual summer Bible Conference of the First Presbyterian Church at Seattle, Dr. M. A. Matthews, pastor, was held May 23-30, under the leadership of Dr. William Evans, and his musical director, Prof. William Young. Two sessions were held each day, and were well attended, the crowd reaching 3,800 at the closing service. The general theme was "The World's Last Great Crisis," a study of the Apocalypse. Dr. Evans was very clear and positive in his declaration of dispensational truth, and untold blessing was derived from his ministry by those in attendance.

The autumn Bible Conference of the church will be held October 21-31, and Drs. A. C. Dixon, A. C. Gaebelein, Ford C. Ottman, W. Leon Tucker and Donald D. Munro will be the speakers.

A Victorious Life Conference was also held in Seattle May 27-June 1, with Dr. W. H. Griffith-Thomas, and Mr. Charles Gallaudet Trumbull, Editor of the Sunday School Times, as leaders. The attendance was large throughout, and many young people were led to surrender themselves to the full will of God, and to forsake worldly pleasures.

INSTITUTE DAY

On recommendation of the Business Staff, the Executive Committee of the Institute has authorized an annual summer picnic or excursion for all employees, as far as possible, and their families, including the Faculty, Business Staff, office and household workers; also an annual banquet for all employes, to be held in the winter.

It has been decided that the annual excursion will be arranged for the day when the Recreation Club will have its boat ride to Milwaukee, thus uniting the entire resident Institute family of students and employes in a day of joyful fellowship and recreation, to be known hereafter as "Institute Day," on which the offices will be closed.

MOODY POST MEMORIAL SERVICE

The Memorial Day service held in Keith Hall on Monday morning, May 31, by the Moody Post of the American Legion, was an impressive and unusually interesting occasion. Besides the student members of the Post, their fellow students and many other members of the Institute family were present. J. Palmer Muntz, chairman of the Post executive committee presided, Dr. Gray delivered the address, and special music, including all the calls used in the Army, was provided by the Misses Alberta and Lorene Davis, cornetists, who, accompanied by their mother, entertained soldiers in the camps throughout the war.

Addressing the service men especially, Dr. Gray said that patriotism was akin to Christianity, and congratulated them on having a post of the Legion in the Institute because it would help them to keep the fires of patriotism burning. Since the consequences of the war were still upon us it was incumbent on them as patriotic citizens to defend the country now against the enemies of government and law and order such as anarchists, bolshevists, socialists and I. W. W.'s. They must keep in mind that other wars are on the horizon, and that their duty to themselves and the coming generation was to help create a public sentiment in favor of universal military training in some form as a preventive of aggression. The highest form of patriotism was that for which The Moody Bible Institute was training them, in the preaching of the gospel and the teaching of the Bible as the Word of God. By such means men came to realize and appreciate their heavenly citizenship, and that until they did that they were not fully prepared to appreciate their citizenship in this land of the free and home of the brave.

He added, that while like all normal men he hated war, yet because of its necessity at times and even its Christian duty, he had great satisfaction in knowing that his own family had taken part in two wars, including the last.

A REUNION IN BOSTON

Miss Cary gave a delightful "at home" to former students, prospective students and friends of the Institute on the afternoon of April 2, at the Business Women's Headquarters of the Y. W. C. A., Boston, Mass.

Tea was served, and the hour was spent in renewing acquaintances and friendships, followed by singing the Institute fellowship song, and prayer by Miss Cary.

Those present included Miss Charlotte A. Porter, '97, director of religious work, Y. W. C. A., Boston, and president, Boston Alumni Association; Mrs. Margaret Aller, '18, 217 S. Buffalo St., Warsaw, Ind. member of Stephens Evangelistic Party; Miss Helen Byrnes, '12, Chicago, superintendent women's work, Stephens Evangelistic Party; Miss Grace Colby, '11, 102 Chestnut St., Lowell, Mass., in business life; Miss Elizabeth O. Cruse, '15, pastor's assistant, Clarendon Street Baptist Church, Boston, also Secretary and Treasurer of the Boston Alumni Association; Miss Mary C. Field, 60 Orchard St., Cambridge, Mass.; Miss Marjorie Fleming, '19, Gordon Bible College, Boston, Mass.; Miss Hazel M. Grover, Franklin Square House, Boston, Mass.; Miss Ann B. MacDougall, '17, 56 Nottingham St., Lowell, Mass.; Miss Beulah MacMillan (since sailed for Africa); Rev. D. B. Towner Memorial Tablet Fund

Bearing the above heading, a letter has been addressed by a committee of members of the Moody Church choir who sang under Dr. Towner's leadership, to their fellow members, reading as follows:

Dear Friend: You probably are aware that on October 3, 1919, our beloved friend and choir director, Dr. D. B. Towner, passed away. His death came as a great shock to us all, and we feel that his loss is irreparable to the cause of gospel music as well as to us personally. There has been a yearning desire in our hearts in some way to perpetuate the memory of Dr. Towner, and since his death we have met frequently to discuss this matter.

We are planning to erect a bronze memorial tablet bearing a suitable inscription, same to be placed on the wall, back of the platform in the lecture room of the old Moody Church (now the property of the Moody Bible Institute). The fund for this tablet is to be raised entirely by the voluntary subscriptions of those who sang in the choir during the time of Dr. Towner's leadership. When the tablet is ready we shall hold an unveiling service to which you will be invited.

This idea has been enthusiastically received by all to whom it has been presented; and we are encouraged to issue this call to all we can reach who have been members of Dr. Towner's choir, who love him and desire to show their appreciation of his life and ministry, to join with us in this expression of our devotion to this honored servant of God.

To this end we shall be pleased to receive your subscription toward this memorial tablet. If we are to obtain something worthy it will cost approximately five hundred dollars, which would be only a small measure of our love and appreciation of Dr. Towner's work. We believe it will find ready response in your heart; and hope to hear from you promptly and to the extent of your ability. Checks should be made payable to J. Fred Lynn, treasurer, 4328 Vista Terrace, Chicago, Ill., as per card enclosed.

The officers and members of the committee are Nellie N. Conklin, chairman; Jennie E. Pettersen, secretary; J. Fred Lynn, treasurer; John Anderson, August Fry, Gertrude Germann, J. H. Kuhlen, Cora E. McGlashan, John McLeod, Signe L. Pettersen.

A MUCH LOVED CHEF

An incident which occurred in May afforded opportunity for an expression of the spirit that prevails among those of the Institute family who are not generally known, but upon whose competence and faithfulness all are in great measure dependent for the daily necessities and comforts. When it became known to the employees of the culinary department that Mr. Wirth, the efficient chef who has served the Institute for the past four years, was compelled to leave the city because of the illness of his son, they expressed their regard for him by the presentation of a fine leather traveling case and seal-bound Bible. A few days after his departure, in the midst of a morning's work, when Mrs. Russell mentioned the fact that she was about to write him a letter and asked if they would like to send a message, with one accord they each wrote a personal word in pencil on such paper as was at hand.

The following quotations express the spirit of all of them:

"Dear Mr. Wirth: We heard with dismay that you cannot return to us. We feel very sorry for that. We certainly miss you. 'Glitt' says the kitchen seems like a grave-yard."

"Dear Mr. Wirth: You really don't know how much we miss your smiling face. It certainly is lonesome here now. We have no one to tell us we are 'all right.' "

"Hello Old Top: I miss you more each day. This place doesn't seem the same since you left. Old 'Glitt' is at the old post, messing around and slopping and spilling and calling out 'Soup,' and 'Val' is still enjoying the melodious music of the potato machine. But, Oh! how we miss your singing, 'Happy Day,' and your boiled over milk and your sarcastic, 'Nice day,' and a thousand other little things that went to make our hearts sore or happy. And now chef, old top, I do hope and pray from the depths of my heart that your son may recover fully, and you come out of it all even beyond human expectations. So long, dear old pal o' mine."

MEETING OF SYRACUSE ALUMNI

At the annual meeting of the Syracuse Auxiliary held at the South Presbyterian Church May 13, the following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas, we, the former students, and correspondence students, of The Moody Bible Institute are drawn together by alumni fellowship, we hereby send greetings and an expression of deep and continued interest and prayer for the Institute at this time."

Those present were: John M. MacInnis, '93; J. J. Eldridge, '17; A. A. Wylie, '07; F. A. Groesbeck, '16; Mrs. Carl B. Travis, '16; Ethel L. Christman, '16; Anna B. Palmer, '15; Nina Barrows, '16. The guests were Miss Helen Chadwick, Mrs. George B. Bell and Mr. Carl B. Travis.

The speakers of the evening were Dr. John M. MacInnis and Rev. F. A. Groesbeck. Enjoyable vocal selections were rendered by Mr. Travis and Miss Christman. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: president, A. A. Wylie; vice-president, Ethel L. Christman; secretary, Anna B. Palmer; treasurer, Elizabeth S. Dixson.

MOODY FELLOWSHIP REUNION

The annual reunion of the Moody Fellowship of Southern California was held Thursday evening, March 18, in the Fisherman's Club Room, Bible Institute of Los Angeles. The Fellowship is open to any one who had been, or is, a student, member of the Faculty, or official of the Northfield Seminary, Mount Hermon School, or The Moody Bible Institute. The husbands and wives are also welcomed to these social gatherings, when old friendships are renewed and new ones formed. Dr. R. A. Torrey is the president and Rev. J. H. Hunter, '96, (formerly of the M. B. I. Faculty) secretary-treasurer.

STUDENTS FROM CANADA

This group includes the majority of the Canadian students in the Institute the past term. They came from twenty-eight cities and towns of Canada.

Left to right, first row: Lelia Marriott, Minnie Colville, Helen Taylor, Elizabeth Bjorkgren, Alice A. Clark, Mildred Haines, May Taylor, L. Ruth Johnston, Ruth Niven.

Second row: Elizabeth A. Duff, Magdalena Brubacher, Gretta E. Adams, Dorothy Thompson, Elizabeth Unruh, Mary McLaren, Mrs. L. A. Kennedy, Hazel M. Macdonald, Jessie B. Easson.

Third row: W. G. Aitken, C. W. Agnew, W. E. Smalley, W. H. Sproule, J. R. Stephenson, W. E. Stephenson, E. T. Carter, E. W. Zoller.

Fourth row: H. C. Goodenough, R. L. Green, A. Telford, M. S. Blackburn, M. H. Davis, C. C. Bergman, L. J. Hunter, A. C. Owen, N. W. Taylor.

Fifth row: E. J. Davis, D. T. Wickstrom, J. V. Erickson, I. N. McKay, H. W. Atkinson, W. W. McLatchie, H. C. Rosborough, D. J. Unruh.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT NOTES

Dr. Henry Ostrom was one of the speakers at the World's Conference on Christian Fundamentals which met in Chicago, June 13-20, and also assisted the Institute in tent meetings on the north side of the city under the direction of the Practical Work Course.

Rev. B. B. Sutcliffe enjoyed fishing in one of the northern Wisconsin lakes preparatory to his return to active service in the field, with health renewed.

Rev. George E. Guille was most heartily welcomed by the Presbyterian church of Camilla, Ga., where he taught the Bible for a week. A former student, Rev. M. F. Daniels, is the pastor.

Dr. Wm. P. White, our regional director for the Northwest and Pacific Coast, is arranging for several Bible institutes in Oregon vacation resorts. The first will begin July 25 at Gladstone Park near Portland, to be followed by another at Ashland. Such well-known teachers as Rev. Lewis Sperry Chafer, and Rev. George E. Guille and Rev. B. B. Sutcliffe of our field staff, will be supplemented by strong leaders from the Pacific coast. For fuller information address the secretary of the Extension Department.

Mr. Homer A. Hammontree, who is associated with "Mel" Trotter in evangelistic campaigns, assisted him within recent months as soloist and song leader at Wichita, Kan.; Polo, Ill.; Marysville College, Marysville, Tenn.; and Tucson, Ariz. From the latter place he wrote recently:

"Mr. Trotter and his party, consisting of Mr. G. H. Meinardi, the American Four—a male quartet composed of former Institute students—and myself, are conducting a union meeting here which began May 16 and closes June 6. Despite the awful heat the Lord is blessing the work. It is a needy field. There are less than a thousand members in all the Protestant churches in this town of 25,000. Some of the older people told us Mr. Moody was here years ago, and he said then it was one of the hardest places he ever tried to work. They tell us we are having the largest crowds ever known in a religious meeting. Souls are being saved and the church members are being helped under the gospel messages by Mr. Trotter. After we close here we will come to Chicago for some meetings at Oak Park."

Mr. C. E. Putnam taught from his charts in connection with an evangelistic campaign conducted by the Rev. Lucius B. Compton at Asheville, N. C.

Miss Elinor Stafford Miliar filled a week's engagement in May at Waterloo, Ia., under the auspices of the Fred Daniels Rescue Mission. In June she had charge of the devotional hour at the East Ohio Christian Endeavor Union convention of the United Brethren Church which met at Justus, and at the State Y. P. S. C. E. convention which met at Columbus a little later.

Mrs. Margaret T. Russell gave a series of Bible studies at Dallas, Tex., during the latter half of May, the appointment for which was arranged by a local woman, Mrs. S. L. Barron. During June she taught at Marietta, Okla., for which she was booked by Mrs. Benson Campbell. She also had charge of the Bible hour at the Women's Interdenominational School of Missions at Winona Lake, Ind., June 24-July 1.

The Rev. Rollin T. Chafer, regional director for the Southeast, gave eleven addresses at the Bible conference held by the Edmonton Evangelical Committee of Edmonton, Alberta.

Mr. John R. Riebe preached at the Western Avenue M. E. Church in Chicago.

FAREWELL TO FIVE MISSIONARIES

A missionary farewell meeting was given Saturday evening, April 24, in Keith Hall, to a party of five Institute students who sailed May 8, from New York, for Portuguese West Africa, under the South Africa General Mission. The names of the party in order, as shown in the picture, are Metha Dickinson, '17, A. J. Lewis, '19, Jennie Jacobson, '18, Jennie Jenson, and Christine Nielsen, '19. Misses Dickinson, Jacobson and Jensen attended the Evening Classes, the last named for a short time only.

Besides those of the missionaries, addresses were made by Rev. J. J. Ross, D. D., pastor of the Second Baptist Church, A. J. Bowen, field secretary of the South Africa General Mission, and Miss Alice Ringland, a returned missionary.

THE BEREAN BAND

The membership is now rapidly increasing, due to the formation of many Branch Bands numbering from six to three hundred members each.

The following extracts from letters indicate the interest with which many are taking hold of the Band's plan of Scripture memorizing, and the organizing of Branch Bands:

"In speaking to a very intelligent physician, I happened to say that I would soon have more than 1,000 verses of God's Word in my heart, and he said he did not believe he had more than one or two. I should be glad to enter as many as I can in the Berean Band."

"I am enclosing $2.50 for Berean booklets, twenty for my Sunday-school class, and thirty for my public school pupils."

"I received the Berean literature and found all of my Sunday-school class willing to become members of the Berean Band. I also brought the Berean Band proposal before the Christian Endeavor Society. I have a Community Bible Study Class that meets every Wednesday evening, which I expect to enroll. I shall try to secure all the names I can. Please elect me for the office of Co-operator. Please give me working plans and I will deliver literature to members."

"Enclosed please find partial list of names and addresses of the members of our Berean Band. Will send in balance of names as soon as I can copy them. I am praying that God will lead me to get three hundred members."

An order has been received from one of the large churches of Asheville, N. C., for 300 booklets of Bible verses for use in the eight different circles of the missionary society of the church.

For the benefit of readers who may not have seen the announcements previously published, the sole obligation of membership in the Berean Band is to learn one verse of the Bible every week.

The annual subscription for membership is five cents, which, it should be understood, is not a payment for the list of verses supplied, but a minimum contribution to the general expenses of the movement at home and abroad.

Literature giving further information will gladly be furnished on request. Address The Berean Band, care of The Moody Bible Institute, 153 Institute Place, Chicago, Ill.

STUDENT VOLUNTEERS' BANQUET

The annual banquet of the Chicago union of student volunteers was held at the Institute on Friday evening, April 16. The volunteers from the different educational institutions of the city gathered with their friends in the lobby of the Women's Building, and after a half hour of conversation, introduction and reunion, proceeded to the dining room and sat down to "a delightful dinner" which was interspersed with song and college yells from the different bands.

President Dutton of the Union then introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. Sam Higginbotham of Allahabad, India, who spoke in happy vein of his seventeen years experience as a missionary in Northern India, and reached the hearts as well as the minds of the volunteers present.

He said he had no expectation of going out as a missionary before completing a seminary course, but he was called and went. He had no idea at all of going to India but he was called there and obeyed. He had no idea of teaching history and economics in a college in India, but he was drafted for the job and did it. He had no desire to undertake the care of the leper colony of the mission, but he obeyed and for years was superintendent of the leper colony.

The need of object teaching in agriculture to stimulate better and intensive methods of crop and soil culture led Mr. Higginbotham to advocate the establishment of an agricultural experiment station farm. Let Sam do it; and Sam did. Moral for a student volunteer: trust and obey.

SUMMER TERM STUDENTS FROM NEBRASKA

Second Row: Marion Livingston, Lois Oldemeyer, Myrtle Sundell, Mrs. A. G. Peterson.

Third Row: Roy A. Brehm, LeRoy D. Webber, A. B. Fiala, R. W. Van Anda, Alfred E. Sandin, Edw. Von Busch, Chas. Pfeiffer.

REUNION AT SEATTLE, WASH.

The presence of Dr. William Evans and Mr. William Young, who were conducting a Bible Conference at the First Presbyterian Church, made an auspicious occasion for the enjoyable reunion held on Wednesday, May 26, with Mrs. Florence Porter as hostess.

Dinner was served at noon in the private dining room of the Seattle Y. W. C. A., after which the guests repaired to the roof garden for a social time, and the picture shown herewith was taken. An hour of fellowship followed during which each gave a brief story of his or her work since leaving the Institute, closing with prayer for the Bible schools everywhere, especially for The Moody Bible Institute, where they felt they had received the richest blessing of their lives.

VISITORS FROM FORT SHERIDAN

Miss Laura Radford, for years in foreign mission work, has been in religious work the past two years among the Red Cross nurses and wounded soldiers at Ft. Sheridan, as a sort of assistant to the chaplains.

Miss Radford's first concern is the spiritual side of life. She, therefore, asked one of the Bible teachers at the Institute to give a course of Bible study at the hospital, which was greatly enjoyed by the goodly number who attended. She distributed large quantities of religious literature, much of which was furnished by the Colportage Association.

The Institute invited her to bring delegations of the Red Cross nurses and wounded soldiers to be our guests for the day, and on Tuesday, April 13, the third of such delegations was entertained. In this third company were twenty-five nurses and seventeen soldiers.

A students' fellowship meeting was held at 4 p. m. at which special music was furnished by the men's and women's quartets, and the soloist and pianist of Charles M. Alexander, who were also guests of the Institute at that time. As a result of the evangelistic appeal at least one soldier confessed Christ for the first time.

The entire company attended the "Chapter Summary," "Ethics" and "Bible Synthesis" periods of the Evening Classes, and returned at 10 p. m. The members of the Moody Post American Legion acted as reception committee, and on Friday evening, April 23, the Moody Post members returned the visit with a religious meeting for the men at Ft. Sheridan.

PERSONALIA

A. Reilley Copeland, '14, is pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, Denton, Tex.

Harry Beckman, '17, conducted the singing for evangelistic services held recently in Iowa, Nebraska, North Dakota, Tennessee and South Carolina.

Arthur E. Richards, '09, is pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Idaho Falls, Ida. They recently dedicated a new $90,000 church building, one of the finest in the Northwest. Pledges made on dedication day covered the entire indebtedness.

A letter to Mr. Gaylord from Loya Sutherland, '05, tells of his mother's death, and of the necessity of giving up his work this summer because of ill health. He asks for the prayers of Institute friends. Address, Shelby, Mich.

Frank R. Dudley, '15, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Tupelo, Miss., reports 85 members added during the past year, and that all the other organizations of the church have doubled in membership. Over $8,000 was expended in improvements on the church and manse, and $8,000 was pledged for local and benevolent causes.

John, '19, and Mrs. Huizer, '17, are at Wanaque, N. J., where Mr. Huizer has held a pastorate since February 1. There has been a marked increase in attendance at all the services, the Sunday-school recently reaching the largest number in its history of forty-seven years.

Joseph C. Hart, '17, has recently returned from a visit to England, which he tried to make profitable for the work of Christ in general and the Institute in particular. Eleven different persons have become interested, several having enrolled in our Correspondence Department. Two or three others expect to come over to enter the Day Classes. Mr. Hart's present address is 145 Fourth Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

D. E. Johnson, '18, called on his return from the Southern Baptist Convention held at Washington, D. C., in May. He is now a student in William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo., and pastor of two Baptist churches.

L. Jack Clark, '17, recently issued the second number of the Newsboys' World, a publication that will be devoted to the interests of the Newsboys' Club, Houston, Tex., of which he is superintendent. The work is growing and commanding the favorable attention of the community.

Harriett E. Moore, '19, expects to sail shortly for Fatehpur, India, under the Women's Union Missionary Society of America. Address, care of Bible House, New York City.

J. C. F. Dillin, '13, was ordained by Kendall Presbytery, April 22, and has charge of the church at Bancroft, Ida.

J. Clarence Greene, '12, conducted evangelistic services at the Church of the Redeemer, Detroit, Mich., in March.

John Bradford, '16, serving under the Presbyterian Board in East Africa, was a recent caller at the Institute. His home address while on furlough is 837 Main street, Galesburg, Ill.

James Hall, '11, graduate of McMaster, '19, is now in his fourth year as pastor of the Mt. Dennis Baptist church, Ontario, and is very happy in his work. Mt. Dennis is a suburb of Toronto.

H. C. Ramsey, '96, has been decorated with the Order of Kiaho by the president of China in acknowledgment of his relief work for the flood sufferers in 1917, when several thousands were saved from starvation.

C. R. Scafe, '00, has completed his first year of service as pastor of the First Church of Tyrone, Pa., during which eighty-nine members were received and progress made in all departments of the work.

Professor Guy C. Latchaw appeared on the program of a concert given by the Chicago Madrigal Club at the Union League Club March 18, in three solo numbers, and with a quartet, of which Mrs. Latchaw was the soprano. Mr. Latchaw had the honor also of conducting several of the rehearsals of the Madrigal Club.

Clara Bjoland, '15, writes from Khanpur Gate, Ahmedabad, B. P. India: "I am at present itinerating in a district where very few have ever heard the gospel—three hundred villages without Christ. I covet the prayers of the Institute family and Magazine readers that we may see a real work of God in this needy field. I enjoy the Magazine very much."

Rev. Frederick Cromer has just closed a three-year pastorate of the Presbyterian Church of Chester, W. Va., and will reside at Bakersfield, Calif. He leaves a united church, which, in the New Era Movement, increased its missionary offerings beyond the percentage of increase for local church support. Mr. Cromer has been an especially fine student in the Correspondence Department for some time.

Rev. William Robbins, a special student for nearly two years, left the Institute in May to take up work as pastor of the Baptist church at Manlius, Ill.

John S. Hall, '06, who has been for three and a half years in Nigeria, West Africa, is expected home on furlough this June. His work has been among a tribe hitherto unreached by the gospel, and he has been successful in reducing their language to writing and translating the four Gospels for their use. The Canadian Baptist recently contained an interesting article from his pen on "How Souls Are Won."

John Callahan, '97, was the speaker at an unusual service held in one of the Methodist churches in Minneapolis recently. The occasion marked the twenty-ninth year since his conversion. He occupied the pulpit that night as the guest of the church and of the chief of police, who was himself a member of the church, and who twenty-nine years ago had ordered Mr. Callahan out of the city as a criminal with a record of crime that held almost every offense against the laws of God and man. He was converted and at once began to lead others to Christ. Mr. Callahan is superintendent of the Hadley Rescue Mission, New York City, and for the past six years has also been chaplain of the Tombs prison.

The Gospel in Print

William Norton

BY VOICE AND BOOK

Rev. A. C. Dixon, D. D.

D. L. Moody was a man of biblical vision. He saw that God's method of spreading the gospel was two-fold: (1) by the living voice, and preachers were called by the Spirit into this service; (2) by the written and printed word, and the Spirit moved men to write. Moody was a great preacher who gave his time and strength to proclaiming the gospel. And he became a great writer, because he had a great message, which, even after it was put into cold type, burned and glowed with his passion for Christ and souls.

Mr. Moody sought to use other preachers and writers. Many of the living voices, that spoke with him in testimony to the truth, are now silent, but the writers "being dead, yet speak" through the printed page in the publications issued by the Bible Institute Colportage Association. And of all the great institutions he established, none is more important than this.

SUGGESTIONS TO TRACT USERS

1. Never give out a tract until you have read it yourself. If you can read it over more than once so much the better. This is desirable because then you will know whether or not the tract is scriptural; and you will also know to what class of persons it is most likely to be profitable.
2. Separate your tracts into kinds, making at least two classes: (a) for unsaved; (b) for believers. This is important because until the heart is right with God, any tract that has for its object the development of the Christian life will be useless.
3. Last, but most important: pray before, during, and after the time you give out tracts. God has promised His Word shall not return unto Him void; but it may accomplish much more than "Not returning void" if accompanied with prayer. Never give out a tract, about which you have a doubt as to its being scriptural.

A tract can be given without a word, but with a prayer; and yet a few words such as, "Have something to read," "Please accept a tract," may often be helpful. Never intrude your tracts upon anyone. Often their mission may be thwarted by the manner of the giver.—Royal Dainties.

Out of Employment?

¶Many earnest men and women temporarily out of employment have engaged in "book missionary" work, have done well and enjoyed their experience.

¶An important advantage of this work is, that it may be taken up for a brief period and dropped again without inconvenience or loss of stock or capital.

¶Such a work, pursued on any field, would prove a most valuable auxiliary to the work of the churches in the neighborhood—especially in reaching the "unreachable" with the Gospel in print.

¶The attention of persons unable to devote their entire time to any employment is desired for "book missionary" work, which may be undertaken under most flexible conditions.

¶Can and will you send us the names and addresses of one or more eligible persons to whom we might write, inviting their co-operation? Your name will not be mentioned, unless you desire it. We thank you.

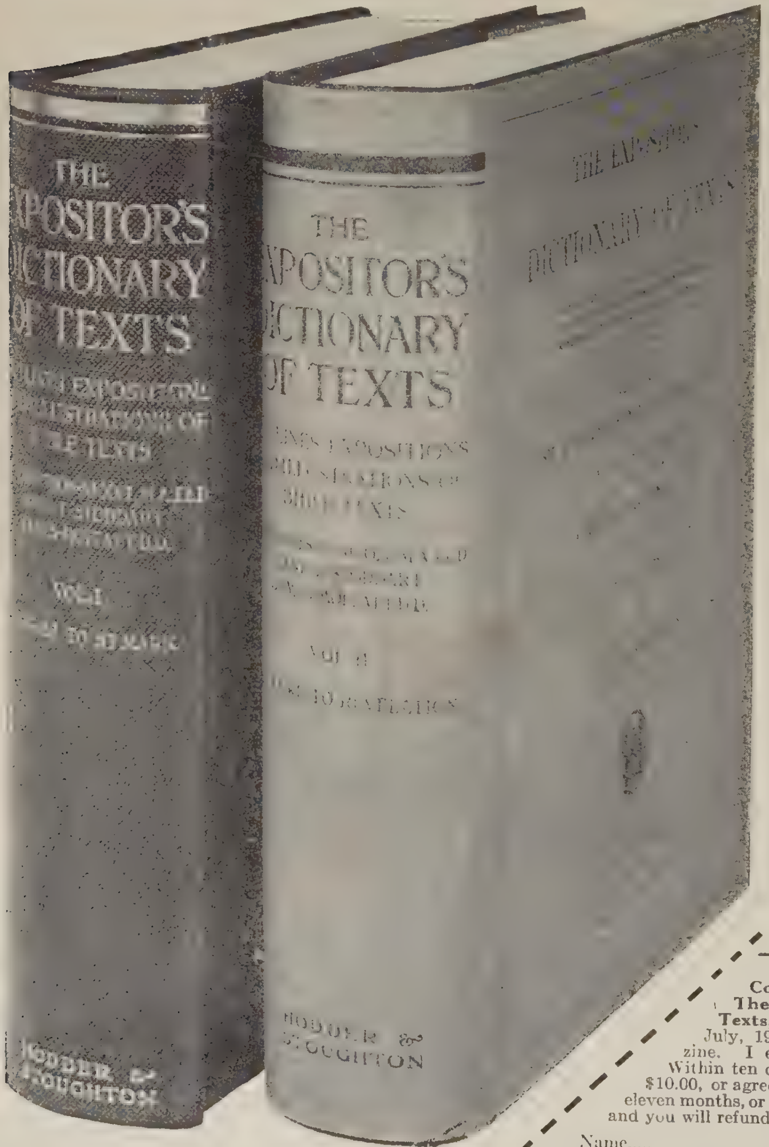
THE EXPOSITOR'S DICTIONARY OF TEXTS

REGULAR PRICE,	$15.00	(Really Worth $30.00)
OUR PRICE	$12.00	(Delivery Prepaid on approval)

Edited by SIR W. ROBERTSON NICOLL, LL.D., and Endorsed by the World's Great Preachers

THIS STUPENDOUS WORK in two massive volumes, like two big dictionaries with nearly 2,200 pages, provides expositions on hundreds of texts, each a compact sermon in itself. It is equal to about thirty ordinary homiletic volumes.

ITS PURPOSE is to gather up on every important text in both Old and New Testaments, the best of expositions that have been written by the leading international authorities of the past fifty years, and to condense them into a compass compatible with its literary evidence.



THE EXPOSITOR'S DICTIONARY OF TEXTS
VOL. I
HODDER & STOUGHTON
THE EXPOSITOR'S DICTIONARY OF TEXTS
VOL. II
HODDER & STOUGHTON

THOUSANDS OF CONTRIBUTORS In compiling the material for this marvelously useful reference work—encyclopedic in its completeness, not ONE mind, but hundreds of authorities have been consulted and are quoted. Every shade of meaning in every text is suggested. The clergyman does not live who, with this splendid work, will not teach and preach with increased confidence, more intimate knowledge and telling effect.

Comments of Leading Authorities

"By its wealth of apt and unhackneyed illustrations it starts the mind on lines of thought reaching far beyond the text under review."—Rev. David Smith, D. D.

"In suggestiveness, originality, and practical usefulness, I should think the Dictionary stands alone."—Rev. G. H. Morrison, M. A.

"The preacher's originality and freshness are in no danger of being obscured, he simply finds the spark necessary to kindle the tinder of the sympathetic mind."—Rev. W. L. Watkinson, D. D.

"I have been much impressed with the amount of material brought together, and still more with the range of literature which must have been examined. The concise bibliographies will be found most helpful in directing preachers to sources of illumination and inspiration."—Rev. A. S. Peake, D. D.

Some Gracious Tokens of God's Favor

It is a "red letter day" in the experience of any Christian when he or she has come to believe, and act on their belief, that not loss but exceeding gain is the outcome of yielding all to the Lord,—that "pressed down, shaken together and running over" is the measure of His reward. It has been well said that God will have no one in His debt and that you cannot beat God giving.

These thoughts are suggested by the sacrificial giving revealed in the following letter, received some weeks ago from a devoted servant of God in an eastern city:

"The Moody Bible Institute,
"153 Institute Place, Chicago.

"Gentlemen: Enclosed you will find Liberty Bond for $500.

"Last November I was impressed to send this to you but for fear it was not of the Lord I continued to ask Him. I am convinced I am to send it, though why, I do not know, it being more than half of what I possess.

"In 1897 I graduated as nurse, then I entered ——— Hospital, Philadelphia. While there, with some others, I had my life insured. The twenty years expired a short time before I took out this bond. I tell you this that you may understand how I came by the same. I cannot tell you how to use it, but our Master knows. God bless the work.

"Since writing these lines about two hours ago I feel a great burden has been lifted.

"About April 1st, I promised the Lord I would send you the Bond, everything seemed to hinder—then I began to feel I was under a heavy burden but knew not the cause. Now, praise the Lord, it is lifted.

"I do not want any thanks or praise that belongs to God.

"I would like to know if you have been in need of funds. Yours in the Faith."

A spirit-taught writer has said:

"Mere living becomes real life when it becomes sacrificial. We begin to operate with vital forces when we cross the border into the land of sacrifice. The things that we can ill spare carry part of ourselves, and are alive. It is when our giving, whether of money, or strength, or time, touches the quick that it becomes vital and we share the travail of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. I believe that all our offerings—of strength, or time, or money—have their virtue conditioned by the sacrifice which gave them birth."

Another letter received about the same time as the one quoted above reads as follows:

"The Moody Bible Institute,
"Chicago, Ill.

"Gentlemen: The Moody Institute is one of God's lighthouses sending forth the true gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. 'The Light of the world is Jesus.' Moody Institute stands upon the Word, she is grounded upon the fundamentals, she has strength and wisdom of God, and has the energy and direction of the Spirit.

"Enclosed find check. Use it in preparing for the harvest."

For such tokens of God's favor touching His work committed to The Moody Bible Institute we are indeed thankful. The work and its needs are very great, and our sufficiency is only of God, who hears and answers those who put their trust in Him.

The Greatest Trek in History

The most virile people on earth have been wandering over its surface for two thousand years, homeless and landless. Now they are returning to their own home and land, Palestine. Watch that big migration! The Jews are trekking from every land of earth, from Poland, from the Ukraine and Roumania. They are organizing in hundreds of towns and villages in Russia, buying tickets on the instalment plan. Hungary and the new Slav states are ready to cast them out, as the fish did Jonah. German Jews and Dutch Jews and Balkan Jews are selling their property to go when the Peace Council gives the word. In America and Canada they are forming clubs and studying Hebrew and organizing companies so they can take control of affairs in the new Eldorado. Jews in Argentina, in Australasia, in the Fiji Islands, in the Philippines, in South Africa and Alaska are turning their eyes to the long-lost land in the center of the countries of earth.

What This Return Will Mean

The Jews will astonish the world by their physical regeneration of Palestine. They are raising tens of millions for work there. They will transform the East. They will prove the mediators between East and West. The gold center of the world will be where the Jew is. As the hub of the Near East their land will be the bone of contention in the coming greatest wars of history.

How Watch These Wonderful Changes

"Is it nothing to you?" To keep up with this procession of Jewry you need "Prayer and Work for Israel." It describes these mighty developments better and more fully than any other Christian periodical. You get monthly the very cream of the splendid story. And with it you get the tale of what God is doing to gospelize these millions of Jews.

What Others Say About Our Magazine

Don't take our word for it. Read what others think of it. An Ohio subscriber writes: "I never lose interest in your valuable magazine." A reader in Pennsylvania says: "The January number received, read and devoured; fine, interesting, profitable; not a dull bit in it." A Florida correspondent, formerly editor of an important church missionary magazine, says: "The magazine continues to be most interesting, instructive, pleasing, kindly and discreet of spirit. It does you all credit."

Try it yourself. Sample copies free. But better still, fill out coupon below and have it in your home.

Will bring to millions
Bubble Grains in Milk

Don't put aside your Puffed Grains when breakfast ends in summer. Children want them all day long, and there's nothing better for them.

The supreme dish for luncheon or for supper is Puffed Wheat in milk. The airy grains—puffed to eight times normal size—taste like food confections. Yet every morsel is whole wheat with every food cell blasted.

The finest foods ever created

Puffed Wheat, Puffed Rice and Corn Puffs are the finest grain foods in existence.

Never were cereals so enticing. The grains are fairylike in texture, the flavor is like nuts. They seem like tidbits, made only to entice.

Yet they are major foods, with every food cell steam-exploded, so digestion is easy and complete.

They will take the place of pastries, sweets, etc., if you serve them all day long. And at mealtime they will make whole-grain foods tempting.

Puffed Wheat

Puffed Rice

Corn Puffs

The Three Bubble Grains

Puffed Grains are made by Prof. Anderson's process. A hundred million steam explosions occur in every kernel. They are the best-cooked grain foods in existence. Serve all three kinds, at all hours, in all the ways folks like them.

"THE BOOK THAT HAS HELPED MOST IN BUSINESS"

In an article published in a leading magazine under the title above it is related that a sales manager in a very successful business house asked the proprietor to suggest a course of reading that would make him a bigger business man.

REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D. D.
Author of the Synthetic Course

"What's the best book on business ever written?" he inquired.

"The Bible," was the prompt reply.

Here are a few extracts from the business man's discourse which followed:

"All of us who are successful at selling ought to have a degree conferred on us, H. N. D., Doctor of Human Nature. If we win it's because we know men, if we lose our sale, it's because we have lost the key to our prospect's disposition and make-up. The Bible is the greatest encyclopedia of human nature in the world."

"Any man who wants to know how a crowd will act can learn all about it by studying the one that Moses led around in the wilderness. Tremendously grateful to him for getting them out of slavery—grateful, yes, for about five minutes. No sooner were their feet a little wet in the wilderness, and their backs bitten a little by the mosquitoes, than they began to criticize Moses and wish they hadn't come. People haven't changed one single bit since those days. Moses found he couldn't keep them 'sold' for twenty-four hours at a time; all the sales work (persuasion) had to be done over and over again, constantly. We've discovered the same thing; that's why our advertising runs all the year round, in season and out."

"I read all this sales convention stuff that you send to my desk; I like to see what you sales managers and advertising managers are thinking and writing about. And do you know there's hardly a big idea in the whole mass of your stuff that isn't written somewhere in the Bible."

"It's the greatest course in direct forceful English in the world. As a drill in simple, direct, powerful Anglo-Saxon, the kind of language that we use in advertising and in modern business, there has never been, and never will be, a book to equal this."

"No business or business man gets very far in this world without a big, long-distance vision of where they are going, and why. The Bible is the supreme developer of vision."

These quotations are given as merely an interesting aspect of the study of the Bible which is not often emphasized. And in urging our readers to enroll at once for one of THE MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE'S Correspondence Courses, we will add the following:

Says the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, United States Senator: "That the Bible should be studied by all men and women must be the desire of everyone who reflects at all upon the condition of the world at the present time."

It cannot be emphasized too strongly that nothing is more needed in our country today than Bible study and that there is rich reward to the individual student who earnestly undertakes it. We suggest that you consider and decide promptly on the course you prefer to take, and then fill out and mail the coupon below.

No matter what your occupation, you can study the Bible by correspondence. One student who has taken several courses is doing all his studying on the street car, going back and forth from his place of employment.

Testimonials of warmest appreciation are constantly being received from our students. For example:

"I am enclosing the last lesson of my course. As I finish it I find no words to express my thanks for the help it has given me. Neither is it possible for me to tell how greatly it has enlarged my knowledge of the Word. The Bible means infinitely more to me because of this series of lessons."

"I wish to express my appreciation of what this Bible course has done for me. It has been invaluable to me in my Sunday-school and teacher-training work, and has opened to me a vision of the significance of the Holy Scriptures that is of inexpressible joy and satisfaction. No Christian should miss the opportunity of widening his knowledge and deepening his experience which is placed at his disposal in this work."

We offer eight courses, as follows: Synthetic Course, Scofield Course, Bible Doctrine Course, Bible Chapter Summary, Introductory Bible Course, Practical Christian Work, Evangelism, and Christian Evidences.

Don't Allow Anything

to cheat you of your wonderful privilege of systematically studying the one Book which outweighs in value all other books in all the world. Dig in it as for gold and you will secure treasure of value and extent beyond any calculation.

In these trying times men and women who really know God's Word are needed beyond the power of language to express. Trained Bible students are in great demand.—Whether in the home, church, school or the business world, this training is of inestimable value.

DON'T DELAY.

You will be a personal pupil—time, place and amount of study under your own control. The prices are at cost—the courses are not sold for profit. There is no better time to start than NOW. Send the coupon at once for Free Prospectus describing our eight Courses in detail.

Through the Bible Book by Book

"Each Biblical Book is carefully analyzed down to the minutiae, but apart from the analyses the treatment is popular Perhaps its greatest value is just here to the ordinary student. It abounds in suggestive applications to present day conditions; even in the study of the legislative laws of Moses we find 'the practical lessons for us.' The diagrams and condensed analyses will be helpful to the teacher."—Record of Christian Work.

WHAT IS THE MUSICAL OBSERVER?
It is a monthly music magazine published in the interests of the student and teacher and the music lover in general.

Thousands of students and teachers read the Musical Observer every month and rely on it to help them in their work and to keep them informed of what is going on in the music world. Try it, you will find it is just what you have been looking for.

WHAT IS IT LIKE?
It is in a class by itself. Not only does it go into detail for the various branches of musical art, but it also keeps you abreast of all the musical happenings in the concert and operatic field in all the large cities.

WHAT WILL IT BRING ME?
It will bring you 100 pages of reading matter—articles by such writers as Leo Ornstein, Leopold Godowsky, Fritz Kreisler, Eugene Gruenburg, Leopold Auer, Eleanor Sherwood, including 20 pages of music—carefully selected copyrighted numbers for piano, organ, voice and violin.

WHAT DOES IT COST?
It costs $2.00 a year. Less than 17c a month. Just stick a two dollar bill in an envelope, write your name and address carefully and mail it to us. Uncle Sam will deliver it safely to us—HIS BOYS ARE HONEST.

Shall This Boy Become an Anarchist?

NO?

Then will you make it possible for us to send the gospel to him through a soul-winning boys' worker, cost $25.00 per week?

Entire gangs have been reached for Christ.

Over 800,000 boys and girls in N. Y. City—most of them children of aliens—are without religious instruction; some are becoming thieves, gunmen and anarchists; many are practicing free love. They need the Gospel.

Win the boys of New York for Christ. They may become soul-winners all over America, for they do not remain in New York long.

If they are won for Christ before their parents move to your town they will become good citizens instead of a menace.

Editorial Notes

"Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?" (Heb. 1:14.)

Cut from the Loaf

Senator Harding returned to Washington after his nomination for the presidency by the Chicago convention; and when his auto left the station it was accompanied by four secret service men on motor cycles, two riding behind his machine and one on either side.

It was the first time in his experience that such a guard had accompanied him, and it was because he had suddenly assumed new importance in the eyes of the Government, and had become a special mark for the enemies of law and order.

Something like this takes place in the case of every child of God when by faith in Christ he becomes an heir of salvation. Angels are given charge over him, and especially does the angel of the Lord encamp round about him to deliver him (Ps. 34:7).

Senator Harding himself had not asked for this guard, and probably he had no idea that it would be thought necessary to be provided for, but there was a power above him that knew what he did not know, and which planned on his behalf accordingly.

God does for us "exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think" (Eph. 3:20), and when at last we "receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away" (1 Pet. 5:4), it will be because, the Lord being merciful unto us, He will have sent His angel who laid hold upon us, and led us out of danger into the path of peace.

Sometimes the finest rebuke of the worldly church comes from the world itself whose methods it seeks to copy.

Religious "Drives"

Apropos of current "drives" the Chicago Daily News reminds its readers that "the great religious 'drive' which was conducted through Galilee, Samaria and Judea 2,000 years ago and which ended on the cross and in the preaching of the kingdom of God to the whole ancient world was financed most inadequately.

"Its first rule for the filling of its treasury began with the words: 'Take nothing for your journey, neither staff, nor scrip, nor bread, nor money; neither have two coats.' By such travels it arrived at the cathedrals which medieval Europe raised for it in great splendor and at great cost.

"From those cathedrals nevertheless it has been necessary for Christianity to go out from time to time for refreshment back to poverty.

"Peter Cartwright of Virginia, and of Tennessee, and of Kentucky, and of Illinois, wandered from crossroads to crossroads through this harsh western country with the equipment of a circuit rider. His principal advertisement of the aims of his 'drive' was a pamphlet entitled 'A Controversy with the Devil.' For that controversy a light equipment sufficed. We enter into the fruits of his labors."

The Interchurch Movement

There was merit in the Interchurch Movement no doubt. Many eminent men and women supported it, and also a large number of earnest Christians who thought they were doing the will of God and truly advancing the cause of Christ and the welfare of humanity. The secular as well as the religious press was generous, and even public officials gave it their cordial endorsement. It had plenty of money to spend, and a great organization so far as such things go—an army of paid secretaries, as Dr. George A. Gordon described it.

But the time was not ripe for it. The predicted apostasy of the last days was not yet sufficiently advanced to sustain it. It will have a resurrection in a different form and will succeed, but just now the protest of the faithful remnant could not be resisted, and their martyrdom is postponed to a later period.

Notwithstanding all that was professed to the contrary, there was a strong suspicion that the "Movement" ultimately meant organic church union. Our friend of earlier years, Rev. Cornelius Woelfkin, said as much in the Northern Baptist Convention, at Buffalo, if he is correctly reported. Arguing for the "Movement," he exclaimed, "If it does not offer the channel for a united Protestantism, we must find a way that does." Dr. Woelfkin is the pastor, we believe, of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., but the combination of eloquence and wealth fails for this once.

When Dr. Woelfkin used to fellowship with W. J. Erdman, W. G. Moorehead, A. T. Pierson, Howard Osgood, A. J. Gordon and J. Wilbur Chapman, he was not solicitous about a united Protestantism. It was the unity of the Holy Spirit he then emphasized, as he impressively urged his fellow-believers to endeavor to keep it "in the bond of peace." He then seemed to believe, as some of us still believe, that a Protestantism any more united than at present would not promote the truth but hinder it. It would mean compromise, and compromise in the end means the Antichrist, and all the error and all the terror, that his name implies.

Sometimes we wonder if the faithful followers of Christ realize how far along we are in the development of the apostasy.

What Is a Call to the Ministry?

The thought came to us with new force recently on reading an article in the Congregationalist and Advance on "The Call of the Modern Ministry," by a Boston pastor who is also a professor in Andover Seminary.

It was his opinion that two fundamentals every modern minister ought to have were an interest in religion (!) and an unselfish desire to put something into the world. These constitute a clear "call," and every man who possesses them "has a moral obligation to consider seriously whether he ought not to enter the work."

The Congregational church, according to him, "no longer sets up a straight gate of orthodoxy through which young men must pass into its ministry," it only insists on sincerity!

The duty of the modern minister is to "interpret the various social groups to one another," to be a "social solvent" in his age and place; though it may well be that if he is "fired with social passion" he will feel called upon to ally himself with "organized labor holding more or less revolutionary programs."

As to the compensations for the ministry, the highest known to this pastor and theological professor are his "friendships," his "mornings in the study," and the opportunity of "touching human life and ministering to human need."

In the article of about 2,500 words, there was no mention of conversion, regeneration, personal piety, desire for the salvation of souls, the Bible, God, the Holy Spirit, our Lord Jesus Christ, or heaven or hell. The only exception was that the Congregational church expects a man to be "sincere in his desire to interpret and apply the deepest meanings of the life of Jesus."

Will some one tell us how such a man could possibly do that?

If this professor truly interprets the church to which he belongs, no surprise can be felt that it tolerates such a professor. And if such professors are training its young men for the ministry there is not much likelihood of a change.

But what a difference there is between this idea of a call to the Christian ministry and that of Paul in his address to the Ephesian elders (Acts 20:17-35)!

Democracy Fails

Ex-Justice Charles E. Hughes in his address to the Harvard Law School, complains that our practice of self-government does not keep pace with our conquests of science, our development of technical skill, our increased facilities of communication, and our enlarged resources of comfortable living. The results are disappointing in his eyes, and especially so when the chief remedy suggested is usually a new demand "for more democracy to cure our ills."

"Going from bad to worse you see," exclaims the Albany Knickerbocker Press. "Is it because the average man or woman is not concerned with political affairs?"

O, no, dear friend, it is because the average man or woman is what he, or she, is. You can not improve the government till you improve the electorate, and the improvement of the electorate is not advanced by science, or skill, or travel or comfortable living. Only the gospel can accomplish that. Not more democracy, but more Christianity, the real thing, is what we need to cure our ills.

Emma Goldman's opinion of the Marxian philosophy as exhibited in the present Russian Government, should receive the widest circulation and the most serious consideration.

Socialism in Russia

She describes it as "rotten" and "a breeder of tyranny." "I have been here four months now, and I've seen what it has accomplished," she said to a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune. "There is no health in it. . . . The state of socialism or state of capitalism—call it what you will—has done for Russia what it will do for every country. It has taken away even the little freedom the man has under individual capitalism, and has made him entirely subject to the whims of a bureaucracy which excuses its tyranny on the ground it all is done for the welfare of the workers."

"Where did you find the greater degree of freedom, Miss Goldman," asked Mr. Clayton, "in the United States or in communist Russia?"

"Any form of government is bad enough," she replied, "but between this and individual capitalism, the choice lies with the latter. At least the individual has a chance to express his individuality."

Governor Allen, of Kansas

We hope that Governor Allen, of Kansas, may be to the rank and file of the Labor Unions, whom we highly regard, and to the general public of this country, what Abraham Lincoln was to the oppressed of the South and the perpetuation of the union of the states.

Lincoln said that this nation could not continue half slave and half free. In all our experience we have never talked with a member of a Labor Union who did not speak like a man shorn of his freedom.

And certainly the general public is not free. Say what one pleases about the I. W. W.'s, and the anarchists and the Bolsheviki, that which the people of this country really fear is a certain leadership of the Labor Unions.

Referring to the Union men themselves, when we have asked them why they retained their necks in the yoke, of which they had spoken, they have commonly replied that they could not safely or comfortably get released. Persecution of one kind or other was sure to follow them, they said, so that they found it better to suffer the ills they had than fly to others that they knew not of.

Time enough has elapsed since the debate in New York between Governor Allen and Mr. Gompers to gauge public feeling, and there has been no change in the opinion that the latter admitted defeat when he evaded the basic question as to the rights of the public when a dispute arises between capital and labor affecting the necessaries of life.

Profiteers deserve no sympathy but only reprobation such as Mr. Bryan proposed in the Democratic platform, but capital honestly administered is as vital as labor to the public weal. On the other hand, working-people of all classes should be treated as human beings and generously compensated for their toil. Labor unions for what they have accomplished in this respect deserve all praise, but when like Jeshurun they wax fat and kick, when they essay to stop production and distribution, they so seriously threaten the public peace and the public health that the duty of self-preservation on the part of the community becomes paramount.

To prevent certain kinds of strikes by law is no slavery to a class, while it is the preservation of liberty to all; and hence we hail Governor Allen, of Kansas, as on an earlier occasion we hailed Governor Coolidge of Massachusetts, as a man needed for these times.

* * *

In our February issue we gave some advice to the Republican party to adopt a platform of law and order and place upon it Governor Coolidge of Massachusetts.

Law and Order— Coolidge

The Governor's campaign managers must have caught on to the idea, for they prepared a little black book reciting his virtues, stamped on its cover in letters of gold, "Law and Order—Coolidge," and gave a copy to every delegate to the National Convention.

Behold the result! Collidge nominated! Of course, if elected, he will give us an office. We think we would like to be Postmaster General.

Similar advice on the same occasion was given to the Democratic party. We urged another Law and Order man on them, Dr. Garfield, of Williams College, but they were deaf to our entreaties, and now we can only wait and see what will happen to them.

Nevertheless we may be thankful that both parties have nominated as good men as they have and now it is the duty of the electorate to go to school to those who are able to teach us the issues of the campaign, that when the ballot box is faced in November, we may exercise our right of franchise intelligently and in the fear of God.

San Francisco Convention

We were pleased that President Wilson's name received such a generous ovation, even though part of it may have been made up as his political opponents affirm. He deserved such recognition at the hands of his party for he has suffered for it both physically and mentally. This can be said without partisanship and on the ground of common humanity, to say nothing of Christian love.

We were pleased too, that he did not suffer the defeat predicted as to the League of Nations, even though a few of his "T's" were crossed and his "I's" dotted. We have not been able to agree with him on the League, which to us has spelled war and not peace, but his sincerity and purity of motive we have never questioned, and his courage and persistency we have admired even when they vexed our soul.

We thank God for his returning health, and pray that his remaining days in the White House may be the best for himself as well as the nation.

The Nortons in Belgium

Our friends, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Norton representing the Belgian Gospel Mission, in Brussels, have gotten into the trouble that always follows a faithful testimony to the gospel in these apostate days.

The information reached us too late to mention it in our last issue, but we now do so that our readers may join in prayer for their divine sustenance, and that they may be "patient, in meekness correcting them that oppose themselves" (2 Tim. 2:25).

The contention raised against them is by the so-called Christian pastors of the community who deny the inspiration of the Scriptures, the sacrificial atonement of Christ and related truths, so fundamental to the gospel. We are confident, however, that after these dear friends, and their associates, have suffered a while, God shall Himself perfect, stablish, strengthen them. (1 Pet. 55:10.)

No Date Set

In published reports of the World Conference on Christian Fundamentals, the Executive Secretary, Rev. Dr. Robert M. Russell, of Mercer, Pa., was quoted as saying: "Everything looks as though between 1920 and 1934 there will be some remarkable manifestation in the Christian world. We predict the coming of Christ in that time." No such utterance was made either by the Secretary or any speaker of the conference.

The conference was composed of sane, clear thinking Bible teachers and ministers, who though clear in their testimony that the only hope for this confused, sin-blinded world, staggering in the midst of human speculation is the return of Jesus Christ, gave no testimony as to definite time for this great miracle of the future.

We have been encouraged by the letters received commending our recent editorials on this subject, but feel it undesirable to continue them further.

Spiritism

The Revell Publishing Company is bringing them out in book form however, together with several additional chapters in which the theme is dealt with historically and biblically under the following topics: "Abominations of the Canaanites," "Spiritism in Israel," "Early Christianity and the Black Art," "Teaching of the Pauline Epistles," "Teaching of the General Epistles," "Teaching of the Apocalypse, or Spiritism at the End of the Age."

Careful thought has been given to the work, and we ask the prayers of our readers that when the book comes out it may receive a wide and serious reading for the instruction and warning it may carry to tempted souls.

Wheaton College

Wheaton College, at Wheaton, Ill., deserves, as do few other professedly Christian colleges, the earnest prayers and loyal support of every true follower of Jesus Christ, since it combines scholastic standards and physical training with absolute loyalty to the Bible as the inspired Word of God. In this college all fanciful theories and speculations which undermine faith, and all unscriptural associations which undermine character, are excluded. The president is our friend of many years, the Rev. Charles A. Blanchard, D. D., from whom further information may be obtained on application.

Light and Shadows

By D. S. McAlpine

There is light and there are shadows,
Over all the world today.
Shadows deeper, light that's sweeter
To the eyes of those who see
That the present and the future
Have been pictured by the past,
And the human heart remaineth
All unchanged from first to last.

Why do shadows deepen darker
When we thought that war was spent?
Men their brothers in new conflicts
Strike and spoil with foul intent,
Just as if an evil genius,
(And we know that this is true)
Worked within the hearts of humans
To o'erthrow the good and true.

Yet a glorious light is breaking
To those souls by Christ set free,
Who are trusting for redemption,
Not in force on land or sea,
Nor above in airy navies,
But upon a coming Lord
To redeem a cursed creation
In accordance with His Word.

The Second Christian Fundamentals Conference

By Rev. J. H. Ralston, D. D.

THE first of these conferences on Christian fundamentals was held in Philadelphia last year. The interest developed made a second conference of the same kind this year imperative. The organization formed last year provided that this conference should be held in Chicago, June 13-20. The building selected was the Moody Tabernacle, because of its location, capacity and accessibility. Although the attendance was not up to the expectation of some, it was excellent all the way through, the evening audiences practically taxing the capacity (5,000) of the building; and on one or two occasions, the building would not hold those who wished to attend.

The number of speakers was very large, as it was found that most of the great leaders of the movement towards the re-instatement of Christian fundamentals could be secured as speakers, and with few exceptions they responded in person.

The Auspicious Opening

There was no attempt to have the subjects follow each other consecutively, as the program was subject to the convenience of the speakers attending, most of them not being able to remain for more than a day or two, some for only a session. The sermon of the opening session quite naturally struck the keynote with the subject, "The Crises of the Hour—The Challenge of Orthodoxy," the preacher being Rev. W. B. Riley, D. D., of Minneapolis. At four o'clock on the same day the old Methodist "war horse" for evangelical truth, Rev. L. W. Munhall, D. D., of Germantown, Pa., gave an address on "How to Study and Use the Bible," these two addresses indicating the spirit of the conference.

"How shall we escape if we neglect?"

Rev. W. B. Hinson, D. D., of Portland, Ore., gave one of the great addresses of the conference on the evening of the first day. He was heard with peculiar interest on the part of many, for he was somewhat a stranger to them and spoke with peculiar power.

The Challenge Accepted

There was a disposition to accept the gauntlet thrown down by the so-called Christian scholarship of the day. "The Scientific Accuracy of the Holy Scriptures," by Rev. W. B. Riley, D. D.; "Scholarship False and True," by Rev. James M. Gray, D. D.; "Belief in the Virgin Birth of Jesus, Essential to Intelligent Christian Faith," by Rev. William Evans, D. D.; and "The Menace of Evolution," by Rev. A. C. Dixon, D. D., were in evidence in this respect; and in many of the other addresses the scholastic errors of the modernists were treated faithfully and competently.

Bible Emphasis

Many of the addresses centered on the Bible as indicated by these subjects: "The Study and Use of the Bible," by Rev. L. W. Munhall, D. D.; "The Scientific Accuracy of the Bible," by Rev. W. B. Riley, D. D.; "The Glory of the Bible," by A. C. Gabelein; "The Holy Spirit the Conservator of Bible Truth," by Mr. H. C. Morrison; "Predictive Prophecy and Apocalypse, Scientific, Moral and Practical," by Rev. John MacInnis; "Our Unfading Inheritance," by Rev. W. L. Pettingill, D. D.; "The Inspiration and Interpretation of the Scriptures," by F. W. Farr, D. D. Many other addresses were saturated with the Bible, in which the friends of the conference only saw a conservation of the fundamentals of the Christian faith.

Timely Subjects

Subjects that are up-to-date and forced on the church were treated in several special addresses such as, "The Challenge of Orthodoxy," by Rev. W. B. Riley, D. D.; "Christless Christianiity," by Rev. Gustav Johnson; "Spiritism and the Mystery of the Fallen Angels," by Rev. James M. Gray, D. D.; "The Apostasy Interrupted and Babel Possibly Revived," by Rev. S. S. Hilscher; "The Jew and the World War; or God Moving on Earth," by Mr. Jacob M. Harris; and "The World Movements of Today in the Light of the Bible," by Rev. A. C. Dixon, D.D.

The Day of Prayer

For many reasons, Wednesday June 16, was the high day of the conference, for it was set apart as the day of prayer. Previous to the conference the Great Commission Prayer League of Chicago, and the Moody Tabernacle, sent out to thousands of godly people appeals for special prayer for the conference, and especially that they engage in prayer on that particular day. It was not enough that the conference should be indoctrinated, but that it should be dynamited; and the only way to that end was prayer—real prayer. Some words of Mr. D. E. Hoste, written to the director of the Great Commission Prayer League just previous to the Conference are significant:

"It is my belief that just as, when Judah was on the downgrade towards deepening apostasy and final judgment and overthrow into Babylonish captivity, the Lord nevertheless from time to time raised up a king who cleansed the temple, put away the filthiness and the idols and restored the law of the Lord; so now, if only His children stir themselves up to intercede in persevering faith and condition of heart, He is prepared to raise up men and women to do a great and deep work of cleansing and uplifting the Church. Then, through a cleansed and uplifted Church, to work salvation among the nations of the earth, in gathering out from them great multitudes.

"Let us pray continually for a revival of sound doctrine, a revival of the authority of the Holy Scriptures, based not on an inherited orthodoxy, but on an experimental knowledge of their power and truth in the lives of believers; and then for a revival of the conviction of sin and of coming divine wrath and eternal judgment against impenitent men, who refuse to submit themselves to obey the light presented to them whether in nature, conscience or Scripture."

A report of the prayer side of the Conference shows that: "The conference committee designated one of the best rooms of the Tabernacle as the 'Conference Prayer Room,' in which from 1:30 to 2:30 P. M. each day a special prayer service was held. Messages were given by conference speakers and others and a consecutive series of prayer topics running through the week were kept before those in attendance. Although this room seated 200 it was inadequate, and more than once a larger room had to be brought into requisition. Besides the daily 1:30 meetings numerous other groups met here for prayer. Practically all of Wednesday was devoted by the entire Conference to prayer, and the hallowed memories of that sacred day will long abide.

"In addition to all the foregoing the opening half hour of each of the twenty-two sessions was devoted to 'praise and prayer,' led by chorister H. A. Hammontree.

"Through all the foregoing various means the conference was bathed from beginning to end in an atmosphere of prayer which helped to put unusual unction and power back of every address. The closing messages on Sunday, the 20th, by speakers F.W. Farr, R. A. Torrey, A. C. Dixon, Graham Scroggie and Paul Rader will never be forgotten by those who were present."

Recognition of the interest that laymen are taking in the conservation of Christian fundamentals was a prominent feature, periods being assigned to them. Mr. J. Davis Thomas, of Philadelphia; Mr. Aldwin Ball, Jr., of New York;

Mr. Sidney Smith, of Winnipeg; and Mr. W. O. Andrews, of St. Louis; addressed the conference on the themes assigned them. One of the phenomena of the recent drift of the evangelical church emphasizing the fundamentals of Christianity is the demand on the part of laymen that these great subjects be taken up more generally in the pulpits.

Rev. Graham Scroggie, of Edinburgh, Scotland, gave two or three most inspiring addresses, maintaining the high estimation of Americans, many of whom are familiar with his writings.

Doubtless the addresses will be published so that the thousands of earnest Christians who are concerned for the fundamentals of Christianity, and who could not be present, will have them for perusal and study. Practically every phase of the great subjects suggested by such a conference was covered in the two conferences already held, and it would be a distinct loss if they could not be obtainable in printed form.

The executive secretary of the conference, Rev. Robert M. Russell, D. D., for years connected with The Moody Bible Institute as a teacher of Christian Doctrine, and a leader in the United Presbyterian denomination, was very faithful and effective, and expressed his gratification at what the conference did.

Grace Abounding to the Chief of Sinners

An Exposition of 1 Timothy 1:12-17

By Rev. L. W. Gosnell, Assistant Dean, The Moody Bible Institute

JOHN BUNYAN entitled his autobiography, Grace Abounding to the Chief of Sinners. He doubtless found this title in the passage before us, which gives it a historic interest.

In the verses preceding, Paul has been speaking of the law. He points out that the law is good if a man use it lawfully, but that it is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient (vv. 7, 8). The lawful use of the law is to awaken the sense of sin in the ungodly; its message is one of condemnation for sin. The law itself is good but it is not for the righteous, who are not under the law but under grace (Rom. 6:14; 8:4), and who advance to higher attainments of righteousness, not by means of the law, but by drinking more and more deeply of the streams of grace. Paul goes on to say that all this is "according to the gospel of the glory of the blessed God which was committed to (his) trust" (v. 11, R. V.).

The thought of such a gospel having been committed to him leads the apostle to the digression which furnishes the theme for our study, in which he recalls with adoration the grace exhibited toward him. In doing so he furnishes us, in himself, an illustration of the difference between the law and the gospel in their bearing on sinners. "In a word, the law was for the condemnation of sinners, the gospel of Jesus Christ was for the saving of sinners and the ministration of forgiveness; verily, it was a gospel of the glory of the blessed God." (Ellicott).

I

MERCY TOWARD SINNERS

1. Abounding Honor

"And I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who hath enabled me, for that he counted me faithful, putting me into the ministry" (v. 12).

The ministry of an apostle was arduous and responsible, and would have crushed Paul had not Christ enabled and strengthened him for his task. In the Revised Version, instead of the expression "putting me into the ministry," we have "appointing me to his service." The word "service" reminds us of the work he had to do rather than of his prerogatives as an apostle, and brings the case down to our own level. How we need strengthening for our "service"!

Paul could not cease to give thanks that Christ had counted him faithful, trustworthy, and had appointed him to His service. Dr. Jowett writes thus of Dr. Dale, his great predecessor in the pulpit in Birmingham, England: "The members of my old congregation have often tried to describe to me the mingled dignity and humility with which he proclaimed the gospel of salvation. They say that at times he spoke with a sort of personal diffidence born of a great surprise that he should be counted worthy to 'bear the vessels of the Lord.'" Every true servant of Christ should share this feeling.

2. Abounding Sin

"Who was before a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious" (v. 13).

In regard to Christ, Paul had been a blasphemer, speaking evil of the name of Jesus, and compelling others to do the same (Acts 26:11).

In regard to Christians, he had been a persecutor. Beyond measure he persecuted the church of God, and wasted it (Gal. 1:13). It should be kept in mind that when we are told he consented to Stephen's death (Acts 8:1), a word is used indicating that he approved of it!

In regard to himself, he had been injurious. This word is used in Romans 1:30 and translated "despiteful" in the Authorized Version, and "insolent" in the Revised. It conveys the idea of violence and outrage. Saul of Tarsus punished people "not with pitying reluctance, but with arrogant delight."

3. Abounding Mercy

"But I obtained mercy, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief" (v. 13).

Did his ignorance excuse him? Not for a moment, for it was ignorance "in unbelief," which is culpable. Paul could have arrived at the truth if he had been seriously minded to do so. He only means to say that his outrageous conduct had not placed him beyond the pale of mercy, for he had not sinned against his better convictions, wilfully striving against the Spirit of God.

His sin, in other words, was different from that of the Pharisees who, in the face of the clearest light, said Christ cast out demons by the power of Satan, calling darkness light and light darkness; of such blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, Christ said that it could never be forgiven (Mark 3:28-30). Rather, he stood on a footing with those sinners of Jerusalem, who were charged by Peter at and after Pentecost, with the awful crime of having crucified the Lord of glory, but to whom he said:

"And now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers" (Acts 3:17).

As Dr. Fairbairn says: "In both cases alike the sin was of the deepest dye, only not unpardonable; it still lay within the sphere of redeeming grace." Or, as Dr. Faussett has put it: "His ignorance gave him no claim on, but put him within the range of, God's mercy."

4. Abounding Grace

"And the grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant, with faith and love which is in Christ Jesus" (v. 14).

Grace was defined by Horatius Bonar as "favor to the unworthy," but, it should be added, it includes the acts, effects, gifts, of that favor. Paul felt that the grace of God was exceeding abundant in his case. Accompanying grace, were faith and love, and what need he had of these things? He had lived in unbelief, instead of faith, and it was because he lacked love that he was the blasphemer, the persecutor, and injurious. Grace, however, brought him into fellowship with Christ, who is the source of faith and love.

II

THE SAVIOUR FOR SINNERS

"This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners" (v. 15).

The expression, "this is a faithful saying," occurs five times besides, all in the pastoral epistles (1 Tim. 3:1; 4:9; 2 Tim. 2:11; Tit. 3:8). This "saying," he tells us, is "faithful," reliable, and "worthy of all acceptation"—of acceptation by all men.

Every phrase in this saying may well be pondered.

"Christ Jesus." "Christ" is Greek for the Hebrew Messiah and means anointed: our Lord was anointed to be the King and Redeemer of His people. "Jesus" is Greek for the Hebrew Joshua and means Jehovah the Saviour: it is the human name of our Lord. So that "Christ" sets Him before us as the One promised; "Jesus," as the One manifested. Sometimes one name is placed first and sometimes the other. When "Jesus Christ" is used, it seems to place before us "the humbled One now glorified," whereas "Christ Jesus" marks Him as "the now glorified One who was once humbled." (So Bullinger.) The latter expression is appropriately used here where Paul looks back to the incarnation.

"Came into the world." It will be seen at once that this implies pre-existence. But do we have any adequate appreciation of what it meant for Christ to come into the world? These words of Professor A. T. Robertson are well worth pondering: "He suffered in so doing in ways that are beyond our comprehension. . . . We catch glimpses of the yearning of Christ for the glory which He had with the Father before the incarnation and even before the world was, by the Father's side (Jno. 17:5). There is a fulness of knowledge between the Son and the Father not true of others, and Jesus often goes alone to pray with the Father. How the Son missed the glories of heaven we can only imagine. How the sin and desolation of earth jarred upon His sensitive soul we do have some comprehension, but only a little after all, for we have become used to the dullness and hardness of our world. Perhaps, it was in mercy to Jesus that there was some humiliation in His incarnation, else He could not have endured His earthly estate."

"To save." This, then, was the object of Christ's coming into the world. His very name, Jesus, Saviour, makes this clear. Moreover, the salvation He provides is all-inclusive. On the one hand, He saves from the death and judgment resulting from sin, while on the other, He brings to us all positive blessing in the place of condemnation. It covers justification, sanctification and glorification.

"Sinners." We shall not be saved by Him in spite of the fact that we are sinners but because of that fact. He came not to call the righteous. There is a familiar story of a man who came to the good Countess of Huntingdon in the days of Wesley and Whitefield, exclaiming, "O my dear Countess, I am lost, lost!" Instead of showing alarm the Countess replied, "I am delighted to hear it." "Oh," cried the man, "how can you be so cruel to mock me thus!" "Nay," said this good woman, "I do not mock you, for the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

Awakened sinners need the assurance that this saying, which seems commonplace to some, is really "faithful" and "worthy of all acceptation." To them it seems too good to be true! John Bunyan tells how he thought he was not one of the elect, or that the day of grace was past. How delighted he was to come upon these words in the parable: "Compel them to come in;" and again: "Yet there is room." And coming to more recent times, I shall never forget how Samuel Hadley, of the Water Street Mission, used to tell how his first prayer was, "Dear Jesus, can you help me?" Yea, verily, "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."

III

THE CHIEF OF SINNERS

"Sinners: of whom I am chief" (v. 15).

"Chief" means first, in the sense of greatest, just as Jesus stated to the scribe that the "first" of the commandments is that we should love God with all the heart (Mark 12:28, 29). Note, also, that Paul does not say, "Of whom I was chief," but, "Of whom I am chief," indicating his abiding sense of personal sinfulness. Some may wonder at such an expression. Yet, strangely enough, it is a favorite with the true saints of God. It was after Bunyan had spent twelve years in jail for Christ's sake that he entitled his autobiography, Grace Abounding to the Chief of Sinners. John Wesley once thought he was dying, after sixty years of faithful service to Christ. But in that hour, he said he could express himself only in the words of the hymn:

"I the chief of sinners am,
But Jesus died for me."

There is a reason why the saints speak thus, They know their own sins better than anyone else knows them, and better than they know those of anyone else. This explains why men outwardly moral, and even religious, may be awakened by the Spirit of God so as to inscribe themselves, "Chief of sinners."

IV

THE PATTERN THROUGH SINNERS

"Howbeit for this cause I obtained mercy that in me first (as chief, R. V.) Jesus Christ might show forth all longsuffering, for a pattern (ensample, R. V.) of them which should hereafter believe on him to life everlasting" (v. 16).

How eloquent is the word "howbeit," with which the verse begins! It contrasts Paul's behavior toward Christ, of which he has been speaking, with Christ's procedure toward him, of which he is about to speak.

He tells us the cause for which he obtained mercy: namely, that in him as chief, Christ might show forth all His longsuffering as a pattern to, or example of, them which should hereafter believe. A little before, he said that he obtained mercy for the cause that he had sinned ignorantly; this is the cause in respect to his relation to the principles of the divine government, as one not yet beyond the pale of divine mercy. Now he points to the cause in respect to the economical design of God to make him an example. (So Dr. Fairbairn.)

So that Paul was not only a herald of the gospel, but also a living ensample or pattern of the longsuffering exhibited in it. God is long suffering before being angry, and Paul tells us he needed "all long suffering," or, "all his longsuffering" (R. V.), i. e., all of God's longsuffering, not a part merely. With such an example before their eyes, all who should hereafter believe on Christ would be assured that the same grace would be extended to them. They may, as Bengel puts it, say to themselves, "If thou believest as Paul, thou shalt be saved as Paul."

An interesting suggestion may be offered here. Paul is truly an example of all them who should believe. But is he not in a peculiar sense an example of that people, Israel, who shall hereafter believe on Him whom once they pierced, ignorantly in their unbelief, and to whom God will show forth all His longsuffering? Just as Christ appeared in glory to Saul and led him to cry, "What shall I do, Lord," so will He appear to Israel.

"And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for Him, and He will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for Him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation" (Isa. 25:9).

V

THE PRAISE OF SINNERS

"Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only (wise) God, be honor and glory for ever and ever. Amen" (v. 17).

God is here represented as the "King of the ages" (R. V., Marg.), the Lord and Director of the successive stages of development through which the world was destined to pass, arranging everything beforehand according to the counsel of His own will.

As Paul thinks of the sovereign grace manifested in his own case, he rises from the particular to the general, and is left adoring at the feet of the King of the ages. And well may the contemplation of our own soul-history leave us there!

E'er since, by faith, I saw the stream
Thy flowing wounds supply,
Redeeming love has been my theme,
And shall be till I die.

Then in a nobler, sweeter song,
I'll sing thy power to save,
When this poor lisping, stammering tongue
Lies silent in the grave.

The Bacon Memorial and South Park Missions with offices at 310 Chestnut Street, Peoria, Ill., have just issued the thirty-first annual report showing receipts to the amount of $4,649.82, which met all expenses and enabled the mission to make some repairs on its buildings. The mission is under the direction of Rev. and Mrs. E. T. Munns.

The Way of Peace

By Rev. Christopher G. Hazard, D. D., Catskill, N. Y.

THE Word of God and the verdict of history agree in testifying that, "There is none righteous, no, not one," and "the way of peace have they not known." Peace universally passes understanding and evades experience. It does so because it cannot be found apart from its associate, righteousness, or known by that disturber of the soul, sin. There is no peace for him who transgresses the law of his relationships to God and man, a transgression that is, alas, our common guilt. Therefore the heart is like the troubled sea, it cannot rest.

I watch the billows foam upon the sand,
And patient wait, but, lo! they never cease;
I turn in disappointment from the strand,
Not on this shore is peace.

Across the waves, beyond the farthest blue,
Sure there both rest and calm meet and increase;
But no, unresting surges break there, too,
Not on that shore is peace.

A world of waters, beating at its bound—
Flawed, like a heart, by every wind's caprice—
Tumultuous from its lowest depths profound;
Not in this world is peace.

Men do not miss peace for lack of seeking it. The thoroughfares of life are thronged and its byways are crowded because everywhere we see the sign, "This way to peace." Perhaps nothing is more desired and more sought than peace. For peace nations fight, and denominations offer competing creeds. One man will desert civilization for a wilderness, another will flee to an anchorite's cell, in pursuit of peace. The suicide lays down his life for it. Yet no one finds it.

How Christ Is Our Peace

What good news, therefore, is in the Scripture announcement that Christ is our peace. He is our peace because He is the Lord our righteousness, and the effect of righteousness is peace. There is no other source of peace, but this is the way of it. It is of God that we are in Christ Jesus, who, of God is made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, redemption and peace. Identified with Christ, because united to Him by faith, Christians have a righteousness of God; a fulfilment of all that ought to be concerning them, as set forth in the perfect humanity and work of Christ; a participation in the benefit of His sacrificial death; a sharing of His sonship to God and of His eternal life; the fruit and circumstance of Christly character and destiny; all that the relationship of children of God involves for time and eternity. It is a righteousness of our great representative upon the cross that is imputed to us, so that we have been crucified with Christ, and it is a righteousness of life and history that is imparted to us by the holy and quickening Spirit of Him who rose from the dead. It is more to be desired than any righteousness that can come from our own efforts, for it succeeds in pleasing God and bestowing peace.

The Due of Sin

The sinner must accept the death of Christ as the due of sin. The divine law will take nothing less from a sinner. It will not account his best endeavors and his fairest fruits acceptable. His gold may seem to him fine, but it will not pass before the tests of the great assayer. God does not regard any good thing as done without Christ, at best it is no more than attempted. When we think of righteousness we always think of law, but the law is always dissatisfied with us. To die for sin is the only righteousness that a sinner can offer. This he may offer in Christ, "Who was delivered up because of our offences and raised from the dead because of our justification," that is, because thus we were made right with God. The reckoning to us of the acts of our representatives is one of the customs of our American government, of our social and political structure; it is so because this is a divine law. God made Christ to be a sin offering for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him. "Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." The old nature and its history of sin, our old legal relationship to God, are abolished by the Cross of Christ. Upon it He made peace.

The Believer's Two Natures

Christ is that life which man must have in order to be justified in what he is: to be right with God because he is in right relationship with God. Not only does a sinner receive assurance through Christ that he shall not come into judgment: he is also assured that he has passed out of death into life. He is a son of God although it doth not yet appear what he shall be. He is as much a son of God in his childhood as in his maturity. A seed of God is in him which will come to that maturity. There are in him two natures, but God never confuses the old and the new in him. "That which is born of the Spirit is spirit," never flesh. The Christian is in the Spirit, not in the flesh. Herein is his sanctification: his separation from his false self unto his true self. Thus he may refuse to know himself, and may take up daily the cross that puts the old nature off, while he puts the new nature on in following Christ.

The Christian is one person and he is to develop one nature. In this nature God always accepts him in Christ and is always satisfied with him. He never needs to anxiously strive to add to his stature. Anxiety about himself never develops him. Let him rejoice that God has placed him in Christ, where no amount of effort could have brought him, and let him stay there with increasing knowledge of all that is his in Christ. With a mind stayed upon Christ he will have peace. Christ satisfies our desire for a new start, our wish to get somewhere, our longing for finality, our want of rest. He is our destination and our destiny. He is the ideal in a completion that is ever completing itself. We reach the ideal of being at once in Him and forever pursue it in Him. Content, satisfied, at rest in Christ, we walk on with Him to behold His glory. Being His workmanship, we anticipate our future development with entire confidence. We undertake the destiny of conformity to His glorious image with a sure and patient hope. The Christian has found the way of peace as to himself.

Futility of Law

Christ is our righteousness and our peace with regard to duty. He makes it the fruit of our life in Him, the expression of His Spirit that dwells within us. Law is an ideal of what ought to be, but it never gives us any power to fulfil its holy, just, and good requirements. Not until it is within the heart can it find expression in the life. Otherwise it but genders futility, condemnation and bondage. It reveals our deadness and unrighteousness, and, instead of peace, gives us much trouble.

Thus the ideal is a constant curse as soon as we see that it is spiritual, that it calls for a love that our hearts lack, a love which alone fulfils it. Paul was not at peace with such a view of law, he called himself a wretched man. He calls the holy law the life of sin, finding in himself a stubborn contrariness to it. Its ministry is a ministry of condemnation, for it never justifies him. It is thus a curse to him though good in itself. It causes sin to abound. He knows that to be delivered from sin he must be delivered from law. For the products of law from an unspiritual nature are, at the best, but knowledge and restraint, at the worst, hypocrisy and rebellion. He thanks God, who will deliver him from both law and sin through Jesus Christ. He proclaims Christ as the end of the law for righteousness, to everyone that believeth. He hears Christ calling those who cannot bear the yoke of the law to assume His yoke and find rest for their souls. In Christ righteousness (law, duty) and peace have kissed each other in a blessed reconciliation.

Under Law to Christ

The Christian is not without law unto Christ, but he is not under the law of the ideal. Christ is the beginning of faith and the end of the curse of the ideal. He is in every sense our law-fulfiller. He satisfies all the claims of God, of man, of law, upon us. The believer in Christ has turned from one way of righteousness to another. He does not go about to establish his own righteousness, but submits himself to the righteousness of God, accepting the gift of righteousness, making mention of God's righteousness, even of His only. When God thinks of our righteousness He always thinks of Christ. When we think of our righteousness we remember that we are dead to the law, free from our slavery to duty, that we may live unto God. This is a way of pleasantness, and all its paths are peace.

What Is a Sinless Perfection?

The Christian has already a sinless perfection. The statement of John, "Whosoever is begotten of God doeth no sin, because His seed abideth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is begotten of God," must be true in some present sense. The seed of which the Christian is begotten is an incorruptible seed. The Christian is not now a saint and then a sinner, he ever abides in the sinless one and is of the eternal Spirit. There is now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus. "Sin is not imputed where there is no law." Believers have the blessedness of those to whom God will not impute iniquity. There is no guile in their spirits. They may do things that they hate, as Peter did, but Christ never admits that they mean to do them. Believers have been dealt with legally, once for all. By one offering they are forever separated unto God. The seed of God in them will come to fulness of being and character in them. They will reach maturity through a process of growth (sanctification) that is as perfect in all its stages as that of a tree; as perfect and as peaceful. Were this not so, were sin possible to a Christian, there would be a second fall, and for that there is no provided salvation. That would be unto a second death.

When God Forgives Us

It is true that while the Christian does not dwell in sin, sin dwells in him and easily besets him. This truth of Christian sinlessness is a guarded truth. The same apostle who repeatedly declares it assures us that we may not say that we have not sinned, and that we may not say that we have no sin, but that when we confess the sins of which we are conscious God is both faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. When we would condemn ourselves it is God that justifieth. He lays nothing to the charge of His elect. When God forgives us we may not condemn ourselves, but go in peace. Our hearts may condemn us, but God is greater than our hearts and knoweth better than they the value of Christ's work for us. "He that is bathed (with the washing of regeneration) needeth not, save to wash his feet." We are regenerated once for all, but we need daily confession and absolution for the defilements of our walk. But these are external to us. We must watch and pray, lest they dominate us and hinder our development and service, yet, essentially, they are not ours. We purpose many a perfect day that we are too small to accomplish, yet we purpose them. Our acts are our own until we disown them, but all our sinful acts we abominate. We identify ourselves as the sons of God. We confess our sins, yet do not own them.

This is no doctrine of holiness in the flesh, of perfectionism, of a present freedom from the presence of sin, of antinomianism, but the teaching of the Scripture that, if we deny our sins God will condemn us, but if we confess our sins He will justify us from them through Christ and bid us depart in peace.

Why Should We Not Have Peace?

We thus have peace in our Christian childhood, before we are able to put away the childish things and the faulty things of our nonage. Peace in our necessary submission to the imperfect state in which we yet are and the imperfect works that we must yet do. A foothold and a few steps in the right direction are all that we can hope for here, but while we believe the truth accomplishes itself. We steadfastly believe in the necessity of present failure and the worth of constant endeavor. We believe in ultimate achievement, and that all things will serve it for those who love God and are called according to His purpose in Christ. We shall eventually be glorified with our Saviour. We shall see Him as He is and where He is, and we shall be like Him. Why should we not have peace as to our past, our present and our future?

Taking Christ's Own Mind

Let us learn to live by the faith of the Son of God, as Paul did. Let faith be our comprehensive rule of life and let it be our righteousness, as it was Abraham's, when he set out for the promised land that he had not seen. Since we may say with David that the Lord will perfect that which concerneth us, and that He will do it for His name's sake, and because He would not be a good shepherd if He failed to do it, since there can be no "if" about it, since He who is the truth is also the way and the life, let us have that one thing needful to perfect peace—faith.

Let Christ, who is our wisdom in all these things of God, give to us His own peaceful mind. Things are as God sees them and states them, they are to us as we believe them, whether we see them or not. "Trust ye in the Lord forever, for in the Lord Jehovah is the rock of ages." Everything is right in Christ and to faith, "acquaint now thyself with him and be at peace."

O God of my unquiet heart,
Speak, and its tempests shall be still;
Create a faith beyond my art;
Order a peace beyond my skill.

When light is clear and winds are fair,
While purpose holds, I steadfast steer;
I greet the haven over there,
And feel its happinesses here.

But in the dark contrariness,
When doubt is master of the helm,
I yield unto a stormy stress,
The billows rise and overwhelm.

O God of my unquiet heart,
Come o'er the clouded, heaving path;
Bear in my boat the Saviour's part,
Show me the harbor that trust hath.

Thy Kingdom Come

By Rev. William Burton McCafferty

Thy Kingdom Come!
And triumph o'er all earthly foes.
Thy Kingdom Come!
For sin doth righteousness oppose.
O Lord this is our daily prayer:
"Bring Thou the day so bright and fair,
When righteousness reigns everywhere."
Thy Kingdom Come!

Thy Kingdom Come!
Defeat the wrong, uphold the right,
Thy Kingdom Come!
In glorious triumph of Thy might.
Reprove with equity the world,
Let Truth's great banner be unfurled,
And Wrong into the pit be hurled,
Thy Kingdom Come!

Thy Kingdom Come!
Lord, haste that grand and glorious day,
Thy Kingdom Come!
And hold a universal sway.
O let Thy holy will be done
On earth, as 'tis around the throne,
Where angels bow before the Son,
Thy Kingdom Come!

Thy Kingdom Come!
The whole creation groans for Thee,
Thy Kingdom Come!
The earth travails in agony,
Lift Thou, the curse forevermore,
Subdue the wild beast's angry roar,
And reign in peace from shore to shore.
Thy Kingdom Come!

Tradition Versus the Word of God

By Rev. Charles Frederic Sheldon, D. D., Perry, Iowa

JESUS said: "You make the word of God of none effect through your tradition." There are, in the main, three classes of people as to their attitude toward the Word of God.

First, there are many who do not study it; who do not care anything about it; who know nothing only that which they hear incidentally.

Secondly, there are many who read it much, who study it intensely after a fashion, but who come to the study of it with the strong hand of tradition upon them, and they search the Scriptures in order to find that which seems to support their own much-loved and venerated tradition.

Thirdly, there are many who come to the study of the Word with open minds; having no prejudice to warp, no tradition to prove true; those who study under the immediate guidance of the great Teacher, the Holy Spirit.

I desire to speak at this time particularly of those whose study does them no good, because of the fact that they are so heavily handicapped by tradition and prejudice. Our Lord said: "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me." But these people search the Scriptures to find something that will testify to the fact that their tradition is true, and that it should be received.

There are many in these days who are guilty of undertaking to make the Word of God of none effect through their traditions. We very much fear that the people who are doing this monstrous thing are not conscious of the crime they are committing. We do not charge them all with deliberate intent to make the Word of God of none effect through their tradition, but their ignorance does not lessen the measure of their guilt. To give to a hungry man a stone when he asks for bread; to give to a thirsty soul an opiate when the need is for life-giving water, is not worse than to give to lost, ruined men and women a tradition when what they need is the eternal truth that alone can save them.

It is the tragedy of our church life in these days, that from many pulpits, and from many teaching desks, the traditions of men are being preached and taught rather than the Word of God, and, as the hearers and the students listen and accept these traditions, the Word of God is made of none effect as truly as if it were not mentioned at all.

Law and Grace

For example, why is it that so many men of learning, of wide reading, and surely of intelligence are failing to preach the gospel of the grace of God? Why is it that so many are preaching the gospel of works; that so many are preaching a miserable man-made mixture of faith and works, of law and grace?

There seems to be only one answer to this question, namely, they have received these traditions from their fathers, and they do not know that they are preaching that which is not true. They do not know how to study God's Word having never been taught how to study it. The spell of the old tradition is on them and they go on, the blind leading the blind, and all headed for the ditch. These men certainly do not know the gospel of grace, for if they did, they could not possibly continue to preach the death-dealing tradition.

The teachers who went among the Galatian churches and undertook to drag them down from grace into legalism did so because they did not know the gospel of grace. The sad thing about it is, that the longer men preach tradition, the more their blindness increases, and all hope that they will ever see the light fades away.

Tradition About the Judgment

What has been said is also true of the other great fundamentals of Scripture. Where did the belief so widely held as to the "general judgment," at which all the world is to be judged originate? Certainly not in the Scriptures for there is not a line in the Word of God to substantiate that tradition. It is a human tradition that began somewhere in the mind of some man who was not taught of the Spirit, and it has come down through the centuries believed in by thousands.

If the shackles of tradition could only be broken; if the blind eyes could only be anointed with heavenly eye-salve so that they might see, how quickly would all men and women who study the Word be able to see the truth as to "judgment!" They would be able to see that the sins of the believer were judged in Christ, on the cross; that the believer must judge himself as he lives his life if he would not be judged of the Lord; to see the plain truth as to the judgment of the believers' works after the church has been taken away; to see the truth as to the judgment of the nations, and that of the wicked dead a thousand years after the resurrection of those who die in Christ. How these traditions make the Word of God of none effect!

The Kingdom and the Church

The same is sadly true with reference to the great truth of the return of our Lord to the earth; the rapture of the Church; the setting up of the kingdom. In the way of this great truth stands man's tradition declaring in the face of the Word of God that Jesus is not coming back in person. Tradition declares that He is coming all the time; coming when one dies, in the gradual diffusion of Christian truth, in the bettered conditions in society; but the Word of God does not so teach.

Tradition declares that the church is the kingdom, but the Word of God does not so teach. Tradition declares that the plan of God is that by the work of the church the whole world is to be converted, but the Word of God does not so teach.

Better or Worse?

Tradition says that the conditions in the world are rapidly improving, but the Word of God, and the conditions before our very eyes declare that "The world lieth in the wicked one."

Tradition says that the gospel is permeating all the life of the world as the leaven does the meal, but God's Word declares that "leaven" is always the type of evil, and that as the leaven goes through the meal, so evil doctrine is being mixed with the truth, the food of the church, until all Christendom is affected by its presence.

Now the Word of God makes all this very plain, so plain that he who runs may read. It must be, therefore, that the god of this world has utterly blinded the minds of these preachers and teachers, moving them to present traditions rather than the saving truth of God, and thereby leading countless thousands to eternal ruin.

We tremble when we think of the judgment in store for these false teachers who are making many stumble and miss the way of salvation. It is indeed a pitiful sight to see doctors of divinity and professors in seminaries feeding their people and their students on stones instead of the bread of life.

That the Lord Jesus may come quickly and put an end to it all should be the prayer of all who know and love Him.

Ministerial Etiquette

By Rev. Robert Clark, Lyndon, Vt.

IN THESE days when so much is said and done in the interests of church unity, it will not be inappropriate for us to review the courtesies that one minister ought to extend to another. For after all, the pastor is a pivotal man, and church unity will be helped or hindered in any community, just as the pastors work together as real fellow-laborers.

This subject is not treated at any length in works on homiletics or pastoral theology, yet it is of considerable importance. What is to be our attitude to our brother pastors? How are we to receive those in our locality or in our denomination?

Are we to co-operate in their labors and rejoice in the enlargement of their flocks, even if our own flocks are visibly diminishing? Or, are we to be Ishmaels with our hands against every man and every man's hand against us? Is our own glory or gain to be the supreme standard of our work? There ought to be some well defined and generally accepted canon of conduct for the clergy in their pastoral and pulpit work, that we may live and labor in love and peace with our neighbors.

Scottish Ideals

This subject appeals to me because of my early beliefs and conceptions of the ministry. In Scotland we were taught to have a very exalted opinion of the clergy. We believed them to be men of God, men who were governed by higher principles and actuated by higher motives, and on the whole more unselfish and self-sacrificing than the rest of men. I grew up with the belief that clergymen were not subject to the jealousies, envies and ambitions of other men.

But since it has been my lot to enter the ministry I have had to change my earlier and happier belief. I find, both from introspection and observation that they are men of like passions as the rest of men, subject to the same infirmities and sins and with several varieties of their own. In the prosecution of their work they often show little of that Christian spirit and consideration for the feelings and rights of others that we naturally expect. I sometimes wonder what would happen if we would all practice the thirteenth of First Corinthians and apply it to our pastoral relations?

Comparison with Other Professions

We know that the different professions have their recognized codes of honor, and their courtesies that they extend one to another. The doctor will not call to see a patient unless the other doctor has been dismissed or he is asked to come in counsel. The lawyer has a regard for the clients of his brother. The merchants have understanding in their business relations, even the news-boys have their code of honor that forbids them invading the territory of another. In the ministry, as far as my observation goes, every man seems to be a law to himself.

There are one or two points upon which we should be clear.

I

Courtesies due to the authorities we use in our pulpit work.

How far should we give other men credit for the material that we use? Is it right to take the credit for a good sermon when that sermon did not originate with us? There is a legitimate use of other men's material. Their ideas are to suggest ideas or lines of thought to us, but we are not to be slavish imitators, or worse, purloiners. If we follow closely the line of thought of some notable preacher should we not frankly tell our people to whom we are indebted? This would be the better way as no embarassment afterward would be feared. It would give credit to the right man, and our own people would see that we were still in a teachable frame of mind.

It was never easier to get material for the pulpit than now and more is the pity. There are books, and magazines and skeletons published galore. Their number and prevalence proves that there is a call for them. Like the idols in Israel, we believe them to be an abomination to the Lord, and a detriment to pastor and people. The preacher ought to be a creator rather than a reproducer. What Kipling said of the poets is sometimes true of the preacher:

"When Omar smote his blooming lyre
He'd 'eard men sing by land and sea;
An' what he thought 'e might require
'E went and took—the same as me.

"The market girls an' fishermen,
The shepherds an' the sailors, too,
They 'eard old songs turn up again,
But kept it quiet—same as you.

"They knew 'e stole; 'e knew they knowed.
They didn't tell, nor make a fuss,
But winked at Omar down the road,
An' 'e winked back—the same as us."

Plagiarism is not always looked upon by the people as a great sin. A lady of wide experience and education defended her pastor when she knew that he was preaching other men's sermons. She thought it was right to give the people something good, and if the man could not do it by his own efforts he was justified in using another man's material.

Here is another case: A man preached a baccalaureate sermon that evoked favorable remarks. But an inquisitive newspaper man, a little later, published a "deadly parallel" and proved that the same sermon had been preached a few months before by a famous city pastor. However, our friend explained it by "unconscious cerebration" and the church increased his salary.

I think that the average congregation would prefer honesty and candor in the pulpit to mere brilliancy. No self-respecting minister could habitually resort to such methods. If he were constrained to follow another man's thought he should be courteous enough to acknowledge it.

II

Courtesies that we owe to the resident pastors.

What is to be our attitude to them? Are they to be brothers beloved and respected, or are we to look upon them as opponents, and their flocks as legitimate prey to be won over to our side of the fence? Too often churches in the same village are looked on as competing bodies rather than co-operating bodies. Because of this, pastors do not always exercise the Christian forbearance to one another that they ought.

What should be our attitude to the people of our brother? Should we call on them on our rounds, or should we confine our calls to our own people? It is not a difficult task to become an Absalom and win the affection of some. There are people in every church that are fickle and changeable, and if a new man calls a few times they can be easily led from their own church into another. A minister who has respect for himself and the feelings of a brother will not encourage any deflection from another congregation. But I have known men who called on all the people of his neighborhood but he never went near their pastor. Such a course is discourteous and not provocative of good feeling.

Another thing is that of hiring workers out of neighboring churches, the promising young soprano, or the tenor, just to keep up the high quality of our choir. The wealthy churches are more liable to fall into this temptation than small country churches. But even in the country I have seen injustice done to a sister denomination.

The plea may be made that talent is a marketable commodity and it is legitimate to buy where you can. But musical ability in church members should be like the ability to teach, and should be given to the home church. Perhaps the pastor is not wholly to blame for transgression here, but he should be against it and oppose it from Christian principle.

III

Courtesies due to our successors.

The retiring minister can make things pleasant or unpleasant for the newcomer according to the attitude that he takes. If the retiring pastor is only a short distance from his former field he may be excused if he keeps up the ties of friendship that he has formed. He will be in demand for funerals and weddings. It is entirely right that people should have the minister of their choice in times of joy or bereavement, but the conscientious minister will beware how far he will intrude into the realm of another man. He is no longer pastor there, and the resident pastor should have the undivided loyalty of his people. The people ought to be made to feel their responsibility to the new man and that they ought to show him the ordinary courtesies.

One pastor who was called to a neighboring church, made a public announcement before he left and clearly defined his attitude. He said, "Until you secure a new pastor I shall be glad to come to you whenever you need me, provided I can do so without interfering with my duties to my people. After my successor arrives I do not want you to call on me for any pastoral service; it would embarrass both him and me."

During the three months which followed, that pastor married seventeen couples in his old charge and attended many funerals. Several of the young people said that they had hastened the date of their wedding so that he might perform the ceremony. Whether any of the funerals were due to similar desire on the part of the deceased is not known. After three months the new pastor arrived and the people faithfully observed the unwritten contract.

The members of churches do not often think of these questions of ministerial courtesy, and hence they err in ignorance. It is the duty of the pastor to explain the situation. But some men seem flattered that their services are still desired and some even proffer their services.

I believe that some of these discourtesies among the ministers are due to pressure that is brought to bear on a man. Churches are competing bodies. It is every man for himself. An adherent gained from another church in some cases bulks larger than ten from outside.

Then there are higher officials in the denomination who are looking for growth—bishops, superintendents, secretaries. They live and move and have their being in statistics; their manual is the book of Numbers. The average pastor likes to make some kind of a showing and is often tempted to forget the common Christian amenities.

Even though the minister should meet with discourtesies from other brethren and churches, though slighted, neglected, or merely tolerated, he should be big enough and Christian enough to forget it all. He should be like his Master—indifferent to either praise, blame, notoriety or obscurity, doing his work and leaving results with God.

Win Men One By One

(James 5:20)

By O. S. Hoffman

Win men one by one
To the heavenly way;
Win them one by one,
Oh, do not delay!
Swift the moments fly,
Soon life's course is run;
For the Master work—
Win men one by one.

Win men one by one,
'Twas our Saviour's way;
Win them one by one,
Do it every day.
Oh, the gracious work
By Him thus begun!
Let us do it still—
Win men one by one.

Win men one by one,
For whom Jesus died;
Win them one by one
To the crucified.
He would have all saved,
He will cast out none;
Tell the blessed news—
Win men one by one.

Win men one by one,
Do it out of love;
Win them one by one,
Wisdom seek above.
Like a star, each soul
For the Master won,
In your crown will shine—
Win men one by one.

Charles G. Finney

By Rev. John Weaver Weddell, D. D.

I

FINNEY AS PREACHER AND EVANGELIST

THE circumstances of this great man's conversion at Adams, N. Y., in 1821 are well known. He bowed in full surrender at the feet of the Nazarene; and his submission to the Holy Spirit, as his writings indicate, was no less complete.

Passing through White-Chapel, London, one day, the writer came upon a cache of rare old books at the street curb, one of which contained what he had not seen before in his own country, a Paternoster Row reprint of Charles G. Finney's Enduement of Power. It expresses, as its faded pages lie before you today, in cogent terms the great teacher's conception of the pastoral office and tells us the kind of a trenchant free-lance he was in theology and preaching. In it he boldly affirms the conscious gift of power from on high, promised by our Saviour to His waiting disciples, as He parted from them (Luke 24:49), to be "the indispensable condition of performing the work which He has set before us." He dwells upon four things: the necessity of the enduement, as declared by the Master, Himself meekly yielded thereunto; the fact of that enduement, as sparklingly inaugurated at Pentecost; the results of the enduement, as seen in the Acts of the Apostles, and the conditions of the enduement, which are, in a word—total yielding and total cleansing. This gives not simply the breathed peace within us of John 20, but the irresistible power upon us of Acts 2.

CHARLES G. FINNEY

Finney's Flashing Sentences

Here are a few:

"All other gifts are unavailing without the addition of this marvelous power to impress God's saving truth upon the soul." Finney himself received it, as he always believed, in his law office immediately following his deep and thrilling conversion in the thicket, hard by. But he continues, "I have known ministers, who had labored many years without it, at last come to possess it in remarkable degree," and he also adds, significantly, "It is often times possessed and then lost, or its manifestations suspended by something that quenches the light of the Spirit in the soul." This he did not need to argue, for the whole church seems at times, as markedly of late, to pass into a partial eclipse of faith in this particular, as many will allow. Even in that day, the middle of the last century, he said, "It is painful to observe the constant tendency to substitute culture for this power, or human learning and eloquence in place of this divine enduement. I fear this tendency is increasing in the church."

These declarations were apparently drawn forth because of the home missionary reports of the current year which gave at that time an average of but five souls won for each worker. What would Charles G. Finney say of the statistics of this last year, and the oft-times spiritless and fruitless conventicles of the present time? Even then he was forced to cry out, "It is amazing to witness the extent to which the church has practically lost sight of the necessity of this enduement of power. Christians and some ministers go to work without it. I mourn to be obliged to say that the ranks of the ministry (and he was speaking as a seminary professor) seem to be filling up with those who do not possess it. May the Lord have mercy upon us!" "The fact is," he goes on to say, "there is something sadly defective in the education of the ministry and of the church. The ministry is weak because the church is weak. And then again, the church is kept weak by the weakness of the ministry. O for a conviction of the necessity of this enduement of power, and faith in the promise of Christ!" So closes this earnest, last appeal of the great Oberlin preacher. "I believe" said Rev. John Pate, the English editor of the treatise, "that the prayerful and thoughtful reading of this volume will blessedly assist in bringing about the supply of this need."

Here under these trees of the forest in northern Ohio, Charles G. Finney took his stand, but only that he might get a footing in the rising West where he might lay about him with resistless evangelistic fervor. He stirred the town, he awakened all the country and he gathered about himself a group of souls, possessed of his own God-implanted passion for revivals. So that at last he could say as he laid down his work in 1875, "We have had a revival here continually. Very few students came without being converted." The glow of that day of pent-up spiritual enthusiasm and evangelistic inspiration still plays upon the distant horizon, and augurs good things yet to come.

The old First Church of Oberlin, where for forty years Finney preached and taught. In the same building the Anti-Saloon League was formed twenty-six years ago.

FINNEY'S OLD TRAMPING GROUND

A quiet but open-eyed pastorate at Oberlin where Charles G. Finney spent his last days as college president and promoter of revivals, has given the writer, in college, library and community, the opportunity to gather up some interesting memorabilia regarding one of the greatest evangelists the world has ever seen.

Finney, the Man and the Teacher

Charles G. Finney came to Oberlin in 1835 in his prime and like an angel from the skies. The young college, founded on distinctive religious principles for the education of American youth, but planted newly in the virgin forest of Ohio's Western Reserve, was able in the providence of God, to the startled amazement of all and to the joyful surprise of the patrons and students of the budding institution, to call away from the most popular pastorate and finest auditorium of the East, to its own rough privations and rugged demands the most outstanding Christian orator and leader of his day, Charles Grandison Finney of Broadway Tabernacle, New York. He was welcomed with solemn thankfulness, and to a regency of power that lasted for forty years, and made him the champion of direct man-to-man evangelism over all the land, an eminence among his peers that lasts to this day.

The old elm is still standing at the public square where the first gathering of the educators was held in 1833, and when the world armistice celebration was held a year or more ago, the stately college procession started from under those same historic shades, rounding up their jubilations presently with the hallelujah chorus in Finney Chapel, at the center of the college and the town.

Finney's Eccentricities

The great man had his eccentricities. He was as direct and explicit in his prayers as in his sermons, and we are told how one time he besought the throne of grace in the course of his Sabbath morning petitions that William (the caretaker) might learn to close the barn door—it was giving him trouble. That his supplications were known to be potent as well as original, we have reasonable proof in the tradition that he called the people out for prayer one day in a season of protracted drought and sent them home in the rain. That this was more than tradition—is vouched for by S. S. Burdett, living up to recent years in the country near by Oberlin. He was present, he has stated in print, at the old brick church when the prayer for rain was offered, and he distinctly recalls how under heavens of brass the great preacher entered the church and ascended the pulpit stairs, first calmly depositing an umbrella in the family pew. He had scarcely finished his pleading supplication in behalf of panting nature when the thunders roared from the heavens and the longed for shower came. "Whilst we were yet speaking"—as Finney said.

He was ever the friend of the negro race, the major condition of his acceptance of the presidency at the first, being that the advantages of the institution of learning should be in no wise limited by considerations of sex or color. There is a shattered relic of the under-ground railroad within eye-shot as I look out of my window, and it is related that at one time it was only a closed mouth and a closed garret door that kept the great preacher from arrest as flagrantly defiant of the existent law of the land. There was a colored party, without doubt, hidden somewhere among the stuff.

A Mind of His Own

He had a mind of his own and a way of his own in the voicing of his theological views. President Henry Churchill King is authority for the anecdote that one time when a student queried somewhat critically in the lecture period regarding a seemingly variant statement in one of his former publications, the professor of divinity thundered out, "Don't quote Charles G. Finney in this class room!"

We are compelled to gather such incidents largely by word of mouth, mainly because of the fact, as related by Judge W. C. Cochran, of Cincinnati, Finney's grandson and memorialist, that the evangelist steadily and sturdily refused to set down mere personal reminiscences, and one time even destroyed the carefully prepared notes of his early private life laboriously written out by a stenographer, employed by friends for the purpose. His Memoirs, known to all were really, a later re-collation, in part only, of these reminiscences. The revivalist evidently aimed to record only that which had reference directly to the evangelistic witness of his life and work. It would have been profitable to us all to have had laid before us the steps under God whereby this marvelously strong and original religious personality was developed and given to the world.

Not University Taught

But this at least we know, that Charles G. Finney, though not taught in the universities, was himself a profound teacher, mentally trained and equipped, and thoroughly imbued with the college spirit. He came to the work like Saul of Tarsus in the full maturity of his God-given powers. Standing six feet two in his stocking feet, "a splendid pagan," as has been said, a kind of chief of sinners that he might become chief of saints, he was, under God, in reality, the leader of that great evangelistic lay-movement that has given strength and character to modern revival effort. No man could throw him or outleap, him it was said, in the athletic field, and no man could best him or down him on the platform in debate. He was a mighty warrior of the faith, and as erect and stalwart in his theology as he was in magnificent physique, a big brave presence, that often won half the battle at the outset.

He built his meeting house—a handsome brick structure still standing, the birth place subsequently of the Anti-Saloon League—and his modest home, also, the site now of the capacious Finney chapel, on the edge of a broad, forelooking campus, about which are clustered today a score of spacious college structures, sustained by one of the richest endowments of the land. But that was the day of small things materially, and though a multitude of resolute, truth-seeking youths turned their faces Oberlinward, a goodly portion of them coming from Lane Seminary at the south, it was considered a bold, hazardous venture, and it was only the commanding figure of the great evangelist and theologian, looming like a mountain peak on the horizon, that gave assurance and, indeed, ultimate success to the enterprise.

But Charles G. Finney was surrounded by a group of ardently sympathetic minds in those days, days of spiritual revival and moral reform. It is interesting to hear the older folk that knew him—there are a few of them left—tell of the eagle face that looked forth from behind the old fashioned pulpit, and the towering form that moved along the streets of the little college town, for the village was born with the school and exists for it as a city largely to this day.

HOW SHALL A NEEDY MOTHER PRAY?

Suppose, for example, that a mother is reading these words—that she has four children, that her husband is dead, that she has no income except what she derives from her labor as a scrubwoman or a seamstress, that it is the dead of winter, that her fuel is exhausted and that her children are crying from hunger and cold. Suppose, further, that in the providence of God she has no friends in the place where she is. Suppose she is lost in a great city and does not know a human heart to which she can turn. What shall we tell the woman respecting prayer?

The thing we ought to tell her is that God, who hears the ravens and the young lions and provides for the needs of His irrational creatures, knows all about her, is interested in her, and that she has a right to talk with Him very simply and plainly. She can say "coal" and "bread" and "milk" and "eggs" and "snow" and "ice" and "storm" with the assurance that He understands exactly what she is talking about, and that He is both able and disposed to minister to her needs.—President Chas. A. Blanchard, D. D.

"MORE LIGHT, LORD, MORE LIGHT"

Two of the Lord's people were praying together. The path seemed difficult for one of them at least, and he was crying, "More light, Lord, more light," when the voice of the other sounded in his ear: "But are you obeying the Lord according to the light you have got?" This question rather troubled him, for he afterwards confessed he was not using the light he had already got.—The Believer's Pathway.

Are You Looking for Service? Here is an Idea

By Rev. Joseph C. Hart, Milwaukee, Wis.

DURING a recent visit in England, I wrote to the London Life of Faith regarding the work of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, especially for readers who might be thinking of the work of the Christian ministry.

I

After remarking that it appeared a hard task to find a school or college where the Word of God is fully honored, I stated that the Institute was one of them, standing true to the whole Bible. "There," I said, "they make much of the blood of our Saviour, as the only provision for life eternal; they teach a doctrine of a life of victory over known sin, through a risen Christ occupying the throne of the believer's heart; they teach their students to teach and preach the premillennial coming of our Lord, and, in fact, "earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3).

My letter concluded with an invitation to any interested, to write me at my English address, which I furnished. The replies I received were both interesting and surprising.

One of the earliest was from Mr. W* * * of the Isle of Wight. He was a British soldier, and now that he had been demobilized, was thinking about preparing for definite Christian work. My letter, he told me, had come into his hands at a time of crisis in his spiritual life, and he asked if I would give him some information about the Institute.

I gladly wrote him, and gave emphasis to the fact that there he could obtain a working knowledge of the Bible as at no other place that I knew. I spoke of the distinguished British visitors within the walls of "Moody" from time to time, and other items, which I thought would interest and encourage him.

I advised him to apply for a catalogue which would explain the life and work in detail, and also told him to ask for an application form.

I am glad to say that God blessed the effort, the last word I had from him being that he was planning to cross the ocean to take up the training at the earliest moment.

I have invited him to send me a wire when he arrives at New York, and I will meet his train and introduce him personally to his new American home, for he will find the Institute a home away from home.

II

Another request for particulars of "Moody" came from Mr. C. W. G* * * in the East End of London. He told me he had been engaged in military service in France, and had suffered severely, having lost all the fingers of one hand. Nevertheless, he was anxious to prepare himself for the greater warfare against the god of this world, and, praise God, I could tell him of a training ground, where he would be made an efficient soldier of the cross, and be taught how to handle aright the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God.

He told me he had a family to support and very little money, and as I considered all the circumstances of the case, I felt the best thing for him to do at present was to study the Bible by correspondence. I explained to him the work carried on by the Institute in its Correspondence Department. There he would be a student receiving every care, under the supervision of the head of the department, and would become a member of the great "Moody" family scattered throughout the world, numbering several thousands, who were studying the Bible by this method of correspondence.

I was particular in pointing out to him the advantages of taking up the Synthetic Course, in which he would consider the great facts of each book of the Bible, and these separate books in their relation to the Word of God as a whole, thus giving him a fresh insight into the sacred page, and much material for use in his own preaching and teaching.

In this instance, too, God was pleased to set His seal upon the effort, for this friend did send for the Synthetic Correspondence Course, and in a letter to hand since my return to America he tells of the great blessing attending his study.

He is anxious to go to the Institute to take up the regular course of training, and I am hoping that one day he will do so. He has written me, however, of an idea of forming a circle of some twenty men, poor fellows like himself, who have a desire to train for the Lord's service, but who have no prospects of receiving training. The plan is for each to pay one shilling per week (about twenty-five cents) and when they have enough money on hand, to send one of their number to The Moody Bible Institute for training!

What immeasurable possibilities are hidden there! Who can tell what this circle will mean, as they, one by one, by God's grace, go to be trained for Christian work? What a harvest of souls they may mean, ultimately, for the Lord Jesus Christ!

III

The Lord allowed my remarks about the Institute to come into the hands of a Lancashire mill-boy, Mr. Tom W * * *, whose home is at Rishton.

From his letters, and those of his mother, for she wrote too, I learned that he was limited in education and means. His parents had prayed earnestly for his salvation, and now that God had answered prayer in bringing their only child to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ, and in thus making him a member of His body the Church, they were praying that He would be led of God into the great harvest field, to win others from the power of sin to Jesus.

I was thankful that the doors of The Moody Bible Institute are open even for such cases, and I wrote and told him so. The Lord uses the small things sometimes for His glory, so I wrote him what I considered were the real qualifications for soul-winning work: first, a life lived in close fellowship with the Lord Jesus; then a passionate passion for souls in answer to definite believing prayer; and to crown this, a working knowledge of the Bible, which was to be obtained at The Moody Bible Institute as in no other place of which I was aware, and I strongly advised him to apply for further particulars.

This he did, and also obtained his passport to this country from the British foreign office, and expects to be in "Moody" in a few months time. I promised to be his friend as far as it was in my power so to be, and to help him in every way possible.

I praise God that to me has been given this great privilege of directing, in some measure, the course of this friend's life into such a blessed channel.

Who will dare to say that he might not become a second Moody, through the grace of God? The Lord grant it.

IV

A most interesting thing happened in connection with the last mentioned family, giving me the opportunity to touch another life for the Master, and to say another good word for the Institute.

While corresponding with them, one week end, when they had friends visiting from a neighboring town, the conversation turned upon my letters to Tom.

In due time I received a letter from Mr. H * * *, the friend who was visiting that day, telling me that he had been told of the way I was helping his friend, and asking if I would help his son, Edwin, twenty-one years of age, and who, with his brother, had recently given his heart to the Saviour, through attending an evangelistic meeting under the auspices of the London Evangelization Society.

Accordingly, I wrote to Mr. H * * * as to the Institute, advising him to consider it as a place of training for his boy.

A little later, I was preaching in the north of England when Mr. H * * * was present, and he told me he would keep in touch with me after my return to the United States.

It would be fine if the way might be opened whereby these two young men might be able to travel to "Moody" together.

Will all who read these lines pray for this?

V

Mr. Harry W * * *, a Lancashire collier, was another friend I was permitted to influence, under God, in taking up the study of the Bible in the Correspondence Department.

I was visiting him one day near Manchester, and began to talk about the Institute, and the advantages of being in residence there as a student, and if this be not possible, of being one of the number taking up the courses given through correspondence, and advised him to write for particulars.

He was greatly encouraged by the reply he received, and sent his fee for the Synthetic Course, which I explained to him would make the Bible an entirely new book to him, and not only deepen his own spiritual life, but equip him for greater service for the Lord Jesus in preaching His Word.

I had a letter from him, again, the other day, in which he says, "the lessons of the Synthetic Bible Study are just the thing for all Bible students."

VI

I have been cheered by the way a young woman, working in a Lancashire cloth factory, and a member of the Church of England, has been led into definite service for God.

She was anxious to become a Sunday-school teacher, and thought I might help her. I gave her private tuition, using some of the notes which I had received from the Institute's Sunday-school organization and management course, and giving her other good material.

She progressed in a wonderful way, and was given a class in her Sunday-school, and in her heart God had placed a desire to see her scholars won to Christ.

As I was about to return to America, I told her of the way she could continue her studies, and again recommended the course in synthesis. I realized that the Sunday-school teacher must know her Bible, in order to be at her best for God and her pupils.

My friend was glad to avail herself of this opportunity of learning how to master the English Bible, and sent her fee, and received her material.

In this connection I might add, that I advised another girl in the same town to take up the same course, and if she does so, these two young friends, both of whom have a desire to become missionaries, will have happy fellowship together, as they travel along the same pathway.

VII

Two other instances are worthy of note. I had been preaching at a mission hall in a large manufacturing town in the North of England one Sunday morning, and at the close of the service a young man raised his hand, signifying his willingness to re-dedicate his life to the Lord for the work of soul winning.

I consider the Institute a great asset to the evangelist and Bible teacher, for those definitely touched by them can be placed in the hands of the Institute where they will be followed up by literature and correspondence as the various cases require.

I asked this young man to send me his name and address, and made an appointment with him, and as we walked together, I told him of "Moody" and the training he could receive there. Also of a correspondence course which he could take, if he could not go personally.

He told me that he would be delighted to go, but that he had to work in a cotton spinning mill to help support his mother and home, and as his mother was not a Christian, it was all the more difficult for him. Of course, in a case like this, there is the possibility of a correspondence course, and I told him so.

He apparently told another man, of the same place of worship, for he asked me for information relative to the Institute also.

I wish the reader would pray for these two men, that they may never be content to remain ignorant of the best Book of all.

There are others to whom I have either spoken or written, about the great school which God's servant D. L. Moody founded. I have done so because I knew it to be a God-honored channel for the training of men and women in the work of winning souls for Christ, and because I realized that the work of the people of God is to scatter abroad everywhere, preaching the Word, and by so doing, help to hasten the coming of the Day of God.

When one considers the distance these people are from this "West Point of Christian Service" and of the desire that many of them have of entering it, it makes one wonder if the people of this country fully realize the privilege which is theirs, in having such a place in their midst.

I have several on my waiting list, who would be faithful workers for the Lord Jesus Christ, but who are held up, more or less, through lack of funds. Will any of God's servants, to whom has been granted the "burden of wealth" take up the support of one or more of these young people as their representatives, and thus make a good investment in the bank of Heaven?

Personally, I often feel like Mr. Moody, that the more I know of myself, the less I think of myself, but when I think of the Lord Jesus Christ, and of what He can do through the humblest channel, my heart burns within me as I travel along the way.

Sixth Hebrew Christian Alliance Conference

By Henry Bregman

THE Sixth Annual Conference of the Hebrew Christian Alliance of America was held in Newark, N. J., in the First Baptist Church, Peddie Memorial, from May 31 to June 4. About eighty delegates, from the United States and Canada, were welcomed by several ministers of the gospel.

Rev. S. B. Rohold, F. R. G. S., Superintendent of the Christian Synagogue (Presbyterian), Toronto, Ont., read a message sent by the beloved Hebrew Christian, the Rev. David Baron, from London, England. The whole congregation of Gentile and Hebrew Christians rose to their feet and remained standing while the message was read.

Dr. W. M. Thompson, one of the speakers to welcome the delegates, told the Alliance that it had chosen the proper city for the meeting, asserting that there are more Jews in Newark than Protestants, and he added that some of the Jews were not far from the kingdom of God.

The Rev. T. Alexander Cairns pictured the Hebrew Christian as the most devout and understanding of all Christians, because of his heritage traced back directly to Jesus Christ.

The Rev. Abraham Lichtensten, field secretary, in his report, said that the Alliance has secured support for four missionaries in Palestine and Russia.

The expenses for home work, including the Hebrew Christian Alliance Quarterly for the last seven months, have totaled about $10,000, and a new year is about to be entered upon with practically no indebtedness on the part of the organization.

Rev. Elias Nawmen, evangelist for the Alliance, reviewed his work since last October, which, summarized, shows that he traveled over seven thousand miles, and worked in twenty-six cities and eight states. Over ten thousand pieces of Christian literature were distributed among Jews. Two hundred and seventy-eight subscribers to the Hebrew Christian Alliance Quarterly were enrolled, and contributions totaling $150 were received by him for the evangelist fund. During that time Mr. Newman preached in one hundred and twenty churches.

One of the features of the conference greatly blessed to the delegates and visitors was the devotional services held every morning, conducted by Rev. Dr. Harris H. Gregg, of Winnipeg, Man. The services were of such spiritual food the people will remember them a long, long time.

Rev. John Mark Levy, one of the evangelists of the Alliance, read a letter from the British Embassy, which he received while attending the conference in response to the attempt of the Alliance to obtain from the British Government promises of equal rights with orthodox Jews in Palestine. The letter stated that the legal status of all Jews who might take up their residence in Palestine, "must of necessity be dependent on the term of the mandate," and that since the details of the mandate have not yet been settled, it would be impossible to say what the rights of any particular section might be in the new community.

The communication signed by R. H. Hadow, secretary, further stated, "the desires of this Government will be to settle with justice, equity, and equality the claims of all sections of Jews returning to their native land."

The Alliance is about to send two of its members, Rev. Amos Dushaw, of New York, and Rev. H. H. Jacob, of Wyoming, to Palestine, to further the interests of Hebrew Christians there, and to help in every direction where help is needed to spread the gospel among the Jews.

The Alliance conference unanimously approved of the proposition for the establishment of a training school for workers especially young Hebrew Christians, who desire to labor among the Jews. The Alliance has the offer of a large home in Philadelphia to house the school, and more than $7,000 were pledged at the closing service at the conference as the foundation for this training school. The Alliance conference enjoyed spiritual, brotherly and Christian fellowship, which prevailed during the conference. Some of the brethren, who otherwise, would not have met on any other occasion, because of grievances against one another, met at the conference, sat at one table talking to one another in Christian love and fellowship.

At the invitation of Rev. A. B. Machlin, representing twenty-seven Baptist churches of Buffalo, N. Y., the executive committee of the Alliance resolved to hold the next annual conference, D. V., in that city.

Pre and Post

By Rev. Frank G. Sayers, in the Baptist Believer

IT WAS my privilege to attend the huge Interchurch World Movement State Conference in Chicago, and there be thrilled with the presentation of the world survey as a challenge to the church. Here is something I cannot understand—how do they explain it?

The entire home mission survey showed the rapid decline of evangelical church membership and Sunday-school attendance. S. Earl Taylor said, "The city of New York is more rapidly becoming pagan than any city in the Roman Empire became Christian in her worst days." We were shocked by the figures of paganism in our own beloved land, which we thought was Christian.

The appalling picture of the heathen world, drawn by Dr. Samuel Zwemer, Dr. S. Earl Taylor, and finally by Mrs. Cronk, with its unoccupied fields after 2,000 years, with its rapidly developing heathendom, stunned the audience. Then when Mrs. Cronk said, "There are more heathen today in the best of world mission fields, Korea, than there were when the first Christian missionary set foot upon Korean soil," it seemed unbelievable.

But, brethren in the gospel ministry, is not this exactly what premillenarians have been showing us for years? Yet we called them pessimists.

Did you notice when Bishop Nicholson, of Chicago, gave his illustrations of the personal evangelism of the two churches, one by a business men's club, led by Henry P. Crowell, President of the Quaker Oats Company, and member of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, and another by Rev. Mr. Stearns, of Philadelphia, that both of the latter men are publicly professed premillenarians?

What shall we say in the light of these things, brethren? Have these two schools found common ground after so many years? If premillenarians are pessimists, then surely that term must be applied to the Chicago conference presentation of the survey.

In the light of their own presentation, or, as one has said, "in the light of the evidence from their own investigations," how can they still sing "The World Is Growing Better?" How can they still insist on the postmillennial position?

When it comes to conditions the "posts" show us that all is not well with the world; when it comes to evangelism the "pres" have to be referred to for illustrations of soul-winning.

How do you explain this, brethren?

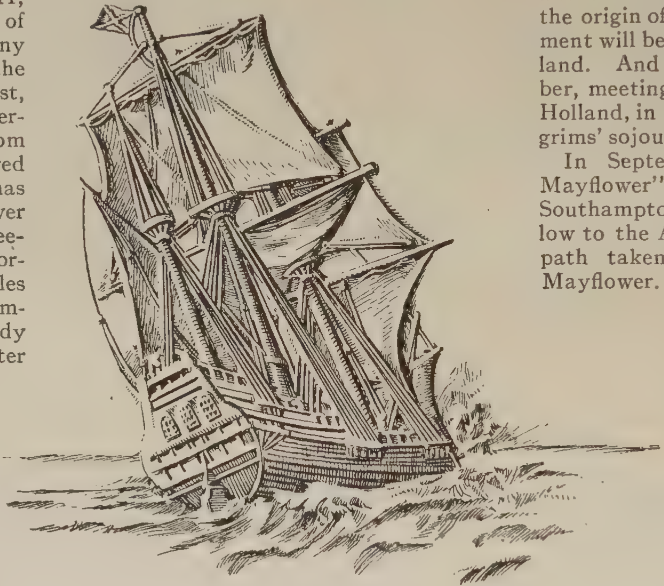
"What the Christian world needs today is to be flooded with sound, evangelical literature. Missionary colportage reaches all classes of men everywhere. In point of expense it is the cheapest way of spreading the gospel and the results are most gratifying."

The 300th Anniversary of America's Origin

By Bertram Brown, New York, N. Y.

THE year 1920 is doubly significant, historically. It marks the 300th anniversary of two important events which led to the founding of the Republic of the United States of America. One is the signing of the Mayflower Compact and the landing of the Pilgrims, and the other is the meeting of the first American legislative assembly.

On November 11, 1620, in the cabin of the Mayflower, a tiny bark lying off the Massachusetts coast, a little band of liberty-loving men, from "Britannia" entered into what history has styled the Mayflower Compact. This agreement bound the forty-one adult males in the ship's company into a civil body politic for the better ordering, preserving, and furthering of their mutual ends. And it provided for such just and equal laws and offices as should be necessary for the general good of the colony.



The Mayflower

In September a "second Mayflower" will set sail from Southampton, Eng., to follow to the American shore the path taken by the original—but this second Mayflower will be modern and much more seaworthy than her smaller predecessor.

Ten days later, so records Dr. Charles W. Eliot's inscription on the Pilgrim Memorial Monument at Provincetown, Mass.:

"The Mayflower, carrying 102 passengers, men and women and children, cast anchor in this harbor sixty-seven days from Plymouth, England.

"This body politic, established and maintained on this bleak and barren edge of a vast wilderness, a state without a king or a noble, a church without a bishop or a priest, a democratic commonwealth, the members of which were straitly tied to all care of each other's good, and of the whole by every one.

"With long-suffering devotion and sober resolution they illustrated for the first time in history the principles of civil and religious liberty and the practice of a genuine democracy."

Meantime, uninformed of the Pilgrims, fellow-colonists of Captain John Smith had met at "James City" (Jamestown), Virginia, for the first American Legislative Assembly. On July 30, 1619, they had thus broken ground for the foundation of the present democratic form of government in the United States.

This year (1920) these events are being commemorated in the United States, in England, and in Holland. In August, the origin of the Pilgrim movement will be celebrated in England. And early in September, meetings will be held in Holland, in memory of the Pilgrims' sojourn in that country.

In September, a "second Mayflower" will set sail from Southampton, England, to follow to the American shore the path taken by the original Mayflower. (But this second Mayflower will be modern, and therefore much more seaworthy than her smaller predecessor.)

This boat, carrying many prominent people of England, Holland and the United States, will anchor in Provincetown Harbor in late September. Its arrival will perhaps mark the crowning dramatic episode of the entire Tercentenary celebrations.

These events will not be celebrated in the United States by the citizens of Massachusetts and Virginia alone; nor solely by the New England and South Atlantic states. Communities throughout America are planning to take this opportunity to review the "foundation upon which the United States rests," and to re-emphasize those principles which these ancestors established, and which their sons, their followers, and their followers' sons have handed down to us through our form of representative government.

America is appropriating, from national and state treasuries, hundreds of thousands of dollars to be used in plans for the commemoration. One plan is to erect, overlooking Plymouth harbor, a colossal statue of Massasoit, the Indian chief who befriended the Puritan pioneer. Another is to set the Plymouth Rock, which in 1741 was raised above the tide, in its original position.

Seventy American cities, including New York, Chicago and Boston, have started plans for their celebrations of the Tercentenary. The Sulgrave Institution and the American Mayflower Council have been active in co-ordinating these plans.

Community Service (Incorporated), 1 Madison Avenue, New York, has drawn up suggestions for the use of communities planning to celebrate. These have been distributed for the use of schools, churches, clubs and general community groups throughout the United States and her territories. By writing to Community Service at the above address, individuals can secure valuable information and counsel regarding suitable plays, pageants, tableaux, recitations, ceremonials and music suitable for use in their communities.

Rom. 1:16—

"For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."

1 Cor. 2:2—

"For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified."

THE WAY TO CONQUER

"I'll master it," said the axe; and his blows fell heavily on the iron. But every blow made his edge more blunt till he ceased to strike.

"Leave it to me," said the saw; and with his relentless teeth he worked backward and forward on its surface till they were all worn down and broken, and he fell aside.

"Ha, ha!" said the hammer, "I knew you wouldn't succeed. I'll show you the way." But at the first fierce stroke off flew his head and the iron remained as before.

"Shall I try?" asked the still, small flame.

They all despised the flame, but he curled gently round the iron and embraced it, and never left it till it melted under his irresistible influence.

There are hearts hard enough to resist the force of wrath, the malice of persecution and the fury of pride, but there is a power stronger than any of those, and hard indeed is the heart that can resist love.—Selected.

Less of myself,
More of Christ
For me.

Less of this world,
More of my Lord
Would I see.

Draw me—yes, draw me,
My Lord, nearer
To Thee.

FAMILY ALTAR LEAGUE COMMITTEES

At a recent meeting of the Family Altar League, of which Rev. W. E. Biederwolf, D. D., is president, there was a merger of the various committees and the following are the committees with their chairmen: Executive, Henry P. Crowell; finance, J. S. Kraft; field and book, R. Howard Taylor; editorial, William M. Holderby; auditing, C. H. Boyer.

PRAYER ON A BUSINESS ENTERPRISE

Inaugurating a great business enterprise with a prayer meeting was witnessed at Bloomington, Ill., recently when the Meadows Manufacturing Company, which has just completed its plant, assembled all heads of departments and sales managers in the offices and called in a minister to conduct an old fashioned prayer meeting, marking the official dedication of the new plant.

THE McCAULEY WATER STREET MISSION

Reports have been circulated that this mission is about to close its doors because of the operation of the prohibition amendment. The mission sends out a statement that this rumor is absolutely without foundation in fact, and that the work of regeneration which it has been carrying on at 316 Water Street, New York City, is still going on, and there is no thought of closing.

D. L. MOODY'S VIEW OF THE WORLD

I look on this world as a wrecked vessel. God has given me a life-boat, and said to me, "Moody, save all you can." God will come in judgment to this world, but the children of God don't belong to this world; they are in it, but not of it, like a ship in the water; and their greatest danger is not the opposition of the world, but their own conformity to the world. This world is getting darker and darker; its ruin is coming nearer and nearer; if you have any friends on this wreck unsaved, you had better lose no time in getting them off.—Extract from a sermon.

THE INTERCHURCH MOVEMENT CONTINUES

On the evening of July 8, at a special meeting of the general committee of the movement, it was decided to continue on a greatly modified basis. It was said at the conference by Bishop Nicholson, that if the churches showed a reactionary tendency, they would be like the recent presidential conventions. The meeting was attended by about 150 men and women from all parts of the country including prominent representatives of the Presbyterian and Baptist denominations, which have not favored the movement.

THE ZIONIST'S ONE-TENTH

The majority of the delegates to the Zionist conference in London last month favored a tax of ten per cent of the annual income of the members of the Zionist section of Jewry for a foundation fund for public work in Palestine. If the project is adopted, the collections will begin on a certain date throughout the world, and the money collected will be used in establishing various institutions of a sanitary character, the maintenance of existing schools and the establishing of new ones, a large part of the fund to go to agricultural and industrial research, and to experimental stations.

THOMAS KANE

This Christian layman, and elder in the Third Presbyterian Church of Chicago, has done a notable service for many years in calling attention of Christian people to duties respecting the use of material wealth or income. At his own expense, for many years, Mr. Kane has sent out literature on the subject of tithing and continues that work. Pamphlets more than twenty in number as to title have been prepared under his direction, and practically cover the subject of Christian giving. Mr. Kane has been known by the name "Layman," and the documents referred to can be secured from him by addressing The Layman Company, 143 North Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAPTIST BIBLE INSTITUTE IN NEW ORLEANS

This institute was founded July 10, 1917, the first president being Rev. B. H. De Ment, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist Church of New Orleans, but was not opened until the fall of 1918. The institute occupies commodious buildings including administration building, class room buildings, and men's and women's dormitories. All the departments are well equipped, Rev. E. O. Sellers being at the head of the music department. Mr. Sellers was for a number of years the assistant director of music in the Music Department of The Moody Bible Institute. Mr. Sellers also directs the work of the Personal Work and the Christian Activities Department.

NOT SCIENTIFIC

In a criticism of a book written by Dr. George Preston Mains advocating the postmillennial theory of the second coming of Christ, Rev. John S. Plumer, D. D., of Pittsburgh, Pa., says in a review of the book:

"Premillenialism may be and is non-scientific, but the same is true of the contrasted doctrine. The phenomenal return of Jesus at any time near or remote, is beyond science. It is scientifically unthinkable that 'this same Jesus' who was said to have disappeared in a space some centuries ago will ever come in 'like manner' out of space.

"In the alembic of modern criticism the prophets are fast being vaporized into dreams with rainbow tints and the Gospels distilled into exalted ethics both presently to recombine, and to be precipitated as a manual of democracy."

A SOBERING TESTIMONY

Sir Auckland Geddes, the British Ambassador to the United States, said in Washington, May 30: "I doubt if ever before was the future for as many nations and as many individuals so closely shrouded in dark clouds pregnant with storm. In Europe we know how that the age is dying. Here it would be easy to list the signs of coming change, but I have little doubt it will come. The realization of the aimlessness of life lived to labor, and to die having achieved nothing but avoidance of starvation and birth of children, also doomed to the same weary treadmill, has seized the minds of millions." The Ambassador suggested that the way out of the world turmoil was by three essentials: beauty, service and truth, which if kept in view civilization will sail safely. He said that civilization was tottering.

DR. W. I. CARROLL GOES TO TEXAS

Some time ago, because of impaired health, Dr. Carroll offered his resignation to the Washington and Compton Avenues Presbyterian Church, of St. Louis. After a rest of some eight months, he still felt impelled to press his resignation in order to go to a more salubrious climate. Dr. Carroll did a good work in St. Louis, upholding the teachings of a former great pastor of that church, Dr. James H. Brookes; but felt that it was his duty to accept a call to the Presbyterian church at Marshall, Tex. He was on the program of speakers at the recent Christian Fundamentals Conference in Chicago. Before moving to Texas he will attend some Bible conferences as a speaker, being qualified for such work by his former close connection with Dr. C. I. Scofield, and his own mastery of the Bible.

FACTS THAT SHOULD ALARM

"The gospel is not presented by preachers in the good old fashioned way, and that is why people do not receive it in the good old fashioned way." So said Rev. L. L. Hammit at the Desplaines camp meeting near Chicago, July 8. Another speaker said that the churches were showing a greatly decreased number in attendance. Mr. H. T. Hughes, writing in the Daily News of Chicago, recently said:

"As I remember my home town in Michigan, back in the '70's and '80's, there were just as many churches (sects) as now, and, if anything, a keener rivalry among them than obtains at the present time, and yet, strange to say, the church pews were all full then.

"Organic unity in the churches may save effort and money, but I doubt very much whether it will save sinners unless some truly Christlike leader directs it—some leader that possesses the philosophy of a Newton, the sympathy of a Burns, the penetration of a Napoleon, and, above all, the spirit and love of Christ.

"Such a leader, I daresay, would soon find that if some other problems were solved first, and rightly, the problem of empty pews would soon solve itself."

OUR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES

During the war the lack of students in our theological seminaries did not seem a very serious matter because so many young men had gone into the army, but, now, since the war is ended, the ranks of seminary students should be filled. Are the classes in our theological seminaries as large as they should be to meet the needs of the Church?

We have not full reports from all our seminaries, but, so far as we have reports, there is at least a deficit of 25 per cent. The Western Theological Seminary, at Pittsburgh, Pa., graduated the smallest class this year that it has sent out any year for three-quarters of a century. In the years preceding the Civil War the graduating classes in this seminary averaged from 50 to 60. During the war the number was cut down to between 20 and 30, but before 1870 the average had greatly increased. The middle and junior classes this year are larger than the graduating class, nevertheless, the Western Theological Seminary has not more than 25 per cent of the students it should have if it is to do its part in supplying the Presbyterian Church with ministers. These are facts that all should know. The number of students in our theological seminaries, instead of keeping pace with the growth of the Church, has fallen away below what it was ten or twenty years ago. We are spending more on theological education than ever before in the past. It costs about as much to graduate a class of seven as to graduate a much larger class.—Presbyterian Banner.

WANTED TO KNOW WHERE TO FIND "HER"

Samuel W. Graffin, religious work director of West Side Y. M. C. A., New York City, tells this one:

"In a recent shop meeting my subject was

'Roosevelt,' and I spoke of the source of his great power, telling the men it was from five 'Wells.' I said that he was 'Well bred, well fed, well read, well wed and well led.'

"It was explained just what was meant by good breeding, physical fitness, and a well stored mind, a happy home life, and, as a climax, the being led by a higher power. Just as the explanation of what was meant by being 'well wed' was given, a young Italian-American spoke up:

" 'Say, boss, where can I find such a girl? I am looking for her.'

" 'Where have you been looking for her? Have you tried your church sodality or the prayer meeting?'

" 'No, sir.'

" 'Have you not been looking for her on the dance hall floor?'

" 'Yes, sir.'

" 'Well, old man, you cannot find a sodality or prayer meeting girl on a dance hall floor. The trouble is you have been looking for the right thing in the wrong place. Suppose you slip around to the old church crowd and see if the fine woman about whom you have been thinking is not in the same fine place where she has always been.'

"The crowd applauded as the young man vowed that he would accept the advice."

VISCOUNT BRYCE ON PALESTINE

"Palestine is a tiny little country. Though the traveler's handbooks prepare him to find it small, it surprises him by being smaller than he expected. Taking it as the region between the Mediterranean on the west and the Jordan and Dead Sea on the east, from the spurs of Lebanon and Hermon on the north to the desert at Beersheba on the south, it is only 110 miles long and from 50 to 60 broad—that is to say, it is smaller than New Jersey.

"Of this region large parts did not really belong to ancient Israel. Their hold on the southern and northern districts was but slight, while in the southwest a wide and rich plain along the Mediterranean was occupied by the warlike Philistines, who were sometimes more than a match for the Hebrew armies. Israel had, in fact, little more than the hill country, which lay between the Jordan on the east and the maritime plain on the west. King David, in the days of his power, looked down from the hill cities of Benjamin, just north of Jerusalem, upon Philistine enemies only twenty-five miles off, on the one side, and looked across the Jordan to Moabite enemies about as far off, on the other.

"Nearly all the events in the history of Israel that are recorded in the Old Testament happened within a territory no bigger than the state of Connecticut whose area is 4,800 square miles; and into hardly any other country has there been crowded from the days of Abraham till our own so much history—that is to say, so many events that have been recorded and deserve to be recorded in the annals of mankind.

"Nor is it only that Palestine is really a small country. The traveler constantly feels as he moves about that it is a small country. From the heights a few miles north of Jerusalem he sees, looking northward, a far-off summit carrying snow for eight months in the year. It is Hermon, nearly 10,000 feet high—Hermon, whose fountains feed the rivers of Damascus.

"But Hermon is outside the territory of Israel altogether, standing in the land of the Syrians; so, too, it is of Lebanon. We are apt to think of that mountain mass as within the country, because it also is frequently mentioned in the Psalms and The Prophets; but the two ranges of Lebanon also rise beyond the frontiers of Israel, lying between the Syrians of Damascus and the Phoenicians of the West.

"Perhaps it is because the maps, from which children used to learn Bible geography, were on a large scale that most of us have failed to realize how narrow were the limits within which took place all those great doings that fill the books of Samuel and Kings. Just in the same way, the classical scholar who visits Greece is surprised to find that so small a territory sufficed for so many striking incidents and for the careers of so many famous men."—Geographic News Bulletin.

SUBSTITUTES FOR WHISKEY

Dr. Hugh Barr Gray, a Boston specialist in nervous diseases, particularly those of drug and alcoholic addicts is authority for the following:

"The well-to-do are using whiskey, which can still be purchased if one has the price and a small amount of perseverance, but among the poorer classes there is a somewhat desperate search for substitutes.

"Jamaica ginger is the most popular of these, but bay rum, hair tonics and even perfumery have a certain vogue. These substitutes have a particularly deleterious effect, especially upon the digestive and nervous systems, and the victims reach a state bordering upon delirium tremens, where they are unable to either eat or sleep. This longing for sleep forces them to use some hypnotic, and veronal seems to be the best known and so the most used. It is alarming to see the number of men who are resorting to veronal.

"Others use paregoric, which is equally simple to obtain, and which, in my opinion, is more apt to lead into a worse habit. Paregoric has a large alcoholic content and is also a hypnotic, so that unless some restrictions are put upon its sale, it may be used very extensively, and it is an easy step from this to morphine."

Self-Improvement
Psalm 25:1-12

There is no relation between the subject of self-improvement and the twenty-fifth Psalm which is given for our Scripture lesson. What reasons the committee had for uniting the two, we do not know; indeed, what reason they had for choosing such a topic is problematical.

It has become the mental habit of our time to confuse self-improvement and kindred themes with the Christian life. Christ never invited a soul to come to Him for self-improvement, and no properly instructed Christian minister or worker will invite people to Christ for that purpose. We come to Christ for regeneration, for a new life, not for self-improvement or world-improvement. The mission of our Lord is clearly stated in John 10:10, "I am come that they might have life." Concerning those who have received Him as their life, it is written —"You hath he quickened (made alive) when ye were dead in trespasses and sins." All unregenerated people are dead, not some of them, not the down-and-out merely, or the human wrecks on the sea of life; but the respectable, the refined, the cultured also. There are no degrees of death. "The soul that sinneth it shall die." "Your sins have separated between you and your God." That is death.

Into this world of death Christ came, not with a message of self-improvement, but with the gift of life, a new life which He imparts to those who believe on Him. This life begins with a birth, hence the imperative word, "Ye must be born again," that is, born from above.

Unless the young Christian people of today recover and re-assert with clearness and emphasis, this great outstanding fact of the New Testament, the coming generation will not have the salvation of God presented to them. A cheap substitute of high-sounding phrases about self-improvement will not take the place of the gospel of God's grace, which alone has in it the saving power of God. A crisis has arrived and the Christian young people in our churches must meet it. Not those who have mistaken church membership or self-improvement for the life that is in Christ, but those who know Him as their personal Saviour, with that knowledge which is life eternal. These must stand against the modernism of today, which substitutes self-improvement for personal regeneration and world-improvement for the divine redemption.

There is a call to battle and the intelligent Christian young manhood and womanhood must respond. "Contending for the faith" is no empty phrase these days. The attacks upon the Christian faith are of the most subtle kind. They come mainly, not from those outside the professing church, but from those within.

Mayor Corwin, of Topeka, Kan., recently preached in one of the churches of that city. The words as reported in a Kansas newspaper are worthy of a careful reading. This is what he said: "When Bob Ingersoll was alive we listened to him and considered him something unique in that he did not believe in our religion. We thought and debated him out of existence. Now we could not produce a Bob Ingersoll; there are too many already in existence and Ingersolism emanates from pulpits of the land every day. The religion which we hear from the pulpits of today is concerned with almost anything else but salvation and the Bible. It deals with how many streets of a town should be paved and with what material they should be paved; and with how high telephone poles should be allowed in each alley or street. That is not what churches are for, and what the church needs today is more old-fashioned religion, or salvation, if you are not afraid to use the word."

Some good verses to read in connection with this topic are John 1:12, 13; 3:14, 15; 4:14; 5:24; Rom. 1:16; 1 Cor. 1:30; 2 Cor. 5:17; Gal. 4:4-6; Gal. 6:14, 15; Eph. 1:7; Titus 3:5-8.

Problems of Recreation in our Communities
Romans 4:7, 13-19

The responsibilities of the Christian believer are stated in the chapter from which our Scripture lesson is taken, together with the two preceding chapters and the one immediately following. Beginning with chapter 12 and continuing through chapter 15, six definite responsibilities of the believer are presented.

Our first responsibility is to God as seen in chapter 12:1, 2. The second responsibility is to our fellow-members in the Body of Christ, to the Church (vv. 3-13). Then comes our responsibility towards the world (vv. 13-21). This is followed by the responsibility towards magisterial power and governmental authority (13:1-10). The remaining verses of chapter 13 suggest another responsibility in view of the ever-approaching end of the age. In the last place there is our responsibility towards the weak brother in the church, the one who is saved but does not know the full liberty of gospel truth. This occupies the whole of chapter 14 and the first part of chapter 15.

The strain upon these Scriptures in trying to make them a basis of support for the subject of community recreation is so great that one can almost hear them crack. It is a case of wresting the Scripture from its proper interpretation in order to make it support a human theory. Our Christian Young People's Societies, as such, are not called upon to shape the recreations of any community. That problem is not theirs. They are to seek the regeneration rather than the recreation of those around about them. Individual Christians may engage in community recreation as a profession or as voluntary leaders for the purpose of helping the young life of the community. Even then, if one is to be true to his calling as a Christian, the spirit and purpose of Christ must be so illustrated and emphasized that the attraction shall be towards Christ and his salvation, rather than to personal enjoyment or achievement in recreative pursuits. There is a great danger that our Young People's Societies may be misled, being persuaded to take certain lines of work by those incapable of leading in the true things of Christ. It is fatal to substitute something else for the things that God would have us do. King Saul failed and fell because of this very mistake and thereby lost his crown, his kingdom, and his life. So will it be with those who fail to heed the warning of his folly.

The plea may be made that this kind of work should be undertaken as a means to an end, and that end the winning of others to the Saviour. If this objective be real and dominant, well and good; but if it be a mere disguise, as is often the case, then such endeavor is a waste of time for organizations bearing the name of Christ.

Institutional features and factors have made such an insistent clamor in recent years through the utterances of well-meaning, but unregenerated people, that the real work of Christ has been side-tracked and ignored. It is time for a change. The hour has come for the Young People's Societies to get back to the earnest purpose of winning other young people to a saving knowledge of Christ, and to a clear recognition that everything else must be made subservient to this. Let the lordship of Christ be re-asserted and Bible study, prayer, and the building up of His church be undertaken in a serious way, according to the pledge which the members of the Young People's Societies have made.

Lessons from the Poets
Exodus 15:1-11

If the lessons from this poem in Exodus 15 are well learned, we shall not need to turn to other poets at present for further lessons. A great deal of poetry is the expression of mere human sentiment and not of divine truth. As a consequence it often misleads, and fetters rather than frees.

This poem can be set to the music of any heart that knows the redeeming power of God. It marks the climax and culmination of Israel's deliverance from Egypt and the enemies in Egypt. In type it represents those who have found a real deliverance from the power and spirit of the world; those who through union with Christ, have passed out of bondage into liberty; those who know the separating power of the Cross and to whom the words of Galatians 6:14 are experimentally real.

Between the first mention of Israel's departure in chapter 12:37-42 and the second mention of the same fact in 13:17, there are twenty-five verses interjected. At first sight they seem to break the thread of the history and the even continuity of the story. The modernist and critic would say that they were the words of another writer or the work of another editor, but such a one has another guess coming. These verses tell us that when the people departed from Egypt and became pilgrims to another country, God gave them two ordinances, that of the Passover, to remind them that they were a purchased people—purchased by blood, and that of the first-born, which teaches the divine right of possession of that which is purchased. These two truths "purchase" and "possession" are the two supreme matters of importance for all those who have left Egypt for the Promised Land. The New Testament statement of the same truth is, "Ye are bought with a price . . . ye are not your own." Ordinances which remind us of these things are precious but of themselves are insufficient to teach us the ever-present power of God to deliver, hence the lesson at the Red Sea.

God led them into a difficult situation (See 13:17, 18) that He might teach them His power to deliver and thereby give them additional cause for trusting Him. Chapter 14 closes with the words, "thus the Lord saved Israel . . . and Israel saw that great work which the Lord did." Then they sang a song of triumph as recorded in our Scripture lesson of Exodus 15.

The chief value of this poem and song is that it contains the pattern of all praise. In this it corresponds to the heavenly songs of Revelation 5:12 and 7:12. The Lord is central. The singers are occupied with Him, not with blessings, not with service, not with reward, but "I will sing unto the Lord for he hath triumphed gloriously." Here is the source and spring of all praise—"he hath triumphed gloriously." The enemies were powerful,—Pharaoh, a great army, horses and chariots, all arrayed against the people of God, but over them He triumphed and triumphed gloriously. The enemies arrayed against us are powerful —sin, Satan, circumstances, death, hell, but He hath triumphed and triumphed gloriously.

Up from the grave He arose
With a mighty triumph o'er His foes;
He arose a Victor from the dark domain,

And He lives forever with His saints to reign;
He arose! He arose!
Hallelujah! Christ arose!

O children of God, if you are weak and weary repeat these words, say them, sing them, shout them; assert the truth which they contain; repeat with change of emphasis on each of the four words; then believe and rest in the Lord, so shall the sob and sigh of defeat give place to the shout and song of victory.

Receiving Praise and Giving It

Romans 1:8, 1 Thessalonians 1:2-10

In the opening verses of the epistle to the Romans, Paul introduces himself as a servant of Jesus Christ. In verses 8-16 the qualifications for service are mentioned. The first of these qualifications is in the eighth verse, the one chosen for our Scripture lesson. It is the quality of thankfulness. Paul thanks God for the faith of the Christian believers in Rome, and in doing this he incidentally bestows praise upon the body of believers in that city. They lacked some things as verse 11 clearly indicates, but their faith was of the right kind. It stood in the power of God and led to a life of good works. For this the Apostle rejoices, giving thanks to God and commending the people.

This same trait and disposition of the Apostle is seen in the other Scripture reference (1 Thess. 1:2-10), where he bestows praise for steadfastness and exemplary living. The believers in Thessalonica had withstood trials and persecutions of various kinds. Faith, hope, and love had overcome all obstacles. Their fidelity was such that they became an example to the other churches in that whole region. This made Paul's heart rejoice so that he again thanks God and commends the church.

The example of the Apostle in bestowing praise where it is deserved needs to be pondered and practiced. People work best under the inspiration of praise when it is deserved. It encourages them to greater efforts. If given when not deserved, it is simply deceit or flattery and the result is harmful.

There are many ways in which this principle, of expressing gratitude and giving praise when due, may be put into operation in our societies. When help is received from any one, acknowledge it, whether it be from the leader of the meeting or from some other one who takes part in word or song. Let those who really help receive the thanks or commendation of those who are helped. Older people especially might well practice the habit of commending others who are faithful to any work committed to their trust. No better stimulus can be provided for lifting the work of the society to a still higher plane.

Another place where this principle of giving praise should be adopted is the home. Parents with children and children with each other should practice this. It is the best antidote for the little jealousies that often mar the home life. Again in school and at the daily work this same principle when put into operation blesses and beautifies. But it requires the grace of God in order to practice this. Human nature is self-centered and loves not so much to give as to receive praise. Here, as in other departments of life, it is better to give than to receive. The spirit of Christ dwelling within will enable us to give praise to others when it is deserved, to be humble when praise is received, and to be content even when well earned praise is withheld from us. The true Christian learns of Him who was "meek and lowly in heart" and thus learning, finds rest of soul.

The Beauties and Wonders of God's World

Psalm 65:1-13

The latter part of the Psalm (vv. 8-13), shows the beauty and order of God's world. The morning and the evening, the spring showers, the flowing rivers, the golden harvest, the flocks and herds, the beauties of nature with hill and plain, mountains and valley, all enter into the picture and speak of the goodness of God.

To eyes illuminated by the Holy Spirit, God may be seen and known in the beauties of nature. John Ruskin said, "Almost all lovely forms and thoughts are taken directly from nature."

The beauties and wonders of God's world are seen in the order which everywhere prevails. The flow of the river and the tide, the movement of the heavenly bodies all speak of the order and arrangement of an Almighty and All-wise Hand.

The beauties and wonders of God's world are seen in the clarity and purity of things. The cloudless sky, the mountain stream, the pure air, the transparent crystal, all this speaks of the same good Creator and His care for His creatures.

The brightness of the heavenly bodies adds to the beauties and wonders of God's world. Without light nothing could be beautiful. Then again, think of the calmness, the peace, the serenity which are over all the world of nature. How greatly they add to the beauties and wonders of God's world! Nor can we forget the strength of the hills and the might of the majestic sea, the immensity and grandeur that add to the beauties and wonders of God's world.

All of these things, however, pale away into insignificance when compared with the beauties and wonders of God's world of grace. The world of nature has been marred because of sin. Thorns also and thistles does it bring forth. But where sin aboundeth, grace much more aboundeth. If, as men explore

Practical and Perplexing Questions

Grant Stroh

The right is reserved to reject questions which may be deemed unprofitable to answer especially those of a controversial nature.

CONCERNING OATHS

Y. K., Iloilo, P. I.

Question: Is it right to swear? What is meant by Matthew 5:34?

Answer: Matthew 5:34 evidently does not condemn swearing of every kind and under all circumstances. In the twenty-sixth chapter of Matthew Christ answered when placed under oath by the high priest, and we know that Jehovah has sworn by Himself (Heb. 6:13-18).

What seems to be forbidden is not official oath-taking but the common and foolish habit among men in daily conversing of vainly appealing to some external power or person, especially to God or to something suggesting God, imagining thereby to strengthen the value of their own words.

AN APPARENT CONTRADICTION

L. R. S., Brantford, Ont.

Question: Will you please harmonize Joshua 16:10 with Joshua 21:43-45?

Answer: We have here an apparent contradiction. To the Canaanites might be added the other tribes mentioned in Judges 1:27-36. In Joshua 21:43-45 we have a general statement of the conquest and possession of the land under Joshua. The summary was generally true, but not as to details. Summaries do not deal with details. It was true in general that the Israelites possessed the land as a whole, and that they were always victorious over their enemies. The Lord gave them the lands and the Lord gave them victory. The case of the Canaanites was an exception for they were not wholly driven out of the land. But whenever the Israelites fought against their enemies, trusting in God, their enemies could not stand before them.

THE AUDIBLE VOICE OF GOD

M. B., Lancaster, S. C.

Question: Does God ever speak to us in an audible voice?

Answer: No doubt in the past God has spoken to individuals and to His people in an audible voice. Having repeatedly manifested Himself in this manner He is able to do so again should He see fit. Your experience has been exceptional, but not impossible. However, we must be on our guard for Satan loves to imitate God. In these days many are claiming to receive messages from the unseen world. The Christian's chief dependence for revelation and guidance should be God's Word and the illumination of the Holy Spirit, rather than any exceptional experience, which might be misleading. Through prayer and providential leadings God will make known His will to His people if they are earnest, believing, and persistent.

MELCHISEDEK

K. M. N., St. Cloud, Minn.

Question: Was Melchisedek a supernatural being? Hebrew 7:3.

Answer: In this chapter Christ is set forth as a High Priest after the order of Melchisedek rather than after the order of Aaron. Christ, like Melchisedek, was to be a King-Priest and was descended from the royal tribe of Judah instead of from the priestly tribe of Levi. Melchisedek was not of a supernatural order, for in verse 4 he is distinctly referred to as "this man." A better translation of "without descent" is "without genealogy," that is, we have no record of his ancestry, of the beginning of his life nor of its end. Neither birth nor death is recorded. He appears suddenly upon the scene of history and as suddenly disappears. In this respect, as well in the kingly and priestly aspect, he is a fit type of the Son of God. "He was likened to the Son of God." That is, he was like Christ, but not literally so, only typically. He was the priest of God Most High, a greater man typically than Abraham to whom Abraham paid tithes, but he was in no sense a supernatural being. In the epistle to the Hebrews Melchisedek is not prominent as a person, but only as a type.

SWEDENBORGIANISM

C. E. S., Harrisburg, Pa.

Question: What are the fundamental teachings of Swedenborgianism? Are they scriptural? Are they who accept them saved?

Answer: The fundamental teachings are: (1) The eternity and deity of the Lord Jesus Christ, (2) Salvation by faith only through Him, (3) A strongly modified belief in the Trinity, (4) The inspiration of the Scriptures, although certain books are excepted. Believing these fundamental teachings we may not hesitate to say that Swedenborgians may be saved just as much as members of other churches.

The objections to Swedenborgianism lie in its excrescences. So much is visionary and fanciful. For example, heaven and hell are objective realities of their own spiritual states.

The last judgment is spiritual, indeed it is not now future, but took place in the year 1757, at which time seems to have occurred the second coming of the Lord. Swedenborg himself claimed to have received his revelation through the communication of spirits and angels, but it is significant that he discouraged others from such sources of knowledge, for the reason that such seeking affords an opportunity for evil spirits to mislead and to destroy the soul.

THE SOULS OF THE REDEEMED

N. W., Oliphant, Pa.

Question: Does the soul of a good person go to heaven at death? Will they return with Christ when He comes again?

Answer: If by a "good person" you mean a saved person, we answer "yes" to your first question. Christ said to the repentant robber, "Today thou shalt be with me in paradise." The thief asked only to be remembered at some future time when Christ came into possession of His Kingdom. Some at the present time are teaching that the soul remains in an unconscious condition between death and the resurrection. Still others have invented the tortures of purgatory and put them between the death of believers and heaven. Through Christ we are not only forgiven and cleansed from our sins by His blood, but are already "made meet to be made partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light" (Col. 1:12). "For by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified" (Heb. 10:14). Christ's work for us does not need to be supplemented. If the dying thief was worthy to go at once into paradise, so are we.

2. The souls of the redeemed will remain in heaven until He returns for the living saints (1 Thess. 4:14). When He is manifested we shall be manifested with Him, and they who have gone before will return with Him (1 Thess. 4:17).

CONCERNING THE KINGDOM

B. N. M., Kansas City, Kan.

Question: (1) How do the prophets describe the kingdom? (2) Have the conditions of the Davidic covenant been fulfilled? (3) Does Daniel describe the end of Gentile rule as coming gradually or suddenly?

Answer: (1) As to its geography the kingdom of God on earth, as described by the prophets, is to embrace the whole earth. As related to the Jews, it will embrace all the territory lying between the Nile and the Euphrates rivers.

The outstanding word used by the prophets to describe the kingdom age is "glory." Other words, such as righteousness and peace and knowledge, are also frequently used. The prophets, indeed, seem to exhaust language in their description of the coming glories of the kingdom.

As to events which accompany the setting up of the kingdom we have not the space to go into detail. Satan and his human representatives are to be dealt with, and judgment will fall upon the nations and all of Christ's enemies (Rev. 19).

(2) No; the conditions underlying the Davidic covenant have not been fulfilled. The Jewish nation must be judged, brought to repentance, and then accept Jesus Christ as their Messiah before He can rule over them and establish them in the kingdom.

(3) According to Daniel, Gentile dominion does not come gradually but suddenly. When finally the falling "stone" shall smite the feet of the image which stands for successive Gentile kingdoms then they shall be suddenly destroyed (Dan. 2:34, 35), and the God of heaven will set up His kingdom (v. 44).

THE TIME OF JACOB'S TROUBLE

E. S., Milwaukee, Wis.

Question: What is meant by "the time of Jacob's trouble?"

Answer: This phrase is found in Jeremiah 30:7. Concerning that day of trouble for the descendants of Israel there is said to be none like it, which reminds us of the words of our Lord when He depicted that same period, saying, "For then shall be great tribulation, such as hath not been from the beginning of the world until now, no, nor ever shall be" (Matt. 24:21, R. V.). The events of that period of terror and suffering will center about Jerusalem. It is important to note that Jacob is to be saved out of it. That is, as we learn elsewhere, a godly remnant of the nation is to be saved. Not only saved, but the Israelites are never again to serve their enemies, but serve God and David their King (Jer. 30:8, 9).

When is this time? Of this, too, we have information in the verses which precede and which follow Jeremiah 30:7. The Jews will have come again into nominal possession of Palestine, after having been scattered among the nations. God Himself is to cause this to come to pass. The closing verse of the chapter informs us that this will be in the latter days. Also we read in the next chapter, "And there is hope for thy latter end, saith the Lord, that thy children shall come again to their own border" (v. 17, R. V.). These are the things which now seem to have the beginning of their fulfilment in the present movements of the Jews towards Palestine.

PROPHECY AND FREE AGENCY

B. N., Guthrie, Okla.

Question: Were Jesus and Judas free moral agents? Did they not simply do what the Scriptures foretold they would do? Could either have done differently?

Answer: The difficulty seems to have arisen from a misunderstanding of what prophecy is. Prophecy foretells what will come to pass in the future, but does not predetermine deeds or events. When we read divine prophecy we say, these events will surely come to pass, or the things foretold have actually come to pass. But God's foreknowledge of what men are going to do does not compel men to do those things. Prophecy is not predeterminative but only predictive. Man was created as a moral free-agent with powers of self-determination. God knew beforehand that Adam would sin, but this foreknowledge did not compel Adam to sin. God knows all things that are to come to pass. Many of these things He has seen fit to tell us beforehand. This we call prophecy; but prophecy does not destroy man's power to choose and to determine his own course of action. God knows and could foretell what each person is going to do, yet He holds us all accountable for our deeds. No person is compelled to do wrong. God freely offers us His omnipotence to do what is right. Judas betrayed His Lord, not because it was so prophesied, but because he chose so to do. It was so prophesied because God foresaw it would come to pass. Prophecy does not foretell what men must do but what they are going to do. In each instance man freely chooses his course for himself.

BRIEF MENTION

E. H., Trenton, Ill.

Although David was anointed king while Saul was living, he did not reign over any portion of Canaan until after Saul's death.

The usual meaning of απολυω is to set free, to release, to dismiss; while λυτροω has the more particular meaning of "to liberate on receipt of a ransom."

Your question raises a controversy which we deem it unwise to discuss in this department as it probably would not tend to the edification of our readers.

J. W. F., Farnum, Neb.

We do not understand your first question. With regard to the second question, we would refer you to a satisfactory treatment of the subject in Progress in the Life to Come, by Rev. James M. Gray, D. D.

M. W., Hazlehurst, Miss.

We know nothing more of the man mentioned in 2 Kings 13:21 than is mentioned in the text. As to the name Belah, which is mentioned in 2 Kings 14:7, it means "the rock," and is thought by some to refer to the city of Petra. The Jewish name given to it was Jotheel, which means subdued or conquered by God.

Theosophy means divine wisdom. It differs from philosophy and theology in that it claims to derive its knowledge from intuition, or from the immediate communication of God to the soul. Theosophy is found among many nations and has in recent years been imported into this country from India.

nature, God's children would explore the realm of His grace as revealed in His Word, in His Son, in His gospel, and in personal experience, they would say with the Apostle, "We look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal" (2 Cor. 4:18).

Expressions of wonder are frequently heard from those who look out upon the beauties of nature with its order, its clearness, its brightness, its calm, and its strength. These are good, and were pronounced to be good by God Himself. But they are not the best, and we must never allow the good to become the enemy of the best. As the stars fade from our vision before the light of the rising sun, so do the beauties and wonders of the world fade in comparison with the "light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

AN OPTIMIST

Some one has said that an optimist is a man who can scent a harvest while snow still covers the ground. But I read a better definition than that. It was in a story. The young man in the story was trying to establish himself as a peach grower. He had worked for years, and invested his all in a peach orchard, which at last bloomed bounteously—and then came a frost. He didn't go to church the next Sunday, nor the next, nor the next. His minister went to hunt him up, and inquired the reason. The discouraged young fellow exclaimed: "No, and what is more, I'm not coming any more. Do you think I can worship a God who loves me so little that He will let a frost kill all my peaches?"

The old minister looked at him a moment in silence, and then replied kindly: "Young man, God loves you better than he does your peaches. He knows that, while peaches do better without frosts, it is impossible to grow the best men without frosts. His object is to grow men, not peaches."—Rev. J. F. Cowan.

The Kingly Kindness of David

2 Samuel 8:15; 9:1-13

Golden Text:—"David executed judgment and justice unto all his people."—2 Samuel 8:15.

I. David's Righteous and Impartial Reign (8:15).

When he was established as king over all Israel he executed judgment and justice unto all his people. In this respect he stands as a type of the Lord Jesus Christ; for when David's greater Son, the Lord Jesus, shall reign over all Israel, righteousness and justice will prevail in all the earth. The world's hope of deliverance from its wrongs and oppressions lies in the establishment of the universal King with infinite intelligence, absolute righteousness, and power to execute. This will only be realized when the kingdom of heaven shall be established on the earth.

II. David's Inquiry for Some of Saul's House to Whom He Might Show Kindness (9:1-3).

This story of faithful love to a dead friend is quite refreshing. David experienced great grief when he received the news that Jonathan had fallen in battle. Now when he is made king and success has crowned his efforts in the subjugation of his enemies round about, he sets himself to make inquiry as to whether there is any one left of Saul's family to whom he might show kindness for Jonathan's sake. When Mephibosheth, Jonathan's son, was found, David ordered him to be brought to him, and restored to him his grandfather's estate. Being unable to cultivate it on account of infirmity, David arranged that it be cultivated for him. Not content with this, he ordered that Mephibosheth should eat at his own table as one of his own sons. This example of David's nobility teaches us that those who are blessed and prospered should stop to inquire as to whether there are not some deserving ones whom they can help. It may be that children of some old friends who rendered us help in former days need care and help. Then, too, some faithful servant of God could be cheered along life's way. This should not be simply done as an act of charity, but in recognition of some lasting obligation in view of help rendered in by-gone days. This was the case with Jonathan. He had sacrificed much and endangered his life for David's sake. This principle might be applied to the memory of spiritual blessings conferred upon us by our fathers who braved dangers and death to give us an heritage of freedom.

The chief value of this lesson will be realized by making it a living story, illustrating the plan of salvation. David's making inquiry for some one upon whom he can bestow kindness illustrates God taking the initiative in providing salvation for lost and needy souls. This is clearly suggested in David's expression "show the kindness of God." Mephibosheth did not seek David's help or sympathy. Quite likely he had a fear and dread of him, like the sinner has in many cases, of the Lord. Salvation originated with the Lord. He did not make this provision because of man's merit, but out of a heart of grace, for the sake of another, even Christ. The kindness shown Mephibosheth was not because of his merit, but for Jonathan's sake.

III. Mephibosheth Is Found (vv. 4, 5).

This lame man was found in the house of Machir in Lodebar. This strikingly illustrates the sinner's condition. Being lame, shows his inability to walk uprightly. He was in the house of Machir, which word has, as its root meaning, "sold." This is exactly the sinner's condition—sold unto sin and Satan. Lodebar means "no pasture." This, too, suggests the sinner's condition of soul which nothing can satisfy but God. The sinner maimed and enslaved by sin has an "aching void" which only God and His grace can fill.

IV. Mephibosheth's Sense of Unworthiness (vv.6-8).

When he was brought into the presence of the king he reverently fell upon his face. Every sinner in the presence of God feels unworthy of His saving grace.

V. David Restores to Mephibosheth the Forfeited Estate of His Father (vv.9,10).

He not only restored this estate, but provided a means of tillage. God not only receives us into His family as children and restores to us the estate forfeited by Adam, but provides for its culture and development.

VI. Mephibosheth at the King's Table (vv. 11-13).

This act of kindness on the part of David was done out of the sincerity of his heart. This illustrates God's kindness to us in Christ. It would have been not only foolish for Mephibosheth to have refused this act of kindness, but it would have been an insult to the king; but it is infinitely worse for the sinner to reject God's mercy which has been bestowed upon him for Christ's sake. It is not only folly for a sinner to so do, but criminal as well.

The Sins and Sorrows of David
2 Samuel 12:9, 10; 18:1-33

Golden Text:—"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Galatians 6:7.

I. David's Sins (12:9, 10).

1. Adultery (v.9; cf. 11:1-4). David, instead of going forth at the head of the army as was the duty of the king (11:1), sent Joab and his servants, and he himself lounged around at home in idleness. It was while in idleness that he fell a victim to his lust, and committed adultery with Bathsheba. "An idle brain is the Devil's workshop." The crimes of the world are committed for the most part by idle men and women.

2. Murder (12:9; cf. 11:15-21). Having committed adultery with Uriah's wife, David tried to cover up his sin by killing Uriah. He ordered Joab to place Uriah at the forefront of the battle where he would surely be killed. The first sin was bad enough, but to attempt to cover it up by murder indicated supreme guilt. When men sin they usually endeavor to cover up their sin by committing others, and usually it requires the doing of greater wickedness to cover up wrong that has been done.

II. David's Sorrow (18:1-33).

1. The Battle between Absalom and David (vv. 1-18). Following Absalom's revolt, David fled from Jerusalem. After some counsel with Ahithophel and Hushai, Absalom with his men went in pursuit. Absalom planned well, but made one grand mistake—he left God out of the question. Failure and defeat will always come to those who leave God out of their calculations.

Being dissuaded by the people, David foregoes his purpose of going forth with the army. He sent the army forth under three commanders. His one special request, as they went forth to battle, was that they deal gently with Absalom. The victory of David's army was overwhelming. The interference of Providence is marked in that more died in the entanglement of the woods than by the sword. This defeat may be considered as illustrative of the greater defeat and more terrible disaster which will surely come upon those who have rebelled against Christ (2 Thess. 1:7-9; 2:8; Ps. 2; Rev. 19:11-21). In the flight, Absalom was caught in the bough of a tree by the head, and was left hanging as the mule went forth from under him. Perhaps his long hair, which had been his pride, was the instrument of his destruction. Matthew Henry quaintly observes: "He hung between heaven and earth as unworthy of either, as abandoned by both; earth would not keep him, heaven would not take him; hell, therefore, opens her mouth to receive him." While thus hanging, Joab thrusts him through the heart with three darts. This awful end was deservedly met (Deut. 27:16, 20; 21:23). They disgracefully disposed of his body (vv.17, 18). They cast it into a pit and piled stones upon it as a fitting monument of his villainy. How different from what he planned (v.18)! His one ambition was to be remembered. A heap of stones piled upon him in contempt is quite different from a tomb in the king's vale. This unfortunate man is remembered, but only with contempt for his villainy. "He that exalteth himself shall be abased." The proud and boastful shall be brought low.

2. The Tidings of Victory Announced to David (vv. 19-32). He was anxiously waiting for news from the battle-field. So anxious was he that he stationed a watchman upon the walls to look for some messenger to appear. His first question to the messenger when he did appear shows what was uppermost in his heart. It was as to the welfare of his boy.

3. David Mourns for Absalom (v. 33). He received the news of his rebellious son's death with much sorrow. The good news of the victory was entirely lost sight of through excessive grief. The sobs of his poor heart must have been awful. Perhaps it is impossible to analyze his sorrow, but most likely the following elements were present:

(1) The loss of a son. The ties of nature bind together the hearts of parents and children in such a way that separation by death is very trying. (2) The death of a son in rebellion against his father and God. Could he but have had the assurance that this course was regretted, or could he have heard a cry of forgiveness, his grief, no doubt, would have been greatly lessened. (3) He knew that his rebellious son had now gone to answer to God for his crimes. He knew that their parting was forever. What is to be compared to the agony of soul of the father and the mother who realize that their children have gone into the presence of God, impenitent! (4) He knew that this was but the bitter fruit of his own sin. In a sense he was the destroyer of his own child. May this example deeply impress all parents as to their responsibility. Away from this dark picture we turn to contemplate the depths of a father's love. Death effaces all faults; all wrongs are forgotten and only the memory of happy days is kept. The father is willing to die, even for a rebellious son. This illustrates God's love to us in Christ, which made Him willing to die for His rebellious children.

David's Prayer for Pardon

Psalm 51:1-17

Golden Text:—"Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin."—Psalm 51:2.

There can be scarcely any doubt but what the sin here meant is that which we studied last Sunday, namely, adultery and murder. (See 2 Sam. 11 and 12). About a year had elapsed from the time of David's sin to his repentance. The 32d Psalm graphically pictures David's state of soul during this time. It was a year of great soul-anguish; day and night he was lashed with a guilty conscience. In this psalm we see the path by which a guilty soul may return to God. Countless thousands since David's time have not only been encouraged to come to God with their sins, but have found David's words the very vehicle of expression of their own penitence.

I. David's Cry for Pardon (vv. 1, 2).

It is well to note his conception of God. He saw Him as a God of mercy and loving kindness. Though he keenly perceived his guilt, he did not despair, for he knew that the mercy of God was great.

1. "Have mercy" (v.1). He knew that justice would forever separate him from God. Because he saw the mercy and loving kindness of God, he did not sink down under his weight of gloom and despair. Because Judas Iscariot did not see God as a God of mercy he went out and hanged himself.

2. "Blot out my transgressions" (v. 1). He was fully conscious how many had been his acts of rebellion against God; how he had wronged his fellows; how grossly he had indulged his passions, and that all these acts were recorded against him; but having caught a glimpse of God's mercy and loving kindness, he plead with him not merely to draw his pen through the register of his deeds, but to blot out the record.

3. "Wash me from my iniquity" (v. 2). He knew that it was not enough to have God blot out his sin, for his very person was defiled. He knew that in order to be clean he must be washed thoroughly, and that by God Himself. So long had he been sinning that he knew it would require repeated washing.

4. "Cleanse me from my sin" (v.2). He was not clear that washing would make him clean, so he pleads with God to make him clean by whatever process was needed. He was even willing for fire to be applied, just so he could be clean.

II. David's Confession (vv. 3-5).

1. "I acknowledge my transgressions." (v. 3). He now makes a clean breast of them—he would hold back nothing. There is no way to peace with God but by a full confession of sin.

2. "Against thee . . . have I . . . and done this evil" (v. 4). All sin is vitally and really against God. All our wrong-doing with our fellows is against God, for such deeds violate His laws. To heighten all this guilt he remembers that it was done in God's sight, thus showing disrespect and contempt for Him.

3. "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity" (v. 5). He confesses not only these acts of sin, but that he is by very nature a sinner. He knew that the very fountain of his being was polluted.

III. David's Cry for Deliverance (vv. 6-9).

1. "Make me to know wisdom" (v. 6). He asked God that instead of heart wickedness he might be taught by God Himself in his inmost nature. The law of God must be written in the heart by the Holy Spirit.

2. "Purge me with hyssop." (v. 7). David seems to see that in order to be cleansed there is need of applying atoning blood. His prayer soars aloft on the wings of faith to the supreme sin offering, Christ. In His blood there was provided an adequate remedy for sin.

3. Restoration (vv. 8, 9). He not only wants pardon, but restoration to the divine favor in Jesus Christ. There is not only pardon for the sinner, but restoration to the favor of God.

IV. David's Cry for Purity of Heart (vv. 10-12).

He realized that if his life was to be different God must dispose his heart toward the right, so he cried that the Holy Spirit be not taken away from him. It is only as God's Holy Spirit abides in man's heart disposing him toward the right and enabling him to do right, that it is possible to live a different life from that which David lived.

V. David's Vows (vv. 13-17).

1. To Tell God's Mercies to Others (v. 13). The one competent to witness of God's grace and mercy is the one who has experienced them. The one who has experienced God's forgiveness at once desires to tell it to others.

2. To Sing Aloud of God's Righteousness (v. 14). He saw that the application of God's mercy and loving kindness was on the ground of righteousness and justice. It is this that encourages the sinner to throw himself upon God, for by faith he knows that God's mercy rests upon absolute justice (Rom. 3:26). In the previous verse he vows to preach, now he vows to sing.

3. To Show Forth God's Praise (v.15). When the Lord opens a man's lips, then his lips shall sing His praises.

4. The Reason Assigned (vv. 16, 17). It is because the sinner has seen the supreme sacrifice, Christ, and with a contrite heart presents the merits of Christ Jesus, God's remedy for sin.

Beginning of Solomon's Reign

1 Kings 1:5-3:15

Golden Text:—"The fear of the Lord, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding."—Job 28:28.

I. Solomon Anointed King (1:5-40).

David had hitherto failed to show the people who should be king after him (v. 20). He is now stirred to action by the combined appeals of Bathsheba and Nathan. He immediately sent for the faithful three, Zadok, Nathan, and Benaiah, and bade them to anoint Solomon king. They speedily executed their commission and soon the people shouted, "God save king Solomon!" This abruptly put an end to the feasting of the usurper Adonijah and his friends. They feasted first, expecting to complete their work afterward, but now it is too late to complete their work. It was God's will that Solomon should be king after David. Those who rebel against His will and fight against His decree shall see their purposes and efforts come to naught. May Adonijah's failure teach us to look to the end of a work before we begin it and to complete our work before we feast! It is well also to note this as another outbreak in David's own family. It is only one of the troubles which may be expected in a mixed family, especially when a child has been spoiled by over indulgence. From verse 6 we learn that David had never checked him in his selfish desires.

II. Solomon's Acts to Establish His Kingdom (1:41-2:46).

Coming to the kingdom at such a time as this, he noted certain dangerous elements, which if allowed to develop, would weaken if not destroy his rule. A wise king or ruler takes careful notice of the dangerous elements and stamps them out, even though it should mean imprisonment or death of the rebellious subjects.

1. Adonijah Placed under Surveillance (vv. 41-53). Though he had attempted to usurp the kingdom, Solomon placed him on good behavior. In this treatment Solomon displayed both clemency and dignity, which are praiseworthy in a ruler. It is exceedingly difficult to be merciful and at the same time maintain authority. When Christ, our King, ascends His throne He will not show mercy unto the rebels for He knows their hearts. Only consternation and anguish will be unto him who rebels against heaven's King. Adonijah flees to the altar, but this he does not for the purpose of worshiping God, but hypocritically seizes the altar in order to save his life; his repentance is not real.

2. Adonijah Executed (2:13-25). Solomon ordered him executed because he made an underhanded effort to become king.

3. Abiathar Removed from the Priesthood (2:26, 27). This man had joined Adonijah in his plot of usurpation. Solomon removed him from office and appointed Zadok in his stead.

4. Joab Executed (2:28-35). Joab, too, was a party to Adonijah's rebellion. Beside this he had treacherously murdered his rivals in the army. He was succeeded in the generalship by Benaiah.

5. Shimei Executed (2:36-46). Shimei had deserted David and joined his enemies and bitterly cursed him. Solomon first paroled him and confined him to Jerusalem, but when he broke his parole he had him executed.

III. God's Gracious Offer to Solomon (3:4,5).

Solomon made a lavish sacrifice to the Lord. The magnitude of this offering shows that he had strong impulses toward God, showing that he was unwilling to hold anything back from the Lord. This sacrifice was followed by the Lord's gracious offer. It was not that the Lord cared for the number of animals, but the attitude of the man's heart toward him. "Ask what I shall give thee," placed very wide possibilities before the king. God, as it were, signed blank checks and turned them over to Solomon to fill in any amount that his heart desired. This was not recklessness, for God foreknew what was in Solomon's heart to ask. He only makes such offers to those whose hearts are right. This offer to Solomon was no exceptional one, for opportunities equally limitless are placed before us. God is saying to everyone of His children, "Ask and it shall be given you." The matter with its limitations is placed before us in John 15:7, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." These unlimited offers are open to those who abide in Christ and let His words abide in them. Those who thus live are never asking anything contrary to the divine will.

IV. Solomon's Wise Choice (3:6-9).

The Lord's gracious offer brought the king face to face with the responsibility of making a choice; there was no middle course open to him. God so deals with His children that a choice must be made by every one. Indeed, the choice is being made by all. Solomon was keenly sensible of the difficulty and the responsibility of his position. David was a great king. For a young man to take up the work of an illustrious father and push it to completion is a most difficult task. Beside this, the disturbing elements set in motion by the usurper Adonijah were to be dealt with. Being made to shoulder so great responsibility so suddenly caused him to keenly feel his insufficiency. In his reply to God he pleads that his being king was not at his own choosing, but an act of God's loving kindness.

He argues that since God made him king He was bound to qualify him to fill that office. All who have been called of God to fill positions of honor and trust can truly exercise that same boldness of faith. This is true of the minister, Sunday-school teacher, and Christian worker in in general. When called to positions of honor and trust we should not become high minded and vain, but humbly present ourselves before God for help. To feel ourselves unworthy and unfit for great and responsible work, and to cast ourselves upon God for help is not cowardice, but a good sign that we shall not fail at the critical moment. Solomon did not ask for wisdom for vain display, but for the good of others. His petition was most unselfish; he desired inward worth, not outward show.

V. God's Unstinted Gift to Solomon (3:10-15).

Solomon's speech pleased the Lord. The Lord is always pleased when we place ourselves before him in such an attitude. Solomon got more than he asked for. Because he put wisdom first, God saw he could be trusted with material goods also. Christ taught the same thing when he said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matt. 6:33). He that puts God and spiritual things first in time and importance can be trusted with temporal things. That which God promised him above what he asked was riches, honor, and length of days. All who feel the lack of wisdom can go to God with confidence (James 1:5). God blessed Solomon with a singularly comprehensive mind (1 Kings 4:29-34). He was a botanist, zoologist, architect, poet and a moral philosopher.

The Building of the Temple
1 Kings 5:1-8:66

Golden Text:—"Mine house shall be called an house of prayer for all people (Isaiah 56:7).

I. Solomon's Preparation (5:1-18).

He secured from King Hiram

1. Wood for beams, ceilings, sheeting, and chambers around the holy house.

2. Stones for the great foundation. These were secured from the Phoenician quarries and also from the mountain upon which the temple was built. They were all so shaped that when the temple was erected there was no sound of a hammer heard.

3. Skilled workmen. Among the Israelites were not to be found men skilled in this kind of work, so the king arranged with Hiram to furnish capable men.

II. Solomon Building the Temple (6:1-38).

1. The Location—Mount Moriah (2 Chron. 3:1). This was a suitable location and it was here that the Lord appeared to his father Abraham.

2. The Dimensions and Materials. "If a cubit was 18 inches, the temple proper was 90 feet long, 30 feet wide, and 45 feet high."

3. The Contents.

(1) Brazen altar; (2) laver; (3) golden candlesticks; (4) cherubim.

III. The Dedication of the Temple (8:1-66)

The dedication of the temple was arranged to take place at a very favorable time. The success of an undertaking is largely determined by the time in which it is held. This was arranged to take place at the most joyous of the several representative gatherings of the Jews. The dedicatory services consisted of the following

1. Bringing up the Ark (vv. 1-11). The ark of the covenant was typical of Jesus Christ. God dwells among men through Christ (John 1:14). The ark was God's dwelling place. The ark must be brought into the temple, for God's presence was the true dedication. It was not Solomon's address to the people, his prayer, nor his offerings, but the presence of God that dedicated the temple. Only as our church houses are sanctified by the divine presence can they be said to be dedicated. When this great work was to be done the king arranged for a representative gathering of the people, consisting of the elders, princes, and heads of the tribes. In all important public undertakings the people should have a proper representation. Many men in public life fail because they do not recognize this. Though there were many great men, only the priests, God's appointed ministers, moved the ark. No doubt the fatal experience of Uzzah in David's time was fresh in their minds. Solomon profited by the blunder of his father. Connected with this service was a very great sacrifice in keeping with the occasion.

The ark with the two tables of stone under the mercy-seat shows that God manifested Himself with His people on the ground of a law perfectly kept, and sins atoned for by the shedding of blood. Following the completion of the sacrifices the temple was filled with the glory of Jehovah. If we come to God with true hearts, bringing our gifts, His presence will fill our lives and our churches, thus consecrating us to His holy service.

2. Solomon's Address to the People (vv. 2-21). He pointed out to the people that God had chosen David to be king, yet for certain reasons did not allow him to build the temple, but promised that his son should do the work. Now that the work was done, the temple was built, and the ark of the covenant was in its place, they could be assured that God had raised him up in the room of his father.

3. Solomon's Dedicatory Prayer (vv. 22-53). The ark having been placed in a most holy place, and the address of the people having been ended, the king prays. In this prayer Solomon gratefully acknowledges God's goodness in the past, giving glory to Him and pleads that His promise to his father be verified (vv. 2-26). He prays that God's eyes may be continually opened towards the temple which He had now taken possession of (vv. 27-33), so that (1) in case of contention between parties he would judge between them (vv. 31-32); (2) in case of being smitten by the enemy, even though they had sinned, on confession of the sin, God would forgive and restore (vv. 33, 34); (3) in case of famine as chastisement for sin, upon confession and prayer before the temple God would forgive and send rain (vv. 35,36); (4) in case of pestilence and sickness, if they prayed to God toward the temple, God would hear and forgive (vv. 37-40); (5) in case of the coming of the foreigner who comes at the news of God's greatness, praying toward Jerusalem, his prayer should be heard (vv. 41-45); (6) in case of going out to battle, their cause should be maintained (vv. 44,45); (7) in case of being in captivity because of sin, God would hear their prayers and restore them (vv. 46-53).

4. Solomon Blesses the People (vv. 54-61). On the strength of the covenant promises, he invokes God's presence always to be with them and to keep them faithful, and exhorts the people to have their hearts perfect before God, walking in His commandments and statutes.

5. Solomon and the People Offer Sacrifices of Thanksgiving (vv. 62-66). The joy of the people was full; they blessed God and the king.

Sunday-school News, Methods, Appliances and Questions

By Hugh Cork

FOUND AFTER MANY DAYS

By W. B. Williston

In April, 1907, I entered The Moody Bible Institute as a student. As part of my "practical work" I was assigned to teach what they called the "bad boys' class" whose average age was fourteen, in a Sunday-school on the West Side, and a few weeks later I was asked to superintend the school as well as teach the class, which positions I held until I left Chicago in 1909. During this time the class grew from five to twenty-five, and the school from nine to two hundred eighty.

When I had been in the work one year Rev. H. W. Pope, Superintendent of Men, finding I was getting no remuneration for this work, and as I was working my way through the Institute, proposed to give me a small church with a salary attached, but this I could not agree to as I was bent on winning my Sunday-school boys and girls, with their parents, to Jesus Christ. The work was often trying, but always joyous.

When I left the Institute on completion of my course, I felt my work at my Sunday-school was still unfinished, so I took my superintendent's book with me to China where I was sent as a missionary. For the eleven years I was absent the names in that book were part of my prayer list, and I kept in touch with many by correspondence until they changed addresses and failed to write me.

In March of this year, after an absence of eleven years, I came back to Chicago and spent ten days in visiting among my old friends. Naturally I went out to the old Sunday-school, now in a new church. As I inquired about those who had been won to Christ during my work there, I did not learn of one who had gone back into sin. I found out what many were doing.

One of my boys was a minister in Nebraska for two years, and is now a teacher in Lewis Institute, Chicago, and active in Christian work every day; another was appointed by the Methodist Conference as pastor in charge of two churches in the suburbs of Chicago; another is a leader of the Epworth League work in Milwaukee; another is on the Chicago police force; another a leading accountant of the city; another a successful lawyer and two others active in Christian work on the West Side.

Several girls hold prominent positions in Christian work, at least three are wives of pastors and another is a missionary in China. The leaders in the church now are all old boys and girls of my Sunday-school. The head man of the church now was the boy I spent, I suppose, a pair of shoes in keeping him in Sunday-school, and as I met him on this visit he said: "Do you remember me and all the shoe leather you spent in reaching me?" The leader of the Epworth League is now taking a course in the Evening Classes of The Moody Bible Institute. Many of the young people intermarried, and it was an inspiration to see them bringing up their families in the church.

One man invited me out to his home on Sunday. He was a father who had not always appreciated my following up his boys and girls as I did. As I was leaving he put his arms around my neck and said: "It may be late in the day but I want to thank you for all you have done for my family. My son is a minister, two daughters are active in Christian work, and my daughter-in-law is a teacher in the Sunday-school."

In another home I visited, as the woman opened the door, the tears rolled down her cheeks as she said: "To think of seeing you again and having the chance to thank you for what you have done for my family." While I was here her husband who was a hard drinker was converted and is still active in Christian work. Her two older sons, now twenty-seven and twenty-eight years of age have never missed a Sunday-school session since I left; one of the two younger boys, now fourteen years old, who was in the primary department when I was here, came in while I was there and as he looked at me he exclaimed, "My Uncle Wood!" and threw his arms about my neck and kissed me. He and his brother are musicians in the church on Sunday nights.

Six other parents came to me last night with similar words of praise, and similar joy lighting up their faces and warming their hearts. I stayed at the home of another parent and read the report of a college professor over in Iowa, stating that their son, another one of my boys, was the spiritual and evangelistic leader of the college. Another student and his two brothers who were with us are there and are lovely Christian boys.

One boy, now a local preacher, reminded me of a boy of whom he told me, who, with his whole family, never went to church. I went to see him and said: "Come on over to our Sunday-school. Never mind if you are shabby, the rest are too. Look at me." He came and from that morning he never missed a Sunday except through illness; and through him a brother who was a drunkard was converted, and is now active in Christian work.

In our work, especially with the children let us never despair. The one you weep the most for at the mercy seat will fill your heart with the sweetest joys. "He that goeth forth with weeping bearing precious seed shall doubtless come again with rejoicing bringing his sheaves with him."

Note.—The last report I had from the Practical Work Director was that 617 students of the Day Classes alone were teaching Sunday-school classes, as did Mr. Williston, as part of their practical work assignments in the Chicago churches every Sunday. If one can chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight, what is the combined strength of 617 holding each other up in fellowship and prayer, with one mind and one heart and one aim and purpose each Sunday? These 617 personally deal with nearly ten thousand young lives each week. A pretty good sized Sunday-school, is it not?—Editor S. S. Dept.

A TEACHER'S INFLUENCE

It was on a train in North Dakota that two older traveling men sat in the seat in front of me in the year 1893. When I heard one of them say, "She was my Sunday-school teacher before the war," I listened and heard the following story:

"She had a class of twelve of us whose average age was about sixteen. We often tried her patience but she was so kind, we thought the world of her. Most of us entered the army but she followed us with letters every month, and how good they were as they told she was praying we might be true soldiers, kept safely, and that we might return home clean and faithful to what she taught us.

"When the war ended the class scattered but her faithfulness has followed us even until today. Nine years ago she invited me to come to her home in Philadelphia for an old Sunday-school class reunion. I wrote her from a trip my regrets, but later found I could go and reported on the night named, at 218 West Coulter Street. She answered the bell and as soon as she saw me, she said: 'Why, it is Frank,' and she hadn't seen me for many years. I tell you we had a great time as Sunday-school boys again."

Just then they both got off without my even seeing their faces, but leaving my heart warmed by the influence of their old teacher.

I related this incident to good Dr. Henry Clay Trumbull in his Philadelphia home, fifteen years later, and he published it in the Sunday School Times as "A Commercial Traveler's Reminiscence."

Two weeks after its publication I was addressing a Presbyterian teachers' meeting in a suburb of Pittsburgh, at the close of which the pastor introduced me to one of his officials saying, "This is Frank." I said, "Whom did you say?" and he answered with a smile "Frank." Then, understanding, I said: "Is it possible that after these many years I am looking into the face of the one, back of whom I sat fifteen hundred miles from here and heard that thrilling story?" "Yes," he said, "I am the very man; and you know what temptations confront the traveling man today. My feet have been in slippery places, but as I felt myself sliding, the cords of love tied around me by that teacher held me fast. I am an elder in this church because of what she did with and for me."

O teacher, cast your bread of love upon life's sea and you will find it after many days. "In the morning sow thy seed and in the evening withhold not thine hand, for thou knowest not which shall prosper, either this or that, or whether they shall both be alike good."

TEACHING'S FOURTH LAW AND SEVEN OF ITS RULES

"The truth to be taught must be learned through truth already known."

To enforce this law the following rules should be kept in mind:

1. Find what your pupil knows of the subject you wish to teach.
2. Have him restate his knowledge to make it clear in his mind.
3. Begin with the facts which lie next to what he knows and slowly reach the unknown.
4. Study the steps so that one shall lead naturally to the next, from known to unknown.

5. Find your illustrations in the most common and familiar objects.

6. Make every new truth familiar and fix it in the memory for ready use in explaining other truths.

7. Make every advance clear and familiar else the next step may be from unknown to unknown.

"HE WILL ANSWER EVERY PRAYER"

"If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you," said Jesus.

Mr. Williston whose thrilling story, "Found After Many Days," is given in these pages, needed $1,500 to keep things going at his post in China while he was away on furlough. He had no idea where the money was to come from, but trusted God to attend to that while he made ready to leave. The evening of the day before he left, he met a Chinese merchant (non-Christian) on the street. The merchant, whose son is a Christian, said to Mr. Williston, "You have been good to my boy," and handed him a gift of fifty dollars. Others came in during the evening with gifts of money, because it was too late to buy anything. Altogether it amounted to nearly one hundred dollars, just enough to take him to Shanghai.

When he reached Shanghai, he told an official of the missionary society under which he labored just how things stood. He was then allowed to borrow $1,500. When he arrived in Vancouver, there was a letter awaiting him stating that $1,525 had been deposited (by cable) in the bank at Shanghai to be credited to his mission.

David said, "I have been young and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread."

"LEAD, KINDLY LIGHT"

John Henry Newman, the author of this hymn, was born February 21, 1801, the son of a London banker, and seventy-eight years later became a cardinal of the Roman Catholic Church. At the age of seventeen, he was graduated from Trinity College, Oxford, and became a tutor immediately thereafter. He was ordained in 1824 and in 1828 was made Vicar of St. Mary's Protestant Episcopal Church, Oxford.

He was a popular and forceful preacher, with fluent speech, perfect diction and a splendid fund of illustration, which he always used with telling effect. He was deeply interested in the heart-life of men and was ever ready to encourage them to speak to him freely of their experiences and temptations. He exercised a strong influence over the students who thronged his church.

In December, 1832, because of impaired health he went with some friends to southern Europe. The spiritual unrest, kindled by the "Oxford Movement" which finally led him to unite with the Roman Catholic church in 1845, was already upon him. He sought eagerly and conscientiously for divine guidance in solving the great doctrinal problems that vexed his soul. It was during that period of inner disquietude and of anxious thought for the future of the Established Church, of which he was still a member, that his noble hymn "Lead, Kindly Light" had birth.

He was in the middle of the Mediterranean Sea on his return back to England when one Sunday, June 16, 1833, sick in body, wearied in spirit, and with his soul much troubled over spiritual matters that he took his pencil and wrote this immortal hymn.

Years later when he had been made a cardinal of the Roman Catholic church, a friend of former years called upon him and mentioning the fact of his wonderful hymn, said it must be a great pleasure to him, even now to know how much this hymn is loved and sung the world around. "Yes," said the cardinal, "I am deeply thankful and more than thankful," then after a pause he said, "but you see it is not the hymn, but the tune that has gained the popularity."

Many great men and women the world over, have made this one of their choice selections. When President McKinley was being borne to his tomb, the band that led the procession with muffled drums played over and over again this grand old hymn. When William E. Gladstone was asked to name his favorite hymn he said, "Above all others I place, 'Lead, Kindly Light.'" There is no doubt that when we do see those angel faces loved and lost awhile, they will bear out the testimony of how much this great hymn meant while they were here on earth.

THE STORY IN RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

Jesus, the greatest teacher, taught more by the story-telling method than any other, consequently any help which will lead us to pattern our work after His will be of great value to us as teachers. There has just come from the press of the George H. Doran Company a most excellent volume of 181 pages on The Use of the Story in Religious Education, by Margaret W. Eggleston. She says in her foreword, "It is not designed for those who already know the principles of story-telling. It contains much that has been written but with this difference—it is for those in religious work who are eager to know how to most effectively use stories."

The statement is made that "A story may be said to be a narrative of true or imaginary events which form a vitally related whole, so presented as to make its appeal chiefly to the emotions rather than the intellect.

"A story is a great life message that passes from one soul to another. It steals as quietly as a canoe into the hidden places where naught else can go; it is as soothing as a song sometimes, and at other times it cuts like a two-edged sword. It is quickly given but lasts in the life through eternity. It has power to bless and it has power to curse.

THE TESTIMONY OF SUNDAR SINGH

By Rev. E. J. Pace

The Moody Bible Institute has in recent months been honored by the presence of two notable oriental Christians, whose fame has gone around the world. They are the Rev. Paul Kanamori, the Moody of Japan, and the Sadhu Sundar Singh of India.

The two men differ as widely as two men could differ in temperament, in racial traits and native endowments, and yet are one in whole-souled devotion to the Lord Jesus Christ, and in the manifest possession of the Holy Spirit of God. Both men have plumbed the emptiness of other religions and philosophies, only to find rest in a personal experience of life renewal in the Lord Jesus. Kanamori tested out to the full the vanity of Western rationalism; Sundar Singh, the hollowness of Eastern mysticism and asceticism.

Sundar Singh's is a thrilling story that has recently been put in book form by Mrs. Arthur Parker of the London Missionary Society, from which it appears Sundar Singh comes of an influential Sikh family; that he was converted at the age of sixteen after futile efforts to find peace in the native philosophies and religions of India.

For the last fourteen years he has been wandering over the plains of India garbed in the saffron-hued robes of a "sadhu" or holy man, penetrating into the forbidden countries of Thibet, Afghanistan and Beluchistan, and enduring all manner of hardships, dependent solely upon the Lord for sustenance and safe-keeping.

Sundar Singh has recently visited England, where he received a most notable welcome, bearing simple testimony to the reality and saving power of Jesus Christ, and then to America on his journey around the world. Following is his testimony given before the students of The Moody Bible Institute:

Christian friends, I consider it a great privilege to be with you at this time. Several times people have asked me why I am in this country. I am not here to preach. You do not want to hear any one preach in a broken language; but I want to bear witness for Christ and what Christ has done for me.

I have learned from experience that when I preached the gospel, I had a certain amount of success, but when I began to bear witness, it was a far greater help to many. If God wanted us to preach the gospel, then it would have been quite enough to preach the gospel to every creature. His angels could preach the gospel more than any creature in this world. They could tell about the things of heaven, and the joys and beauties of heaven, but they cannot bear witness to the saving power of Christ because they are not sinners saved by grace.

A man who has been perfectly healthy from childhood cannot be a witness for a doctor. But a man who has been suffering for a long time and has been healed—he is a true witness for the doctor. I was dying from the disease of sin, and I was cured. Only one who has been saved from his sins can be a real witness for Christ. But angels cannot say that; they were never sinners—they are not saved sinners. It is my privilege to bear witness for the Saviour who can save from sin.

I was not only a Hindoo, but I was an enemy of Christians. I used to burn Bibles and destroy them. On December 16, 1904, I poured oil over a Bible and set it on fire because I thought that Christianity was a false religion. I was spiritually blind and could not see the living Saviour. My father said, "Why do you do such foolish things?" I replied that this thing was false, it was wrong and it must be destroyed. But I was restless; I tried my best to be satisfied with Hindooism, but could not. I could not find peace anywhere. Nothing could satisfy my heart.

As I said, I destroyed the Bible with fire on December 16. The next day I was so restless and so dissatisfied and finally said I could not live any longer, and on December 18 I decided to commit suicide by placing myself in front of a train which went by at five o'clock. I woke up at three o'clock, and suddenly began to pray that if there was a God, he would show me the way of salvation. I would give my life to bear witness, but if there was no God I must die.

Since then I have had in my heart the wonderful love of Christ. I was not worthy of it, this great, infinite love of my Saviour. It was not an apparition nor a dream, but a reality that came to me that day. It meant for me a changed life. I went and told my father that I was a Christian. He could not believe me. "Only yesterday you burned the Bible and now you say you are a Christian." But then I began to bear witness. I felt that it was God's will for me to bear witness in foreign lands—in Thibet. And there I had a hard time.

But the presence of Christ can make this heart happy in spite of everything. One time they did not like to hear me witnessing in the streets; they did not want to hear anything about this Christ So they put me in prison, and there I had a great opportunity to witness for Christ. There were many others there, and I told them about Christ, and then the guards went to the magistrate and told him what I was doing. They said that I had been put into prison and now within twenty-four hours the prisoners were becoming Christian, and what was the use of putting me in there? So they put me in a separate room, with my hands and feet in the stocks. They took off my clothes and put leeches to my flesh. It was most painful when the leeches began to suck my blood, but I began to pray, and behold, a great happiness came to my heart. The presence of Christ turned my prison into heaven. I began to bear witness for my Saviour. Many people were standing just outside the door listening. The guards again went to the magistrate and told him that he had put me into prison to make me sorry, and all this persecution only made me happy, and what was the use of putting me in prison? The magistrate said, "There must be something wrong with his head," so they let me go.

But he said, "If a madman can be so happy, if it gives such a wonderful joy, then I want to be mad, too." So I was set free, and the people heard me tell about my living Saviour. Why is it that the things of this world are so very different from those of the other? The presence of the living Saviour makes this world heaven.

Only a witness can help others. Even children can witness for Christ. A learned man saw me before I left India and asked me, "How can you know Christ?" I said, "Here is a child, three years of age; he wants a drink of water. Shall he wait until he learns that water is made of oxygen and hydrogen? That would take him about seven years, and by that time he would be dead of thirst." People have quenched their thirst who never knew what water is made of.

Many people even in Christian countries do not believe in the fundamental truths. They say Christ was a great ethical teacher, but they cannot believe in His divinity. But they are wrong; He is the living Christ and Saviour. I am reminded of my experience with a learned man in India. He began to analyze milk. He found it is made of many things—water and sugar and all that, but when he got through that milk was not fit to drink. I said to him, "This child is wiser than you. He does not know how to analyze milk, but he knows two things from his experience. He knows that the milk is sweet, and in some mysterious way it becomes part of his body and he grows stronger and stronger every day. By your analyzing you do nothing but spoil the milk"

There are many people like that; they take the gospel and analyze it, and they spoil it. But those who, like the child, take the milk, not only grow stronger every day, but they know that Jesus Christ is, because they are living with Him and know Him to be the living Saviour. Such people can be witnesses for our Saviour. May God help us to live close to Him.

FACTS ABOUT THE SUDAN

1. The Sudan is as large as India, Germany, France and the British Isles combined, or as large as the whole of Europe, minus Russia.

2. The population of the Sudan, formerly estimated at from sixty to ninety millions, has been reduced by slave-raiding wars to not more than fifty millions.

3. The whole region has only about 150 missionaries, and these so located, that it is still possible to block out over forty squares, having an average population of a million, not one of which has a single missionary.

4. Northern Nigeria, our special field, is the center of the vast Sudan, and is the most densely populated region of Africa, still having large cities without a missionary.

5. It contains the most enterprising African race, the Haussas, who travel and trade throughout the whole of North Africa.

6. It presents a wide open door for the gospel, missionary operations being facilitated by British control, ensuring stable government, with railway, postal and telegraphic communication.

7. The pagan tribes are urging us to send them missionaries, and unless we respond to their appeal they will go over to Mohammedanism, whose teachers are flocking in since the British conquest.

8. The tribes vary in size from five thousand to a hundred and fifty thousand. Many have not the first missionary, and their languages have not yet been reduced to writing.

9. Five out of the twelve great provinces of Northern Nigeria have not a single mission station or missionary.

10. For 1,500 miles the Niger flows through a region where Christ is not known.

11. If we were to send out one new missionary every day, and give to each one a parish of ten thousand people, it would take over thirteen years before the Sudan would be occupied.

NO ONE TO SEND BUT A SCHOOL-BOY

An old native cannibal chief recently came down to the missionary in charge of Metet station in the Kamerun, and asked for an evangelist and teacher for his town. Upon inquiry it was found that his town was 120 miles beyond the farthest outpost of the mission. He demanded a teacher for his town. The missionary in charge said that he could not give him one because he was scarce of help,

THE PALM TREE CHRISTIAN

A Bible Reading

The Palm Tree	The Christian
Useful—Travelers speak of over 360 uses to which the different parts of the palm are applied—a use for every day.	Rom. 16, Servants, succourers, helpers, vs. 1, 2, 3, etc.; Heb. 3:13.
Fruitful—A healthy tree produces four hundred.	John 15:8, 16; Matt. 7:20; Col. 1:10.
Lofty and Upright.	Ps. 37:37; 1 Chron. 29:17; Eph. 4:13-15.
Branches Elastic—If bound to the trunk, when loosed will spring back.	Acts 4:23; 20:24; Rom. 5:3-5.
Rough Trunk—A traveler suddenly brought close to it would not admire it.	1 John 3:13.
But when he looks up to its foliage and fruit, he cannot help admiring it.	1 Peter 2:12.
Examine the Trunk, and we find it compressed by the enfolding of its bark; and at the top, where the foliage begins, it seems to swell out, and literally burst forth.	Rom. 8:23; 2 Cor. 5:2-4.
The Foliage grows as far as possible from earth, and as near as possible to heaven.	Col. 3:2.
Always Green—No holiday clothes.	1 Thess. 5:16; 1 Cor. 15-58.
Dust does not adhere to its branches.	Ps. 119:1; Jas. 1:27.
Grows in the desert, but sand is not its food.	John 16:16; 1 John 2:15.
Grows where water may be found. Sends down its tap-roots through the sand, and draws sustenance from the water.	John 4:13, 14; Ps. 87:7; Hos. 14:8.
Grows slowly, but surely.	1 Pet. 2:2; 2 Pet. 3:18; Col. 2:7.
Belongs to a family of plants known as "heart growers."	Rom. 10:10; Eph. 6:6.
It Guides weary travelers to where water may be found.	John 1:29, 42, 45; Barnabas, Philip, etc.
It Scatters its seeds. Thus we rarely find the palm standing alone	Isa. 32:20; Acts 8:4; 2 Tim. 4:2.
Long-Lived. Lives over two hundred years.	John 3:16; 10:28; 11:25, 26.
Its Branches were symbols of victory.	1 John 2:14; 1 Cor. 15:57.
It was used as pillars in the Holy Place.	Rev. 3:12.

LOOKING AT THE WRONG SIDE

A minister tells about going to see a parishioner who was in deep affliction. He found her embroidering a sofa pillow cover. He asked her to let him take it in his hand. He purposely turned it on the wrong side, and then remarked to her that it did not seem beautiful to him, and that he wondered why she should be wasting her time upon it. "Why, sir," she replied, "you are looking at the wrong side! Turn it over." "That is just what you are doing," he replied. "You are looking at the wrong side of God's workings with you. Down here we are looking at the tangled side of God's providence; but He has a plan—here a stitch and there a movement of the shuttle—and in the end a beautiful work." —Christian Herald.

NUGGETS FROM C. H. SPURGEON

A lame foot may tread the right road.

Allow no furlough to your obedience. Do not say to yourself, "At all other times I am exact, but once a year, at a family meeting, I take a little liberty."

A ton weight of human literature is not worth an ounce of Scripture.

A little too late is a lot too late.

Ask Christ to be your Owner. Run up the red flag of the Cross, and give yourself to Jesus.

A sentinel must not leave his post even to gather pearls or diamonds.

As well hope to grasp a star by the hand as divine truth by reason.

A gospel that is after men will be welcomed by men; but it needs a divine operation upon the heart and mind to make a man willing to receive into his inmost soul the distasteful gospel of the grace of God.

At our strongest we are weak enough.

A sermon of Christ, even a single word of Christ, set in the light of the Holy Spirit, shines like a diamond; nay, like a fixed star, with light that is never dim.

THE BOY WHO LOVED HIS BABY SISTER

A Talk to Children

By Alice Dresser Bartholomew

There was a little boy in a Western town who had a baby sister, a beautiful baby sister with curly hair, and several times when a lady passed their house she offered him twenty-five cents if he would sell her his baby sister, but he always refused. The price was not large enough.

One evening the lady was returning from up town and this little boy and his baby sister were walking just ahead of her. A sudden shower of rain began to fall and the little boy seized his baby sister in his arms and started to run home with her. The lady hurried after him, and said: "Here, you take my package and let me carry your baby!" But he refused. He was only a little fellow and the baby was heavy, but he was not going to exchange his precious baby sister for the package, no matter how valuable that package might be.

That is the way Jesus feels about you. It was a heavy burden to bear your sins on the cross, but Jesus would not give you up. Satan offered Him food when He was hungry, offered Him all the wealth of the earth when He was poor, offered to make Him king of this world when He was unknown and obscure, if He would step aside from the path that led to the cross and made possible your safety and mine; but Jesus refused. As the little boy wanted to carry his baby sister to their mother's arms where he knew she would be safe, so Jesus wanted to carry us to His heavenly Father's arms where He knew we would be safe. He wanted this because He loved us, loved us enough to die on the cruel cross to pay our debt to the law.

The Bible says: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." Can you turn away from such a loving Saviour? Will you not come to Him? Will you not come to Him now?

VICTORY OVER SIN

The fruit of the Spirit, which is love, is often absent in Christ's own people. Jesus Christ can give us the victory over sin and keep from actual transgression. I do not say that the root of sin will be eradicated and that you will not have any natural tendency to sin; but when the Holy Spirit comes not only in His power for service as a gift, but when He comes in divine grace to fill the heart, there is victory over sin; power not to fulfill the lusts of the flesh; ability to live peaceably among our brethren.

—Andrew Murray.

THERE'S NO POCKET IN A SHROUD

Use your money while you're living,
Do not hoard it to be proud:
You can never take it with you—
There's no pocket in a shroud.

Gold can help you on no farther
Than the graveyard where you lie,
And, though you are rich while living,
You're a pauper when you die.

Use it then some lives to brighten,
As through life they weary plod,
Place your bank account in heaven
And grow richer toward your God.

Use it wisely, use it freely,
Do not hoard it to be proud:
You can never take it with you—
There's no pocket in a shroud.

HAS YOUR VERSE CHANGED?

"I am the Lord, I change not."—Mal. 3:6.

A writer in the Alliance Weekly tells the following story of how a little child was used to lead a mother back into the light.

A poor woman in one of Major D. W. Whittle's meetings in Glasgow, Scotland, was brought into light by a verse in the fifth chapter of John, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." Verse 24.

The evangelist gave her the verse, written on a little card, and sent her home rejoicing, with her little son. They both went to bed that night, happy as angels. But in the morning she came down to breakfast as gloomy as ever, her face all clouded and her heart utterly discouraged. She had had a night of conflicts, doubts, and fears, and when her little boy asked what was the matter, she could only burst into tears and say, "Oh, it is all gone. I thought I was saved, but I feel just as bad as ever."

The little fellow looked bewildered and said, "Why, mother, has your verse changed? I will go and see." He ran to the table and got her Bible with the little card in it, and turned it up and read, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life."

"Why, mother," he said, "it is not changed a bit. It is just the same as it was last night; it is all right." And the mother looked with a smile at the little preacher whose simple trust was used of God to save her; and taking him in her arms, she thanked God that her precious verse was still the same, and her peace was unchanged as the everlasting Word of God. Is this what the apostle means? We are justified, now let us hold fast to the peace. It is not merely forgiveness, but it is an everlasting decree. Let us walk in the strength of it, and never allow the shadow of a doubt or fear to cross the sunlit sky of our heaven.—The Christian.

AIDS TO SUCCESS IN PUBLIC SPEAKING

The following suggestions, which William Ewart Gladstone made in answer to a request for "any hints that might be useful to a public speaker," are well worth considering by all "platform" aspirants. It was attention to these rules which in no small degree accounted for Gladstone's own power in "swaying audiences."

1. Study plainness of language, always preferring the simpler word.
2. Shortness of sentences.
3. Distinctness of articulation.
4. Test and question your own arguments before hand, not waiting for critic or opponent.
5. Seek a thorough digestion of, and familiarity with, your subject, and rely mainly on these to prompt the proper words.
6. Remember that if you are to sway an audience, you must besides thinking out your matter, watch it all along.—Selected.

SPURGEON'S POWER

Charles H. Spurgeon was the prince of preachers. Years have passed since his silver-toned voice became silent, yet his genius is still a topic of homiletical conversation, and his influence is still a vital factor in the lives of men. Seldom in the history of the Christian church has God raised up such an effective preacher of the gospel as Charles H. Spurgeon.

Rev. Thomas Phillips, in analyzing the secrets of Spurgeon's success, said that they could be comprised under the following heads: 1. He had a God worth serving; 2. a gospel worth preaching; 3. a religion worth enjoying. 4. a church worth sustaining.

We have here the fundamental convictions that a preacher must have if he would serve God acceptably and his church successfully. We would not have one mold for all preachers. There is room for a great variety of men in our ministry. On the other hand, no preacher can permanently succeed without having the consciousness that he has a God worth serving, a gospel worth preaching, a religion worth enjoying, and a church worth sustaining.—Watchman-Examiner.

A man might come from hell, his eyes bursting with terror, his flesh scorched with the fires of perdition, fly through your congregation as you preach, and cry, "Flee from the wrath which is to come." He might be followed by another, clad in white, from the heavenly city to tell of the joys about God's throne. Yet if the Spirit of God is not there, it will pass without effect from your people.—W. W. Clark.

The Evangelistic Field

S. A. Woodruff

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS

Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 2d of the month preceding date of issue.

"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns, and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work, nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

Dr. Henry W. Bromley of Wilmore, Ky., has conducted meetings recently in Santa Ana, Calif., and Valdosta and Soperton, Ga. Hundreds were reached, many of whom joined the various churches.

The Nygren-Beckman Evangelistic Party spent the month of May in a meeting in Winnipeg, Man. They write: "It was an unexpected 'hurry-up' call, but God blessed our endeavors to the conversion of many souls." At the time of writing they were holding a meeting at Kiron, Ia.

Clyde Lee Fife writes: "This has been our best year in souls saved and new members added to the churches. In several instances single churches have received as their share of the new members, as many as 200, while others have received 75 to 150, as a result of ten days to two weeks invitation."

S. E. Lewis and party closed a campaign at West Stephentown, N. Y., where 27 were received for church membership the last day of the meeting, and many others will follow. At the time of writing the party was at Wayne, N. Y., where 50 had already confessed Christ. Their July meeting was held in Italy, N. Y.

The first Sunday in May, Charles Reign Scoville opened a great union tabernacle campaign in Kearney, Neb. At the very first service the tabernacle was filled and after two weeks the tabernacle was enlarged to accommodate the crowds, and still they were turned away. There were thousands of professions, some to rededicate their lives, others to make a public confession of faith for the first time.

E. DeWitt Johnston and party recently closed a fine meeting at Fullerton, Ont., with five churches united. All the young people within a radius of several miles were brought to Christ with the exception of ten. At the time of writing Miss Hazel Bell Younger, of The Moody Bible Institute, was assisting Mr. Johnston and wife in a union tent meeting at Putnam, Ont.

Rev. O. T. Zimmerman of Naples, Tex., evangelist, and Rev. George Avery of Katy, Tex., chorus director, closed a meeting at Alto, Tex. There were 30 accessions to the Methodist church and 16 to the Baptist church, besides many renewing their covenant with the Lord. The Methodist church was organized into a "tithing church," and on May 2 they placed over $5,000 tithing money in the church treasury.

The Colorado Springs Evening Telegraph of June 7 stated: "In his fight with the 'common enemy' as he terms sin, Otho Sackett (at one time the world's bantam-weight champion, under the name of Young Kid McCoy) had 125 conversions at Fountain, during a week of evangelistic services which were brought to a close last night. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Sackett went to Hanover, where there were 22 conversions."

One hundred and sixteen boys were baptized, after having confessed their faith in Jesus Christ, Sunday, June 13, at the St. Charles School for Boys, Col. C. B. Adams, superintendent. Rev. Omer E. Confield, pastor of the Methodist Church of St. Charles, Ill., conducted the baptismal service. Miss Helma Sutherland, the representative of the Chicago Church Federation, has conducted religious services in this institution for a number of years.

Rev. Frank and Mrs. McKeegan closed a most successful evangelistic campaign with the Rev. Ganger of the M. E. Church, Hayfield, Ia. In spite of the inclemency of the weather the attendance increased. The Spirit of God was present in power, many souls were saved and God's people reconsecrated to the Master's Service. The M. E. Conference held their camp meeting at Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. McKeegan giving the evangelistic addresses. Over 200 responded to the call of God.

The Daily Vacation Bible School of the First Baptist Church of Lincoln, Ill., held sessions each week day except Saturday, from nine o'clock until noon. The sessions were held in the Sunday-school rooms of the church. They began June 3, and continued for five weeks. Rev. G. W. Kimball, pastor of the church, is general superintendent of the school and was assisted by several teachers regularly engaged in the public schools, as well as by numerous persons of the community, who are specially interested in some particular phase of the work, many of whom are not members of the church.

The school opened at 9 o'clock with a march followed by a hymn, either patriotic or religious, sung from memory. A short prayer, usually the Lord's Prayer, followed. Fifteen minutes was then taken up with learning new hymns. This was followed by memory work on the more familiar sections of the Bible, such as the Twenty-third Psalm and the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians.

A setting-up or physical-culture exercise of a few minutes was then given. After this came the general short story-telling period and the patriotic instruction. The day's work ended with about one and one-half hours spent in the industrial classes.

The school is non-sectarian. There are seven denominations in the enrolment of sixty-six and there are seven nationalities to be found in the list of children.

NAMES OF MINISTERS' SONS PREDOMINATE IN HALL OF FAME

Twenty of the fifty-one names in the national hall of fame are of those who came from ministers' homes, and three presidents and the wives of five presidents have been ministers' children. —The New York Tribune.

Book Notices

Any book favorably mentioned below may be secured at price named from the Bible Institute Colportage Association, 822 North La Salle Street, Chicago.

The Seven Sayings of the Saviour on the Cross, by Arthur W. Pink.

Mr. Pink is the author of a number of helpful volumes. Many have written about Christ's sayings while upon the cross but that they have not exhausted their content this new volume clearly proves. The method is expository and expositional. The purpose is devotional. The writer has rare spiritual insight which, combined with his exceptional knowledge of the Scriptures, makes this a volume particularly helpful.

Ruth, the Satisfied Stranger, by Philip Mauro.

The book of Ruth has yielded great riches to the devout expositors of the past and has not suffered under the skillful handling of the present writer. In the midst of those dark days of apostasy in Israel we have here a beautiful picture of redemption by grace. The author does not neglect the importance of the historical setting of the book of Ruth and the vital relation of Ruth to later history, but he dwells chiefly upon the foreshadowings of redemption which form the climax of the book of Ruth.

Men of Fire, by Rev. J. W. Mahood, D. D.

Dr. Mahood is a Methodist evangelist well known in all the churches. He is true to the Word of God, and has the burning heart of which he writes in the book under review. He reads widely, especially in biography, and nearly every page of his book contains an incident or illustration which the reader can pass on to others. The publishers are quite justified in this characterization: "An evangelistic book for the pulpit and pew. Evangelical, fervent, suffused with spiritual enthusiasm and thoroughly sensible and practical."

135 pages. Methodist Book Concern, Chicago. L. W. G.

The Plan of the Divine Architect, by Rev. J. H. Townsend, D. D.

Some big books are condensed into few pages. This is one of them. In these days when some leaders of men are bravely considering world-problems and others are overwhelmed by their magnitude, is it not well to study the plans of the divine Architect of the ages? These plans may be clearly discerned by those who are willing to patiently examine the records. They are intended for our guidance in just such times as these. A clear understanding of the character of our age as revealed to us by God is necessary to our most effective service under the divine Architect. Unless our plans conform to His plans we shall be in constant danger of making fatal mistakes. Dr. Townsend's little volume is illuminating. He does not discuss the divine plan but endeavors to clearly unfold the record of it as contained in Christ's own words.

47 pages. Size 7x5 inches. G. S.

"The Resurrection and the Life Beyond," by David James Burrell, D. D.

Dr. Burrell writes convincingly and his vivid style helps the reader to see what he sees. The present volume is not an argument for the resurrection, but a portrayal of it. Neither is this a book of sermons. The chapters are brief, from two to ten pages, and each a gem. Not only are we given pictures of Christ's resurrection, of the events which immediately preceded and followed, but Paul's later vision of the risen Christ, and also the resurrection of men that is still future. The resurrection which comes to men who die is not past, says Dr. Burrell. Then he discusses "Our Resurrection Body." Everything is real to the gifted author, even heaven and "Our Friends Over There."

The Interchurch World Movement, by Rev. Charles Hillman Fountain.

This is a pamphlet of forty odd pages, and in essence is a plea for the reorganization of the movement that it may be as evangelical in practice as it is in profession. The author quotes the Christian Herald to the effect that no great moral or religious movement ever labored under a greater load of misrepresentation, misunderstanding and active opposition than the Interchurch World Movement, and it is his purpose to show that while there is reason for this opposition, nevertheless if the defects of the movement in leadership and methods were removed it might be a great force for evangelizing the world.

The pamphlet is well written, and in a good spirit, but as we read it the thought arose in our mind that if the defects the author mentions were removed the Interchurch World Movement itself would be removed. In other words, the defects he names were the very things on which it depended for its life and success.

The pamphlet may be had of the author, Plainfield, N. J. J. M. G.

The Literary Marvels of St. Luke, A Difficulty Removed—The Gospels Harmonize With Each Other—By Lieut.-Colonel G. Mackinlay R. A.

These are two pamphlets by the author of The Magi, How They Recognized Christ's Star. The first named is to be expanded into a book, and was originally an annual address delivered at the Victoria Institute, London, 1919. The author claims to have discovered in Luke's Gospel and the Acts, triplications which the New Testament writer used in the selection and arrangement of materials, which are strongly confirmative of the truth they express.

The second is a practical application of the triplication in the structure of Luke, which helps to harmonize the four Gospels. It seems to us the more valuable of the two pamphlets, but both are commended to the consideration of thoughtful people who may have been led to depreciate the Word of God by the suggestions of destructive critics, or the teachings of the New Theology.

Where Are the Dead? by Rev. E. M. Milligan, D. D.

In answer to this question the author states that the souls of both saints and sinners who have died are resting in their respective abodes, paradise and sheol, awaiting a future resurrection. He contends that souls of believers do not pass at once into glory, and are not at present in heaven, which is contrary to the accepted teaching of evangelical Christendom.

The author defends soul sleeping in a somewhat modified form. In the resurrection of believers their souls as well as their bodies are to be raised. For this view he depends largely upon Old Testament texts, but these references are all plainly of the body. He admits that some few favored ones, like Enoch, Elijah, Moses, and Paul, have passed at once into heaven, and into the presence and the glory of God, but he claims these are exceptions.

His attempts to explain away the plain meaning of Philippians 1: 21-23 and 2 Corinthians 5: 1-8 are very weak and unsatisfactory, while his explanation of the story of the rich man and Lazarus is exceedingly far-fetched and fanciful. Such methods of interpretation would rob the Scriptures of their true meaning. This is not a book that we can recommend.

Christ in Word and Work, by Martyn Summerbell, D. D., President of Palmer Institute, Vice-President of Defiance College, Author of Faith for the College Man, Manhood in Its American Type, Christian Home Training, etc.

In this work its busy author touches the high water mark of literary and spiritual excellence beyond any of the books that have come from his fertile pen, thereby again negativing the dictum of Dr. Osler, inasmuch as he has passed considerably beyond the age indicated for his cutting off.

At the outset he sets his seal to the fact and the apologetic value of predictive prophecy which we are pleased to see, although he does not seem clearly to have grasped the ultimate goal of that prophecy either in Israel's history or that of Israel's Messiah. However, the book keeps its best wine for the last, or nearly the last, inasmuch as its earlier chapters, though of a high order in many respects, do not so exalt Christ or bring out the nature of His atonement as satisfactorily as the later ones.

We experienced a real uplift in the chapter on "The Spiritual Presence," and that on "The Headship of the Church" is good also.

The author does not see dispensational truth as it is called, and hence it is not to be expected that he should precisely express our views on Christ as the King of kings, or on Christ's demands for this age, but for all that, as he says in his Foreword, he has cleared away some misconceptions of the truth and pointed out some special relations that bear upon the Christian life of today.

It is a source of encouragement to think of such a man as Dr. Summerbell as hale and hearty, and so influentially associated with the education of Christian youth.

The Orient in Bible Times, by Elihu Grant.

This volume is attractive in title, as a product of the printer's art, and in literary style and composition. It is interestingly written and the author displays a knowledge of his material, due to wide reading. The claim is made in the announcement that "here is presented a remarkable and historically accurate panorama of the oriental world in Bible times." That it is a historical panorama we may concede but its accuracy we are bold to dispute.

Following the popular method of many historians of our day the first grave mistake of the author is in assuming a theory as true, then in making his facts conform to his theory. Such a method must of itself violate accuracy. Accurate history must be based upon facts, not upon theory. This theory is that mankind were originally savages, or mere children, a "primitive folk," who developed and slowly became civilized. Of course the author has his stone age and his nomad life out of which men gradually emerged and became city builders and world conquerors. Everything is upon the evolutionary hypothesis and the last state is always better than the first, although the progress may be marred by admitted notable set-backs. The Bible account of man's divine origin and later degeneracy is quite ignored. As to early chronology, that of the Bible is never referred to. All stating of events is based upon Egyptian or Babylonian chronologies which are admittedly incomplete and unreliable. The only accurate chronology for the first two thousand years of human history is in the Bible, but this author of the orient in Bible times does not deem it worthy of his notice.

Discussing the "primitive times" of the Hebrews he says, "The Hebrew historians of the early monarchy attributed the rise of their racial family to one Abram or Abraham. . . . We are uncertain as to his date and must remember that more than one famous man may have borne the name." The author appears to doubt whether the Abraham of the fourteenth chapter of Genesis was the ancestor of the Hebrews.

What deductions are we to draw from this paragraph? The author himself does not state. "In the names Habiri, Hebrew, Abram, and Hebron a relationship is suggested by the persistent consonants br."

The untrustworthiness of the historical accuracy of the author is clearly shown in his treatment of the conquest of Palestine by the Israelites. Instead of being a speedy conquest, initiated by the miraculous crossing of the Jordan of all the hosts of Israel and practically completed within seven years, when the land was divided among the twelve tribes, the opinion of the author of this "accurately historical panorama of history" is that the invasion of Palestine "may be viewed as a process of centuries." Such an historical error is quite natural for one to make who rejects the historicity and supernaturalism of the book of Joshua.

When an author so evidently rejects data long accepted as historical and reconstructs history to make it harmonize with his own theory we are naturally suspicious that his handling of events with which we are less familiar may be alike untrustworthy.

being just a new station, and had only school boys to depend upon. The man said that he had already asked three times for a teacher and was going to stay that time until he got one. So he came round every morning until the missionary in desperation gave him a school boy to go back with him to preach the gospel and to teach. The old head man expressed himself thus: "A few years ago we were hungry for human flesh, but now we are hungry for the gospel."

And no one to take to them the bread of life but a school boy!

SUNDAY-SCHOOL DEPARTMENT

"The story bringing happiness to the hearer may be expected to do several things:

1. To arouse the emotional or soul life and cause it to hunger for better things.
2. To correct unfortunate habits by showing through the story what the consequence of the habit might be.
3. To help in the making of decisions by remembering what the result of a choice was in the life of the hero.
4. To develop the imagination and lead it into proper channels of thought.
5. To cultivate a taste for literature, art, and music.
6. To create a desire to pass on the stories they have learned to love.
7. To relax mental tension.
8. To better the thought and expression in language.
9. To give a true knowledge of life.
10. To promote a broad sympathy between pupil and teacher; a child is always a friend to a story-teller.
11. To create a desire to know the world and its people—who they are and how they live.
12. To create a desire to serve so as to make the world better for our having lived."

This book is worthy of a place on every Sunday-school teacher's library shelf.

HOW HE KNEW IT

"No," complained the Scotch professor to his students, "ye dinna use your faculties for observation. Ye dinna use them. For instance—"

Picking up a jar of chemicals of vile odor, he stuck one finger into it and then into his mouth.

"Taste it, gentlemen!" he commanded, as he passed the vessel from student to student.

After each one had licked his finger, and had felt rebellion through his whole soul, the old professor exclaimed triumphantly:

"I tol' ye so. Ye dinna use your faculties. For if ye had observed ye would ha' seen that the finger I stuck into the jar was na the finger I stuck into my mouth."—"The Moody Church Herald."

A BIBLE INSTITUTE IN THE SOUTH?

The following editorial in The State (Columbia, S. C.) under date of June 28, is a news item of interest:

All persons interested in Bible study are invited to the high school auditorium tonight to hear Dr. James M. Gray, Dean of The Moody Bible Institute, of Chicago, who comes at the invitation of a committee of Columbians who wish to establish an institute for the study of the Bible in this city. Aside from the fact that Dr. Gray is a distinguished preacher, teacher and author, the purpose of his coming to Columbia at this time is of importance to this city as well as to the whole South, and he should be heard not only by those interested in Bible study, but by all who would promote the welfare of the city and state.

There has been a demand for some time for the establishment of a Bible institute in the South similar to The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, to which thousands of men and women go each year for the study of Holy Writ. To become the seat of such a school would give to Columbia a prominence much to be desired and most profitable spiritually and materially.

We most earnestly urge all citizens of the city and the state who can do so to hear Dr. Gray tonight.

REV. HOWARD W. POPE

The resignation of Mr. Pope, which took effect April 1, failed to be reported in the magazine, and hence correspondents are still addressing him on business matters who should write directly to the Business Manager of the Institute, A. F. Gaylord. Those who may see this will please act accordingly and thus accommodate

Mr. Pope as well as expedite the matters in hand.

In a conversation with Dr. Gray recently, Mr. Pope reported hopefully as to the condition of his eyes. While the right one will have to be operated on later, the cataract has been removed from the left one successfully. He can see sufficiently to walk on the streets with the exercise of caution, but is still unable to read or write. It will require no suggestion from us for his brethren to remember Mr. Pope in prayer.

DOCTORS HINSON, CHADWICK AND G. CAMPBELL MORGAN

The Institute was privileged to have addresses from these distinguished clergymen, in the case of the first named, Rev. W. B. Hinson, D. D., pastor of the East Side Baptist Church, Portland, Ore., on the morning of June 16; the second, Rev. Samuel Chadwick, D. D., Principal of Cliff College, England, on June 29; and the third, Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, D. D., of London on July 6. Dr. Morgan, happening to be in the city, desired to meet his friend, Dr. Chadwick, but having missed him, very kindly consented to favor the student body with an address.

REV. MR. SELLERS CALLS

Rev. E. O. Sellers visited the Institute early in July to greet his former associates of the Faculty and other friends. At the Baptist Bible Institute of New Orleans he has charge of music, personal work and the students' practical activities. The work is prospering, with emphasis on "evangelism, missions and altruistic service."

A SONG BY DR. GRAY IN ESKIMO

A letter to Dr. Gray from D. W. Cram, '92, written at Barrow, Alaska, Feb. 20, reads as follows:

"Mrs. Cram and I wish to send you this note of greeting from the 'uttermost part of the earth,' literally speaking. Attached to this letter is a copy of your song 'What Did He Do,' in the Eskimo language—Point Barrow dialect. The people of the church here are very fond of this song. They sing it often.

"I thought you would be glad to learn that this song has traveled so far and is preaching the true gospel to these hearts that are reaching after the light that it brings through Jesus our Lord. Mrs. Cram and I have the government school at this place. We have charge of the teaching of about 100 children aside from the industrial work which includes the managing of five large reindeer herds in connection with the government work.

"Our assistant teacher translated this song into the Eskimo and this copy I am sending you was made by one of our scholars—Homer Mikianna—a lad of fifteen years old—a full blood Eskimo.

"A friend of ours sent us your book, 'Text Book on Prophecy,' which we are enjoying very much. There are only six or seven white people in the place, the rest are Eskimos."

Here is the song in Eskimo:

1. Nalakseong aleoknaktoak koleaktoak.
Tamangagaloaktuane
Jesus kilyugmin atkaktoak
Tasuksagoklu-ota.

Chorus
Kea tamangaiksitpategut?
Ans. Jesus angarawiametuam.

THE ALEXANDER PARTY AT THE INSTITUTE

Charles M. Alexander, '94, spent the closing days of June at the Institute, accompanied by his associates—Mr. Voke, pianist, and Mr. George T. B. Davis, who have co-operated with him so effectively in his evangelistic campaigns.

Charles M. Alexander

In the morning meeting, June 30, he took up the songs in his Conference Hymnal showing how they might be used in consecration and decision gatherings. For more than an hour he held the audience captivated while he spoke out of his wide and rich experience which has covered every part of the field of the evangelistic singer. He would pause here and there to sing a chorus or a verse that was especially impressive, or to tell of some wonderful conversion that resulted from the singing of a certain song. The place and ministry of gospel singing in Christian worship and service was exalted as he led in the singing of hymns both well-known and unfamiliar, interspersing suggestions, advice and encouragement in his inimitable way. Lessons in conducting, in personal work, in accompanying and in expression were included.

He said in part: "Don't be afraid to use the old songs. Just because some of them have been worn threadbare here, don't think they have been out in the world. They may be new there, and even the old songs can be made new by the way they are used and sung.

"Take the one, 'Tell Mother I'll be There'; that has led more men to Christ than any other one song I know of. I had the teachers in a normal school call for that over and over again during some meetings. They were not any two by four men either, but big, thinking men in the school.

"Don't be afraid of a song because you fear it may be considered mushy or sentimental. Strike for the hearts of people, don't bother so much about their heads. Remember the outsider too, in your choice of hymns. Don't always use the ones that only the Christians can enter into.

"Remember that there is never a crowd without troubled hearts in it. Be sure of that. Take a hymn like this one by Charles Gabriel, for instance:

Pray, pray when things go wrong
And gloomy fears around you throng;
Pray, pray though your eyes grow dim;
Go with your troubles straight to Him;
Pray, pray, for God understands;
Have faith, leaving all in His dear hands.

When you begin to sing it they will be standing there, sitting there, with heavy hearts and sad faces, but the singing of a hymn like this will bring a change;—look for it, watch their faces;—they will go away looking rested, and before they go you will have made the opening for conversation with some by the words that have touched their hearts.

"Select hymns with pictures. Some have pictures in almost every line. They grip the heart at once, e. g., 'Saved by Grace,' and 'We Journey to a City.'"

Referring to the hymn "When He Cometh," and others that hold at least a reference to the subject, he said: "You can sugar-coat the truth of the second coming with a hymn, and present it when they would not listen to it in a sermon."

One of the most impressive moments was when he asked all who had brought their Bibles or Testaments to raise them while the refrain of "Carry Your Bible" was sung. The words rang out,

"Take it wherever you go,
Take it wherever you go,
God's message of love
Sent down from above,
Take it wherever you go,"

as the volumes, large, small, new and old, were held on high, and then he spoke of the opportunity that the singing of this hymn gives to urge the carrying of a Testament, and the daily use of it in the moments that could be so used by many not now finding time for it.

In this connection he referred to the meetings recently held in Detroit, during which 31,400 persons took a Testament and signed the pledge promising the daily use of it, among them being a number of the big business men of the city.

For those without the gift of voice, he had a message of encouragement that was not the least of all the good things given them that morning: "If you can't sing yourself, you can talk others into singing. You can be full of the song yourself. You can learn how it should be sung, you can learn what hymns to use for the different kinds and sizes of audiences, and then remember this,—have the music in your heart, the gospel in your heart, and you can get your crowd to sing. And the best place in all the world I know of in which to learn all this, is right here. When a man asked me at one of our meetings not long ago where he could learn how to sing the gospel songs as he was hearing them sung, I told him the best place I knew about was The Moody Bible Institute. You can learn how right here."

The meeting was enlivened by occasional touches of humor. When Mr. Alexander asked, "How many of you would like to own these books that have been handed to you?" almost every hand was raised.

"Very well, they're yours!" he exclaimed. "Now the rest of you will have to pay a quarter if you want a copy!"

Probably the most touching part of the hour was the few moments when Mr. Alexander sang, "The Land Where Roses Never Fade." Absolute quiet prevailed and at the close there were tears in many eyes:

In the land where the roses never fade,
Where no sin, neither sorrow can invade,
We shall meet our loved ones there,
And eternal glories share,
In the land where the roses never fade."

Mr. Voke's accompanying on the piano was a revelation of what that part of any religious service can mean, and the solos by Mr. Guy C. Latchaw and Mr. Bittikofer, and the singing of the Institute choir under the direction of Mr. Holzworth, all at Mr. Alexander's request, added greatly to the interest of the occasion.

In the twenty-seven years since Mr. Alexander left the Institute he has participated in a thousand or more evangelistic campaigns, of from two or three days to many weeks duration, in the cities and towns of the United States, Great Britain, Australia and half a dozen other countries. He has been around the world three times, and has crossed the Atlantic twenty-seven times, and through his instrumentality 7,000,000 copies of gospel hymn books have been issued.

A further report of Mr. Alexander's visit will be given in the September issue.

EVENING CLASSES GRADUATION

The Evening Classes Spring Term Graduation exercises were held on Tuesday, June 29, beginning with an informal reception to the graduates by the Faculty in the Women's Building at five o'clock, followed by supper, after which Mr. Gosnell called on the graduates for a few words, and all responded happily in brief testimony to the benefits they had received from the Evening Classes.

At the public exercises in the evening in the Auditorium, Mr. Gosnell presided in the absence of Dr. Gray, and Rev. J. R. Schaffer, Director of the Evening Classes made the address, following which the diplomas were presented by Mr. Thomas S. Smith of the Board of Trustees.

Mr. Schaffer's subject was "The Challenge of the Present Crisis," and it is regrettable that space is not available for more than a brief outline of his fine address.

He said in part: "We little realize how tremendous the issues are and how critical the hour in which we live, and we can never hope to know unless we climb the mount and gain a place of vision, as exhorted by our Lord when He said, 'Lift up your eyes and look on the fields for they are white already to harvest.'

"But so vast is the need that vision of the field alone would bring despair, were it not for a confidence of undefeatable expectation in the Christ of God, who shall never fail nor be discouraged. Valor must be added to vision, and the attitude of heroic abandonment to whatever confronts us.

"The statesmen of the world seem helpless before the tremendous problems of the time. No great commanding figure has yet arisen to dominate the situation and we look for the one Figure needed, for Him who is to come as an irresistible Sovereign who shall take the government upon His own shoulders.

"The supreme question in this hour of crisis concerns the church, for only as the church is true to her appointed task can the world be helped."

Mr. Schaffer gave some of the startling figures showing the losses sustained by the church in recent years and spoke of the growing line of cleavage in churches of all denominations between those who are true to the fundamentals of the faith and the "modernists" who are denying them.

Reminding his hearers that present conditions are fully described in New Testament prophecy, he emphasized the need of intelligent faith based on a knowledge of God's program, and the unlimited possibilities that lie before every Spirit-filled worker.

"This," he said, "is the day of opportunity for the laity. The amazing decrease of men looking toward a pastoral office makes it necessary for the unordained in the church to take up the work of leadership;" and he quoted Mr.

Moody as having stated it was not his purpose in the founding of the Institute to fill the outstanding pulpits of the land, but to train men and women to fill the hard places and to go to the poor and outcast with the gospel of life.

Concluding, he said, "In all the words which Jesus used to define the task of His church, the one that gathers all others into itself is the word 'witnessing.' This is the supreme service. We can only render the highest service, in view of the awful need, as we have the experience of the power of the Holy Spirit, a passion for souls that shall show forth in a message of grace to men everywhere."

Following the presentation of the diplomas, Mr. Smith said:

"I wish I could put myself in your place. You have evidently appreciated the exceptional opportunity that was offered to you here in the Institute. Now you are going out into some walk of life to use what you have received. Whether it be a large or small place, it matters not, for the greatest honor of all that any one of us can receive is to work for Christ. I feel sure, as years pass on, you will more and more realize the value of the training you have received here."

The graduating class had for its motto, "I can do all things through Christ, which strengtheneth me" (Phil. 4: 13.) It included seven graduates of the three year course, and eight of the four year course, as follows:

Three year course:

- Deputy, Alice M.
- Goodman, Mrs. Charles J.
- Monce, Carolyn
- Nelson, Anna

A DIETARY EXPERT REPORTS ON INSTITUTE MEALS

Recently Mr. Julius Haavind, head of the Purchasing and Household Department, submitted the typewritten daily menus for the past nine months to the Department of Food Economics of Armour and Company, Chicago. In a letter to Mr. Haavind, dated June 24, the Armour expert reported as follows:

"Having reviewed very carefully the Bills of Fare which you submitted to our Department I submit the following statement:

"The meals are well selected. They provide the essential food requirements in proper balance, and give variety in the diet as well. It requires skilful management and a technical knowledge of foods on the part of the directors to supply such well selected meals at so small a cost.

"I shall be very glad indeed to visit your Institute for further analysis of the menus."

A letter from the same expert dated June 29 reads as follows:

"I visited The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago today and made a careful analysis of the food that was served at the noon meal —12:30 o'clock.

"The following points were given careful consideration: quality of foods served, variety of foods served, suitability of food to season of year, food combinations, food with relation to proper balance, conditions under which food is prepared, and cost of food to consumer.

"After making this investigation, I am led to conclude that the directors of The Moody Bible Institute are providing well selected, well prepared meals, at a very small cost and that complaints to the contrary are unwarrantable. "Yours very truly,

ARMOUR AND COMPANY

FUNDAMENTALS CONFERENCE REUNION OF M. B. I. STUDENTS

Former students of the Day and Evening Classes and the Correspondence Courses, to the number of about 300, who were in attendance at the conference on Fundamentals held in Moody Tabernacle June 13-20, had supper with the members of the Institute Council at 5:30, June 18, in Keith Hall. Dr. R. A. Torrey, the first superintendent of the Institute, and Dr. W. B. Hinson, pastor of the East Side Baptist Church of Portland, Ore., were special guests.

Supper concluded, Dr. Gray, who presided, announced an old-fashioned testimony meeting for the brief time intervening before going to the evening session of the conference.

Homer A. Hammontree, '12, the first called on, spoke briefly of being out in the work with "Mel" Trotter.

H. S. Kimura, '01, told of fifty-five being converted on the steamer coming across the Pacific, and hundreds more at Seattle. Said he was "very happy all over" to be back at the Institute.

"Lucky Baldwin," '12, referred briefly to his criminal life and conversion, and to his present position at the Chicago "Bridewell," and said he had sent nine students to the Institute, and that seventy-six in the prison had been saved.

James A. Sutherland, '10, said that if he had to choose between his training in the Bible Institute, seminary and college, and could take only one, he would unhesitatingly take the training in the Institute; that he was on his way to Buffalo to the Northern Baptist Convention to assist in ridding the Baptists of their relation with the Interchurch World Movement, and that if he was enabled to drive a nail in the coffin, it would be one that was forged in The Moody Bible Institute.

John M. MacInnis, '97, gave happy expression to his debt of gratitude to Dr. Torrey, and the latter, who made the closing remarks, said that a former Japanese student of the Institute, Nakada, was now, he believed, the leading power for the gospel in Japan.

Others who spoke were, Samuel A. Johnson, '08, Miss F. H. Fredrickson, '19, and E. E. White, '01, secretary of the Alumni Association.

The following were present:

Alexander, David, '11; Ames, Mr. & Mrs. Lee W.; Andreason V., '09; Balfe, Christopher J. '12, ("Lucky Baldwin"); Barber, Ralph M.; Bates, Glen; Bauman, Miss Lucy; Beals, Mr. A. E. A LOS ANGELES REUNION IN CHICAGO

The Institute had the pleasure of receiving a group of former students of the Los Angeles Bible Institute recently. They held a reunion in the reception room of the Men's Dormitory and enjoyed a social time and had a picture taken. A letter to Dr. Gray from Rev. John H. Hunter, '96, secretary of the faculty of the Los Angeles Institute, expressed their appreciation of the hospitality extended.

MR. HOLZWORTH.
Chorus—"Hallelujah Chorus"............Handel

Mr. Hosmer sang, as an encore, "God Lit His Stars," by Nutting. The encore numbers by Mr. Fellers and Mr. Holzworth were respectively, "Waltz, Opus 64, No. 1," by Chopin, and "Gavotte," by Thomas.

It was observed that Mr. Schuler directed all the choral numbers without the use of music.

WORK AT THE GREAT LAKES

During the war, business men of Chicago, Milwaukee, and intermediate north shore points, organized a religious work at the Great Lakes Training Camp, teaching Bible classes in the various barracks of the station every Sunday morning, a work which has been greatly blessed of the Lord. While there in the uniform of a sailor, Frank Wyne was privileged to assist in this work as a teacher. Since his discharge from the navy he has continued this work as a student of the Institute. Within the last few months Leroy Frazier and Harold Wentworth, have also assisted in this work, which is under the direction of Mr. Nelson Hall and Mr. Roy D. Allison of the morale division of the Navy.

About a month and a half ago at the request of Chaplain Thompson, senior chaplain of the station, the Unity Quartet composed of H. A. Wentworth, H. E. Ingersoll, A. E. Horton and L. G. Morse, all Institute students, sang in the chaplain's service which all Protestant members of the station are required to attend.

As a result of prayer by the students and members of the Faculty, which it has pleased God to answer, the work has greatly broadened so that today under the direction of Chaplains Allison and Bilger of the morale division, who are doing a great work there, it includes the preaching of the gospel, singing in three of the Bible classes, the chaplain's service, the three brigs or jails, a vesper service, and singing in the navy clubs—old Y huts.

All of these men, both from the Institute and those in charge, have received great blessing in their own lives from seeing many of the sailors accept Christ as their personal Saviour.

RECREATION AND EVANGELISM COMBINED

The Recreation Club's trip to Michigan City, June 28, on the S. S. Florida proved a delightful outing, and furnished an opportunity also for evangelistic service. Two hundred and sixteen members of the Club and nineteen other students were on board.

Shortly after reaching port, eight of the students went to the center of the city for the purpose of holding a street meeting. They found the streets crowded with people listening to a band which was there to advertise a circus.

Pushing their way to the center of the crowds, they waited until the band had finished, and before the people had time to scatter, opened their meeting. The people came up close around them and listened with a marked degree of respect. It was an impressive service, and when the closing prayer was announced five men raised their hands for prayer.

On the homeward journey, an interesting chart lecture was given by Mr. Putnam on Christian evidences.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT NOTES

Dr. Ostrom has been engaged in teaching at a Bible Conference in Kingsport, Tenn. and Lebanon and Hershey, Pa. He has also had a fruitful week's Bible teaching in the Fourth Congregational Church at Oak Park, Ill.

Rev. George E. Guille has been teaching and preaching in Clover and Blacksburg, S. C. He expects to spend some time in Bible conferences during August on the Pacific Coast.

Dr. William P. White, regional director for the Northwest and Pacific Coast, is engaged in directing several Bible institutes in various parts of Oregon. He has several large Bible classes which he conducts at various points week by week, and is meeting with much success. One of them numbers at least 1,000 men.

Homer A. Hammontree had charge of the music at the World's Fundamentals Conference in Chicago in June. He has returned to his work with "Mel" Trotter and continues to enjoy the blessing of God on all his service.

Mr. C. E. Putnam spent two weeks in Asheville, N. C., and as usual, met with great acceptance and brought blessing to many. Recently he received a copy of the Christian Science book, "Science and Health," for which the owner had no further use, having been delivered from this heresy by the Scripture truth presented by Mr. Putnam. In the last six months Mr. Putnam has visited North Carolina, Florida, Texas and other places, and everywhere that he has spoken on Christian Science from one to six persons have turned away from this science falsely so-called, and returned to the faith once for all delivered to the saints. Because of his thorough study of Christian Science, and his acknowledged familiarity with the teachings of the Bible, Mr. Putnam is peculiarly fitted to render such service, and in his meetings the supreme value of the Word of God when plainly taught in the power of the Holy Spirit is constantly made manifest. He uses a small chart showing the teachings of Christian Science and is having this chart enlarged in preparation for wider service along this line. Many expressions of appreciation are heard concerning his clear, sane and scriptural teaching.

Rev. B. B. Sutcliffe, after assisting in the office during Mr. Riebe's absence on vacation, returned to his service in the field. He filled an engagement at the Gull Lake Bible Conference in Michigan, teaching twice a day. In the afternoons his hour was devoted to the general subject of personal work, and in the evenings he taught on the doctrine of the Holy Spirit. He is now engaged in Bible conference work in the state of Oregon.

PERSONALIA

Fern A. Houser, '09, located at Guatemala City, C. A. for several years, says in a letter to her mother dated April 16: "We have realized the truth of the ninety-first Psalm in our missionary experience. It is satisfying to see how the Lord fulfills this psalm to us. We saw this in the earthquakes in 1918, again during the influenza in the following year, and now He has seen us through a revolution." She gives a graphic description of their dangers and activities during the fighting which took place near the missionaries' building, which was opened to the Red Cross and served as a field hospital for the wounded. Two thousand were reported killed and twice that number wounded. The mission chapel was almost ruined. In closing she says: "Today most of the men have returned to work, forces are repairing the broken electric wires and the police are being organized. We hope to be normal soon. Each new tragedy adds faith to our conviction that our God is able to keep His people."

The First Presbyterian Church, Tyrone, Pa., of which Charles R. Scafe, '00, is pastor, increased its offerings for home and foreign missions and benevolences last year over 100 per cent. More than 45 per cent of their receipts are now contributed to benevolences. Sixty-six were received on confession of faith and fifty-four by letter.

George C. Crockatt, '13, is pastor of the Presbyterian church, Hersman, Ill., which has five former students in its membership of 140. The offerings for benevolences last year were $1,500.

William Clews, '04, pastor, Presbyterian church at Frostburg, Md., recently published two songs for which he wrote the words and music.

L. D. Ballingall, '20, passed his examination before the Detroit Baptist Ministerial Council held at the Woodward Avenue Baptist Church, May 21, and was ordained the following Sunday evening in the same church, of which he is a member, and in which he was saved in April, 1917.

L. B. Wilkinson, '19, has been pastor of Unity Baptist Church near Humeston, Ia., since January. There had been no regular services for more than two years previous. Revival meetings have resulted in thirty-six conversions, twenty-five new members and a greatly awakened interest in the community.

John Steffan, '18, spent the spring months resting on a western ranch. During his recent illness Mrs. Steffan, '18, carried on the work of the Steffan Prison Evangelistic Association and reports many decisions as the result of visits to eastern penitentiaries and jails during April and May. She asks prayer for Mr. Steffan's recovery, and for herself, that she may be kept in the will of God.

L. H., '18, and Mrs. Thomas, '13, who have been in evangelistic work since leaving the Institute, were ordained at Montezuma, Ia., May 30.

William L. Lightfoot, '12, is pastor of the M. E. Church, South, at Throckmorton, Tex. At a recent session of the Annual Conference held at Lubbock, Tex., he was ordained elder by Bishop William F. McMurry. He would appreciate letters from old friends of M. B. I. days.

The lady in the accompanying picture is Mrs. John Hay, formerly Sarah E. McFarlane, '18, now located at Kuta, via Minna, N. Nigeria, West Africa.

Norman Liddy, '06, is now pastor of Emmanuel Baptist Church, Buffalo, N. Y., having resigned his former charge at the First Baptist Church, Franklinville, N. Y. His address is 438 Massachusetts Ave.

John M. MacInnis, '97, has been honored by Syracuse University with the degree of Litt. D.

J. A. Hubbard, '97, was among the July visitors at the Institute. He recently resigned from the faculty of the Berry Schools, Mt. Berry, Ga., where he had been religious director and Bible teacher the past five years. At one time he held the pastorate of Dr. C. I. Scofield's church at Dallas, Tex., and he has been connected with two other educational institutions in the South.

L. O. Lineberger, '19, is pastor of four rural Methodist churches near Marietta, O. He says in a letter to Mr. Kirk: "It does me good to get news from the dear old school that straightened me out in the doctrines of the Bible and equipped me for service for Jesus." Address R. F. D. 5, care of F. D. Coffman.

Beginning June 16, ten days special services were held in the Washington Presbyterian church, near Chatfield, Minn., the pastor Rev. C. F. Geiger, ('00) preaching, assisted by neighboring pastors. The music was in charge of Mr. Roscoe F. Wilson, '19. The services were marked by spiritual blessing. Rev. Geiger is in his fifth year on this field.

Rev. M. H. McMillan, '13, is pastor of the Presbyterian church at Kasson, Minn. The church has responded to his active leadership, and there have been a number of accessions on profession of faith.

O. E. Miller, '09, has left the pastorate of the First Baptist Church, Mentone, Ind., and now has charge of the First Baptist Church at Decatur, Ind. Address, 523 West Jefferson street.

Herbert H. Rayburn, '17, graduated from the Omaha Theological Seminary, April 29, and is now pastor of the Congregational church at Howells, Neb.

E. T. Jensen, '17, has accepted the pastorate of the Evangelical church at Groton, S. Dak.

Horace R. Pittman, '15, graduated in June from the Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, O.

R. Z. Allen Grupe, '16, after resigning the pastorate at Naples and North Sebago, Me., has become associated with Rev. R. R. Brown at Woodlawn, Pa. Mr. Grupe was ordained by the Moody Church, January 4, and with Mrs. Grupe, expects to sail for South China under the Christian and Missionary Alliance in October. Address Nyack, N. Y., care of Correspondence Bible School.

Charles Jollay, '20, is pastor's assistant of the Suffolk Baptist Church, Suffolk, Va., which has a membership of over 1,000 in a town of 12,000. During a recent revival 80 were received into the church, of whom 49 were baptized. Mrs. Jollay was a member of the Married Women's Guild and says she has found the teaching she received in the classes of great help in her new duties.

George S. R. Anderson, '92, has had the unusual experience of being called to a church he founded in 1894, and then served as pastor for twenty years. After six years spent in evangelistic work under the New Brunswick and P. E. Island Conference, he is again over his former charge, the Highland Congregational Church, Somerville, Mass.

In a letter to Mr. Kirk, Ray E. Crowell, '17, stated that he was returning to the Africa Inland Mission to be located at Ama, West Nile Province, Uganda, where he would be associated with R. L. Davis, '17, and Charles Mount, '17, in the out-school and village work. He says: "I am pleased that God is blessing the Institute and often long for the good times of fellowship we had there. I always enjoy the magazine. Please pray that as I go to the new place I may be used of Him."

The annual class letter from Miss Harriet H. Albee, secretary of the August '14 class, was received recently by Miss Cary and the following news items gleaned from it:

Mattie Busch, 536 Bridge street, Brooklyn, N. Y., is in the office of the C. I. M. and writes that recently she enjoyed an evening of fellowship with a number of former students. She teaches a boys' Sunday-school class and one for mothers in a school for colored people.

Mrs. Mathilda Andastad (nee Baalsrud) is itinerating in Fanghsien Province, China, a large district with a scattered population and difficult to reach, but she says, "the Lord has begun his work here and by His grace it will grow."

Mrs. Clementine Welch (nee Compton) lives at Mount Union, Pa., and has three "stirring" children to keep her busy. Mr. Welch preaches in that Presbytery, and they appreciate having the magazine to keep them in touch with the Institute.

Blanche Gailey was unable to write because of illness, but her sister sent word that she had gone to spend some time with an aunt in Sterling, Kan., hoping to benefit from the change. She has the sympathy and prayers of her friends. Address, care of Mrs. Emma Massman.

Mrs. Charles Meyer (nee Elizabeth Goble) has been engaged in evangelistic work with the Colgrove Party since Mr. Meyer's death. Her address is 211 Prospect Avenue, N. E., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Edna Larson, Suifu, Sze, China, under the C. I. M. writes in detail of her work in the Baptist mission school there. Among other interesting things she speaks of the preference many of the Chinese mothers show for the mission schools by sending their daughters to them instead of to those the Government has opened for girls. She asks for prayer that the girls who are desiring baptism may fully realize what the gospel and baptism mean.

Mrs. F. A. Close (nee Ethel Page), 138 Ayers street, Youngstown, O., is serving, as she is able, in the local church. Mr. Close, '15, has left the ministry for the present and entered business life.

Winnifred Rhoads, Dennison Hotel, Cassville, Wis., is pastor of the First Baptist Church and reports an encouraging year's work in every department.

H. J. Thibaut, Belmont, Mich., is pastor of two churches and says: "I never would have been able to hold out in these days were it not for the foundation—the power of Jesus Christ, and the training received at the old school."

F. E. Rueckert, '17, is engaged in evangelistic work and reported many conversions from a series of meetings held in South Dakota.

J. J. Jones, '99, was ordained at Dallas, Tex., June 3 and is pastor of Winnetka Church there.

Charles Riley, '16, was ordained at the same service and is pastor of Pilgrim Church at Dallas.

W. T. Armstrong, '18, was installed pastor of the Southfield United Presbyterian Church, Birmingham, Mich., following two years of successful service there as stated supply. Address R. F. D. No. 1.

Harry Beckman, '15, reports successful meetings held in North and South Carolina and Iowa, at which he conducted the singing.

L. P. Cassel, '13, was ordained, June 4, at the Baptist church of Utica, Ill., of which he is pastor.

Mrs. Dora Cain Perkins, '14, assisted in evangelistic meetings at Lorain, O., during April and May, and at Pt. Pleasant, W. Va., in June.

Frederick W. Wightman, '00, for seven years pastor of the Sixth Avenue Baptist Church, Tacoma, Wash., which now has 300 members, called at the Institute July 4 to revive old memories, and spoke at the fellowship meeting. He is planning a new church building.

A letter to the Colportage Association from Rev. J. Herndon Billingsley, pastor of Trinity M. E. Church, South, Cumberland, Md., contains the following: "Am boosting Moody's school since reading Dr. McPherson's book. Am more than ever convinced the place to send our young men is The Moody Bible Institute. I am the direct cause of two young men going there. Thank God for some place to train our young where revelation is greater than reason."

The Gospel in Print

William Norton

THE WRITTEN MINISTRY

By Rev. Geo. E. Guille

The most important thing in the world is the preaching of the gospel and the teaching of the Word, for these are the divinely appointed means—and the only ones—of saving men and building them up in the faith. Since we hear so little of this God-given ministry from those who have been commissioned to give it to us, the thing of next importance is the gospel in print, and the written ministry of the Word.

Thousands who never heard the gospel preached have been brought to Christ through reading it, and thousands more who have for all their lives listened to sermons have finally been brought to the full assurance of faith and to the knowledge of Christ through simple, printed expositions of Scripture. One of the great preachers was led into the full light of God's Truth through the reading of the tract, Safety, Certainty and Enjoyment. The writer, for his safe-guarding against dangerous errors, owes more to some little pamphlets that, early in his Christian life were put into his hands, than to anything else. How many have been rescued from bewilderment and set upon the way to the right understanding of Scripture by that blessed brochure, Rightly Dividing the Word of Truth!

Thank God for the rapid increase of books and booklets that help us to know the Book and the blessed One whom it proclaims!

The predicted apostasy is here. God's command to His people for the times of apostasy is, not to discover something that men will "endure," but to "preach the Word." We ought, therefore, to spread abroad everywhere the excellent literature that is being provided for the feeding of the flock and the prevention of its going astray.

The false religious systems, and the false teachers in the church are busy with their propaganda. At every turn their publications are thrust into our hands. The literature of Christian Science is found in public places on every side, with the invitation to "help yourself." Scores of pamphlets setting forth the antichristian teachings of this and of all other false systems are to be had at reasonable prices. Why should not we as zealously disseminate the truth as these propagandists do "the lie"?

Those who stand for the supreme glory of the Lord Jesus Christ and love the whole Truth of God but who have no gift for the public ministry of the Word, can accomplish great things through the distribution of the printed page. More than one church has been saved from apostasy through the quiet ministry of one person who has made it his business to disseminate pure gospel literature.

Let us thank God for the agencies that are publishing and scattering abroad such literature and remember that fellowship in such work is "fellowship in the gospel."

"The Spiritist Intrusion"

is what LIFE calls the renewed interest in psychic phenomena stimulated by the bereavements of the war, and now exhibited in the popular writings of Booth Tarkington, Conan Doyle and Ralph Adams Cram.

This gives new and strong reason for reading Dr. James M. Gray's well known book, which is constantly called for,

Satan and the Saint

It deals also with other present day deceptions of the devil.

"THE NEXT WORLD-CRISIS"

Previously published as
"WHEN GOD COMES DOWN TO EARTH"

By REV. GRANT STROH

With Introduction by Rev. James M. Gray, D.D.

WORLD-CONDITIONS have never been so unsettled. Unrest, uncertainty almost everywhere. No country seems immune from the mania of discontent. Man's capacity for self-destruction was never more evident than now. Given free rein, man rules only to ruin.

The Great World-War did not settle any great world-issues. Bitterness and hatred, greed and graft, mark the relations between classes, sections, and nations. Post-war problems appear to be even more appalling than those of the war itself.

Another fact to be faced is the certainty of more war. The fighting spirit is not dead. Nations are not disarming. Portentous signs appear upon the horizon. The world-outlook was never darker than it is today.

Has the Bible anything to say about the approaching world-crisis, its magnitude, its severity, its outcome? The purpose of this book is to show clearly the certainty of such a crisis, and also to discuss its character and portray the outcome.

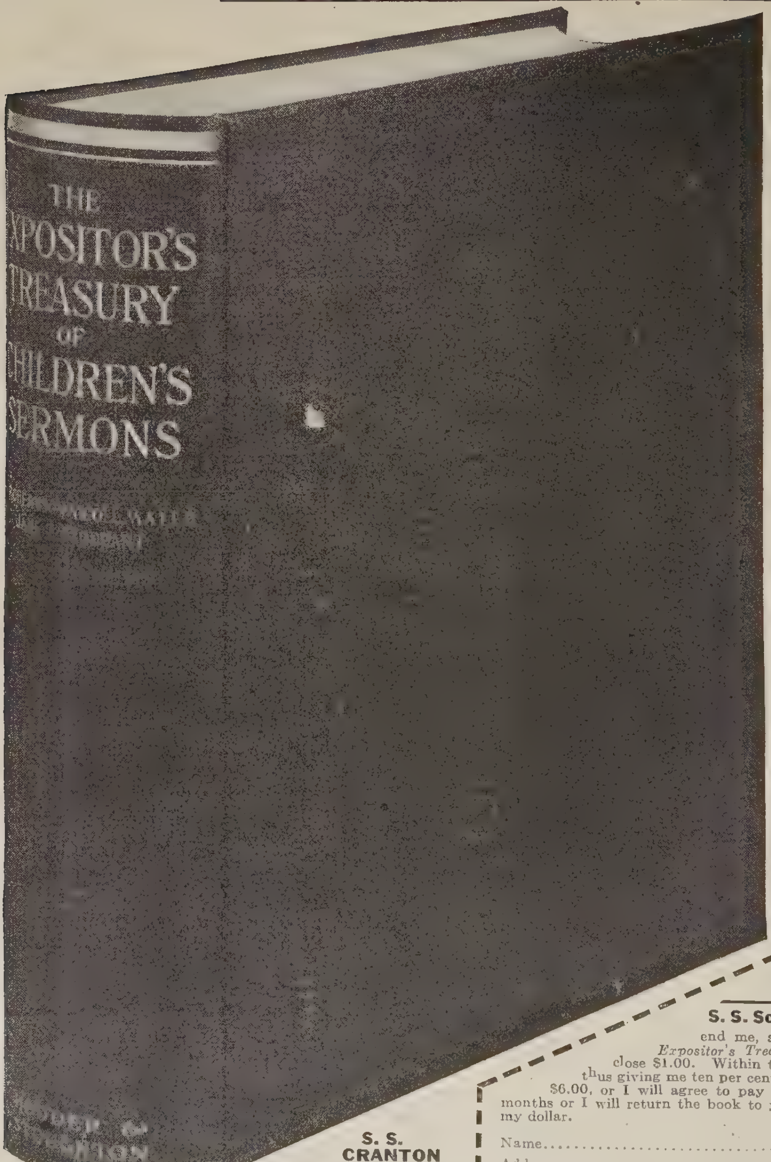
MAKE EVERY SUNDAY CHILDREN'S SUNDAY

EXPOSITOR'S TREASURY OF CHILDREN'S SERMONS

EDITED BY SIR W. ROBERTSON NICOLL, LL.D.



No art, or winsomeness of the preacher, no pulpit gift is so rare, so rightfully sought after as the ability to preach to children. Search the land far and wide and not one pulpit orator in a hundred will claim this gift. Dr. Nicoll's Treasury of Children's Sermons is the product of specially endowed minds, carefully sifted by the editor of the British Weekly. It provides a fountain of thought and illustration on every important text in the Bible that can be applied to children. It contains the outline and foundation for a new sermon to children for every Sunday for several years—800 pages of wonderful material that will make your pulpit known as can no other added feature.

The Methodist Review Says:

"The volume will call attention to the 'junior congregation.' This can not be too often done. The church should be constantly reminded of the child. The preacher needs to remember these young and open minds who are his most fertile soil for fruitful sowing. The 'instruction of children' can never be turned entirely over to Sunday-school teachers, however efficient these may be. The pastor should have some part in bringing them to decision. He needs the spiritual refreshing this delightful task always brings. His sermons need the element of simplicity and directness for which successful preaching to children is the best drill. The children need the better guidance of an experienced hand as they come to their 'religious awakening.' They need only to feel that the pastor is their spiritual friend and guide—that in later years they may keep turned to him an open ear. To those who are asking what to preach and how to present it to the children, this work will be of value.
